

Bruce McIntyre Watson is a Vancouver, BC-based historian whose research focuses on the fur trade west of the Rocky Mountains.

Lives Lived West of the Divide

A Biographical Dictionary of Fur Traders Working West of the Rockies, 1793-1858

By: Bruce McIntyre Watson

Lives Lived tells the story of those resilient individuals who were part of the fur trade which, during the first half of the 19th century, extended from northern British Columbia to southern Oregon. The subsequent imposition of international and regional boundaries has fragmented and erased from view this once vibrant era which this book reconstructs and returns to life.

Lives
Lived
West of the Divide

Lives Lived West of the Divide

A Biographical Dictionary of Fur Traders Working West of the Rockies, 1793-1858

Bruce McIntyre Watson

CSSEJ

Centre for Social, Spatial, and Economic Justice
University of British Columbia
Kelowna, British Columbia

Lives Lived West of the Divide:
A Biographical Dictionary of Fur Traders
Working West of the Rockies, 1793-1858

By

Bruce McIntyre Watson

Centre for Social, Spatial and Economic Justice
University of British Columbia, Okanagan
Kelowna, British Columbia

Copyright © 2010 Bruce McIntyre Watson.

Associate Editors: Kasondra White, Mike Evans and Alexander Lawson

Published by The Centre for Social, Spatial and Economic Justice
The University of British Columbia, Okanagan
3333 University Way, Kelowna, British Columbia
V1V 1V7

Library and Archives Canada Cataloguing in Publication

Watson, Bruce McIntyre, 1943-

Lives lived west of the divide : a biographical dictionary of fur traders working west of the Rockies, 1793-1858 / by Bruce McIntyre Watson.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-0-9810212-7-0 (set).--ISBN 978-0-9810212-8-7.--ISBN
978-0-9810212-9-4.--ISBN 978-0-9865387-0-4

1. Fur traders--Northwest, Pacific--Biography--Dictionaries. 2. Fur trade--Northwest, Pacific--History. I. University of British Columbia.
Okanagan Campus. Centre for Social, Spatial, and Economic Justice
II. Title.

F880.W38 2010

979.5'030922

C2010-901022-1

Cover: 1870s photograph of McLeod Lake Post by H. Bullock Webster, courtesy of Rare Books and Special Collections, University of British Columbia.

For

All those who were so much a part of this

Table of Contents

Preface	xiii
Introduction to Lives Lived	1
Part 1: The People	1
Part 2: Some Major Land-Based Fur Trade Companies that Operated on the Pacific Slopes from 1793 to 1858	23
Part 3: Built Structures and Manufactured Necessities	32
Part 4: The Dynamics of Fur Traders' Lives	47
Notes For the Biographies	134
Biographies
Biographies - 'A'	140
Biographies - 'B'	168
Biographies - 'C'	240
Biographies - 'D'	306
Biographies - 'E'	356
Biographies - 'F'	364
Biographies - 'G'	394
Biographies - 'H'	429
Biographies - 'I'	477
Biographies - 'J'	480
Biographies - 'K'	500
Biographies - 'L'	542
Biographies - 'M'	609
Biographies - 'N'	712
Biographies - 'O'	730

Biographies - 'P'	748
Biographies - 'Q'	798
Biographies - 'R'	800
Biographies - 'S'	844
Biographies - 'T'	900
Biographies - 'U'	948
Biographies - 'V'	950
Biographies - 'W'	960
Biographies - 'Y'	991
Biographies - 'Z'	993
Appendix A: Fur Trade Posts or Forts	996
Appendix B: Ships on the NorthWest Coast	1096
Appendix C: Medical Instruments and Medicines	1138
Appendix D: What Men Ordered	1144
Appendix E: What Fur Traders Read	1149
Appendix F: Fur Traders from the various fur trade companies who became settlers in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and British Columbia	1165
Glossary	1171
Conversion Tables	1175
General Index	1176
Biography Index	1190
Sources	1225

List of Images

IMAGE 1 Le Canada, ou Nouvelle France.....	1
IMAGE 2 Assomption Sashes.	2
IMAGE 3 Seigneurie in Lower Canada.....	3
IMAGE 4 Orkney Islands.....	4
IMAGE 5 Abandoned house of crofter.....	5
IMAGE 6 Inside crofter's house.....	5
IMAGE 7 St. Magnus Cathedral, Kirkwall, Orkney.	6
IMAGE 8 Scottish Highlands.....	8
IMAGE 9 Metis sash	9
IMAGE 10 Furs.....	11
IMAGE 11 The Hawaiian Islands chain.....	12
IMAGE 12 Officers' quarters reflecting the relative luxury of the 1850s.....	14
IMAGE 13 Approximate Major Aboriginal Linguistic Divisions West of the Rocky Mountains c.1800.....	15
IMAGE 14 The Hudson's Bay Company coat of arms	23
IMAGE 15 Hudson Bay Company flag	24
IMAGE 16 The North West Company coat of arms	25
IMAGE 17 North West Company flag.....	25
IMAGE 18 John Jacob Astor	26
IMAGE 19 Restored American Fur Company Store	30
IMAGE 20 A small post: Fort Umpqua	34
IMAGE 21 A medium sized post: Fort Langley	35
IMAGE 22 A large administrative post: Fort Vancouver	36

IMAGE 23 Reconstructed stockades at Fort Langley	37
IMAGE 24 Reconstructed gallery at Fort Langley	37
IMAGE 25 Reconstructed gates at Fort Langley	37
IMAGE 26 Large bastion and palisades at Fort Vancouver	38
IMAGE 27 Original warehouse at Fort Langley.	38
IMAGE 28 Indian shops	38
IMAGE 29 Reconstructed men’s quarters at Fort Langley.....	39
IMAGE 30 Reconstructed officer’s quarters at Fort Langley	39
IMAGE 31 Shaving horses in cooperage	39
IMAGE 32 Travois.....	41
IMAGE 33 Bearpaw snowshoe.....	41
IMAGE 34 “Coming in for Christmas” by H. Bullock Webster.....	42
IMAGE 35 Batteaux at Fort Langley	43
IMAGE 36 Alexander Mackenzie’s journey from the east.	47
IMAGE 37 Alexander Mackenzie	48
IMAGE 38 Area traveled by Lewis and Clark.....	49
IMAGE 39 Meriwether Lewis and William Clark..	50
IMAGE 40 Simon Fraser.	50
IMAGE 41 David Thompson monument	52
IMAGE 42 David Thompson	52
IMAGE 43 Fur Traders in Canada.	53
IMAGE 44 “Attack and Massacre of the Crew of the Tonquin” (1838)	56
IMAGE 45 Wilson Price Hunt	57
IMAGE 46 Willamette Valley.....	58
IMAGE 47 Fort Astoria c. 1813.....	60

IMAGE 48 "Iroquois Indians"	66
IMAGE 49 Fort McLeod	66
IMAGE 50 Kanaka Village, Fort Vancouver.	67
IMAGE 51 "December – soft snow misery" by H. Bullock Webster.....	68
IMAGE 52 Amputation instructions.	69
IMAGE 53 Operation for an aneurism.	70
IMAGE 54 "Buying Provisions for Christmas" llections.....	71
IMAGE 55 "A Hudson's Bay Ball" by H. Bullock Webster	73
IMAGE 56 Sir George Simpson.....	75
IMAGE 57 "Isles Sandwich: Maisons de Kraimokou, Premier Ministre du Roi, Fabrication des Etoffes" by Alphonse Pellion	76
IMAGE 58 Green River Rendezvous.	78
IMAGE 59 "Our haircutter" by H. Bullock Webster	80
IMAGE 60 Former site of the Oregon Trail.	81
IMAGE 61 Launch of the North West America at Nootka Sound, by John Meares.....	82
IMAGE 62 The Beaver, post HBC ownership.....	83
IMAGE 63 Reconstruction at Fort Vancouver	83
IMAGE 64 Cannon inside bastion at Fort Vancouver	84
IMAGE 65 Portrait of Nathaniel J. Wyeth	86
IMAGE 66 Sitka and Wrangell Island.....	95
IMAGE 67 A farmstead in British Columbia	96
IMAGE 68 British-United States Boundary, Yahk River.....	98
IMAGE 69 "Indians bringing a dead comrade to the fort for burial" by H. Bullock Webster	101
IMAGE 70 Forceps.....	102
IMAGE 71 Jocko Valley.....	104

IMAGE 72 Panning on the Mokelumne River, Northern California	106
IMAGE 73 Reconstructed blacksmith's shop, Fort Vancouver	110
IMAGE 74 "A rough and tumble with a grizzly" by H. Bullock Webster.	110
IMAGE 75 Entrance to Fort Simpson.	118
IMAGE 76 Fort Simpson from the Beach.	119
IMAGE 77 Map of New Caledonia Posts.	996
IMAGE 78 Map of Kootenay River Posts	997
IMAGE 79 Map of Flathead Posts	998
IMAGE 80 Snake River Posts	998
IMAGE 81 Map of Okanagan River/Thompson River Posts	999
IMAGE 82 Map of Columbia River Posts	1000
IMAGE 83 Map of Willamette River Posts	1001
IMAGE 84 Map of Southern Oregon Posts	1002
IMAGE 85 Map of Coastal Posts	1003
IMAGE 86 Map of Lower Fraser River Posts	1004
IMAGE 87 Map of Posts Outside the Pacific Northwest but Under its Aegis	1004
IMAGE 88 McLeod Lake Post.	1006
IMAGE 89 Fort St. James Post	1008
IMAGE 90 Kwah's graveboard.	1009
IMAGE 91 Fort Fraser	1010
IMAGE 92 Building reputed to have been part of Fort Fraser	1011
IMAGE 93 Old Fort George	1013
IMAGE 94 Reconstructed bastion, Fort George site	1013
IMAGE 95 Fort Babine site	1014
IMAGE 96 Fort Alexandria	1016

IMAGE 97 Church on Fort Alexandria east bank site	1016
IMAGE 98 Fort Chilcotin site	1018
IMAGE 99 “Beaver hunting at Fort Connolly” by H. Bullock Webster	1020
IMAGE 100 Possible site of Kootenay Fort (PFC).	1021
IMAGE 101 Drowned site of Kullyspel House, Lake Pend d’Oreille	1025
IMAGE 102 Spokane House monument	1027
IMAGE 103 Howse House	1029
IMAGE 104 Drowned Fort Flathead site (PFC).....	1030
IMAGE 105 Area of Fort Flathead (HBC).	1031
IMAGE 106 Site of Fort Connah.	1032
IMAGE 107 Snake River, Idaho.....	1033
IMAGE 108 Marker for Fort Andrew Henry (Fort Henry)	1036
IMAGE 109 Fort Hall on Snake River.....	1038
IMAGE 110 Countryside near drowned site of Fort Hall, Idaho.	1039
IMAGE 111 Area near disappeared site of Fort Boise.....	1040
IMAGE 112 Old Fort Boise marker	1041
IMAGE 113 Fort Okanogan.	1041
IMAGE 114 Cariboo Trail sign	1042
IMAGE 115 Fort Astoria.	1047
IMAGE 116 Fort William graveyard.	1051
IMAGE 117 Fort Vancouver.....	1052
IMAGE 118 Reconstructed Storehouse at Fort Vancouver.....	1052
IMAGE 119 Site of Fort Nez Perces (Old Fort Walla Walla)	1055
IMAGE 120 Site of Fort Nez Perces	1058
IMAGE 121 Fort Colvile	1059

IMAGE 122 Drowned site of Fort Colville	1060
IMAGE 123 St. Paul's Mission	1060
IMAGE 124 Fort Colville Marker.	1061
IMAGE 125 Remnant of Fort Shepherd	1062
IMAGE 126 Site of Fort Shepherd.	1063
IMAGE 127 McKay's Old Establishment.....	1068
IMAGE 128 Fort Umpqua, Google Maps, 2010.....	1069
IMAGE 129 Fort Nisqually, A-04330, courtesy of Royal BC Museum, BC Archives.	1071
IMAGE 130 Fort Nisqually artifacts.....	1072
IMAGE 131 Fort Victoria	1074
IMAGE 132 Nanaimo Bastion.....	1076
IMAGE 133 Fort Rupert remnants with native structures	1077
IMAGE 134 Fort Rupert's surviving chimney	1078
IMAGE 135 Fort Rupert sign.	1079
IMAGE 136 Bella Bella with Fort McLoughlin enclosure.....	1080
IMAGE 137 First site of Fort Simpson on Nass River.	1082
IMAGE 138 Drawing of Fort Simpson.	1083
IMAGE 139 HBC cannon at Fort Simpson	1084
IMAGE 140 Old site of Fort Stikine	1085
IMAGE 141 Taku Harbour from site of Fort Taku	1087
IMAGE 142 Fort Langley.....	1089
IMAGE 143 Fort Hope	1091
IMAGE 144 Fort Yale	1092
IMAGE 145 HBC Compound in Honolulu	1093
IMAGE 146 Trepan tools	1139

IMAGE 147 Fracture of the clavicle.....	1141
Image 148 Twankey Tea	1144
Image 149 Items the fur traders may have ordered.....	1145
Image 150 Tobacco	1146
Image 151 Men’s boots	1147
Image 152 Cooking pot	1148
IMAGE 153 Library books.....	1149
IMAGE 156 Title pages to Samuel Cooper’s The First Lines of the Practice of Surgery	1152
IMAGE 157 Title page to John Hunter's The Treatise on the Venereal Disease	1153
IMAGE 158 Library books.....	1157
IMAGE 159 Title page to Samuel Cooper’s A Dictionary of Practical Surgery, Third Edition	1158
IMAGE 160 A farmstead in British Columbia	1165

Preface to Lives Lived West of the Rockies

The recapturing of the lives of fur traders west of the Rocky Mountains has been twenty years in the making. Along the way I have left a trail of talks and articles and have met legions of immensely interesting and engaging people. One published spin-off, for example, is a co-written effort with Jean Barman, Leaving Paradise: Indigenous Hawaiians in the Pacific Northwest, 1787-1898 [Honolulu: University of Hawai'i Press, 2006], a work which focuses on probably the most unrecognized group of the fur trade.

Why another biographical dictionary when other fur trade biographical dictionaries have been written? The fur trade in Alaska has already been adequately covered by the late Richard Pierce's Russian America: A Biographical Dictionary [Kingston, ON and Fairbanks AK: Limestone Press, 1990]. Even though Leroy R. Hafen's excellent ten volume The Mountain Men and the Fur Trade in the Far West [Glendale, CA: A. H. Clark Co., 1965-72] is thorough in its approach to individual biography, it still does not fully capture the complexity of the fur trade west of the Rocky Mountains. Dan L. Thrapp's three volume Encyclopedia of frontier biography [Glendale, CA: A. H. Clark Co., 1988], while including some fur traders, overwhelmingly focuses on a vast array of interesting people who left their imprint on frontier and pioneer life in the US. Smaller very worthy projects, such as Howard McKinlay Corning's, Dictionary of Oregon history, compiled from the research files of the former Oregon Writers' Project with much added material [Portland: Binford & Mort, c.1956] pick up on the many fur traders who settled there but understandably limits the story of the fur trader to political boundaries. The irreplaceable Dictionary of Canadian Biography and the Dictionary of American Biography cover major figures in the fur trade but both generally appeal to their respective constituencies. To some degree, the Metis and French Canadians who worked on both sides of the Rocky Mountains were covered by Father A. G. Morice's Dictionnaire Historique Des Canadiens et des Métis Français de L'Ouest, [Kamloops: author, 1908]. His work was used as a basis for the more than six hundred names in Peter J. Gagné's French-Canadians of the West, a biographical dictionary of French-Canadians and French Métis of the Western United States and Canada, vols 1-3 [Orange Park, FL: Quintin Publications, 2000]. Further, Gail Morin's excellent six volume Metis families: a genealogical compendium [Pawtucket, RI: Quintin Publications, c. 2001] has brought Metis family genealogies into the mid-twentieth century on both sides of the Canada-US border. Nonetheless, given the complexity of the lives of fur traders who worked on the Pacific slopes, I felt that a biographical dictionary clearly transcending modern political and national boundaries was overdue.

Determining the geographical boundaries of the research west of the Rocky Mountains was relatively easy as the area from northern British Columbia south to the California border had been treated, particularly the Hudson's Bay Company, as roughly one geo-political unit. The subsequent political fragmentation has likewise divided the fur trade story that played itself out in rugged terrain and westward flowing river basins. While language problems prevented me from pursuing the Russian American fur trade in present-day Alaska, the common experience of those working under Russian and Finnish administrators and Russian church Orthodoxy all from a far off St. Petersburg headquarters, additionally made their inclusion unwieldy.

The task of recapturing the lives of individuals in the fur trade was made much easier with the presence of the Hudson's Bay Company Archives [HBCA] in Winnipeg, Manitoba. Material also has been drawn from archives of several countries, states and provinces. With such a widespread source of material, the research itself became enriching. Cold Februarys inside the HBCA in Winnipeg, and outside at the Festival du Voyageur in St. Boniface were balanced out by the warm days in Honolulu. Windy Orkney and idyllic places in Hebrides contrasted yet again with the quiet long-since abandoned Pacific slopes fur trade posts which equally reflected a bygone sense of time and place.

I regret not being able to follow the First Nations/Aboriginal peoples in more depth, touching their lives only when they concerned marriages and intimate trading relationships. Their stories are equally interesting and are left to the rising ranks of aboriginal scholars to tell them with clarity.

As much as possible, this information comes from original fur trade and related documents. Only when I needed perspective did I turn to secondary publications or seek descendant family help. As fur trade companies sought profit first, their records had to be carefully gleaned to pull together the many disparate pieces of information that would help flesh out a biography. Paradoxically, although predictably loaded with the biases of the time, surviving journals showed a surprising understanding of the nature of the lives of the native peoples and fur traders.

Another issue was determining who was and who was not eligible for biographies since the nature of the fur trade changed over the years and commercial enterprises had to adapt over the years to stay competitive. For example, the canoeing term of middleman became the descriptor for labourer which could include everything from cutting wood to building posts. As the difference between the broader terms of voyageur, fur trader and engagé blurred over time, they are used interchangeably here to avoid repetition. Ventures into agricultural, mining and food supply radically changed the role of the fur trader. Thus those selected for biographies were the personnel who worked at posts and who thus worked within the social milieu of the evolving fur trade. Those eliminated from this dictionary are those who worked exclusively for the Puget Sound Agricultural Company or the Hudson's Bay Company mining operations in Fort Rupert and Nanaimo. Those who arrived on the supply ships became part of the social milieu when they took jobs on coastal vessels or spent time reconfiguring the holds of ships to accommodate furs for the return voyage.

Purpose and Organization of this Work

As one more contribution to the study of the fur trade, this biographical dictionary is meant to serve two purposes. First, it is meant to cast light on the complexity of lives of the voyageurs/engagés/fur traders/fur trade employees on the rugged Pacific Slopes during the land-based fur trade era from the California border to Alaska from 1793-1858. Second, it is meant to be used as an analytical tool for further research.

To begin to capture the complexity of the fur trade, the introduction is divided into four parts: the collective historical backgrounds of various ethnic groups, the companies which comprised the commercial side, the generic post structures and some goods that were manufactured in them and, finally, a chronological narrative that binds these parts together. This is followed by the biographies, the core of this work. Last appears an extensive appendix which gives further context to the lives of the fur traders. The differences between the terms voyageur, engagé, fur trader and fur trade employee used interchangeably here are reflected in the glossary.

The first part of the introduction, descriptive ethno-history, is used to bring the various groups onto the Pacific slopes and perhaps shed some light on their behaviours and expectations. Such an approach has its constraints because of the danger of applying group behaviors to individuals and visa versa. In spite of the fact that within any specific group there is a huge range of individual outcomes, shared language, religious, cultural and ethnic traits, all keys to group identity, group characteristics sometimes played themselves out in individual behaviors. Indeed, during post-fur trade settlement, group identity re-emerged in importance for the fur traders and their families left to their own devices.

Peoples indigenous to the Pacific slopes while not being the focus of this study are briefly introduced as they were important for their interfacing with the fur trade. Indeed, native trading patterns developed over the millennia were re-worked by outsiders into patterns for trade in furs. As well, geographic nexus points where seasonal native culture and trade interacted also became locations for fur trade posts. Most importantly, the fur trade would not have succeeded had not the native peoples sustained it in terms of furs, food and wives.

The second part of the introduction introduces the companies and many partnerships out of London, Montreal, Boston, New York and St. Louis that made up the land-based fur trade. They are important as they set the rules of expectations and behaviours with which the fur trader was obliged to work. As well, to stay vibrant and turn a profit many of the companies had to move from the fur trade into a variety of commercial ventures making the term "fur trader" somewhat of a misnomer.

The third part is an attempt to put the reader into the physical space of the fur trade post. As physical structures are referred to throughout, a generic version of a fur trade post is presented in the introduction to give the reader a frame of reference. Specific information on each post can be found in the appendix.

The fourth part, the chronological narrative, has been divided into seven logical sections, each with its own unique fur trade characteristics and activities. Each section clearly illustrates the challenges and changes that the fur trade employee had to face from the time they first entered the Pacific slopes to the time that they settled or went elsewhere.

The main body of this study, individual biographies, has been constructed as faithfully as possible from records sometimes supplemented by information from family descendants. They reveal a complexity of rich lives lived west of the Rocky Mountains, a multiplicity of personalities, behaviours and outcomes as well as a resiliency and adaptability. Any errors in entry are strictly mine. All entries focus on the original fur traders which are the historical figures; however, their immediate descendants are mentioned by first name, birth and death year only. This ensures privacy for descendant families.

The appendix is meant to give further context to the lives of the fur traders. The history of the posts/forts and their personnel as well as the history of the ships that serviced the coast are tracked along with their crew members. The contents of several post libraries have been pieced together, as has the list of medicines and medical instruments available at the time. Further, some private orders of items over and above what was to be sold at the fur trade posts have been listed taking the fur trader's life to a more personal level. Finally, as a great number of individuals can be tracked into settlement era, a list has been made of locations of settlements on both sides of the border.

Source Retrieval

Two types of source retrieval have been used. The four-part introduction has employed standard end notes. Keys to the codes employed here can be found in the sources section.

Because of the structure of the biographies and the appendix, endnotes appear in an abbreviated global form after each major entry. As much of this is in code as it was in the introduction, a fuller entry can be extracted from the sources section under primary, published primary and secondary sources. For example, if in the narrative after a direct quote the following appears (Simpson, p. 46), then a quick glance at the endnotes for that section would reveal Simpson, Narrative, vol. I. If information has been indirectly quoted from a particular source, then, Simpson, Narrative, vol. I, p. 46 would appear in the endnotes. A further consulting of the Sources section under primary printed sources would reveal:

Simpson, George

Narrative of a Journey Round the World, During the Years 1841 and 1842, vol. I & II Henry Colburn, London, 1847.

If information is directly quoted from an archival document such as a letter, the following (FtVanCB 29, fo. 6) would be embedded directly after the quote. The endnotes would read: McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, June 24, 1842, B.223/b/29, HBCA FtVanCB 29, fo. 6. A further investigation of the Hudson's Bay Company Archives in the Sources section would reveal that HBCA FtVanCB29 is the code for:

Fort Vancouver Correspondence Book [1842-43] B.223/b/29.

Given the disparate nature of the sources, some variation of this will occur.

Acknowledgements

This work could not have been done without the generosity, kindness and assistance from many institutions and people. First I would like to thank the following archives and libraries for their co-operation and willingness to assist me in my search for details.

British Columbia Archives, Victoria, BC; Bancroft Library, Berkley, CA; British Library, London; California Historical Society, San Francisco, CA; Columbia River Museum, Astoria, OR; Hamilton Library, U. of Hawaii at Manoa; Harvard Business School, Baker Library Boston, MA; Harvard University Library, Houghton Library, Boston, MA; Harvard University Library, Widener Library, Cambridge, MA; Massachusetts Historical Society, Boston, MA; Nanaimo Community Archives, Nanaimo, B. C.; National Archives, Washington, D. C.; Oregon Historical Society, Portland, Oregon; Oregon State Archives, Salem, Oregon; Peabody Essex Museum, Salem, MA; Rosenbach Library, Philadelphia; Tacoma Library, Tacoma, WA; University of British Columbia Special Collections, Vancouver, B. C.; Vancouver Public Library, Vancouver, B. C. and the Washington State Archives, Olympia, WA.

Historians and other helpers

Alaska

John Hallum who was most helpful showing me the old Russian fort site at Sitka; Dee Longenbaugh for her engaging enthusiasm and knowledge at Juneau; Wallace M. Olson for sharing information and guiding me around the remnants of Fort Taku; Richard A. Pierce for his insights into the Russian presence in Alaska and his encouragement for my work; Pat Roppel for sharing her research on Fort Stikine which she had so laboriously transcribed.

Alberta

Ian MacLaren who shared his thoughts on Paul Kane
Contributing descendants living in Alberta: Donna Sweet [Desautel]

Australia

Grant McCall [University of New South Wales] who, on Easter Island over several beer, pointed out the possibility of Easter Island names as part of the Polynesian group in the fur trade.
Contributing descendants living in Australia: Jeff Burgher [lateral descendant; Bugar], Christopher Flett [Flett]

British Columbia

Joe Aleck who pointed out the first site of Fort Babine as relayed to him by his grandfather; Judy Banks; Robert C. Belyk; Jean Barman for her tremendous insight into British Columbia history and descendants of mixed descent and her always generous collaboration and laborious reviewing of this material; Tom Beasley for his underwater archaeological expertise; Anita Bonson for combing through my biographies; Gerry Borden for being always open to my endless questions on fur trade minutiae; Graham Brazier; Jane Cromarty; Jim Delgado; Eric Faa; Ken Favrholt; Chris Hanna, a tireless Victoria researcher par excellence; Robert C. Harris whose remarkable skills at maps helped me pinpoint sites; Victor Hopwood who helped me plough through the mysteries of David Thompson; Barry Humphrey who provided information on settlement on Gabriola Island; Thomas A. Johnston; Grant Keddie; Arnold Kilsby whose sharing of information at the beginning of my research was a true window of what was to come; Yvonne Klan whose wit, humour and writing about the fur trade was an inspiration; Frieda Klippenstein; Tom Koppel for his engaging work on the Hawaiians; W. Kaye Lamb who tirelessly reviewed my research well into his nineties; Richard Mackie for his work and acting as a sounding board; Len McCann for his advice on ships; Gerald McCombie; Morag MacLachlin for her friendship and work on Fort Langley; Brad Morrison; Jamie Morton; John Norris for his insight on the use of historical medicines; Barbara Rogers for her research on Simon Fraser and finding his birth date; Terry Reksten; Lynn Ross for finding those impossible-to-find documents; Don Tarasoff for sharing information he saved on fur trade fort sites; Jeanette Taylor; Duane Thomson; Silvia Van Kirk; Bruce Ward for helping out with the placement of posts on maps; Jean Wilson for her interest in and endless support for my project.
Contributing descendants living in British Columbia: Lonny Bate [Brown], John Bell [Robertson], Larry Bell [Hawaiians], Mrs. Glen Cleveland [Fallardeau], Alana Collins [Lavoie, Allard], Tricia Datené [Sabiston], Rob Dixon [Stockand], Maureen Duffus [Yates], Frederick Charles French [Goudie], Nora Fuller [Kamano], Vicky Gibbs [Boucher], Inez Helin [Dudouaire], Doug Henderson [Hunt], Sue Hughes [Stockand], Laural Katernick [Gravelle, Mini], Ruth McKay Kendall [McKay], Al Kline [Newton], Richard Larson [Fraser]; Don Logie [Logie], Shirley Louis [McDougall], Sally McMahon [Hunt], Alice Marwood [Isbister], Carey Myers [Kamano, Oteokorie], Don Norris [Boucher], Tricia O'Leary [Ehu], Lisa Peppan [Pepin], Tannis Pond [Taylor, Fallardeau], Jim and Joan Rankin [Dusseau], Rev. Rob. D. Redmile [Fidler], John Roland [Naukana], Barbara J. Sheppard [Edgar, Alexee], David J. Spalding [McKay], Mary Lou Stathers [Simpson, Yale], Pamela Dennice Stupello [Brulez, Goudie, Vautrin, Grieg], Bruce Young [Johnstone].

California

A debt of gratitude is owed to Wayne Knauf for contributing to the French Canadians as guides to '49er gold miners and for driving me around to various sites.
Contributing descendants living in California: David R. Benedict [Annance], René Rylander [Johnston], Wayne L. Knauf [Picard, Lavadour, Laframboise], Ron Ohlfs [Laframboise], Marilyn Stickler [McLeod]

Hawai'i

Susan Lebo and Blair Collis of the Bishop Museum, Barbara Dunn of the Hawaiian Historical Society, Jason Achiu of the Hawai'i's State Archives

Contributing descendant living in Hawai'i: Rory Oehlman [Nahu].

Idaho

Dan Cline who shared map information on Fort Hall; Walker Galloway who helped me find my way around Fort Hall; Larry Jones who generously shared his research on Fort Hall.

Kansas

Contributing descendant living in Kansas: Carla Hoffman [Gingras, Bastien].

Manitoba

Judith Hudson Beattie Valenzuela and Ann Morton for their help in the Hudson's Bay Company Archives during my many visits there; Alfred Fortier of La Société Historique de Saint-Boniface; Audrene Hourie who passed along Metis insights in Winnipeg.

Contributing descendant in Manitoba: Susan Gibb [Pottinger].

Maryland

Contributing descendant in Maryland: Jannis Glenn [Horn].

Mexico

Contributing descendant living in Mexico: Eduardo A. Ochoa [Brotchie wife descendant].

Oregon

Bonnie Susan Asthes; Charles Hibbs who shared his research on Sauvie Island; Stephen W. Kohl who generously shared his research on the Japanese slaves; Seglinda Smith who had the magic touch of ferreting out wonderful material from the Oregon Historical Society Library and Archives; Shawna Gandy of the Oregon Historical Society Library and Archives; Tony A. Johnson of the Office of Museum Development, Grand Ronde.

Contributing descendants living in Oregon: Cindy Gullede [Pepin], Lila H. Jackson [Cook], Christine Lynch [Dubrieul], Janet Phillips [Langlois], Sandra K. Woodruff [Kittson & 25 other families].

New Zealand

Christopher Flett of New Zealand who had corralled relevant Flett information.

Nova Scotia

Contributing descendant living in Nova Scotia: Bruce Moore [Kamano].

Ontario

Nicole St. Onge for sharing her Iroquois and early contract research.

Contributing descendant living in Ontario: Jean Cole [McDonald].

Scotland – Hebrides

Chris Lawson who generously shared information on five Hebrides families; the Stornoway Gazette which put out a call for descendants.

Contributing descendant living in the Hebrides: John Macdonald [McDonald].

Scotland - Orkney

Thora Bain; Alison Fraser and Phil Astley, two very helpful people from the Orkney Library in Kirkwall; Catherine Gourly of Orkney Radio whose radio interview brought in information from the outer islands; Janice Sinclair for helping to clarify Orkney family research; Mary Soames; Jim Troup for sharing information on Charles Humphrey; Bryce Wilson who helped with HBC data.

Contributing descendants living in Orkney: Raymond Byers [relative of Beinston], John Robert Cormack [Cormack], Maurice Gray [Davie], Anita Thomson [Craigie].

Texas

Contributing descendant living in Texas: Kay Neubauer [Kendrick].

Saskatchewan

Contributing descendants living in Saskatchewan: June Kelly [McKenzie], Marion Sim [Stove].

Utah

Contributing descendant living in Utah: Richard C. Younger [Tygueriche].

Washington

Steve Anderson who brought Fort Nisqually research back to life; David “Chalk” Courchane whose research gave me insight into the many descendants of Jacco Finley; Drew Crooks who generously shared his knowledge of farming activities and who patiently read part of this manuscript; Shirley Dodson; Lou Flannery; E. W. Giesecke who gave me new insights into the Tonquin disaster and the feats of the Winship brothers; David Hanson who was very generous sharing Fort Vancouver research; Joe Huntsman who tirelessly transcribed Edward Huggins’ letter; John C. Jackson the tireless writer and fur trade descendant; Donald Johnson; Kamuela Ka’ahnui for Hawaiian insights; the indomitable Lloyd Keith whose dedication to the fur trade was almost unmatched; Ruth Kirk; Gail Morin; Jack Nisbet for his work on David Thompson; Doreen Beard Simpkins for her access to Fort Nisqually research; the Weyerhaeuser Company that let me roam around the Nisqually site and explore the artifacts before it was open to the public.

Contributing descendants living in Washington: Mrs. Jean Bluff [McDonald], Judy Bridges [Lucier, Arquoitte, Lachapelle, St. Martin, Tawacton, Legace], Cecilia Carpenter [Ross], Richard Cornwall [Arcasa], Edgar Desautel [Desautel], Jill Edwards [Legace, Vautrin, Work], Bob and Marie Fry [Berland, Petit], Walter Goodman [Finley], Michael J. Hubbs [Plomondon], Kathryn E. Irwin [Ross], Edwin J. Lagarde [Lagarde], Roger Newman [Delonic, McPhail], Donald W. “Sky” Skiles [McAulay], Herbert Stevens [Goudie], Trudi Jerred Tonasket [Proveau].

My apologies to anyone whom I may have missed. Also I would like to toast those cheerful and inspiring souls who have since passed on and whose very existence has made the world a better place.

Last but not least, a special thanks are owed to Michael Evans and the Centre for Social, Spatial, and Economic Justice, University of British Columbia, Okanagan, Kelowna, B.C. for taking on this project. Special thanks are also extended to editors and programmer who worked tirelessly on it: Alex Lawson, Kasondra White and James Love.

Introduction to Lives Lived

Because of the enormity of the fur trade, even its truncated version west of the Rocky Mountains, of its disparate nature in terms of ethnicity, nationality, cultural baggage, dynamic change, and commercial and cultural structures, and of competing claims to sovereignty, this introduction has been divided into four distinct sections: the people, companies, generic constructions and chronological narrative.

Part 1: The People

There were two groups of players in the fur trade, the outsiders and the indigenous insiders. The outsiders, the subject of this study, were in unfamiliar territory, so their view of the world and expectations were part of the cultural baggage they brought with them. The insiders on the other hand, whose voices remain largely silent in this study, were impacted by the fur trade and, in turn, changed those coming on to their traditional territory. Therefore the background and expectations of the outsiders are as important as are the characteristics of the indigenous peoples.

The Outsiders and their Background

The outsiders who came to work on the Pacific slopes fell into basically two categories: a handful were officers in charge who, according to the company to which they were attached, went by various rank distinctions such as bourgeois, partner, proprietor, chief trader and chief factor. The vast majority, however, were employees generally on contract.

French Canadians – A Fur Trade Culture

Of all the ethnic groups that entered the Pacific slopes, the French Canadians/canadiens carried with them the longest - fully two centuries - of embedded fur trade culture tradition which included strong elements of survival and accommodation to foreign environments. Before they entered the Pacific slopes several generations of canadiens had adapted to deal with France's contradictory, ever changing policies which were attempts to rationalize the disparate elements of colonization, conversion, settlement and commerce within the context of an already occupied continent.

Cardinal Richelieu's 1627 attempt at regulation with formation of the Compagnie des cent-associés and the laying out of the seigniorial system to anchor the habitants to the land was largely ignored by the opportunistic unregulated class of coueurs de bois.

They cast off the security and protection of the seigneurie opting for direct trade with the natives. This act of defiance was an escape from the indenture obligations of performing statute labour and paying an annual rent (cens et rentes) and levies and the possibility of being evicted for failure to live up to these agreements. It was also alternative employment. It was during this time period, while aboriginal peoples held demographic and power dominance through their numbers and trading networks, that family kinship relations developed between the French Canadians and aboriginal people. Coincidentally with this trade was the French policy of conversion of the natives by the Jesuits. As the missionaries were supported by profits gained from the regulated fur trade, their efforts were often seen as working hand in hand with the fur traders, an accommodating relationship which moved with the fur traders, even onto the Pacific slopes.

IMAGE 1 Le Canada, ou Nouvelle France. Carte du Golfe du Saint-Laurent au Canada. [1660]. Le cartographe français Nicolas Sanson. Ontario Archives.

IMAGE 2 Assumption Sashes. Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

From 1650 with the change in demographic balance due to imported contagious diseases, internecine wars, etc., the dependency on native trading networks had virtually disappeared and the coureur de bois now moved with gusto into new expanded territory within the continent. A 1663 change of rules resulting in direct administration from France meant an even more independent role for unlicensed coureurs de bois and licenced voyageurs working under the bourgeois merchants. By 1680 there were six hundred coureurs de bois in the Great Lakes region alone and familial alliances with native women were much more common.¹ Over the next decades, the French Canadian culture, eventually extending to the gulf of Mexico and incorporating hybrid families, had become full blown with its familiar outward manifestations so familiar in the fur trade of woollen tuques, deerskin moccasins, and jambières (leggings), held up by a sash and breech cloth. The sash had been derived from Iroquoian carrying belts of the 18th century and was generally hand woven. However, later they were mass produced in the Quebec city of L'Assomption and were known as assumption sashes. Men carried with them the ever present clay pipe and beaded pouch hanging from the sash.²

Other aspects of the culture became thoroughly embedded among the fur traders. How long it took to smoke a pipe became a measurement of distance over water. They would paddle fifteen hours a day over prairie rivers in canoes armed with a blanket, shirt, pair of trousers, two handkerchiefs, several pounds of carrot tobacco paddling to the songs selected by the steersman who guided the vessel.

By the time of the French defeat by the British in 1759 and France's virtual abandonment of North America in 1763, the French Canadian fur trade culture had become an ingrained part of the North American landscape. When the fur trade began to re-organize in Montreal under largely Scottish and a few Canadian partnerships, they were already dealing with an entrenched system. Now more contracted engagé spread over the landscape adapting to and accommodating their new employers. Little wonder then in 1810, New Yorker John Jacob Astor sought French Canadians as the bulk of his employees for his venture west of the Rockies seeing their work habits as beneficial to his enterprise. To him, the French Canadians:

...plumed themselves upon their hardihood and their capacity to endure privations..[they were] men seasoned to hardships, who cared for neither wind nor weather. They could live hard, lie hard, sleep hard, eat dogs! – in a word they were ready to do and suffer anything for the good of the enterprise.³

Regarding their down time, Astor tempered his exuberance in that the engagé like the coureurs des bois:

...in the intervals of their long, arduous, and laborious expeditions, were prone to pass their time in idleness and revelry about the trading posts or settlements squandering their hard earnings in heedless conviviality, and rivaling their neighbors, the Indians, in indolent indulgence and an imprudent disregard of the morrow.⁴

As far as work habits go, Vermont born fur trader, Daniel Williams Harmon said “they will endure all the fatigue and misery of hard labour & cold weather &c. for several Days following without much complaining.”⁵ Fellow trader Colin Robertson found that they were hardy and able to undergo more fatigue than others.⁶

Perhaps Astor's view that “no men are more submissive to their leaders and employers”⁷ may have been a misinterpretation of an accommodation or adaptation to generations of inevitable organizational changes based on decisions made elsewhere. It may also have been expediency, for as Manitoba historian Edith I. Burley states, Canadians' careers in the fur trade were short, their wages being used to maintain a traditional way of life which they couldn't do if they had stayed home.⁸ However, as Burley goes on to say, the Canadians were “neither deferential nor submissive [and] were accustomed to setting their own pace and doing much as they pleased.”⁹ Her assessment implies a mix of the habits of a pervasive fur trade culture mixed with the expediency of tolerating the very heavy workloads. Another contributing factor to the impression of submission may have been an understated ethnic pride in bettering those around them.

IMAGE 3 A typical seigneurie (farm) in Lower Canada near Québec. Watercolour by Thomas Davies, circa 1787. Courtesy of Library and Archives Canada/Community Canada/AMICUS 14236801/p. 218.

At the end of a contract of anywhere from one to five years, the engagé would return either to his seigneurie, the cities, or settlement areas that were springing up around the St. Lawrence sometimes with family in tow. However, by 1812, an estimated two thirds of the seigneuries were in the hands of English-speaking merchants giving the engagé less incentive to return to his family roots.¹⁰ If one considers the limited options for the largely illiterate engagé when compared to the relatively fewer literate bourgeois who had many more opportunities when returning to Lower Canada, it is understandable that some chose options outside the main French Canadian culture.

Others upon completion of their contracts chose to stay in the country with their families, renewing their contracts or working as freemen, taking their chances with “the vicissitudes of the seasons, the migrations of animals, and the plenty or scarcity of game” and occasionally trading pelts for the necessities of life. As former fur trade employee John Thompson Dunn further wrote in 1845,

Having passed their youth in the wilderness, in constant intercourse with the Indians, and removed from civilized society, they lapse with natural facility into the habits of savage life. They generally intermarry with the natives and, like them, have often a plurality of wives.¹¹

Having more than one wife for both voyageur and engagé was not only desirable, as it provided comfort and companionship in various areas, but it also provided security for the voyageur, engagé and freeman alike. Being married into a native nation created reciprocal obligations and responsibilities. Wives knew their cultural areas and survival mechanisms in their cultural areas, the ebb and flow of the seasons, the migrations of animals, etc.

The strong association with the Roman Catholic Church was a legacy from France. As the seigneurial system was a transplant somewhat modified from the French feudal system whereby the church was the third pillar of the system, the other two being the land-owning class and the peasants, or in the case of Quebec, the habitants, the Church was a necessary part of everyday life. This long association ran deep as fur trade clerk Alexander Ross reflected on the departing engagé:

...after bidding a dozen adieux to their friends and companions, [they] embarked at La Chine [in Quebec]... On arriving at St. Anne’s, the devout voyageurs according to usual custom, expressed a wish to go on ashore to make their vows at the holy shrine before leaving the island. There, prostrated on the ground, they received the priest’s benediction; then embarking, with pipes and song, hied their way up the Ottawa or Grand river for Mackina.¹²

On the other hand there was a diminishment of adherence to the church in the countryside as clerk Daniel Williams Harmon found:

they leave Canada young and have but a slight knowledge of the principles of the Religion, which their Parents profess to follow, so ere they have been many years in this uncivilized part of the World they do not appear to observe the Sabbaths or any manner of worship...¹³

Generalized observed behaviour reveal as much about the relative perceptions of the writer as they do about the French Canadians themselves as it was filtered through the lens of class and ethnicity. As Burley pointed out, one needs “to recognize that the relationship between the company and its men was a negotiated one and that, despite their cultural differences, their interests as workers determined how they would behave.”¹⁴ The American Daniel Williams Harmon in 1815 found that they had “a gay and lively disposition, consequently not subject to be often cast down or in lowness of spirits.”¹⁵ In 1845, Dunn called them wardens of the wilderness¹⁶ and in 1832 Irishman Ross Cox found they were remarkably good natured and affectionate towards each other.¹⁷ On the other hand, cultural differences manifested themselves in negative stereotyping, which, given the generalized nature of stereotyping, bore some element of truth. Harmon found them volatile and not prone to hold grudges but, he went on “they are People of not much veracity, and appear to have as little sense of what true honour is, as they actually have of real honesty.”¹⁸ He also said that they would pilfer should the opportunity arise, and that they were deceitful, exceedingly smooth and polite, “not to be trusted and obedient but not faithful servants.”¹⁹ To Ross Cox they were “thoughtless”²⁰ as they spent their gains freely and to Astor, “imprudent [with a] disregard of the morrow.”²¹ A lack of savings was understandable in the environment where social relationships often trumped wealth. The most offensive came from Scottish HBC surgeon and fur trader William Auld in 1809 writing from Reindeer Lake during the NWC-HBC battles when he not only called his fellow Scots from the Highlands “debris of the Hills of Scotland” and the French Canadians “the scum of Canada.”²²

The records, however, reveal a complexity of hard working characters, often with family in tow. It was with this background that the French Canadians as a group entered the Pacific Slopes in 1793.

The Orcadians – The Beneficiaries of Geography

IMAGE 4 Orkney Islands. Google Maps, 2009.

The Orcadians were a group of players who got into the fur trade largely as an accident of geography. Although part of the British Isles, the ninety treeless windswept islands between the North Atlantic and the North Sea north of Scotland are treated separately from Scotland. A Norwegian possession until 1468 with Norn as the lingua franca until taken over by Scotland and gradually supplanted by Scots, the Orcadian people developed a distinct culture quite unlike the Celtic Scots. Being closely related to Scandinavia, they were actually more closely related to their Norman conquering cousins.

IMAGE 5 Crofter's house abandoned through clearances on Rousay, Orkney. Such clearances were rare in Orkney, but common in the Hebrides. Displaced crofters often sought emigration as a way out. Photograph by author, 1996.

Geography came into play through the port city of Stromness being the last provisioning stop for HBC ships en route to Hudson Bay. As well, Login's Well of Stromness was the last stop for vital fresh water. Although initially the HBC recruited servants from the London area it was only a matter of time before the Orcadians became part of the action. That came in 1702, after seven years of bad harvests as tenant farmers working for their Scottish land owners, the Orcadians were more than willing to enter the service of the HBC.²³ Within a few years the HBC was making regular stops at Orkney to pick up recruits. Most were unmarried tenant subsistent farmers and fishermen eking out a living and there was only enough room on each small farm to support a limited number of people. Sojourning with the HBC fit right in as it gave the landless recruit, usually in his twenties, enough to purchase a farm before marrying and raising a family.²⁴ As well, the London Committee of the HBC found it preferable to hire land owning farmers who could otherwise support themselves upon return and not be a burden to the HBC.²⁵ This arrangement was so successful that by the 1770 Orcadians comprised 75% of HBC employees sailing to Hudson Bay to work at any of the seven posts initially set up by the HBC around the Bay to capture furs brought in by natives.

Hired for their labour, boat building and fishing skills Orkney Islanders left a legacy of the York Boat and possibly the Red River Cart, which resembled the farmers' carts around Orkney. Bannock (around Hudson Bay) and Orcadian music were also a legacy. Upon their return with their savings, their new-found wealth was resented as they, unlike those who stayed in Orkney to work, were able to purchase farms.²⁶ By the 1790s, however, rumours began to surface on the deplorable working conditions for minimal wages and the HBC's refusal to listen to Orkneymen complaints.²⁷ As Orcadians returned to the more profitable whaling and fishing at the beginning of the nineteenth century, fewer and fewer joined the HBC, particularly after the merger.

IMAGE 6 Reconstructed crofter house at the Kibister Farm Museum, Orkney. Photograph by author, 1996.

Still, east of the Rockies, their services were considered valuable by people such as Lord Selkirk, as their attributes of being “careful, steady and sober” were good credentials for settlers.²⁸ Colin Robertson found them valuable for their net making abilities.²⁹

As their presence was very minor in the NWC, their presence in the Pacific Northwest was minimal even when the HBC absorbed the assets of the NWC and moved in. Consequently there was no great sweep of Orcadians onto the Pacific slopes in the initial stages of land-based fur trading there. The Orcadians became a significant presence, however, when the HBC began to bring in settlers to colonize Vancouver Island. A few, like John Greig (a distant relative of Norwegian composer Edvard Grieg) served out their contracts at places like Fort Colville.

By the 1850s compared to the Highland Scots, however, their reputation was stellar. Such an opinion can be found in a January 30, 1859 letter from Alexander Grant Dallas to M. Balfour in Orkney:

You will be glad to learn that the very best men the Company ever have had are the Orkney men. The worst are the Lewis men - being lazy, filthy, and given to drink.³⁰

IMAGE 7 The twelfth century St. Magnus Cathedral, which dominates the skyline of Kirkwall, Orkney today, would have been a place familiar to many Orcadians who became fur traders. Photograph by author, 1996.

Scots – Highlanders and Lowlanders – Circumstances of History

Like French Canadians before them, the Scots were heavily represented in the fur trade. Unlike the French, however, the Scots secured many higher level positions as partners or clerks and officers. This was no accident. A series of education acts in the 18th century resulting in a high literacy rate was one reason. Another centered around the Battle of Culloden in 1746 and a series of outcomes which steered many into the fur trade.

Scotland cannot be treated as a singular culture. Apart from the Orkney and Shetland Islands, there were and are culturally two Scotlands,³¹ the Highlands, generally northwest of the Grampian Mountains to and including the Hebrides, and the Lowlands of the crescent of generally flatter land from the Moray of Firth to the English border.³² The distinguishing feature between the two is the that Highlanders tended to retain a Gaelic/Celtic/Catholic/clan heritage in a harsher landscape than the more anglicized often Protestant Lowlanders who embraced literacy and “developed a society based on arable farming and gradual industrialization.”³³ The Catholic Highlander exception was those on the Island of Harris and Lewis who incorporated a strong Protestant presence.

IMAGE 8 Scottish Highlands, Wikipedia, 2009.

It was precisely the Catholic-Protestant English-Scottish royal succession argument that drove exiled Jacobite claimant Prince Charles Edward Stuart’s [Bonnie Prince Charlie] invasion of Scotland in an effort to restore King

James [Jacob] to the British throne. Because of his failure at the battle of Culloden Moor in 1746, a series of English punitive legislation loosened the glue of the social system of the Scottish Highlanders that bound the people to the land. The Act of Proscription of 1746³⁴ forbade the bearing of arms and the wearing of plaid or tartans; the Heritable Jurisdictions (Scotland) Act of 1746 and Tenures Abolition Act of 1746, abolished the traditional rights of jurisdiction afforded Scottish clan chiefs. These latter two acts weakened not only his power but also his ability and willingness to protect the impoverished Highlanders under his charge on his overpopulated lands. Hence, there was every reason to leave.³⁵

In spite of this, kinship ties did persist. Many of the Highland Scots who became prominent in the fur trade, the McTavishes, McGillivrays, Frasers not only shared kinship ties with Lord Lovat, who lost his head over his involvement,³⁶ but also came from Lovat’s despoiled lands.³⁷ These same people found their way to North America in the late 1700s. Many others, such as the McDonnells also came from Inverness-shire. The second and third generation of these emigrant families found their way onto the Pacific slopes with the fur trade usually as officers with the North West Company or Hudson’s Bay Company. How this group coalesced into the backbone of the Canadian fur trade was unintentionally engineered by an English captain who had fought at the battle.

The instigator was James Wolfe, then Captain James Wolfe as he was known at the time of the battle. Having spent follow-up time in Scotland and realizing the fighting ability and loyalty of the Highlanders, Wolfe sprang to the defence of the Highlanders when in 1757 at the behest of Lord Chatham, and under a warrant from King George II, the surviving Colonel Simon Fraser, Master of Lovat was asked to raise a regiment, the 78th Fraser Regiment, to specifically fight in North America. Two years later at the battle of the Plains of Abraham the 1500 members were the largest single regiment and suffered the greatest casualties. Having done their job somewhat as cannon fodder, they were disbanded in 1763 in Quebec. This was a key move as the literate bourgeois French merchant and land owning class beat a quick retreat to Paris as business options had closed off leaving a vacuum to be filled in Quebec.³⁸

It was not a difficult transition for the disbanded Scots as many had some knowledge of French and were often Catholic, and so they easily blended in with the French speaking population. The Protestants, who had not been unsympathetic to the Jacobites, also got into the act by establishing the first Presbyterian church and first masonic lodge. Curling was introduced to their new homeland. With France’s withdrawal from the scene and the transfer of power to a new order, continuing the fur trade originally built by the French was a logical option. The North West Company centered in Montreal was governed by people who shared kinship ties to the Fraser Clan. The explorer Simon Fraser's Uncle John was given a judgeship while another uncle returned to Scotland. Fraser's own father then came out and settled in the Bennington, Vermont/New York border area at the beginning of the American Revolution but the family retreated to Quebec when Simon Fraser's father died. Scottish kinship ties then became the magnet for the fur trade.³⁹

The impetus for leaving the outer Hebrides, another source of fur trade employees was slightly different. At the edge in marginal crofter plots in an already difficult landscape the marginal farmers must have found the Celtic source for the Hebrides name as heb eid (without corn) or heb boued (without food) more real than poetic. The most notable fur trade figure from the Island of Lewis, Alexander Mackenzie, had to struggle, privileged as he was his relatives being the laird's of the island. Not so the crofters. They were subsistence farmers always with little or no education. The Highlanders of Lewis were latecomers who did not really enter the HBC picture until the 1830s, ostensibly to replace the non-performing Orcadians.⁴⁰

Strong kinship ties and shared cultural values in Catholic Quebec, as well as a Presbyterian drive to overcome an accident of history, were very important in establishment of the partnerships of the North West Company and the success east of the Rockies. A link to this was Simon Fraser who came over the Rockies in 1805 to begin the land-based fur trade.

Mixed Descent or Métis –Fitting In

IMAGE 9 Métis sash. Photograph by Erin Dolmage, 2008.

From the time that the Europeans and others set foot on North American shores, a mixed descent society (metis, bois brûlé, halfbreed, country born, mixed blood, multiracial or mestizos) began to emerge and indeed a continuous mixing (métissage) has occurred since then. As well, before they arrived on the shores of the new world the Europeans themselves were the result of the mixing of many different groups who had re-organized themselves into separate language and cultural groups carving out geo-political areas of the landscape of Europe. Although a large amount of mixing took place during the fur trade it also came about because of other factors. The mixing of people and cultures was never a formal process with predictable outcomes; the process ranged from the distant colonial ancestors of people like Francois Noel Annance and Simon Plomondo being raised and assimilated by their 18th century Abenaki captors⁴¹, to the children of William Tomison who in the 19th century were taken back to Orkney to be educated and live. Much of the initial fur trade mixing in northern North America took place through the couriers de bois who began to establish settlements around the Great Lakes with an emerging culture (short shirt, red woollen cap, deerskin leggings, breech cloth, etc.) distinct from, although sharing some attributes with the native cultures. As well, descendants of Orcadians trading via Hudson Bay coalesced into a distinct mixed descent culture. The problem was not that each group found nurture and sustenance in and compatibility with the landscape, but with their finding a place in the cultural and racial caste system imported by the Europeans and carried on, to some degree, with the companies of the fur trade. Just where the mixed descent people fit into the ordered system of the fur trade was problematic and loomed large in the lives of the metis particularly from the company's points of view.

As fur trade companies required undivided allegiance, people of mixed descent with ties to the indigenous population were seen to possess potentially divided loyalties not beneficial to their goal of profit. The question of any undivided loyalty partially resolved itself early on when mixed descent children were absorbed into the Home Guard bands of local natives around the fur trade posts. Subsequent native nurturing, upbringing and enculturation helped fix and anchor their loyalties and by definition, their place in the fur trade order. As well, east of the Rocky Mountains where numbers were large enough to warrant settlements, the problem was less acute as the more self-sufficient Métis could play an ancillary role to the fur trade on an as-needed basis or when they chose to do so. The problem lay with those children who had become dependent on the fur trade.

These children and young adults had to face, inculcate and fit into the ethnic, national and gender rules provided by the dominant companies.

In earlier years the HBC and the Montreal based North West Company [NWC] did not consider it within their business interests to educate the young mixed bloods. NWC bourgeois, such as David Thompson, sent their children to schools in Upper and Lower Canada.⁴² Other partners or officers took their children back to England, Scotland or Orkney. Still, there were moves to set up local schools. For example, Daniel Williams Harmon's journal editor and compiler, Rev. Daniel Haskel imbued with a strong religious bent proposed around 1820 that the North West Company "from motives of interest" set up a school for half-breed children.⁴³ According to him another plan at the time was "in contemplation" to provide the elements of a settlement with school on Rainy Lake River:

The Partners and Clerks of the North West Company, who are in the Indian Country as well as some of those who reside in Canada, and elsewhere, have subscribed several thousand dollars for the establishment of a school, either at Rainy Lake, or at Fort William, for the instruction of the children, connected with their establishments.⁴⁴

These settlement plans were set back with the amalgamation of the North West Company into the Hudson's Bay Company in 1821. On the other hand, in 1822, the HBC London Committee saw the children as a potential public order issue:

It has become a matter of serious importance to determine on the most proper measure to be adopted with regard to the men who have large family and who must be discharged, and with the numerous Halfbreed Children whose parents have died or deserted them. These people form a burden which cannot be got rid of without expense; and if allowed to remain in their present condition, they will become dangerous to the Peace of the Country and the safety of the Trading Posts. It will therefore be both prudent and economical to incur some Expense in placing these people where they may maintain themselves and be civilized and instructed in Religion.⁴⁵

As late as 1855, Alexander Ross was still appealing for a school system to educate the mixed descent children.⁴⁶ He found that the over-indulged children of officers were the least equipped to handle themselves in society but potentially, given their skills and understanding of both native and non-native societies, were probably the best equipped to be a positive influence in society.⁴⁷ Irishman Cox on the other hand did not feel the same way for he felt that those brought up in the fur trade learned little from either and perhaps drew negative aspects from each parent:

While they are taught to despise the traditions of their mother's tribe, no one busies himself in unfolding to them the divine truths of Christianity, and the loose manners of their fathers are but ill calculated to impress them with any great respect for the ties of morality.⁴⁸

Even though mixed descent men carried with them over the Rocky Mountains the stigma of not fitting in, there was considerable admiration for their skills from people such as Ross Cox:

They are good canoe-men, and excellent hunters, remarkably active either on horseback or on foot; brave, daring, rather passionate, and, while they possess all the vivacity of their father, they at times manifest a slight symptom of Indian ferocity; this however is only evinced when any insulting allusion is made to their mixed origin. They are opened-hearted and generous, practice little cunning, detest hypocrisy; and while they are determined not to submit quietly to a wrong are extremely cautious against giving any unnecessary cause of offence.

...They have a wonderful aptitude for learning, and in a short time attain a facility in writing and speaking both French and English that is quite astonishing. Their manners are naturally and unaffectedly polite, and their conversation displays a degree of pure, easy, yet impassioned eloquence, seldom heard in the most refined societies.⁴⁹

For mixed descent women, the role of upward mobility within the Euro-fur trade culture was more easily defined than the men as they were considered prize catches for officers in the field:

...her role would be primarily defined with the framework of being a wife and mother. The Indian custom of paying a bride price to the parents of the girl was no longer operative; instead, in many cases, fur-trade fathers began to provide their daughters with dowries as was customary in their own country. The wealth of some of the officers enabled them to dower their daughter handsomely...⁵⁰

Cox also noted the adaptability of the mixed descent women:

The half-breed women are excellent wives and mothers, and instances of improper conduct are rare among them. They are very expert at the needle, and make coats, trousers, vests, gowns, shirts, shoes, &c., in a manner that would astonish our English fashioners. They are kept in great subjection by their respective lords, to whom they are slavishly submissive. They are not allowed to sit at the same table, or indeed at any table for they still continue the savage fashion of squatting on the ground at their meals, at which their fingers supply the place of forks. They wear no caps in the house; but in travelling, hats are used instead of bonnets. With the exception of the head their dress resembles that worn by the Bavarian broom-girls who of late year visit our shores.⁵¹

Mixed descent daughters within the North West Company were not only a benefit to officers but regular French Canadian employees. Coupling with mixed descent offspring was seen as a cohesive factor in binding together the spirit of the Company. Cox noted a returned engagé in Montreal in 1817:

La Liberte was an extraordinary old man; he had several fine daughters by an Indian wife, and became father-in-law to three proprietors. He was therefore proud of his connexions⁵²

Many sons also found meaning and fulfillment both during and after the fur trade. The educated sons of officers were able to rise to their level of competency but their father's position did not always guarantee success. Sometimes sons of officers worked together against their own better interest:

Three Rascals are Pierre Guillaume Sayer, Peter Grant and Ignace McDonnell all three half Breeds. They stole three new Guns out of a case which they broke open.⁵³

On the other hand several managed to gain an education rising through the ranks and becoming engaged citizens. However, those who were given limited opportunity found meaning and made lives for themselves by skirting the margins of the fur trade social order and making family the focus of their lives.

Mixed blood Métis did coalesce and settle around the fur trade enclave of Red River in the early part of the 19th century. There Michif (a pronunciation variant of the French métis), a mixture of Cree and Canadian French with influences from English and Ojibway [Saulteaux], the lingua franca and core to the culture, came to be spoken. Many French Canadian traditions relating to religion and farm layout were carried on. To the otherwise landholding metis was added an annual buffalo hunt, giving them a lifestyle distinctive from the native peoples. They also carried with them a mistrust of the HBC as their appointed governor of Assiniboia [which included Red River] had banned their traditional annual buffalo hunt. For those with an English speaking background, the threads of heritage remained in songs and fiddle tunes which, when played in Orkney, are even today readily recognized by Orcadians. It was from this base that some of the mixed descent fur traders came and from 1811 rigorously defended themselves against what they considered HBC intrusion. Those who settled west of the Rockies also brought the ideas of strip farms familiar from New France with them when they settled in Washington and Oregon.

The Iroquois – Looking Out for Themselves

Considering the vast spread of the Iroquoian people and many language subgroups over much of eastern North America during several millennia, the Iroquois involved in the fur trade came from a remarkably small area. What drove this one particular group of accomplished warriors, agriculturalists and diplomats, namely the Mohawk, to bring with them to the Pacific slopes a sense of historical privilege and entitlement?

Their story begins in the 1400s when five groups of Iroquoian speaking peoples⁵⁴ based largely in present day New York State confederated beyond tribal organization. By the mid seventeenth century they had moved well beyond their traditional territory conquering and replacing the Algonquins and Hurons as middlemen for the fur trade. They had learned to play one European group off against another and had become adept at revising strategies in ever changing situations including their own mixing with other groups.

One breakaway group, mostly Mohawk but including some Oneida, Onondaga and Cayuga, became kernel to the Iroquois movement westward. After being handed Christianity by French Jesuits, this group separated from the Iroquois League after 1667 and settled along the banks of the St. Lawrence near Montreal on several locations. In 1680 when King Louis XIV granted a seigneurie at Sault St. Louis (Caughnawaga/Kanawake)⁵⁵ he did it exclusively for Iroquois. Here they had a role as a western defence of Ville Marie (later Montreal) making the military garrison and its Jesuit mission its early warning sentinel. Caughnawaga was also a religious launch site for canoes taking priests in a westerly direction. Thus, being proselytizers for the Catholic Church was also natural for the Caughnawa Iroquois.

Later two groups split off from Sault St. Louis: Oka (also known as Kanesatake, Lac des Deux Montagnes, Lake of the Two Mountains, Scawendadey, Scenodidi, etc.) and St. Regis (Akwasasne). The three groups (Caughnawaga/Oka/St. Regis Iroquois) in the Montreal area all shared values common to the Mohawk and it was these shared cultural values that they took out into the Prairies and that they saw prevail in the fur trade.⁵⁶

In the late 1700s, having exhausted their own territory of furs, the Iroquois were travelling in large bands of up to 250 individuals denuding sections of the prairie landscape of furs and no doubt deftly balancing company and local native based rules. Unlike pre-ordained patterns of British or determining leadership roles, for generations the Iroquois:

leaders...attracted followers by their person traits and reputations. Kin ties were important. Clan brothers were easily linked...Men traveled in parties often composed of clan brothers.⁵⁷

IMAGE 10 Furs. Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

The picture became more complex on the prairies as even though the biological mix increased, strong Iroquois cultural values were retained. Some from this group maintained contact with their Montreal area homes functioning as fully contracted servants properly returning home at the end of their contracts, others vacillating between contracted servant status and freemen, with still others functioning totally as freemen, establishing families with local native women. They were tough negotiators, having it written into their HBC contracts that someone would be placed on their land to work it should they not make it back on time.⁵⁸ As outsiders on the prairie landscape they negotiated their way into intermediary roles playing cultural brokers devising “ways and means to extract the maximum benefits from the trading companies without jeopardizing the business relationships.” To survive as freemen, they had to “establish dominance” over the fur trade within an area often by ignoring traditional native patterns. This would suggest the basis of a parallel system.⁵⁹ They both secured employment in trading posts and wintered with Indian bands. To ensure a free flow of goods, they adjusted their strategies accordingly, avoided sanctions by being highly mobile while, knowing that their services were essential, playing one fur trade company off against the other within defined areas.

By the early 1800s free Iroquois were particularly active in the areas of the foothills and eastern slopes of the Rockies, upper Athabasca River and Peace and Smoky Rivers. They had found their way into the Flatheads area by travelling in from the Prairies or up the Missouri. So it was not unusual to find an ebb and flow of Iroquois throughout the journals of NWC partner David Thompson. Since, by 1816, the NWC could not make a profit west of the Rockies, the partners decided at the Fort William Rendezvous that year to employ Iroquois from the Montreal area as they were such “expert hunters and trappers.”⁶⁰ So when they crossed the Great Divide, their behavioural patterns were well established.

On the Pacific slopes, and as fitting their nature, they took on roles of leadership within some indigenous communities on both sides of the international border.⁶¹

Hawaiians – Another Accident of Geography⁶²

IMAGE 11 The Hawaiian Islands chain, Google Maps, 2009.

The Hawaiian entry into the land-based fur trade is not difficult to see given their relative geographic proximity to the Pacific Northwest. These paradise islands lay directly on the path between the Pacific Northwest and the sea otter market in China during the maritime fur trade. As well, it became a watering hole and replenishment site for vessels rounding the horn on their way to the Pacific Northwest.

One might ask why Hawaiians would leave “paradise” to work in a much colder environment in the maritime fur trade or the land-based fur trade which had nothing to do with anything in their traditional way of life? By its very definition, paradise is a place that one prefers to stay in rather than leave. The answers lie within the Hawaiian perception of their role on the high seas as well as conditions on the islands themselves.

First, there is the deeply rooted culturally imbued understanding within the Polynesian culture that they were great travelers, great navigators who could negotiate their way through endless empty ocean just by the stars. Migrating over several millennia from a possibly Melanesian origin,⁶³ the Polynesians had acquired considerable navigation skills. When most cultures never traveled out of sight of land, the Polynesian select navigators using air/sea interactions, clouds, color of ocean, bird flights, etc., to navigate their way around the vast expanses of Polynesia cornered by New Zealand, Rapa Nui [Easter Island] and Hawaii. There is good evidence to suggest that they introduced chickens to South America, which had lived in relative comfort in conical stone houses in Rapa Nui, at least one hundred years before the arrival of the Europeans.⁶⁴ As extensive travel was not new, when foreign ships arrived, opportunity presented itself. During the maritime fur trade from the 1780s, as most all were safely returned to the Hawaiian Islands, any fears of working with foreigners were dispelled. The first Hawaiian to arrive in the Pacific Northwest in 1787, a woman by the name of Winee died before returning home, but a respected Hawaiian chief also on board could attest to the fact that she had died of natural causes.

Aside from the innate value of travel, there were also home-grown reasons to leave. One was the civil unrest. Hawaii was at war with itself and in a campaign to unite the Hawaiian Island group by force, Kamehameha, from the big Island of Hawaii engaged in internal Hawaiian warfare of which there were many disruptions and casualties.

The human desire for some to escape from the excessively harsh kapus or taboos, a civil and social control device used by the ruling classes, or ali'i was another major factor. The kapus had begun to lose their hold as social strictures when it was found that nothing detrimental happened to the new visitors to the islands when they intentionally or unintentionally broke kabus.

From the arrival of the missionaries in the early 1820s, the average person was marginalized in favour of the king and ruling classes. The average person was no longer an integral part of the tightly knit distinctly Hawaiian society with its understood consensus rules.

Finally, and much later in the 1840s, the Great Mahale, or redistribution of land left many Hawaiians landless.

So there are several real reasons why the Hawaiians left paradise and headed for the land based fur trade when opportunity presented itself. The first opportunity to work on land came in 1811 with the American vessel Tonquin.

Americans – Delayed “Continentalism”

While an admixture of several ethnicities and nationalities rather than a definable ethnic group, the Americans carried with them certain collective expectations. From Dutch and British beginnings and their trading alliances and disputes with peoples such as the Mohawks and Mohicans to the deerskin trade out of Charleston North Carolina, the hit-and-miss fur trade was dominated by the French west of the Appalachians. In 1763, the Treaty of Paris gave Britain territory east of the Mississippi and Spain the territory west. At that time, many American frontiersmen were the sons of Scottish Highlanders, some of whom came with Wolfe’s army and became involved in the fur trade or moved north as United Empire Loyalists in the American Revolution, becoming the early employees of the North West Company in Montreal.⁶⁵

From 1796, US restrictions had been placed on fur traders when the first government factories or government run fur trade posts were set up. They were to serve two purposes, the first was to “woo the friendship” of the Indians and second, to “set up standards of fair dealing with which private traders would have to compete.”⁶⁶

However, shortly after the French re-acquired Louisiana from Spain by the secret Treaty of San Ildefonso in 1800, continued strictures by the American Congress were put on Americans trading in the area of the Mississippi River. On March 30, 1802, in order to preserve peace on the frontier, Congress passed the Regulation of Trade and Intercourse with the Indians Act which prohibited traders from following Indians to their hunting camps or taking liquor into Indian Country.⁶⁷

When Louisiana, then east of the Mississippi and west of the Rocky Mountains, was sold to the United States in 1803, the nature of the American fur trade changed again particularly in the Missouri region right up to the Rocky Mountains. This was followed in short order by the exploratory expedition of Lewis and Clark down the Columbia in 1805 to extend America’s claim to the Pacific. Since Americans had successfully exploited the maritime fur trade in the decades before, it was logical that they could replicate it on the Pacific slopes right to the coast in short order. However, this did not materialize for several decades as American fur traders were out-competed on the western slopes by Canadian and British fur trade companies. Perhaps in compensation for this delayed success a founding mythology grew up around the largely successful Lewis and Clark expedition. While their journals accurately recorded previous traffic in the area, the mythology ignored the use already of trade goods, western clothes and the presence of mixed descent children resulting from the maritime fur trade. They had no way of knowing that six other African Americans in the maritime fur trade had preceded Yorke, the slave of William Clark, to the area. Neither would they have known that an experimental garden had been planted at the mouth of the Columbia in the last 1790s.⁶⁸ A similar analogy could explain the amount of emphasis given to the Mountain men whose numbers on the Pacific slopes paled in comparison to those employees of the Canadian and British companies.

Within the first decade of the 19th century, American fur traders of various ethnicities were making their way through the Great Lakes, down to the foot of Lake Michigan, down the Illinois River to St. Charles and up into Missouri country. As well, those of French, Spanish and other origins based in Kaskaskia, St. Genevieve and St. Louis as well as Americans from farther east were also making their way into Missouri Country. Indeed, 1807 was the beginning of the American fur trade of the Missouri, a span which lasted thirty-seven years. Although the closing of the government run factories in 1822 opened trade somewhat east of the Rocky Mountains, several American attempts to establish a presence west of the Rockies were not successful. In 1811, John Jacob Astor’s company had tried to establish a base at the mouth of the Columbia, in the 1820s Jedediah Smith trapped his way through Oregon Territory to California and in the 1830s Nathaniel J. Wyeth had tried to establish a Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company. All ultimately succumbed to a variety of circumstances, as well as competition from Canadian and British companies.

Some Americans revised strategies to gain a foothold. Starting in 1826 William Ashley organized the Rocky Mountain Rendezvous system of supplying fur traders and trappers whereby individuals would not have to go east of the Rockies to trade and replenish themselves with supplies. This gave rise to the presence of the Mountain men, embodiment of the independent American spirit.

English – A Minor Presence

IMAGE 12 Officer's quarters. Fort Langley, Parks Canada.
Photograph by author, 2009.

Beyond establishing an economic model largely through the HBC, the English as an ethnic-cultural group played a relatively minor role in the fur trade on the Pacific Slopes. Through the HBC, they were more effective at providing a business and behavioural model than distinguishing themselves in the field. Earlier, as London was the early main recruitment area, they played a much larger role in the fur trade, particularly around Hudson Bay. The English were the dominant group of servants with the Hudson's Bay Company between 1670 and 1707, when various parts of the British Isles united to become the British Isles and options such as the Orkneys became available for recruits. By the late 18th century, the master-servant model which reflected the English society when it was chartered had begun to unravel. As Edith Burley noted:

The company needed men who knew how to build, repair, and manoeuvre canoes and it required them to travel hundreds of miles, often into unknown territory, where they were expected to live off the land as much as possible. Many of the company's workers objected to these new duties and new working conditions... Therefore, although it did recruit officers and skilled tradesmen in London, it did not want labourers from there. It had, after all, been the desire to avoid the disorderly population of that city...⁶⁹

The English were very successful at harnessing the energy of others to achieve their own goals.

The Indigenous Insiders on the Pacific Slopes

The indigenous occupation of the Pacific slopes can be looked at roughly as two separate cultural groupings, the diverse coastal and equally diverse cordillera/plateau, both fixed in north-south directions and determined by the topography. Linguistic divisions, however, transcended topography and often languages were shared across both coastal and inland areas. The coastal culture, then, was shared by several unrelated linguistic groups as was the plateau culture. The attributes common to the coastal cultures were a dense population based on a plentiful supply of food, marked status distinctions based on inheritance, elaborate material culture including a highly developed art tradition, and complex social events involving the distribution of wealth items. Also common to the coastal cultures was the retention of slaves for menial work and status and their disposition at the will of their owners. Potlatches were a way of cementing social, political and kinship ties, displaying wealth and power and redistributing that wealth. All coastal communities had established villages of varying sizes

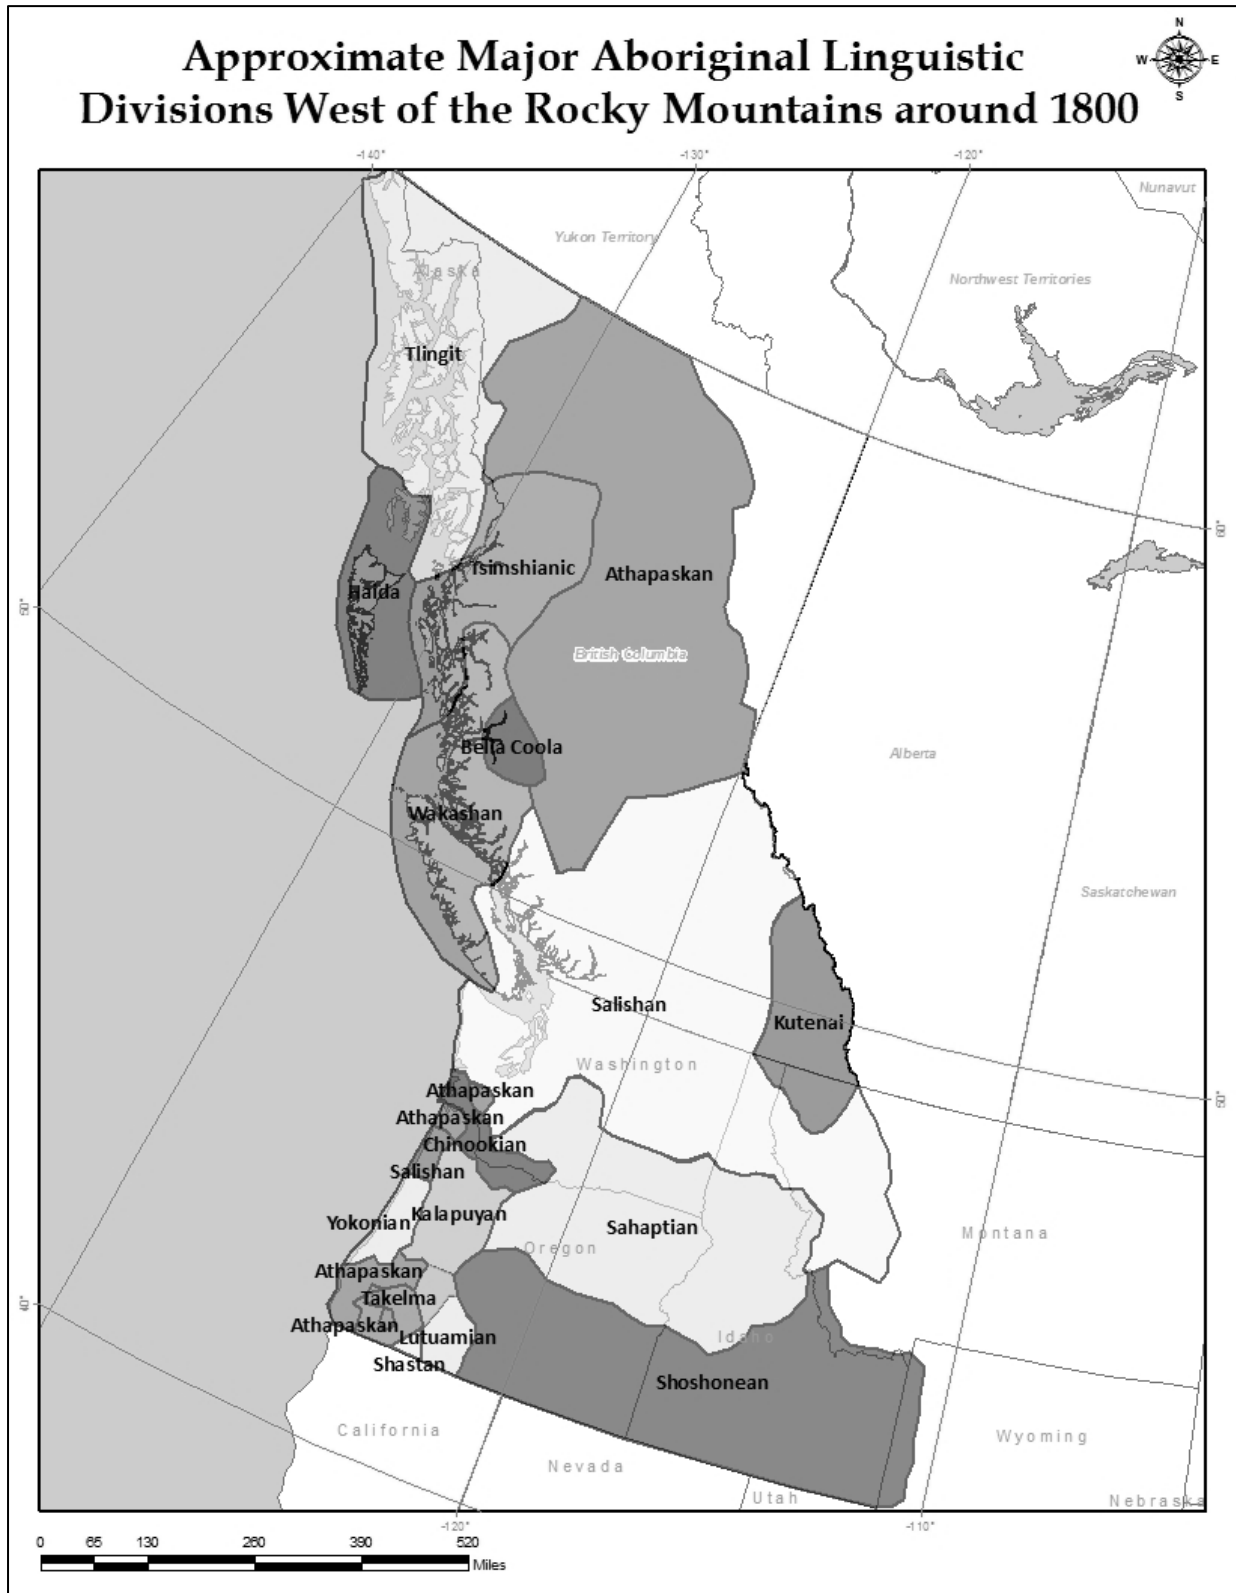

IMAGE 13 Linguistic map of major Aboriginal groups on the Pacific Northwest. 2010.

In was into this living landscape that fur trade companies and fur traders thrust themselves. As all natives knew the value of trade, it was not difficult for a trading company to negotiate space from which it could operate. With understood rules of mutually beneficial engagement, the fur trade companies set up their posts, around which the natives moved as a kind of home guard ensuring not only a supply of goods and security for themselves, but also a tacit license to exact tolls on other groups coming to the posts to trade. A symbiotic relationship, so to speak, emerged. Apart from initial marriages with post officers to higher status women to cement relations or mitigate wrongdoings, couplings took place on all levels and many of them were enduring. Nonetheless, stockades and bastions were in place should misunderstandings escalate into violence.

To prevent a fragmenting of information on indigenous people, the information below is presented within the context of linguistic grouping even though there were large cultural differences depending on where persons lived.

Athapaskan

Occupying the western subarctic the Athapaskan linguistic stock was one of the larger linguistic groups in North America. In present day British Columbia those Athapaskan groups closest to the fur trade posts or forts are cited: the Cordillera Athabascans (Dené) who were the Sekani/Sekanaish-Yutuwichan (McLeod Lake), Carrier-Necosliwoten, (Fort St. James), Carrier Nataotin (Forts Babine), Carrier-Kluskoten/Kluskus (Tluz Kuz post); Carrier-Talkotin/Tauten (Fort Alexandria), Carrier-Tanoten (Fort George) and Carrier-Natliwoten (Fort Fraser). The basic organization for the Dené was the extended family although their extended trade with the Coast showed influences from that culture. Further south were the Chilcotin (Fort Chilcotin) who were part of the Plateau cultural area living in “a seasonal round of hunting, fishing, digging roots and collecting berries.”⁷⁰ For the Dené, the bounty of food or lack thereof affected the culture. The relative scarcity of food particularly the absence of seasonal salmon runs, forced the Sekanaish, for example, to be more nomadic following game and thus had little in the way of village structures; leadership fell to the older heads of related families. This constant search for food during times of scarcity was also felt by the men at the various posts. With the Babines and Carriers succession of rank or property was achieved through the matrilineal line. For the fur traders who married in, this meant more aboriginal access to the aboriginal network. The patrilineal succession⁷¹ of the Chilcotin and Sekanaish would not have presented the same opportunity for the family of the fur trader. Whereas the Plateau Chilcotins buried their dead, the Cordilleran Carriers burned their dead on funeral pyres in great celebrations that impacted on reliance on the natives for a steady supply of furs. The deceased widow would carry the remaining bones from the funeral pyre and carry them on her back in a leather satchel “until the co-clansmen of the deceased had amassed a sufficient quantity of eatables and dressed skins to be publicly distributed” in a potlatch.⁷² Hence the name, Carrier/Porteur. The Babines on the other hand, acquired their name from fur traders who observed their custom of inserting labrets in their lips, thus distending them. Established trading was the norm. Those who did not live with the accessible river runs had to trade dried fish for other items. The Chilcotin who traded dentalium shells from the coast to trade with the Interior Salish, also took on some aspects of coastal natives with their three classes, nobility, commoners and slaves. They also developed some aspects of the clan system.⁷³ Not all was peace and harmony. For the fur trader, the Chilcotin were unseemingly testy. Part of the reason could be their disputes with the Talkotin of Fort Alexandria.⁷⁴ As well, the location of the Fort Chilcotin site was in the area of many previously occupied pit house remains indicating that it was a nexus area which had relied on the nearby river for food. A post presence would become problematic where fish at times was relatively scarce. The fact that the Chilcotin leadership was split between chiefs for peacetime and those chosen for war⁷⁵ would have weakened any negotiation for land on which to place a post in the first place.

In present-day Washington and Oregon there were several pockets of isolated Athapaskan speakers, left overs from Athapaska wanderings. These groups usually took on the culture of the groups that surrounded them. One of these groups, the Umpqua (Fort Umpqua) had undoubtedly taken on the cultural characteristics of those in the area.

Tlingit

The Tlingit occupied what is known as the Alaskan Panhandle. The Na-Dené Athabaskan-Eyak-Tlingit associations of the Tlingit language indicate a migration of the Tlingit from inland to the coast. Oral tradition suggests that they came down through the Skeena River territory and migrated northward subsuming the existing indigenous population and populating the islands and mainland of the Alaskan Panhandle..⁷⁶ In their new location, they became seafaring traders, “exchanging copper and mountain-goat wool blankets for such goods as slaves and shell ornaments.”⁷⁷ HBC head George Simpson’s estimate of their slaves being one third of the population appears to be high.⁷⁸

Two of the more than a dozen Tlingit groups are of concern to the Pacific Northwest fur trade, the Stikine (Fort Stikine) and Taku (Fort Durham/Taku), both situated at the mouths of respective rivers. Part of both groups’ prosperity came from their role as middlemen for up-river trade which appears to have increased significantly during the maritime fur trade. They retained the traditional right to exact a very heavy toll on any interior group that would venture down river to trade. Zealous guardianship of these traditional trade routes presented major problems for the HBC when it established posts near the mouths of the rivers of the same name. The 1839 HBC-Russian agreement giving access to trade meant little to those native groups who traditionally held the trading rights, therefore considerable negotiation was required with a complex social organization of moieties (2 groups) and clans. There were sometimes no clear heads or chiefs with whom to negotiate. For example, the HBC had difficulties negotiating with Chief Shakes and his Russian educated son, whose large house on an island next to Fort Stikine was a manifestation of his power but in fact he had little influence. The HBC had more success in negotiating with Quatkay/Quatkie who showed less power but had far greater influence..⁷⁹ As potlatches were as much displays of power and wealth as they were in settling differences, the HBC was sometimes caught up in the unpleasant act of witnessing the killing of slaves as demonstrations of indifference to wealth which translated into power.

Haida

The Haida, whose home is the Queen Charlotte Islands/Haida Gwaii and portions of the southern islands in the Alaskan panhandle, appear to be a linguistic isolate. Although they had considerable interaction with and often vigorous opposition to maritime fur traders, there was little reason for land-based fur traders to set up operations there before 1858. Not only did the Haida become the main procurers of slaves from coastal and inland areas and vigorously guard this market niche, the islands were not a great catchment area for furs. However, the Kaigane Haida of southernmost Alaska frequently appeared as traders at Forts Simpson and Stikine.

Tsimshian

The Tsimshianic language of the Coast and adjacent interior is a separate language comprising four groups, two of which are of concern to us because of their proximity to fur trade posts. The two groups are the Nisga’a (the first Fort Simpson site on the Nass River), which inhabited the basin of the Nass river and the Coast Tsimshian (the second Fort Simpson site on the Tsimpsean Peninsula) which traditionally inhabited the lower reaches of the Skeena River and the coastline on each side of the river’s mouth. Culturally, both groups exhibited many coastal characteristics. The society was divided into arbitrary divisions (moieties or phratries) outside of which one had to seek a mate, for seeking a mate inside his/her group would be considered incestuous. As well, since descent was traced through the female line children would take on the affiliation of the mother. This meant that:

A chief could not transmit his name and property to his own sons since they belonged to a different kin group; instead his sister’s sons were his heirs. As high-status marriages were frequently alliances between groups, young men might have to set out for the villages of their maternal uncles to seek their inheritance..⁸⁰

The first post that the HBC established in Nisga’a territory was a negotiated toe-hold near the mouth of the Nass River. This was perfect for the local Nisga’a home guard who could exact tolls of others coming from the interior. The problem arose when the HBC decided to retreat to the Tsimpsean peninsula and the Nisga’a rebelled..⁸¹

As disease had significantly reduced the Tsimshian numbers when the HBC established its post at Lax Kw’alaams [Fort Simpson] in 1834 “most of the Coast Tsimshian moved near the post, leaving only large shell middens to mark where their ancestors had lived for millennia.”⁸² The Coast Tsimshian were the strong home guard at Lax Kw'alaam and many Tsimshian-fur trader marriages took place, rooting the fur traders solidly in the Tsimshian community.

Kwakwaka'wakw (Wakashan)

The Wakashan linguistic family consisted of two major branches spread along western and northern Vancouver Island, the adjacent Cape Flattery region of Washington State, and the central portion of the British Columbia mainland. Of concern here are two groups in the northern Wakashan branch, the Kwakwaka'wakw [Kwakiutl] peoples of Fort Rupert whose language is known as Kwak'wala, and the Heiltsuk [Bella Bella] at the site of Fort McLoughlin.

The Kwakwaka'wakw peoples were a highly structured class society consisting of four levels: the nobility who attained their status through birthright, lineage and correct moral behaviour, the aristocracy who attained their status through displayable and distributable wealth through potlatch ceremonies, commoners and slaves. Inheritance rights came through both the male and female lines.

The HBC post set up on Northern Vancouver Island at mid-century to exploit a non-traditional exploitable resource (coal), was reduced to a short-lived coal extraction and goods merchandizing function. Here aspects of the Kwakwaka'wakw culture meshed through the progeny of HBC servants although not in a traditional fur trade sense. The variety of brightly coloured paints that the HBC store was able to provide vastly enriched the Kwakwaka'wakw woodcarving totemic and mask culture.

The stratified society Heiltsuk [Bella Bella] (Fort McLoughlin) which traditionally guarded the entrance to the Burke and Dean Channel and which gave trade access to the interior became the home guard. The initial brutalities against the fur traders may have been Bella Bella application of their own idea of how to treat what they perceived as slaves on their own territory.

Salishan Language Group

Another very large language group which spanned both Coastal and Plateau cultures was the Salishan group of languages. The coastal group cited here are the Lushootseed (Fort Nisqually), Lekwungen-Songhees (Fort Victoria), Halkomelem-Nanaimo (Nanaimo), Halkomelem-Stalo (Fort Langley), Tsamosan-Cowlitz (Cowlitz Farm, Cawee-man Store). They all to some degree shared the coastal cultural characteristics although the rigid class distinctions were not evident.

True "chiefs" appear not to have existed, the native term being better translated as "leader." While people of high birth had a great advantage, the system was flexible enough to accommodate upward mobility for talented individuals of more humble origins. Leaders spoke only for their extended families (or "households," as they tended to be the group occupying one house). Households were the largest effective political groups, even winter villages being essentially only clusters of households. The loose social organization allowed frequent shifting of households into different village groups. Slaves purchased or obtained in war, were not numerous in Salish villages.⁸³

The Plateau group comprised the Shuswap (Fort Kamloops/Thompson River), Spokane-Kalispel-Flathead (Forts Spokane, Flathead, Saleesh House [Flathead Post], Kullyspell House), Colville-Okanogan (Forts Colville, Okanogan, Similkameen). The Plateau Salish differed from the Coast Salish in that they were seasonally mobile coming together in the winter in relatively permanent pit house villages where they would last out the winter with stored foods. Fish as a food source were gathered from seasonal runs on the rivers and preserved in various ways. The further away from fish runs they were the more nomadic they became. For the fur traders in the Flathead area, this meant that fur trade posts were often transitory, lasting no more than a season or two. The women were the plant gatherers (digging roots and picking berries) and on the Plateau, pit house builders. Leadership was a shared affair, wealth and ability being determining factors for selection. Generally peaceful, except for the occasional slave raids, Simon Fraser noted on June 15, 1808 a fortified settlement while passing through the Lillooet area.

The village is a fortification of 100 by 24 feet, surrounded with palisades eighteen feet high, slanting inwards, and lined with a shorter row that supports a shade [shelter], covered with bark, and which are the dwellings. This place, we understand, is the metropolis of the Asketih [Lillooet] Nation.⁸⁴

Throughout the fur trade records, there were numerous references to varying degrees of internecine skirmishes. Hunting expeditions into the foothills often brought them into conflict with the Blackfeet and captives were painfully and summarily dispatched.⁸⁵ To the fur trader, the Spokanes were “honest and friendly”, and “good hunters but somewhat indolent, fond of gambling, despotic husbands, and indulgent fathers.”⁸⁶ Infidelity on the part of the husband did not go unpunished by the wife.⁸⁷

The Coastal and Inland Chinook

The Chinookian language is treated here as an isolate even though there is speculation that it belonged to the larger Penutian language family. The Chinookian peoples generally populated both sides up the Columbia River up to the Dalles, occasionally interrupted in areas with Salishan occupation, and were strongly influenced by the coastal culture. The coastal Chinook on the north side of the mouth of the Columbia, and the Clatsop (Fort Clatsop, Fort Astoria/George) on the south shared much in common with other coastal cultures. They had hierarchical ranking based on accumulation of wealth and slaves, grouping by kinship, multiple wives, and permanent winter and summer village sites. Inheritance rights appear to have been matrilineal and women played a strong role in the society even though they could be traded or gambled away:

When male contenders for leadership were lacking, women held the position, as they also held property independent of males. They engaged frequently in village council debates, sometimes vociferously, approving or disapproving decisions, as did the males, by acclamation or silence.⁸⁸

High ranking Chinook women were sensitive to their position for when the wife of NWC partner Duncan McDougall felt the social order was being tested, she took on the lower order wife of Iroquois Ignace Salioheni resulting in a brawl in which several of the women ended up in the water.⁸⁹ Mixed descent children, such as Ranald McDonald retained his right of hereditary chieftenship through his mother's line.⁹⁰ The Chinook also played the role of peace brokers for in 1819 when HBC clerk Peter Skene Ogden's men had during an expedition to avenge the killing of an Iroquois by the Cowlitz [Salish] blundered by allowing the killing of thirteen innocent Cowlitz women and children, the Chinook allowed their traditional enemy, Cowlitz chief How How to come onto their territory to allow the marriage of How How's daughter to an officer, presumably Ogden himself. However, renegade Chinook couldn't resist attacking the Cowlitz while they were there, negating Chinook diplomatic efforts.⁹¹

Of the several upper, inland or riverine Chinook, the group that concerns the fur trade is the Multnomah (Fort Vancouver, Fort William [Sauvie Island]). Chief Casseno/Casino of the Multnomah Chinook appears to have had a long standing good relationship with the fur traders⁹² and, on March 17, 1825 when Simpson met chief Casseno, there appears to have been previous negotiation for Casseno:

offered to put a son...under my care for the purpose of being Educated at the Missionary Society's School in Red River Settlement but the Boys appeared too young & delicate to undergo the Labour and hardship of Crossing the Mountain at this early Season and as any accident happening to them might be seriously taken up by the Indians I thought it would most prudent to leave them...⁹³

The initial home guard for the principal fur trade post of Fort Vancouver would probably have been the Multnomah and later a mix of Chinook groups from up and down the Columbia. Because of a long standing contact with both the maritime and land-based fur trade, the population severely declined.

Sahaptian

The Columbian Plateau Sahaptian group is considered as distinct. Culturally it comprised many Plateau groups but the Walla Walla appeared to be the main occupiers of the critical high traffic nexus area of native trade and exchange at the juncture of the Columbia, Walla Walla and Snake Rivers. However, they were the host to many others such as the Nez Perce, Umatilla/Tenino, Yakima and Klikitat who also came to the area to fish, trade, etc. Sahaptian territory extended downriver to the Dalles and eastward for hunting parties as far as the Bitterroot and even beyond. Like other Columbia plateau groups organization was loose (no clan system) and centered on the village which changed seasonally with the changing food supply. Depending on the specific group villages functioned either collectively as political units or as independent entities. The introduction to the horse to the plateau culture in the eighteenth century allowed them to move beyond fish as a staple food supply and seek out animals. Leadership positions were achieved through a mixture of prestige and ability.⁹⁴

When the fur traders set up a post in the area in 1818, they initially relied too heavily on negotiations that had taken several times over the past dozen years. Negotiation with the Walla Walla took place as early as October 1805 and April 1806 when Lewis and Clark came down the Snake to the Columbia and returned the same way exchanging gifts with Walla Walla chief Yelleppit.⁹⁵ To fur trader Alexander Ross, this was a ratification of peace and was a precursor for interaction.⁹⁶ The next to negotiate with the Walla Walla was David Thompson who, on his way down the Columbia in the summer of 1811, planted a British flag with the Walla Walla promising to return to build a post. Building did not take place under Thompson and in 1818 when Donald McKenzie went to the area to build a NWC post to access the Snake Country, there was a decided chill in the air and negotiations were somewhat after the fact:

On reaching the place instead of advancing to meet us at the water's edge as friends, on making for the shore the Indians, as if with one accord, withdrew to their camp! Not a friendly hand was stretched out; the least joy, usual among Indians on such occasions...⁹⁷

The Walla Walla were afraid that the fur traders' friendly relations and trading of armaments with their enemy, the Shoshoni/Snakes would go against them. They feared their own demise should such a trade flourish and so they put obstacles in the way of the post's construction. They made the fur traders pay for the timber they were collecting and forbade them to hunt or fish.⁹⁸ It was only then that the NWC began negotiations offering "such terms as were given in other parts of the country" and were rejected did they use their weapons to force a deal.⁹⁹ An uneasy accommodation was reached after a liberal distribution of gifts.¹⁰⁰ Finally, after many councils, the Nor'westers were allowed unencumbered passage to Snake Country. However, complete trust between the post and natives took many years to normalize.

Kutenai/Kutenay/Ktunaxa

The Kutenai language (Kootenae House and Forts Kootenay) is an isolate and cannot be connected to any other language group. As well, the origin of the Kutenai culture has not been established as the culture borrowed heavily from both Plains and Plateau culture. It seems likely that they inhabited both the Plains and the Plateau before they were driven into an area defined by the drainage system of the Kootenay River and Kootenay Lake. Still, to their own peril they went onto the Plains for their annual buffalo hunt for fresh buffalo meat and meat for pemmican. On the other hand, the Kutenai down the Kootenay River and Kootenay Lake, hunted deer and took sturgeon from the river. Both used tipis, the group nearest the Plains covering them with hides and those further inland, with mats. For the upper river Kootenay, a chief chosen from the Tobacco Plains group was standard, whereas chiefs from further down the river were chosen by a council of elders. Lesser chiefs would be appointed for specific tasks when needed.¹⁰¹

There seemed to be a willingness to trap beaver in order to secure guns. At first there was tremendous animosity towards the whites who provided guns to the Plains Blackfoot/Blackfeet who readily stopped the Kutenai from their annual buffalo hunts. However, when they found they could readily acquire guns by trading beaver pelts with the North West Company, they seized the opportunity.¹⁰²

¹ The above generic information can be obtained from any number of books on Canadian and/or Quebec history.

Two which provide easy access are Conrad & Finkel and Dickinson & Young.

² These descriptions appear in a variety of sources but a good site on the web is www.sasked.gov.sk.ca/docs/francais/frcore/elem/progeted/PKK1-3.html; Cox, p. 305; Irving, Astoria, p. 30

³ Irving, Astoria, p. 32-33

⁴ ibid, p. 30

⁵ Harmon, Harmon's Journal p. 177

⁶ II, p. 54

⁷ Irving, Astoria, p. 31

⁸ E. I. Burley, p. 74

⁹ ibid, p. 75

¹⁰ Conrad & Finkel, p. 140

¹¹ J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory, p. 43

¹² A. Ross, Adventures, p. 171-72

-
- ¹³ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 178
- ¹⁴ E. I. Burley, p. 12
- ¹⁵ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 177
- ¹⁶ J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory, p. 43
- ¹⁷ Cox, p. 306
- ¹⁸ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 177
- ¹⁹ ibid, p. 177
- ²⁰ Cox, p. 306
- ²¹ Irving, Astoria, p. 30
- ²² HBRS II, p. 31
- ²³ E. I. Burley, p. 68
- ²⁴ ibid, p. 71
- ²⁵ ibid, p. 75
- ²⁶ Sir John Sinclair, The Statistical Account of Scotland, (Wakefield, 1978) p. 155 as found in Jim Troup, "Orphir 1821: Attractions of Hudson's Bay company Service," paper, Rupert's Land Colloquium, Edmonton, Alberta, 1994
- ²⁷ Burley, p. 78
- ²⁸ Selkirk Memorandum, Selkirk Correspondence, HBCA A.10/1, fo. 318, 393d cited in Introduction to Colin Robertson's Letters, 1817-22, HBRS II, p. xli
- ²⁹ Colin Robertson's January 25, 1820 Fort St. Mary's letter to William Williams, HBRS II, p. 269
- ³⁰ OrkA D.2/45/4
- ³¹ Bumsted, The Scots in Canada, p. 3
- ³² ibid, p. 28
- ³³ ibid, p. 3
- ³⁴ This punitive act was to take effect August 1, 1747 and stipulated that no man or boy in Scotland, unless they were part of the military:
 "shall on any pretext whatsoever, wear or put on clothes, commonly called Highland clothes (that is to say) the Plain, Philabeg, or little kilt, Trowes, Shoulder-Belts, or any part whatever of what belongs to the Highland Garb; and that no tartan or partly-coloured plaid or stuff shall be used for Great Coats or upper coats, and if any such person shall presume after the first day of August, to wear or put on the aforesaid garments or any part of them, every person so offending, being convicted thereof by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses before any court of justiciary, or any one or more justices of the peace for the shire or stewartry, or just ordinary of the place where such offence shall be committed, what suffer imprisonment, without bail, during the space of six months, and no longer; and being convicted for a second offence before a court of Justiciary or at the circuits, shall be liable to be transported to any of His Majesty's plantations beyond the seas, there to remain for the space of seven years." This act was repealed July 1, 1782
- ³⁵ www.electronicScotland.com/history/other/proscription_1747.html
- ³⁶ Fraser, p. 2
- ³⁷ Adams & Somerville, p. 26; ChSoc XXII, p. 35
- ³⁸ www.yorkgarrison.com/about_the_regiment.html
- ³⁹ Fraser, p. 2-9; Barbara Rogers, conversation, 2008
- ⁴⁰ E. I. Burley, p. 95
- ⁴¹ MacLachlan, Fort Langley Journals, p. 240 n.10
- ⁴² Van Kirk, "Many Tender Ties", p. 97-99, Cox, p. 310
- ⁴³ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. xli
- ⁴⁴ ibid, xl
- ⁴⁵ HBRS III, p. 32-33
- ⁴⁶ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 196
- ⁴⁷ ibid, p. 197-98
- ⁴⁸ Cox, p. 310
- ⁴⁹ ibid
- ⁵⁰ Van Kirk, "Many Tender Ties", p. 108
- ⁵¹ Cox, p. 310
- ⁵² ibid, p. 307
- ⁵³ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 5, nd
- ⁵⁴ the Seneca, Cayuga, Onondaga, Oneida and Mohawk
- ⁵⁵ www.tolatsga.org/iro.html

-
- ⁵⁶ McMillan, p. 79
- ⁵⁷ Snow, p. 125, citing Druke (1987, p. 31)
- ⁵⁸ An example of this practice may be found in the May 1, 1817 HBC Montreal contract of François Ghansniaharoton [standardized as Gitaniagharoton], from Sault St. Louis, signed in front of notary public, Joseph Desautels. He was on a defined length of time trip to Fort William and/or Grand Portage and back. If he did not make it back within two months and eight days, a man would be sent to work his land, a condition which does not appear in French Canadian contracts. The codicil read: "Il a été présentement convenue que si le dit engagé est plus de deux mois est huit jours dans son voyage la dite honorable compagnie s'oblige de mettre un homme sur la terre du dit engagé pour faire les travaux jusqu'à son retour." from Voyageur data base project, University of Ottawa.
- ⁵⁹ E. J. Devine
- ⁶⁰ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 56
- ⁶¹ Jean Barman, "A Gutsy Determination: Iroquois in the Pacific Northwest Post the Fur Trade," paper, Rupert's Land Colloquium, Rocky Mountain House, Alberta, May 16, 2008; ibid, "Iroquois Persistence in the Pacific Northwest," paper, American Society for Ethnohistory Conference, Eugene, Oregon, November 13, 2008.
- ⁶² unless otherwise noted, information taken from Barman & Watson, Leaving Paradise
- ⁶³ Kayser, M. et al
- ⁶⁴ Storey et al. [<http://www.pubmedcentral.nih.gov/articlerender.fcgi?artid=1965514>.]
- ⁶⁵ NWC Documents, p. 35
- ⁶⁶ Lavender, p. 43
- ⁶⁷ ibid
- ⁶⁸ B. Watson, "Diversity of Activity"
- ⁶⁹ E. I. Burley, p. 3
- ⁷⁰ McMillan, p. 166
- ⁷¹ Morice, The History of, p. 5
- ⁷² ibid, p. 6
- ⁷³ McMillan, p. 166-67
- ⁷⁴ HBRS X, p. 213
- ⁷⁵ Ray, p. 23
- ⁷⁶ George T. Emmons and Frederica de Laguna, The Tlingit Indians, Seattle: University of Washington Press, 1991, p. 8-
- ⁷⁷ McMillan, p. 191
- ⁷⁸ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 211
- ⁷⁹ ibid, p. 211-212
- ⁸⁰ McMillan, p. 192
- ⁸¹ W. F. Tolmie, p. 289-92
- ⁸² McMillan, p. 193
- ⁸³ McMillan, p. 202
- ⁸⁴ Fraser, p. 82
- ⁸⁵ Cox, p. 118-19
- ⁸⁶ ibid, p. 231
- ⁸⁷ ibid, p. 231-32
- ⁸⁸ Ruby & Brown, The Chinook Indians, p. 9
- ⁸⁹ Coues, p. 891
- ⁹⁰ see Ranald McDonald biography
- ⁹¹ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 129-32
- ⁹² G. Simpson, Fur Trade p. 87
- ⁹³ ibid, p. 85
- ⁹⁴ Ray, p. 19
- ⁹⁵ DeVoto
- ⁹⁶ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 119
- ⁹⁷ ibid, p. 118
- ⁹⁸ ibid, p. 120
- ⁹⁹ ibid, p. 121
- ¹⁰⁰ ibid, p. 119-126
- ¹⁰¹ McMillan, p. 161-65
- ¹⁰² Cox, p. 232-34

Part 2: Some Major Land-Based Fur Trade Companies that Operated on the Pacific Slopes from 1793 to 1858

Companies mattered to the land based fur trader, for these commercial enterprises were the primary agents through which the fur trade operated and company structure, policies and attitude directly affected the lives of their employees. Preceded by maritime fur trade companies and partnerships operating on the Pacific Northwest Coast from the 1780s through the 1820s, the land based companies were, with the exception of five Boston and New York partnerships included here, largely based in London, Montreal and St. Louis. All existed solely for the profit of their shareholders and principals and with few exceptions, showed little interest in colonization and settlement. Finished products were traded for raw furs that were again traded elsewhere within complex trading networks, only one component part of which operated on the Pacific slopes. While officers, partners or proprietors shared in the profits, average employees, under contract or not, were paid both in kind and by wage which became the basis for their savings. For the average fur trade employee it was a matter of balancing self-interest and loyalty to family with loyalty to the employer, which came with its prescribed expected behaviours. For the company then as now it was also a balancing act between the maximization of company profits, assuaging the interests of employees and natives, protecting the employee from harm and avoiding disfiguring the landscape in their role of establishing order for possible later colonial design.¹

The Hudson's Bay Company, 1670+ (HBC)

IMAGE 14 The Hudson's Bay Company coat of arms, Wikipedia, 2007.

The Hudson's Bay Company was one of many European royally chartered monopoly companies in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries whereby a joint stock company was permitted to monopolize trade of their own nationals in a defined area. Armed with quasi-governmental powers, as well as an ability to wage war and to negotiate treaties, it extended European national economic and later, colonial interests to different areas of the world, all with royal government permission. For example, the British English East India Company (1600-1858) operating in Asia spawned many others: Dutch (1602-1800), French (1664-1769), Danish (1616-1850s), Swedish (1731-1813), and Austrian (1775-1785). Other companies covered the South Seas, Africa and Caribbean-South America. One of the last such companies to get into the game was the Russian American Company (1799-1867). Of all of the above only the Hudson's Bay Company remains in existence today.

Chartered as the Governor and Company of Adventurers Trading into Hudson's Bay in 1670, the HBC was granted the monopoly of trade on all the rivers flowing into Hudson Bay, a huge geographical area extending across today's Canada to the Rocky Mountains and south to parts of the United States.² Structurally, an inherently paternalistic master-servant relationship demanding complete loyalty by employees reflected the consensus rules of the society of the day. As the company was perceived to be functioning in a political vacuum rules governed the security and all aspects of an employee's life. Any departure before the end of a contract for whatever reason including personal gain was considered “desertion” rather than quitting and in itself was an act of disloyalty.³ Although it varied over time, private trading for personal gain was forbidden.

Initially, at the Annual Court (Annual General Meeting) the shareholders gathered together at a convenient location to elect a governor and committee. The committee would organize fur auctions, order trade goods, hire men and arrange for shipping. Although the Company eventually erected its own headquarters and appointed an additional governor (originally two) in the field, the executive in London was always deferred to for important decisions. Reflecting its early years of trade in the Bay, company officers were often called “Captain”. Initially company servants, the majority of whom came from the London area or Orkney, did not settle in the Bay area:

Occasionally men climbed the fences and went off to the Indian tents by night absented themselves from the factories and threatened to go off and live in the country, but there is no record of any men attempting to live independent of the company.⁴

The Company survived its first 150 years by being flexible and changing policies to meet its needs. These policy decisions would arise from careful examination of all the journals, district reports, account books, etc. which came in from the various posts. For example, by 1810 it was felt necessary to give the Superintendents of Departments and Factors in charge of trading houses a defined share in the profits whereas previously only senior officials and shareholders had that right.⁵

After years of animosity, a negotiated 1821 amalgamation of the HBC and the Montreal based North West Company (NWC) brought about changes to the HBC. British North America was divided into a number of districts and governors were appointed for the Northern and Southern Departments until 1826 when they were put under the jurisdiction of one governor.⁶ Each year, district managers met at York Factory on Hudson Bay to discuss policy and organize the deployment of men. Like the wintering partners of the now defunct NWC, the field officers were issued shares as a way of sharing in the profits.

The mix of personnel also changed. In 150 years during which numerous mixed descent offspring had come of age in both NWC and HBC trading areas, the merger meant a pruning of personnel. The axe fell on many of the mixed descent French Canadians of whom Simpson thought “depraved” and overly loyal to the old NWC except for a select few “a superior class of Men.”⁷ He also felt that leaving young halfbreeds at posts would eventually evolve into a question of public order in the field and so suggested they should be taken to Red River.⁸ It was at this time that numbers of dismissed NWC employees went to work for the American companies out of St. Louis. Although at the time Simpson was pressing for more educated Scots and Orcadians, the records show large numbers of Scots, Iroquois, French Canadians and those of mixed descent were still employed. Those who did not retreat to the Americans or return to Lower Canada, stayed in the field as freemen, some of whom became a thorn in the side of the London company. As experience had taught the company to move with the market exigencies of the time, a move to self sufficiency was imperative as was a move towards diversification away from fur trade. Consequently, the “fur trade” tasks of the workers on the Pacific slopes became much more broadly defined. As well, ships’ crews could also be included under the aegis of the “fur trade.”

IMAGE 15 Hudson Bay Company flag, originally used in 1682. Wikipedia, 2006.

When the 1846 border was drawn between the United States and British North America, the HBC lost its control over territory south of the 49th parallel although it continued trading out of its American posts for over a decade. However, when Vancouver Island became a colony in 1849 and like the East India Company before it in India, the HBC became involved in the colonial rule of that new island British Colony. Nonetheless, when mainland British Columbia became a colony in 1858, the HBC lost its monopoly mandate to the area and

James Douglas, who had been a leading fur trader and also governor of Vancouver Island, had to resign his HBC commission to take on the new role of mainland governor.

The subsidiaries of the HBC, the Puget Sound Agricultural Company (1836-1858) and the Vancouver Island Coal Company (1851-1858), representing a more diverse HBC extending beyond the fur trade, are not considered here.

The North West Company, 1770s-1821 (NWC)

IMAGE 16 The North West Company coat of arms, Library and Archives Canada, 1800-1820.

In contrast with the HBC, the North West Company was not, although based in a British possession, a charter company⁹ and thus did not have full reign and protection of the British Crown. It was more of a loose association of ever changing partnerships built on the foundation of two centuries of the formerly successful French fur trade. Although post-Conquest traders out of Montreal had been penetrating the prairies from the late 1760s under loose business arrangements,¹⁰ it wasn't until 1779 that a formal agreement was made between eight business concerns under the name "North West Com pany."¹¹ The NWC partnerships changed on a regular basis and by 1783, for example two Englishmen, four Scots, one Irish and one French Canadian formed a partnership under the NWC banner, the plurality of them being Scots.¹² Shut out from trading south of the 1783 international boundary with the United States, the NWC turned its attention to the Athabasca region and for the next twenty years under this name there were reorganizations and mergers. As of 1787, twenty-three partners were supported by two thousand workers. In 1812, there were thirty-eight wintering partners. Throughout, the Scots dominated the Montreal fur trade scene.¹³

Structurally, the NWC differed from the HBC in that it took on elements of the old French fur trade organization. At the top of the chain were the bourgeois, as they were called by the voyageurs, the financiers, wholesalers and suppliers. Next were the owners or partners who were paid in shares and had a vote at the annual general meeting in Grand Portage/Fort William each year. They also were loosely referred to as bourgeois. There were two types of partners. Merchant partners were those who stayed within the city of Montreal, marketing the furs while overseeing the bringing in of goods destined for trade.¹⁴ The wintering partners were the field managers who, elected from the ranks of the clerks and apprentice traders, were on their way up the corporate ladder.¹⁵ In the field they became the proprietors of the area that they managed. Two wintering partners on the Pacific slopes, for example, were Simon Fraser and David Thompson.

IMAGE 17 North West Company flag, Wikimedia Commons.

As it was never a chartered company, the NWC made considerable efforts to extend British sovereignty in the hopes of winning concessions from the British Government. This was one of the factors driving Alexander Mackenzie to complete the crossing of the continent to the Pacific Ocean.¹⁶ As they did not have the legitimacy and weight and protection of charter status, there was no need to carry with them the same degree of patriarchal English class arrangement as the HBC. Thus, in terms of lives on the Pacific slopes, there was a certain NWC spirit allowing for a greater fluidity between ethnic groups. As mentioned earlier, contracts reflected this, for some Iroquois were able to negotiate into their contracts labour replacement on their farms should they not be about to make it back in time for harvest.¹⁷ This fluidity showed up in marriages, for mixed descent daughters of ordinary French Canadians were sought after by officers, clerks and fur trade workers.

The Pacific Fur Company, 1810-1813 (PFC)

The Pacific Fur Company was one of two American fur trading companies that attempted to get a land foothold on the Pacific slopes. With full knowledge that British trade with China was restricted by the monopoly of the British East India Company, New Yorker John Jacob Astor proposed to the Montreal NWC a joint venture that would work from the mouth of the Columbia River. His offer was declined. Consequently, building on the financial foundation of his two year old American Fur Company, he formed the Pacific Fur Company on June 23, 1810 to exploit trade in a commercial network involving New York, the Pacific Northwest, Russian America, Hawaii and China. Using the NWC as a model, and retaining half the company's ownership for himself, he issued much of the remaining ownership to "wintering partners," the future proprietors in the Pacific Northwest. As clerk Alexander Ross reported:

The association was not a joint-stock concern; Mr. Astor alone furnished the capital, amounting to 200,000 dollars, divided into 100 shares of 2000 dollars each, with power to increase the capital to 500,000 dollars... Of the above shares, Mr. Astor held fifty... Mr. Hunt as his representative and chief manager of the business, five; while the other partners, who were to carry on the trade with the Indians, were to have four each, in the event of the business succeeding. The remaining shares were reserved for the clerks, who joined the concern as adventurers, without any other remuneration than their chance of success at the end of the five years' trial. The only exceptions were Mr. Robert Stuart and myself, who were to have our promotion at the end of the third year.¹⁸

Astor's chief partner was Wilson Price Hunt, a businessman of St. Louis. Other partners were Alexander McKay, Duncan McDougall, Donald McKenzie, Ramsay Crooks, Robert McLellan, Joseph Miller, David Stuart and John Clarke, some being former NWC men. The workforce included eighteen clerks who were split into two groups, one to follow the ocean route, the other, the Lewis and Clark route overland.¹⁹

The enterprise was not a success because of the loss of a supply ship (Tonquin), a poorly planned overland journey and the War of 1812. The end came in 1813. Having seen a weakness provided by the War of 1812 between Britain and the United States, members of the North West Company set up next to Fort Astoria and negotiated a sale of the PFC. Of the partners, four returned east, one was killed on the Tonquin, two (McDougall and McKenzie) joined the NWC, one (Clarke) left to join the HBC. The senior man, Hunt, stayed in the Pacific trying to tie up loose ends.

The importance of the short-lived PFC was that it was not only a bridge between the Maritime fur trade and the land based fur trade, but also that it was the first company in the Pacific Northwest to establish inland posts from the Pacific.

IMAGE 18 John Jacob Astor, detail of an oil painting by Gilbert Stuart, 1794. The Brook Club, New York.

East Coast Maritime Fur Trade Partnerships Associated with the Pacific Northwest Land Based Fur Trade

East coast partnerships, mainly from the Boston area, played a significant role in the exploitation of the maritime fur trade from the late 1780s. The thirty-four mainly Boston merchants were the backbone of over seventy partnerships which, on shares, financed many ships that exploited the Pacific Northwest, Russian America, Hawaii, China and east coast trade network. Although along with the precious sea otter, land based furs were sometimes taken, exploitation was generally for furs for the Chinese market. However, three partnerships, along with the Astor enterprise, stood out as having an active association with the land based fur trade.

1. Winship Partnerships (Winship)

The Winship brothers of the Boston area actively exploited the maritime fur trade from 1797 to 1817. A more directed role into the land base fur trade came in the summer of 1810 when they tried to establish a trading post on the Columbia River (Oak Point) but were flooded out. Captain Nathan Winship of the Albatross carried with him instructions probably from senior brother Abiel Winship to sail thirty miles up the river, purchase the land from the natives and build a two-story house. He was also advised to clear a piece of land for cultivation and procure:

skins of sea otter, beaver, mink, fox, bear, sable, muskrats, and, in fact, any production suitable for the China and American market.²⁰

They arrived on May 26 but were flooded out by June 12 and gave up any further attempt. Abiel ran the office from the Boston area. Charles had the misfortune of being arrested by the Spanish for poaching and died in a San Blas [Mexico] prison in 1800. Caleb, Nathan and Jonathan returned to Brighton. Jonathan tended gardens and a nursery in Brighton after that.

2. Perkins Partnerships

The Perkins brothers, namely James and Thomas Handasyd Perkins, exploited the maritime fur trade from 1801 to 1822 (when James died) and formed the basis of a variety of partnerships during this period. Thomas himself had begun investing in Northwest Coast vessels from 1790. In 1804 they established their agency in Canton as Perkins and Company choosing as their agent, John P. Cushing.²¹ Their choice was excellent for the young Cushing managed to gain a stronger influence with the Chinese authorities than even the East India Company.²² Given their strong representation in China, they were a logical choice when the North West Company came calling in 1816 to charter three vessels (Alexander, Levant, Houqua)²³ to carry furs and to also avoid punishing licensing fees placed on British ships by the East India and South Sea Companies. Even though Thomas H. Perkins was a dominant player in the China market in 1825,²⁴ the company was liquidated in 1830.²⁵

3. Josiah Marshall and Dixey Wildes Partnership

Boston merchant Josiah Marshall (1771-1848) was a latecomer to the maritime fur trade in which he played an active role from 1819-1836. However, his partnership with Dixey Wildes, who worked in the field,²⁶ and specifically their two vessels, the Onhybee and Convoy are of concern here as both vessels played a prominent role in competing with the HBC. At this late stage, merchants had expanded their trade to include fish, turtle shell, whale oil and sandal wood and anything else that the China and other markets would bear. Particularly with China, furs from the Pacific Northwest were becoming less important as a trade item. In spite of this, in 1827 Josiah Marshall's instructions to Captain John Dominis specifically directed him to collect land furs.²⁷ Thus in July of that year it was reported that the Onhybee had returned with a small collection of skins, "principally Beaver."²⁸ By March 4, 1829, John Dominis reported from the mouth of the Columbia that he had acquired sixty beaver, forty land otter and three "black skins."²⁹ As their prospects were not great, either for trading or for selling beaver skins, the last year they went head to head with the HBC in the Columbia River was 1830.

4. The Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company, 1834-1838 (CRFTC)

The second American company after the Winships to try to establish a land toe-hold on the Pacific slopes was the Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company out of Boston. However, it was unable to successfully challenge the monopoly of the HBC in the Columbia. The 1834 best known try was actually the second Nathaniel Jarvis Wyeth effort to establish a presence in the Pacific Northwest, the first being in 1832. On his first attempt to set up a commercial enterprise he organized a joint stock company but in the end because of a variety of circumstances, he largely financed it by himself and things fell apart. When he returned to Boston in 1833 armed with a Milton G. Sublette-Rocky Mountain Fur Trade Company contract³⁰ to bring out supplies for it, he had no problem organizing a second company, The Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company, to do business in the Columbia and Hawaii. Wyeth reserved one share of sixteen for himself the rest going to Boston area merchants George F. Williams and William Tucker (4), Abraham Howard and Robert D. C. Merry (4), John D. Williams (3), Henry Hall (3) and George Abbot (1).³¹ With a large supply of goods, one quarter of which was for the RMFC, Wyeth headed west again. However, as Milton's older brother William Sublette and Robert Campbell had a poor season themselves and were calling in debts, the RMFC was forced into bankruptcy.³² As the contract could not be honoured, Wyeth took the supplies to Henry's Fork where he set up a post, Fort Hall named after the senior director to unload the goods. In August he left Robert Evans in charge along with a support staff of eleven men and set out down the Columbia. He next built what was to be a post, Fort William, for curing fish, etc. and sent his vessel, the May Dacre, to Hawaii to pick up Hawaiian labourers.

This company, in spite of attempts to negotiate sharing arrangements with the HBC, ultimately failed. As many of the records indicate a mercantile as well as a trading company, where goods were bought and sold and people were paid with American dollars, Wyeth succeeded until 1838, in resetting the landscape in an other-than-HBC context. A few members of his overland expedition stayed on in the Columbia as settlers and missionaries.

Four Main Rocky Mountain Fur Trade Companies

The Rocky Mountain fur trade companies represented the American thrust into the Rocky Mountains initially to compete with the HBC which had effectively held them back from the British-American disputed territory of Oregon. From 1822, select American partnerships and companies monopolized the Rocky Mountain trade until 1832 after which other companies and partnerships entered into a free-for-all competitive fray. By 1834, however, competition had grown so fierce, underhanded and violent that the trade took on an entirely new complexion:

Outrages of this sort [example given] show to what a state the fur trade had now degenerated. Unrestrained competition had filled the mountains with rival companies, each using every effort, regardless of honor, to undermine the power of the rest. It became as much as one's life was worth to change service from one company to another, and it is stated that murders were committed on account of these rivalries. The Indians were utterly demoralized by the strange conduct of the whites toward each other and of course lost all confidence in them.³³

From that point on, the Rocky Mountain fur trade was gradually depleted and by 1843, trappers of all sorts had almost entirely disappeared.³⁴ What follows are the major groupings that took place.

The William H. Ashley-Andrew Henry Partnership 1822-1825

The Ashley-Henry partnership out of St. Louis from 1822 was important for two reasons. It was among the first of the American Rocky Mountain companies out of St. Louis to actively pursue a policy of trapping rather than fur trading in the Rocky Mountains. Secondly, because Ashley had had such a difficult time trapping in the area east of the Rockies and because of the need to avoid the strictures of the US Trade and Intercourse Acts³⁵ regulating trade in Indian territory, he suggested in 1825 that all trappers meet in a certain area to exchange furs, etc. For the first few years, this gathering was held south of the 42nd parallel and technically in Mexican claimed territory on the Pacific slopes.³⁶ Eight of sixteen were later held in disputed Oregon territory. This move not only enabled trappers to stay in the mountains without having to return to a post to re-supply but it was also the beginning of the American Rocky Mountain Rendezvous system which lasted a number of years.³⁷ This followed the Canadian pattern established by the North West Company which had held annual Rendezvous at Grand Portage and then Fort William. Although freemen had been trapping and trading in the Rocky Mountains for around two decades, these Mountain Rendezvous gave rise to the singular Mountain Man mythology exclusive to the United States. It was also under this partnership that many HBC men deserted for the higher prices that this partnership offered.

There is some uncertainty as to how the men were paid under the Ashley partnership. Although Ashley's original advertising stated engagement, implying contracted employment for the men, similar to other trapping companies, they may have paid for their advanced supplies of traps, firearms, etc. with furs and traded the surplus at prevailing prices.³⁸

The Jedediah Smith, William Sublette, Milton G. Sublette and David Jackson Partnership, 1826-1830 (SJS)

In 1826, the Smith, Jackson and Sublette (SJS) partnership bought out the Ashley-Jedediah Smith partnership that had formed after Andrew Henry had exited the year before and Jedediah Smith had taken his place.³⁹ Although the new partnership did not establish posts west of the Rocky Mountains, it actively engaged in and was a major player in Rendezvous for the next four years. This partnership was important in that it took American traders and trappers, specifically under Jedediah Smith, deep into California, the Umpqua and Rogue Valleys posing a direct challenge to the HBC. In June 1828 when Smith was in the Umpqua after coming through a difficult trading expedition in California, all but three of his men were killed in an altercation; the seeds of this may have lain in a skirmish which took place a decade previous. An HBC expedition was launched from Fort Vancouver to retrieve the goods.⁴⁰ In spite of this heavy loss, the partnership lasted another two years. This partnership was bought out at the 1830 Rendezvous by the Rocky Mountain Fur Company.⁴¹

The Rocky Mountain Fur Company 1830-1834

The Rocky Mountain Fur Company (RMFC) was an active player on the Pacific Slopes for four years and was the major American contender in the field until 1832. At the 1832 Rendezvous, the last year of its dominance in the Rocky Mountain trade, the numbers of RMFC men were anywhere between one and two hundred men.⁴² Two years before at the 1830 Rendezvous at the mouth of the Wind River in US territory, the newly organized RMFC had bought out the Smith, Jackson and Sublette (SJS) partnership. This partnership under the RMFC name comprised Thomas Fitzpatrick, Milton G. Sublette, Jim Bridger, Henry Feaeb and Jean Baptiste Gervais.⁴³ During its four year activities it traded in the Snake Country reaching as far as Fort Vancouver in 1834 when RMFC principal, Mr. Christie, showed up there to purchase supplies from the HBC.⁴⁴ Due to fierce competition, however, the company was effectively ended in 1834⁴⁵ at the Green River Valley Rendezvous but was not officially dissolved until after the death of Milton G. Sublette in 1836.⁴⁶

The American Fur Company, Western Department, 1822-1839

IMAGE 19 Restored American Fur Company Store, Mackinac Island, Michigan, U.S.A. Photograph by Mary McGuire, 2005.

Under Ramsay Crooks, the American Fur Company, after having engineered the abolition of the Government Factory system (the US government attempt to control and regulate the fur trade), established a Western Department in 1822 with its headquarters in St. Louis.⁴⁷ When it united with the Columbia Fur Company in 1828, it became one of the strongest competitors in the area. The AMF entered the Rockies in 1831. That year just east of the Continental Divide [Powder River, Wyoming], William Henry Vandenberg, Andrew Drips and Lucien Fontenelle as agents of the American Fur Company, followed the Rocky Mountain Fur Company around so they could learn their trading practices.⁴⁸ By 1832 they were present at the Rendezvous with a large party⁴⁹ and were then serious competitors to the RMFC. However, as the area became over-trapped and the quality of furs dropped, the AMF held its last mountain Rendezvous in 1839⁵⁰ and so ended their presence on the Pacific slopes.

Other partnerships formed and re-formed during the heady days of the Rocky Mountain fur trade. Later partnerships formed during the decline of the fur trade but are not followed here. Fur trade historian H. M. Chittenden gives a general overview of most partnerships.

¹ Galbraith, The Hudson's Bay Company

² "...the Company was granted the 'sole Trade and Commerce of all those Seas Streights Bayes Rivers Lakes Creekes and Soundes in whatsoever Latitude they shall bee that lye within the entrance of the Streightes commonly called Hudsons Streightes together with all the Landes and Territoryes upon the Countryes Coastes and confynes of the Seas Bayes Lakes Rivers Creekes and Soundes aforesaid that are not actually possessed by or granted to any of our Subjectes or possessed by the Subjectes of any other Christian Prince or State'." HBRX XXI, p. 53

³ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. xvii

⁴ HBRX XXI, p. 606

⁵ HBRX XII, p. 292.

⁶ ibid, p. 438

⁷ ibid, p. 408

⁸ ibid, p. 429

⁹ Campbell, p. 67

¹⁰ ChSoc XXII, p. 2-4

¹¹ ibid, p. 5-7; M. W. Campbell

¹² Innis, "The North West Company," p. 309-10

¹³ <http://digital.library.mcgill.ca/nwc/history/07.htm>

¹⁴ HakSP Mackenzie, p. 6

¹⁵ ibid <http://digital.library>

¹⁶ HakSP Mackenzie, p. 7

¹⁷ Conversation with Nicole St. Onge, 2008.

-
- ¹⁸ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 7-8
- ¹⁹ Chittenden, p. 168-70
- ²⁰ In CU-B Phelps, p. 20 Phelps claimed to have in his possession a copy of the original letter of instructions.
- ²¹ Gibson, Otter Skins, Boston Ships, p. 293.
- ²² ibid, p. 97
- ²³ Malloy, p. 69, 123, 112.
- ²⁴ Gibson, Otter Skins, Boston Ships, p. 250.
- ²⁵ ibid, p. 95
- ²⁶ for various letters from Dixey Wildes in the field, consult Josiah Marshall letters in the Houghton Library (HU-HL Marshall) or for social and financial dealings in Oahu, see Reynolds, Journal of Stephen
- ²⁷ Marshall and Wildes to Captain John Dominis of the Owhyhee, 1827 as found in Gibson, Otter Skins, Boston Ships, p. 204.
- ²⁸ HU-HL JMarshallLB John C. Jones Jr. Sept. 30, 1827 letter to Josiah Marshall
- ²⁹ ibid, John Dominis March 4, 1829 letter to Josiah Marshall
- ³⁰ OHS CRFTCLet Agreement with Sublette and Fitzpatrick, p. 5; Chittenden, p. 301-03, 446, 448
- ³¹ OHS CRFTCLet: Articles of Agreement, p. 6-9
- ³² Chittenden, p. 450
- ³³ ibid, p. 303
- ³⁴ Phillips, vol. II, p. 526
- ³⁵ http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Indian_Intercourse_Act
- ³⁶ Gowans, p. 15-45
- ³⁷ Chittenden, p. 273
- ³⁸ Phillips, vol. II, p. 395-96; Chittenden, p. 262-63; Gowans, p. 19-20
- ³⁹ Chittenden, p. 279-80
- ⁴⁰ HBCA FtVanCB 4 McLoughlin's Aug. 10, 1828 letter to Gov. & Committee, fos. 23-24d; D. L. Morgan, Jedediah Smith, 268ff
- ⁴¹ Phillips, vol. II, p. 524; Chittenden, p. 292
- ⁴² Chittenden, p. 297
- ⁴³ D. L. Morgan, Jedediah Smith, p. 320-21
- ⁴⁴ HBRS IV, p. cx, 141; FtVanCB 11 McLoughlin Sept. 30, 1835 letter to Gov. & Committee, fo. 38
- ⁴⁵ Chittenden, p. 304, 864
- ⁴⁶ ibid, p. 305
- ⁴⁷ ibid, p. 319-320
- ⁴⁸ ibid, p. 295
- ⁴⁹ ibid, p. 297
- ⁵⁰ Phillips, vol. II, p. 525-26

Part 3: Built Structures and Manufactured Necessities

The Generic Fur Trade Post or Fort

Fur trade posts or forts were built on the same general principle: a secured negotiated space from which bartering and trading could be safely conducted. They evolved from stone structures on Hudson Bay to the more familiar rectangular structures with fort-like appearance of a stockade and bastions enclosing several buildings. Because the home guard natives outnumbered the resident fur traders, a precautionary stockade was erected should misunderstandings escalate to violence, which happened on occasion. It was also an area of mixing, producing a hybridity of peoples and cultures. A large number of people would be deployed to build a post whereas after construction, relatively few would actually run it. The North West Company (NWC) had posts on the prairies which would last only a few seasons reflecting the nomadic nature of the Plains people. Given the relatively higher population of the Pacific Slopes, particularly the coast, posts tended to be of a more fixed nature.

The posts constructed west of the Rockies and their years of construction from 1805 to 1858 given here are followed by initial and later company ownership:¹

1805

McLeod Lake Post [NWC-HBC]

1806

Fort St. James [NWC-HBC]

Fraser Lake [NWC-HBC]

1807

Fort George [NC]/Chala-oo-chek [NWC-HBC]

Jeremy Pinch's Establishment

Kootenae House [NWC]

1808

Kootenai Falls House [NWC]

1809

Kullyspel House [NWC]

Saleesh House [NWC]

1810

Howse House [HBC]

Spokane House [NWC]

Fort Henry [MFC]

1811

Fort Astoria [George] [PFC-NWC-HBC]

Fort Okanogan [PFC-NWC-HBC]

1812

Fort Flathead [PFC]

Fort Spokane [PFC]

Thompson River Posts [PFC-NWC-HBC]

Donald McKenzie's Outpost [PFC]

Wallace House [PFC]

1813

Kootenai House [NWC]

Kootenay Fort [PFC]

John Reed's Post [PFC]

Willamette Post [NWC, HBC]

1818

Fort Nez Perces [NWC-HBC]

1820

McKay's Old Establishment [NWC]

1821
 Fort Alexandria [NWC-HBC]
 Kooteney Post (HBC)
 Fort Flathead/Saleesh House [HBC];
1822
 Fort Babine [HBC]
1825
 Fort Vancouver [HBC]
 Fort Colville [HBC]
1826
 Desportes' Camp
1827
 Connolly Post (HBC)
 Fort Langley [HBC]
1829
 Fort Chilcotin (HBC)
1831
 Fort Simpson [Nass] [HBC]
1833
 Fort Nisqually [HBC-PSAC]
1834
 Fort Hall [CRFTC-HBC]
 Fort William [CRFTC-HBC]
 Fort Boise [HBC]
 Honolulu, Hawai'i [HBC]
1836
 Fort Umpqua [HBC]
1840
 Fort Stikine [HBC]
 Fort Taku [HBC]
1841
 Yerba Buena San Francisco [HBC]
1842
 Champoege post (HBC) 1842)
1843
 Willamette Falls sawmill [HBC]
 Fort Victoria [HBC]
 Fort McLoughlin [HBC]
1844
 Fluz-Kuz Post [HBC]
1847
 Fort Connah [HBC]
1848
 Fort Hope [HBC]
 Fort Yale [HBC]
1849
 Fort Rupert [HBC]
1851
 Cauweeman store [HBC]
1858
 Fort Shepherd [HBC]

Not all Posts were the Same

In the case of moveable posts, such as the early posts in Kootenay and Flathead, a small storehouse would be created out of logs, followed by a sleeping quarters for the men which could have been a tent or log house. Within these temporary cabins, the flooring could be bare earth or split poles. This arrangement may have lasted a season or two before the “post” was shifted to a more advantageous location. More substantial posts came in a variety of sizes.

A Small Post: Umpqua

IMAGE 20 The plan of Fort Umpqua based on drawing by Rev. Gustavus Hines, Oregon, Its History, Condition and Prospects, New York: Hurst & Co., 1881. Illustration by Toben McFarlane.

A Medium Sized Post: Langley

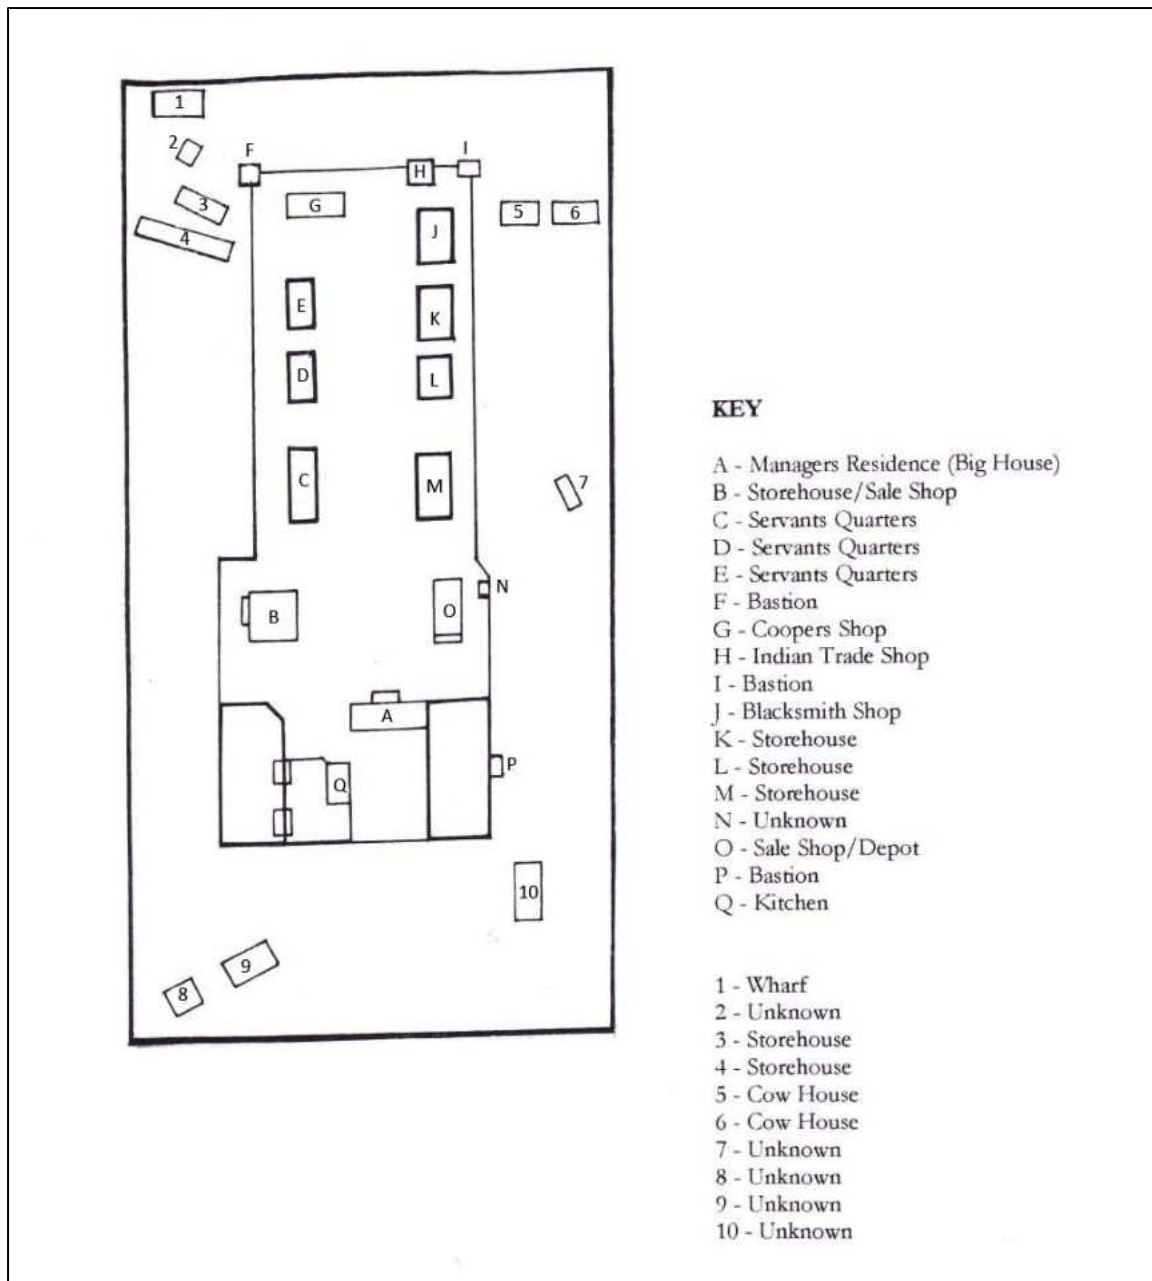

IMAGE 21 Plan of Fort Langley, a medium sized post. Illustration by Toben McFarlane.

A Large Post: Vancouver

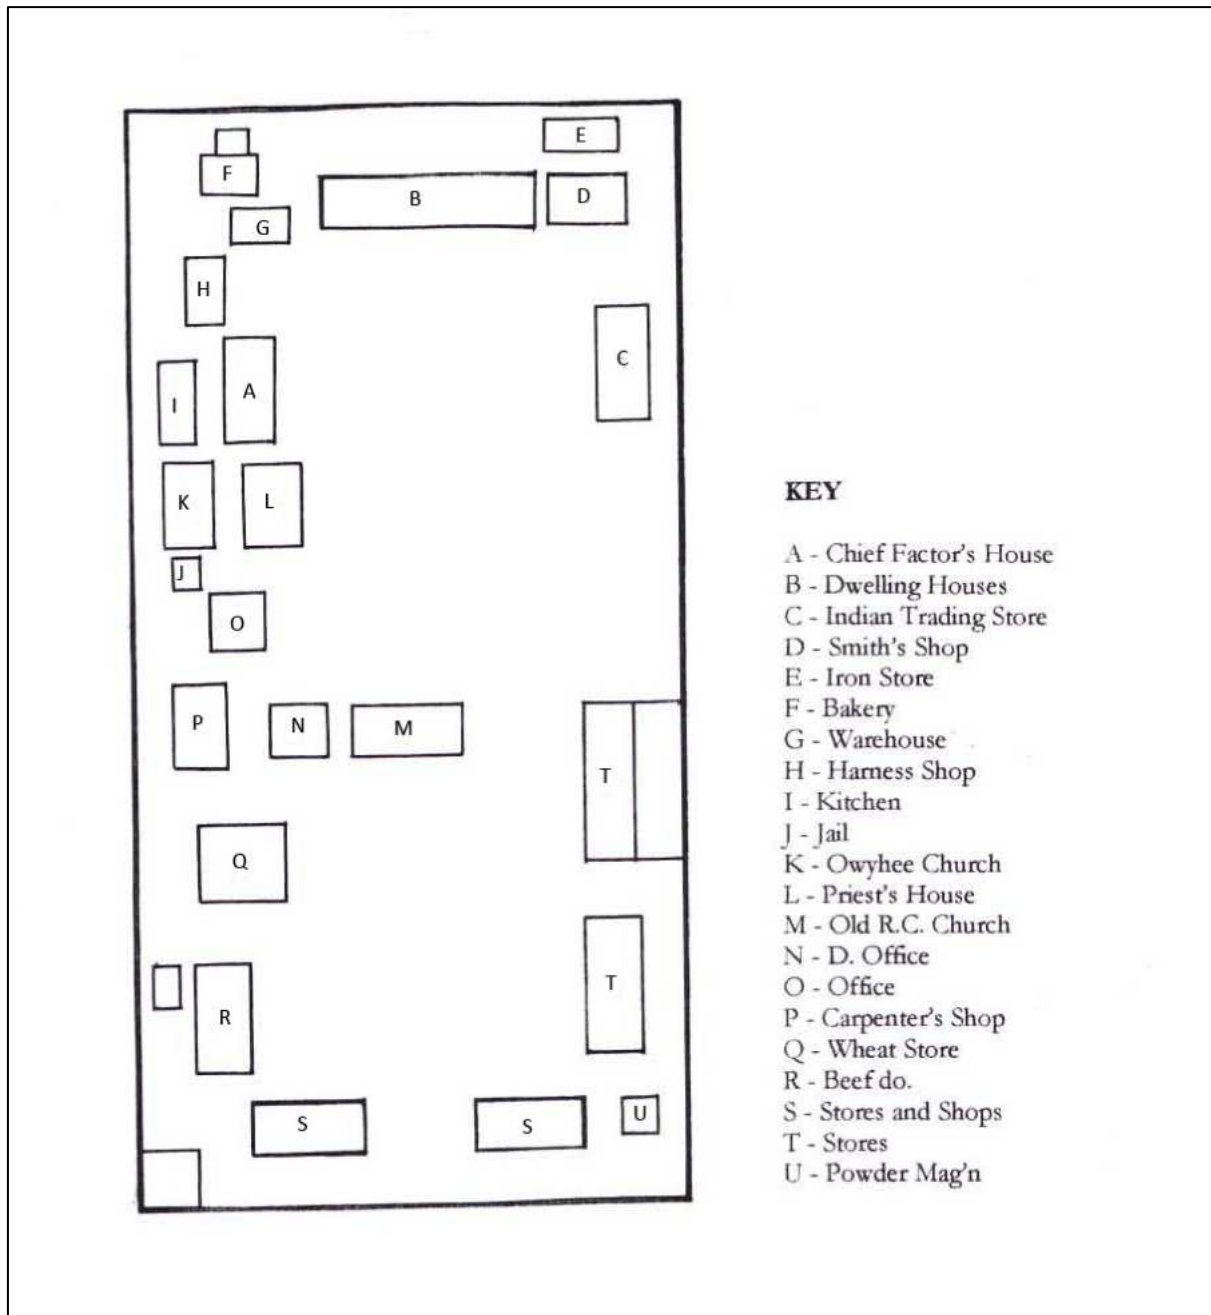

IMAGE 22 Plan of Fort Vancouver, a large administrative post. Illustration by Toben McFarlane.

Fixed Structures

Trading posts constructed west of the Rocky Mountains had certain general characteristics. Their parts were fairly similar from post to post, as follows:

IMAGE 23 Reconstructed stockades at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

The Stockades

The stockades or palisades were made from select seven to twelve inch diameter trees which were cut, peeled² and transported to the site, either by water or dragged by the men, horses or oxen. The cut trees probably squared somewhat at the sides, before being dug deep into the ground and placed alternatively between the tree base or tree top in the earth. What was to be the top end of the picket would be either pointed or cut flat. Evidence suggests both endings were used. Logs were notched and drilled and crosspieces (girths) secured with wooden pegs, either before or after the pickets were dug into the ground, the sequencing being unclear. The crosspieces faced inside the compound to prevent any scaling of the wall from the outside. Any gaps between the pickets were covered with thin trees nailed into place. The height of the stockades above ground ranged from a low of ten feet³ to a high of twenty feet⁴ suggesting an average of about fifteen feet. Repairs were a constant job as the bases would rot after four to five years.⁵ There was a practical and symbolic side to the imposing stockades for, as trading was done inside the post and the natives had relatively free ingress and egress, trade within the stockades took on an aura of formality.⁶

In some cases where wood was not available in sufficient quantities, such as at Forts Okanogan and Walla Walla, the stockades were made with driftwood, or sawn driftwood taken from the river banks. Posts which lasted a single season would probably have not had a stockade, only tents, perhaps a building for the men and a warehouse.

Gallery

Next, a gallery, which was a raised platform or walkway was constructed inside the walls, "...on which men standing would be breast high to the top of the protection."⁷ A watchman's walkway, which also connected the bastions, was about four feet from the top of the stockade. This allowed some protection for the watchman and quick access to any part of the wall should potential looters decide to scale the palisade wall.

IMAGE 25 Reconstructed gates at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

IMAGE 24 Reconstructed gallery at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

Gates

There were usually two hinged gates in a post; a large eight to ten foot gate as a main entrance and a smaller one at the back. The front gate was a massive structure with a smaller portal gate cut into it to allow one person to go in and out.

Bastions

IMAGE 26 Large bastion and palisades, Fort Vancouver. Photograph by author, 1992.

Most of the bastions (fortified towers) were placed at two opposite corners just outside the perimeter of the stockade. This allowed a necessary field of fire to include a clear view of two sides of the stockade. They were usually built in the post-on-sill style (see below) and thus were solid constructions. In a few rare cases bastions were built without the accompanying stockades as in the case of Nanaimo and to some extent, the blockhouse of Fort Nisqually, as a place of refuge should trouble arise. They had to be solidly built as the lower part of the bastion could serve as a jail for wrongdoers and on the second and third levels there might be “a one-pound cannon, a swivel gun, one dozen flintlock trading muskets, and a good supply of ammunition.”⁸ According to long-time New Caledonia priest, Father A. G. Morice, each bastion was “furnished...with a small cannon and a stand of large muskets.”⁹

Inside the Stockades

Depending on the size of the post, a variety of buildings vital to the operation were constructed inside the palisades. In the cases of smaller posts, buildings were sometimes combined in form and function. Basic buildings were:

Warehouse

The warehouse was where the supplies and trade goods were kept. With temporary posts, this would be nothing more than a hastily constructed building strong enough to house the trade goods for the season.

IMAGE 27 The original warehouse, Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

IMAGE 28 Buildings of this type could have served as Indian shops. Original and reconstructed buildings, Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

Indian Shop

This was an essential building for the indigenous population for it was here that they would trade food, furs and country made goods for manufactured items.

Men's Quarters

As some posts were very small, this would be a small building housing a few men with their companions and even families. For larger posts, it would house both single and married men (depending on the post), being long with many partitions.¹⁰

IMAGE 29 Reconstructed men's quarters at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

IMAGE 30 Reconstructed officer's quarters at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

Officer's Quarters

Demonstrably the most impressive building on site, it was meant to send a message that it was the living and entertaining quarters of the gentlemen class, the officers.

Cooperage or Carpentry Shop

Generally inside the stockades of larger posts, it was where barrels and other items were made.

IMAGE 31 Shaving horses for making barrel staves in cooperage. Scene from reconstructed cooperage at Fort Langley, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 2009.

Blacksmith's Shed

Like the cooperage, many, but not all posts had blacksmith shops. Amongst other things, trade axes and beaver traps were made for trade from pieces of imported iron and steel. Items ranging from nails, hinges, door pulls and hasps to fine parts for gun repairs were created at the forge and anvil for the upkeep of the post.

Food storage structures

Depending on the location of the post, meat and fish could be hung and smoked or stored in a root cellar. These were vital to the survival of a post.

Kitchen

Although single men and/or their wives lined up for their weekly rations and were responsible for cooking their own food, in the larger posts and usually separated from the main buildings was the kitchen. The kitchen at Fort Vancouver was capable of preparing very elaborate meals for the officers and their guests.

The Post-on-Sill Construction Technique

Construction of most of the above buildings was mainly “post-on-sill” (poteaux-sur-solle, piece-sur-piece, post-in-sill, etc.) which could easily be built and dismantled. Trees would be cut and squared with broadaxes. Post on sill construction begins with sturdy timbers squared with broadaxes and adzes. These sills are laid directly on the ground or on stone shims to act as the base of the building. Into the base timbers recesses are made for the upright wall supports. Next, timbers are squared for the corner posts and uprights are tenoned on each end. Opposite sides are recessed (mortised with saws, chisels or adzes) for the entire length of each side of the post. Each post is placed in an upright position and mortised and tenoned into the sill. Wooden pegs help secure the post. This is done for four corners and two or more intermediate wall supports for either wall. Next, horizontal squared timbers with notched ends were set into the grooves of the uprights up to roof level and the walls were capped with a sill similar to the bottom sill. When they were in place, holes were drilled and three foot oak doweling pounded into the holes to secure the logs.¹¹ The cracks in between the horizontal logs were chinked with mud and straw or oakum both inside and out. The roof was framed with rafters and covered in a variety of ways, but most often with layers of bark, sometimes mud and sod, other times with wooden shingles. Windows were shuttered and in the early absence of glass, an animal bladder was stretched over a frame allowing in translucent light. The inside walls were plastered with mud, the lighter the color of the mud the better to reflect light. Some temporary flooring was made out of split poles and covered with mats but later, lumber was hand-sawn in saw pits for more permanent flooring. Generally, however, the floors were made of lumber which had to be cut by hand in specially dug out sawpits over which a framework was built. A two-man crosscut saw (four feet to eight feet) was used to create the lumber for the floors. Logs were secured by a clamp called a dog, and so the man on the platform was called the top dog whereas the unfortunate man in the pit, guiding the saw from below and getting a face full of sawdust would be the under dog, a slight variation from the original meaning of the term.

Stone fireplaces were constructed while the gabled roof was covered with bark. In locations where seashells were plentiful, lime was made for a mortar. Otherwise, mud would be used.

Outside the Stockades

Not all buildings were constructed inside the stockade. As horses, and later oxen, were used, corrals, barns and stables were constructed to house the beasts for the winter. At the larger posts like Forts Colville, Vancouver, Alexandria, etc., many such animals were housed. At Alexandria in particular, since as many as 250 horses were required for a brigade over to Thompson River and down to Fort Okanogan, very large corrals were needed. Two types of mills, grist and sawmill, also were constructed at such sites as Vancouver and Colville. Large areas were also put into cultivation for grains and even orchards.

Manufactured Necessities for Land and Water Transportation: Travois, Snowshoes, Sledges and Carioles, Canoes, Boats and Ships

It was not just a matter of constructing a post. Various items had to be manufactured on site to maintain the fur trade.

The Travois

IMAGE 32 Travois. Denver Public Library, 1870-1900.

The simplest device manufactured for transportation was the travois, a simple A-frame device with crossbars which could be pulled by either a dog or horse. Effective in the summer for transporting goods, it was often traded from native manufacturers for a something like a capot.¹²

IMAGE 33 A Bearpaw snowshoe typically used in wetter snow, Wikipedia, 2007.

Snowshoes

During the winter months, fur traders were often found manufacturing snow shoes particularly in the northern areas of New Caledonia in today's British Columbia. They would go out at the beginning of winter and bring back wood to make multiple pairs of snowshoes.¹³ Flexible saplings would be cleaned and placed in water or steamed or heated so that they could be bent over upon themselves with two crossbars holding the sides apart. Heel and toe lacing, behind and in front of the two cross bars would be strung with rawhide or sinew to help distribute the weight over the snow while the area in between the crossbars would be strung with a much stronger rawhide to support the weight of the individual.

Sledges

Another winter activity was making and/or repairing sledges. Owing to the frequent mention of men making sledges, it would appear that they had a short lifespan in the rugged terrain. If a post such as Fort St. James in New Caledonia went into a season with only ten sledges on hand, it was cause for concern.¹⁴ Both dog and horse sledges (sleds) were made regularly during the winter as each sled was good for only one or two runs over the "roads" before they had to be replaced. Very often during the winter, employees would head into to the woods to bring back appropriate wood (either conifer or birch). After splitting the wood into rough planks, they would use a draw knife to smooth and flatten the boards. They put them in water to soak and soften them or if need be, chop a hole through the ice.¹⁵ After the cross pieces secured the bent board, the end product looked very much like a toboggan, only pulled with dogs:

Dec. 13, Friday [1811] On the 20th Ult. I with twenty of our People set off to go and bring the Goods to the Fort that remains last October along the way.....Our goods were drawn on sledges by dogs. Each pair of dogs drew a load of from two hundred, to two hundred and fifty pounds, beside provisions for themselves and their driver, which would make the whole load about three hundred pounds. I have seen many dogs, two of which would draw on a sledge, five hundred pounds, twenty miles, in five hours. For a short distance, two of our stoutest dogs will draw more than a thousand pounds weight. In short, there is no animal, with which I am acquainted that would be able to rend half the service that our dogs do, in this country, where the snow is very deep in the winter season. They sink but little into it, following a person on snow shoes.¹⁶

Carrioles

IMAGE 34 “Coming in for Christmas.” Sketches of Hudson Bay life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880, UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

Carrioles functioned on the same principles as sledges only with a framework built on the sledge and covered in. It could be used for transporting people or goods, its covering protection from the elements:

December 24, 1813, New Caledonia, “...Messrs McDougall & Laroque accompanied me to the other end of this Lake, each of us in a Cariole [carriole] drawn by three dogs as the road was fine (upon smooth Ice) we had a pleasant excursion.¹⁷

Like the sledges, carrioles were in constant need of repair.

Water Transportation

As soon as the fur trade moved westward over the Rocky Mountains, a seismic shift had to be made in transportation given the radically different topography than that east of the mountains.¹⁸ David Thompson first recognized this problem and, taking a page from York boat constructions, began constructing clinker type boats for his down-river descents.¹⁹ For several years the North West Company struggled elsewhere to use the twenty-five foot light or North birch bark canoes to carry freight with limited success. The difficulties were expressed by historian Frederick Merk:

A route [to Fort William or York Factory] so difficult was of course not open to York boats; nothing but North canoes could use it, and as many as six were required for the transport of the 130 “pieces” constituting the New Caledonia outfit in 1824. Nowhere else in the territories of the Hudson’s Bay Company was canoe freighting on such a scale to be found, and Simpson was right when he said that this was the most tedious, harassing and expensive transport in the Indian country.²⁰

The NWC general freight use for these light canoes was changed by the HBC to that of express only and a mixture of boat types were used on the Pacific slopes.

Canoes

Canoes of varying sizes were constructed during the summer when the weather was warm. At that time when the sap was flowing allowing an easy separation, birch bark was harvested. The bark was placed on the ground. On top of this, a template of the approximate size of canoe was placed and weighted down. Stakes were driven into the ground as a framework to hold the turned up bark in place. The turned up bark was secured to cedar gunwales (upper edge of side) by a spruce root cordage called watap (wattape, wattap). The weighted template was removed from the inside and bent cedar ribs are secured inside to give the canoe its shape. Seams and imperfections were gummed to waterproof the canoe.

In spite of the relative ease with which they were constructed, their range was limited, for spare gum, bark and watap had to be carried as extra freight outside the northern area where they were freely obtainable.²¹ For example, plateau posts like Fort Alexandria could not provide local materials for repairs.²² It is possible that half and single bark canoes may also have employed the native use of spruce and pine bark as a covering.²³ Owing to the fragility of the canoes, they needed constant repair or gumming even on a daily basis. Consequently they needed a supply of gum. To manufacture this, globules of spruce resin were collected, boiled in a cloth bag, the sap of which was squeezed through the weave. The clarified sap was mixed with fat/tallow and pulverized charcoal and applied to the bark when needed. Gum was produced by the fur traders²⁴ or by Natives and traded as country produce.²⁵

Batteaux

IMAGE 35 Batteaux, Fort Langley, Parks Canada.
Photograph by author, 2009.

The clinker built batteaux was essentially a modified York boat originally of Orkney and possibly even of Viking origin. Unlike the canoe, the keel was laid first, the ribs added, and the overlapping sides secured and caulked. This boat was much better in rougher waters than the birch-bark canoe and could carry large loads. The wood was sawn.²⁶ It also required nails made by the blacksmith so if one post did not have a blacksmith to make nails, they would be procured from another post.²⁷ Batteaux were of varying sizes, the biggest ones being thirty feet long, seven and a half feet broad and two and a half feet deep.²⁸ Finally, the batteaux were caulked and sealed with pitch.

A few vessels were constructed specifically to support the land based fur trade. They were:

Larger Vessels

Ships of a much larger nature were also constructed on the Columbia River at Forts Astoria and Vancouver using the expertise of their employees. Those constructed were:

Dolly

This thirty ton shallop (see Glossary) was constructed at Fort Astoria in 1811 by the carpenters with New York cut lumber brought out on the Tonquin. It served for an undetermined number of years on the Columbia River. In April 1811, Fort Astoria clerk Gabriel Franchère noted just after Astor's ship arrived at the Columbia:

Having brought suitable ready-cut lumber aboard our ship for the building of a small 30ton vessel, we set to work on it at once.²⁹

Two keels may have been brought out and one lost, for in PFC partner Duncan McDougall's journals in April 1811, he initially used "shallops" in the plural. One keel may have accidentally been lost to the river in the summer of 1811, for on March 20, 1813 he noted:

In the morning Mr. McKenzie with 17 men in the boat went down to the Clatsop Village in order to...recover a piece of Oak timber (the Keel of the 28 feet Shallop) which the natives found on the beach adrift about 20 months ago. They all returned about noon with a piece of Timber, that is to say about 18 feet of it, as the natives had cut about 10 feet off for their use.³⁰

The one finished shallop was launched on October 2, 1811 as the Dolly (named after John Jacob Astor's daughter) and renamed Jane (after Jane Barnes, a woman who turned up at Astoria on the Isaac Todd in 1814) when the NWC took control of Astoria.

Broughton

This thirty ton sloop was constructed at the Fort Vancouver shipyard and launched on August 7, 1826. It was, however, considered too small for open sea transport and used as a tender to the annual supply ships arriving in the Columbia River.³¹

Vancouver [1]

This sixty ton schooner was almost completely constructed at the Fort Vancouver shipyard by 1826 but had to wait two years for its deck and caulking to be completed before it would be launched in 1828.³² When it was finally launched this much larger vessel serviced the coast and sailed to Hawaii.

Prince of Wales

In 1845 a slightly over the hill former East India Company employee built a model of a ship to replace the aging, leaky Cadboro that had served the coastal trade for some time. What transpired, his pride and joy, was the eighty-four ton schooner Prince of Wales which sailed very well although many people "thought her a very ugly dry-goods-box like craft, more like a barge than a ship."³³

As all vessels going around South America's Cape Horn had to be guaranteed sturdy and seaworthy, they were built elsewhere, usually in the British Isles by experienced shipbuilders who had access to all the necessary supplies. As early Fort Vancouver experience proved it impractical to build ships on the coast, the companies had them built or purchased, leased or chartered to bring in supplies and carry out furs and other produce. After the vessel had unloaded its supplies at Fort Vancouver, the hold had to be reconfigured for its outgoing cargo of furs. The sea-going crew, as well as on-shore crews, was employed doing this mostly from Fort Vancouver, which was the gathering point for the furs. Some vessels inevitably overlap into the maritime fur trade. Similarly, some of the later ships had more of a support function for the colonial Vancouver Island run under the HBC but they also overlapped into the fur trade. What follows is the name of the vessel, the registry and the actual years on the Northwest Coast. A more detailed description can be found in the Appendix: Ships.

Alexander (American) 1817-1821
Atahualpa (American-Russian) 1800-1813
Beaver (American) 1811-1812
S. S. Beaver (British) 1835-1858
Cadboro (British) 1826-1850
Chenamus (American) 1842-1845
Chinchilla (American) 1826-1828
Clementine (American) 1835-1842
Colinda (British) 1854

Colonel Allan (British) 1816
Columbia [1] (British) 1813-1817
Columbia [2] (British) 1818
Columbia [3] (British) 1836-1849
Convoy (American) 1825-1836
Cowlitz (British) 1841-1850
Diamond (British) 1842
Diana (American-Russian-American) 1827-1830
Dryad (British) 1826-1835
Eagle (British) 1828-1834
Europa (American) 1834-1836
Forager (British) 1840
Ganymede (British) 1829-1836
Harpooner (British) 1849
Isaac Todd (British) 1814
Isabella (British) 1830
Lama (American-British) 1831-1837
Levant (American) 1818-1820
Lively (British) 1823
Mary Dare (British) 1847-1853
Maryland (American) -1840-1841
May Dacre (American) 1834
Nereide (British) 1833-1839
Norman Morison (British) 1850-1853
Otter (British) 1852-1883
Omhyhee (American) 1822-1830
Pekin (British) 1851
Prince Albert (British) 1854
Princess Royal (British) 1854-1858
Rassalas (American) 1835-1836
Recovery (British) 1852-1859
Sumatra (British) 1837-1838
Tally Ho (American) 1826-1827
Tonquin (American) 1811
Tory (British) 1851
Una (British) 1851-1852
Valleyfield (British) 1842-1843
Vancouver [2] (British) 1839-1848
Vancouver [3] (British) 1852-1853
Vigilant (British) 1824
William and Ann (British) 1825-1829

¹ For full details of the fur trade posts on the Pacific slopes, consult the index where they are arranged geographically.

² HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, fo. 11d.

³ M. Hunter, p. 47-48.

⁴ John Hussey, Fort Vancouver, Historic Structures Report, Historical Data, Volume I, p. 15.

⁵ ibid, p. 13-23.

⁶ A. Ross. The Fur Hunters, p. 144

⁷ M. Hunter, p. 47.

⁸ S. A. Anderson, The Physical Structure, p. 123; M. Hunter, p. 48.

⁹ Morice. The History of, p. 113.

¹⁰ ibid, p. 113.

¹¹ Gehri, p. 54.

¹² HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, fo. 2d.

-
- ¹³ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, Nov. 23, 1832.
- ¹⁴ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, fo. 22.
- ¹⁵ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 20, Jan. 10, 1851.
- ¹⁶ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 131.
- ¹⁷ ibid, p. 149.
- ¹⁸ M. W. Campbell, p. 85.
- ¹⁹ UBC-Koer Thompson.
- ²⁰ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 350.
- ²¹ ibid, p. 345-46.
- ²² HBCA FtStJmsPJ 17, Aug. 16, 1831..
- ²³ Adney & Chapelle , p. 154.
- ²⁴ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 15, Oct. 15, 1829.
- ²⁵ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 17, Apr. 2, 1832.
- ²⁶ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 3, Mar. 31, 1825 "The sawyers have for some time passed, been employed sawing Boards & Planks for two Batteau, and the Smith is making nails for the same purpose – the only thing he is good for; FtStJmsPJ 17, Thurs. Feb 2, 1832 "St. Dennis goes also to saw wood for a Board..."
- ²⁷ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 17, Mar. 17, 1832
- ²⁸ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 17, Mar. 24, 1832; J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory, p. 61-62
- ²⁹ ChSoc XLV, p. 77-78
- ³⁰ McDougall, p. 166
- ³¹ HBCA FtVanCB 1 McLoughlin's Sept. 1, 1826 letter to Gov. & Committee, fo. 22d-23
- ³² HBRS IV, p. lxxi
- ³³ Huggins, "Reminiscences of Puget", p. 156

Part 4: The Dynamics of Fur Traders' Lives

1793 – Testing the territory from the east

1805-1810 – Entry from the east and laying the foundations

1811-1814 – American entry from the Pacific and competition for furs

1814-1821 – A period of North West Company dominance

1821-1825 – Transition years for the HBC; American entry from the Rocky Mountains

1825-1846 – Growth, challenging interests and adaptation

1846-1858 – New realities, upheaval and retreat into the shadows

Before the fur traders entered the Pacific slopes over the Rockies the native peoples had long carried on their own trade in a variety of furs and indeed had made trading and migration journeys into and out of the Pacific slopes for millennia.¹ By the end of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth, the only extensive non-native fur trade was being carried out along the coast involving more than 185 ships from a variety of nations, but mostly American, as well as east of the Continental Divide from established fur trade posts. To non-native eyes, the vast Cordillera region loosely defined as the Pacific slopes was an open, unexploited trading area ripe for the picking. A few natives, such as independent Iroquois had pushed onto the plateau area of the Pacific slopes in advance of the European fur traders in the last decade of the eighteenth century² but their names have eluded written records.

1793 – Testing the Territory from the East

IMAGE 36 Alexander Mackenzie's journey from the east.

A test run, or more accurately a sprint, into “unknown” territory and back out through long established native routes was carried out in the late spring and summer of 1793. What began in May and ended in August of that year was North West Company (NWC) wintering partner Alexander Mackenzie's attempt to verify or disprove trader Peter Pond's theory that the NWC could easily transport furs by canoe to the coast and send them off by ships. Working out of Fort Chipewyven in present day Alberta and using Fort Forks (at the BC-Alberta border) as a launching ground in the spring of 1793, the men encountered hardships far greater than anything experienced east of the Rocky Mountains, for their canoes would frequently break apart in the shoals and rapids of the rivers and creeks. On June 15, 1793 for example, his men:

passed several dangerous places, and met with various obstructions, the current of the river being frequently stopped by rafts of drift wood, and fallen trees, so that after fourteen hours hard labour we had not made more than three miles.³

Mackenzie's path from the Fraser River to the coast, along the Grease Trail,⁴ an aboriginal corridor into the interior used in the trading of eulachon oil, was well established. In fact, metal goods had been working their way well into the interior from the coast for close to a decade.⁵ It was clear from this brief foray, however, that there was no easy canoe route to the Pacific Coast.

On this journey, Mackenzie's resoluteness of purpose out shadowed the difficulties encountered by his men.⁶ Had it not been for native guides and the grunt work done by his group of hardy souls, his journey would have been impossible. For his men, who had lived full lives east of the Divide this venture onto the Pacific slopes, albeit difficult, was just one more episode in their hard lives which were daily tested. Although the group comprised fur traders, it was not primarily a fur trading expedition⁷ but a reconnaissance run. As a hoped for reward for this exploratory run, coincidently pushing the boundaries of British sovereignty, the NWC felt that they might win concessions from the British government which seemed fixated on upholding Hudson's Bay Company (HBC) monopoly rights to the detriment of the commercial ventures of the NWC.⁸

Who were the nine men⁹ besides Mackenzie who made this foray through rough country? Two of the six French Canadians had been with Mackenzie on his earlier voyage to the Arctic Ocean. Of the six French Canadians, only one was traced further, that is Francois Beaulieu from an old Slave River mixed descent family. He lived on to 1872 or until he was almost one hundred years of age. Alexander McKay, probably of clerk status at that time and the only other Scot on the trip, returned east and became a NWC partner in 1799. He returned to the Columbia as a partner in John Jacob Astor's attempt to set up a company at the mouth of the Columbia River but died in the native attack on the Tonquin on the east coast of Vancouver Island. McKay's son Thomas, somewhat embittered at the unnecessary death of his father, carried on prominently in the fur trade on the Pacific slopes. Only one of the three native guides, Cancre, was actually named, in an implication that he was rather dull but he carried out all his duties with zest and caring.

IMAGE 37 Alexander Mackenzie, Oil on canvas, by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Gallery of Canada, 1800.

Mackenzie himself returned to Canada, that small enclave around the St. Lawrence River, becoming a thorn in the side of the NWC and never returned to the Pacific slopes. The independent minded Scot formed his own company and, after making a quick trip to Britain in 1799, left for good in 1804 for the British Isles where the publication of his journals had made him famous and earned him a knighthood. For his sheer tenacity, bravado and management skills in leading the expedition over such difficult terrain, he deserves full credit. He was not, however, the first Scot on the coast, for sixty Scots had preceded him as part of the crews of the sixty-nine ships that had been there trading for sea otter pelts before Mackenzie's arrival¹⁰

1805-1810 – Entry from the East and Laying the Foundations

New Posts Built 1805-1810 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts)

New Caledonia Area

1. McLeod Lake Post (NWC-HBC) 1805-1968
2. Fort St. James (NWC-HBC) 1806-1952
3. Fraser Lake (NWC-HBC) 1806-1914
4. Fort George [NC]/Chala-oo-chek (NWC-HBC) 1807-1915

Columbia River Area

1. Fort Clatsop – Lewis and Clark, 1805-1806

Kootenay River Area

1. Kootenae House (NWC) 1807-1814
2. Kootenai Falls House (NWC) 1808-1809?

Flathead Area

1. Kullyspel House (NWC) 1809-1811
2. Saleesh House (NWC) 1809-1821
3. Spokane House (NWC) 1810-1826
4. Howse House (HBC) 1810-1811
5. Jeremy Pinch's Establishment 1807

Snake River Area

1. Fort Andrew Henry (MFC) 1810-1811

Lone Ship Associated with Land Based Fur Trade

(Albatross [1810])

The period 1805-1810 was one in which the NWC consolidated its hold on the fur trade in New Caledonia and the Kootenay Flathead area, the first encompassing central British Columbia, the second eastern British Columbia and Washington. As well, during this period, the Americans made their presence felt by their overland Lewis and Clark expedition. Both groups entered the Pacific slopes from the east. Another group tried unsuccessfully to set up a post on the banks of the Columbia River but quickly left when they were flooded out.

The Lewis and Clark Expedition

IMAGE 38 Area traveled by Lewis and Clark. Photograph by Kasandra White, 2009.

The Lewis and Clark expedition was a push for even greater American sovereignty in the wake of the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, whereby the United States acquired a huge swath of present day United States extending west to the Rocky Mountains. Unlike Mackenzie's rush to the coast in 1793, which was a fur trade company effort meant to streamline trade as well as to inspire the British Government into offering concessions, the US effort was government inspired and conceptualized mainly through President Thomas Jefferson. Consequently, armed with or certainly aware of Alexander Mackenzie's 1801 book on his explorations, in May 1804 Captain Meriwether Lewis and his assistant Captain William Clark set out from Missouri on an essentially military exploratory expedition. They crossed the Continental Divide with thirty-one adult males, some of whom were fur traders from the mid-west, and one female and arrived at the Pacific Ocean on November 14, 1805. After wintering over at a hastily constructed Fort Clatsop at the mouth of the Columbia River, they departed eastward March 2, 1806.¹¹

Even though the biographies of expedition members are not covered here, the expedition was nonetheless important. The legacy of the Lewis and Clark expedition was significant, having resulted in the creation of substantial journals on the people, flora and fauna of the area, carefully noting the already established trade into the area from both east and west.¹² As this was a sovereignty thrust, their route down the Snake and Columbia Rivers became a tentative boundary in the absence of any international agreement dividing up the spoils of the Oregon or Columbia Territory. In subsequent years, none of the small number of fur traders who were part of the larger expedition could be traced with any certainty as having returned to the Pacific Slopes. Two individuals who separated from the westward moving expedition at the Mandan village east of the Rockies, Alexander Carson and François Rivet, did later travel over the Rockies to trap on the Pacific slopes.

IMAGE 39 Meriwether Lewis (left), c. 1807 and William Clark (right), 1810. Portraits by Charles Willson Peale..

Simon Fraser and his Men

Aside from one feeble attempt by NWC wintering partner David Thompson and James Hughes to cross the Rocky Mountains in 1801, “in order to penetrate to the Pacific Ocean,”¹³ the idea of NWC trading west of the Rockies was left to languish for more than a decade after Mackenzie. This lull was furthered by fractious infighting between Montreal merchants of which Mackenzie was a part.¹⁴ However a rejoining of NWC partnerships in 1804, possibly coupled with the news of a Lewis and Clark expedition, quite likely prompted the NWC to make a concerted move west of the Rocky Mountains. And move they did.

First into the fray was NWC wintering partner Simon Fraser, a man chosen for his penchant for exploring. In 1805 he set up Trout Lake post (later McLeod Lake), perched on the Divide as both a trading post and an advance supply base for his crossing of the Rocky Mountains. The following year, 1806, marks the beginning of concerted land based fur trading on the Pacific slopes and it is in that year that Forts St. James and Fraser were set up, followed by what would eventually be called Fort George the following year. His men quickly came to realize that obtaining food was an issue and so from the beginning there was considerable supply movement between the posts.

Simon Fraser’s terrifying descent of the Fraser River in 1808,¹⁵ and his being turned back by the local people near its mouth,¹⁶ marked the end of his contributions to the fur trade on the Pacific slopes. From that point he worked east of the Rockies and in 1815 was peripherally involved in the Seven Oaks affair at Red River, but in 1818 was acquitted of all charges. That year he settled in the Township of Cornwall, in present day Ontario, where other Nor’Westers eventually settled, served with the Government forces during the 1837-1838 Rebellions, and died in relative poverty at the ripe old age of eight-six.¹⁷

IMAGE 40 Simon Fraser. From a photo by James Howes, 1905. Collections Canada, Library and Archives Canada.

One of Simon Fraser’s clerks, Jules Maurice Quesnel, worked in the area until May 1811 at which time he returned to Montreal, bringing out trader Daniel William Harmon’s son, George.¹⁸ That same year he left the fur trade, eventually entered political life in Lower Canada and the United Province of Canada from 1841, and died the following year in Montreal.¹⁹ Another, Paul Bouche (La Malice), an invaluable canoeist, earned his distasteful moniker by having sex with the women of other voyageurs, by constantly quarrelling with everyone even while he was sick, as well as by beating his own woman. He retired to Red River.²⁰

John Stuart, on the other hand, succeeded Simon Fraser in 1809 making a career within the area for the next fifteen years. In charge of New Caledonia from 1809 he was made a partner in 1813 and, upon amalgamation in 1821, a Chief Factor. At this early stage he appears not to have gone through what historian W. K. Lamb called “the transforming process of becoming a trader,”²¹ and married locally, but by 1824 he had a wife and child. His love of debate and theological discussion with people like Daniel Williams Harmon may have been sufficient to sustain him temporarily. After he left the Pacific slopes he acquired several successive wives before retiring to Scotland.

Another who stayed was Jean Baptiste Boucher (aka Waccan), who on March 18, 1811, according to Harmon was the first “white”²² person to couple with a Carrier woman:

My Interpreter (Baptiste Bouche) has taken to Wife the Daughter of one of the Carrier Chiefs & she is the first Woman of that Tribe kept by any of the white people. ²³

For Waccan, a mixed descent interpreter and a man of relative rank, this marriage may have been to cement relations between chief Qua or Kwah and the fur traders, a pattern common in the fur trade. In September of that year in full expectation of reaping the rewards of the marriage, Kwah asked the NWC to advance him goods on credit,²⁴ an act which was awarded with a beating by Harmon. Harmon’s rationale for doing such a thing was that he felt that Kwah could not be trusted to pay up and that he was seeking special treatment at the expense of others.²⁵ In truth, Kwah and his extended family for several decades thereafter provided the fur traders with much needed goods and food, saving them more than once from near starvation. As for Boucher, the marriage was short lived and he went on to marry clerk James McDougall’s mixed descent daughter with whom he had seventeen children, leaving many descendants in the area today.

The clerk James McDougall, who was on the Pacific slopes up to 1830, and had been chastised in January 1807 for allowing his men to take native wives,²⁶ himself later took a Sekani wife and bore at least one child, Nancy, who married Waccan Boucher. He returned east of the Rockies in 1830 in a deplorable state of health and was pensioned off in Montreal where he died.

Daniel Williams Harmon, who grew up in Vermont and managed to stay out of the American union until 1791, brought his wife, Lizette, with him to the Pacific slopes. Harmon, however, was fully confident with his own life and forged his own path. Although the Cree and French speaking Lizette’s origins are unclear, noted Canadian historian, Jennifer Brown speculates that she may have been the daughter of a voyageur by the name of Duval and a captured Shuswap woman who was carried to the prairies. She nonetheless remained Harmon’s partner for life, returning to live in Vermont with him.²⁷ None of their descendants remained in New Caledonia. After his return to Vermont, a rather stilted, priggish version of his journals was published in 1820 through the Rev. Daniel Haskel. In 1957, Lamb rescued a more realistic historical essence by publishing the original journals.

From the above and several others forming a group of a dozen or so men, between 1805 and 1811 a network of related descendants began to populate the central British Columbia area of New Caledonia²⁸, so named by Simon Fraser as it seemed to fit the description of Scotland that his mother had passed on to him. These were the beginnings of relationships and patterns of trade which were to sustain the area until at least 1858. Because of the paucity of NWC records for New Caledonia, it is difficult to follow the men with any accuracy through the next decade.

David Thompson and his Men

IMAGE 41 One of many David Thompson monuments at Saleesh House. Photograph by author, 1992.

In 1807, a second North West Company thrust westward over the Divide was performed by David Thompson. That same year the London-born explorer, map-maker and fur trader, constructed Kootenae House fortuitously but unknowingly placed between the headwaters of the Columbia and Kootenay Rivers. It was also the same year that the English speaking world was discovering more about the mysteries of the Pacific slopes through the Pittsburgh publication of Patrick Gass' unofficial edition of the journal of Lewis and Clark.²⁹

Between 1807 and 1812, Thompson himself was in and out of the area several times, interrupting the continuity of his family life. In the spring of 1808, he dropped his family off with his wife Charlotte's brother at Boggy Hall, while he continued to Rainy Lake, and he was not to see them for any extended period of time, other than 1810 when he took the family further to Winnipeg House, until he left for good in 1812.

IMAGE 42 Artist's speculative rendering of David Thompson, US National Park Service.

Eighty-seven men were named by Thompson in his journals from 1807-1812 but with the passage of time, many retreated into relative obscurity. They represented a variety of ethnicities, cultures and nationalities:

Canadian (French)	English	Métis
Chippewa (Ojibwa)	Hawaiian
Nipissing
Cree	Iroquois	Scottish

Only some were fleshed out in the biographies as many were given first names or nick-names. Over time, Thompson's name became the historical synecdoche for the whole venture while the others with him have been forgotten. 118 years after David Thompson's cold Kootenae House Christmas of 1807, a reporter followed this line of thinking as if he and his family were all alone. In the article, there was only isolation and privation:

Here he was, separated [sic] by thousands of miles from all his blood kindred, save those of his young offspring, far from the customs he still held dear. He could not give to these, his dear children the manufactured toys of civilized life, or bon-bons, for here they had no place, but Christmas was not to be forgotten, gifts had been provided.

To Charlotte Small, his wife, now in her 22nd year, and the eighth of her married life, must go a pair of snow shoes; to the eldest daughter, Fannie, aged six, a pair of snow shoes and a small toboggan; to Samuel, aged three, a bow and a quiver of arrows, and to Emma, but a little over one year old, a homemade rattle and homemade doll.³⁰

The author may not have captured reality but to many Thompson was alone against the elements; the other men and their families were invisible. But there was a thriving community of men, women and children around him.

Just who were these men, women and children? Most had somehow attached themselves to the fur trade, some contracted, others freemen on the periphery. Many had wives and children in tow. Many had arrived there independently on their own and from all different directions.

Southern Louisiana born Jean Baptiste Lamoureux had worked his way from the Gulf of Mexico into the more northerly fur trade. Like others, he chose to stay on after being with Thompson in 1810-1811. Three years later, in August 1814, while acting sentry for a Rox Cox party at the Dalles, Lamoureux was fatally shot accidentally by his own men during an attack by local natives. He was buried there.

John Cox, a Hawaiian who came to the Columbia on the Tonquin in 1811 as Edward Cox, was acquired by Thompson in exchange for a sick individual and taken across country. After arriving in England, he returned to the Columbia via Cape Horn and Hawaii. Cox thereafter lived out his life in the Columbia.

Others had worked their way from the north through the Great Lakes. Thompson's Michel Kinville [Michel Quenneville] worked his way down Lake Michigan, then down the Illinois River to St. Charles, near St. Louis, where he married and his wife bore a son, François.³¹ With family in tow he was part of a large group of free traders who moved up the Missouri River and over the Rockies at that time. Like Lamoureux, he met his end during a skirmish, in this case in 1812.³² His wife gave birth around 1807 in the Flathead-Kootenay area to a son who the HBC called Colville Quenneville after the post which he called home until his untimely death in 1833.

IMAGE 43 Fur Traders in Canada. Originally from Cartouche by William Faden, "A map of the Inhabited Part of Canada from the French Surveys; with the Frontiers of New York and New England", 1777. Autry National Center of the American West.

Some Finlays, who had worked their way westward generationally, were part of the group. The first generation, James Finlay, who got only as far as the Saskatchewan area and never saw the Pacific slopes, carried on two families; one in Montreal by Chrisana Youel and another in the Saskatchewan area by a Chippewa wife. It was the offspring of this second union, Jaco (Jacques Raphael) Finlay who through a number of wives and possibly nineteen children made the Pacific slopes landscape his home and settled in the Spokane area.³³

Friendships crossed ethnic lines and he moved freely with the fur traders and carried on lifelong friendships with people like Iroquois Miaquam Martin.³⁴ In fact, he named one of his children after the Iroquois.³⁵ In the Spokane/Flathead area at least seven of his children became the third generation of fur traders very much anchored to the land. As such they weathered the changes of fur trade regimes under which they thrived and their loyalties were pulled in many directions especially when the international border was drawn and both sides established new orders.

The Iroquois, who relied heavily on their own innate cultural ties, were probably the most deft at westward movement. Starting from their largely Montreal area origins and functioning in groups of as many as 250 scouring the landscape of furs, the Iroquois had in the late eighteenth century moved over the Rocky Mountains onto the Pacific slopes. By the early 1800s free Iroquois were particularly active in the foothills and eastern slopes of the Rockies, upper Athabasca River and Peace and Smoky Rivers. They had found their way into the Flatheads area by travelling in from the Prairies or up the Missouri. So it was not unusual to find an ebb and flow of Iroquois throughout the Thompson journals, they sometimes choosing to camp separately, other times leaving marks for their fellow Iroquois to follow.³⁶ Other times they left written notes³⁷ which may have been phonetic Iroquois written in the Roman alphabet originally taught to them by the black robes. They were with Thompson when he initially crossed the Rockies.

Even though the journals are full of the men gathering bark, not all of it was for canoes. Some of it was to cover the roofs of the various posts that they constructed for the NWC, each of which lasted different lengths of time. The topography of the Pacific slopes taxed the inventiveness of the men. Although horses were in use, the men had to radically rethink water transportation. Birch bark canoes were almost useless in certain areas and so they created a clinker built boat of cedar planks and spruce roots to handle the raging waters of the Pacific slopes.³⁸

Just as in the fur trade in general, there were always casualties. Illnesses and death were inevitable but on the whole the men were remarkably healthy. In June 1811, Francois Desjarlais drowned along with his wife and four children. That same event appears to have taken the wife and child of Louis Pacquin.³⁹ On November 12, 1809, James McMillan “shot through” two of his fingers. As they hadn’t healed nine days later, Thompson had to separate them at the knuckle.⁴⁰

The men that came with Thompson did not disappear when Thompson went east. Out of the eighty-six names of people that Thompson recorded in his journals, a mixture of Europeans, natives and mixed descent, thirty-two stayed and we can capture through subsequent records progeny from fifteen of them.⁴¹ Between 1808 and 1840 at least thirty-seven families could claim some relationship to the men that worked with Thompson.⁴² This is only from extant records. The actual figure is probably much higher and keeps changing as more information comes in.⁴³ This is testament to the resiliency of the fur traders and their families.

If we just take one individual from the David Thompson journals, we can see how easily relationships were able to expand. Marguerite Clatsop, the daughter of a Clatsop chief, married American William Wallace Mathews of John Jacob Astor’s Pacific Fur Company (PFC). They had a child. When Wallace departed, Marguerite married James McMillan and together they had a daughter Victoire. Victoire then went on to marry, in succession, Joseph McLoughlin, Pierre Lacourse and Etienne Simon Gregoire. When James McMillan left, Marguerite (Clatsop/Wallace/McMillan) wed Louis Labonte. And so the web grew. Similar complex relationships were constantly developing and changing throughout the fur trade.

The fur trade was clearly a fraternity in an alien landscape forged by mutual dependency and common experiences. The legacy of Thompson’s men represents only a small portion of the interconnectedness of fur trade families, and, naturally, the native peoples of the Columbia region.

Other Appearances during this Period

Some fur trade connections were not long lasting and were more like a blip on the landscape. During 1810-1811 three such events took place, the first two involving wintering posts. The first was wintering over post [near Kalispell, Montana] of HBC officer Joseph Howse.⁴⁴ The second was a similar wintering over post [near Egan, Idaho] by Missouri Fur Company partner Andrew Henry.⁴⁵ In both cases, the people they brought with them immediately returned eastward and the temporary establishments they set up were no longer used with the exception of Andrew Henry’s post (see Appendix: Forts and Posts). Four individuals did return to the Pacific slopes.⁴⁶

The third, which took place in 1810, was the attempt to establish a post via the Pacific on the banks of the Columbia River and involved the Winship brothers. These Boston area entrepreneurs and horticulturalists had been active in the maritime fur trade since 1803. That year Nathan Winship, then Captain of the Albatross, received instructions from his older brother to “select a site thirty miles up the river, and purchase the land of the natives.”⁴⁷ He was then to build a two-story house, plant a garden and “procure of skins of sea otter, beaver, mink, fox, bear, sable, muskrats, and, in fact, any production suitable for the China or American market.” As such, it was a land extension of their maritime fur trade activities. The Albatross sailed forty-five miles up the river to Oak Point. Twenty crew members (seventeen Americans and three Hawaiians), supplemented by twenty-two Hawaiian labourers, set to work on shore. After initial construction and the digging of a garden, a July freshet brought their efforts to a quick end. They packed up and sailed downriver, but reluctant downriver Chinooks would not allow permission to rebuild closer to the Pacific, and so they sailed away into history.⁴⁸

1811-1814 Entry from the West and Competition for Furs

Posts Erected 1811-1814 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts)

Kootenay Area

1. Kootenai House (NWC) 1813-1821
2. Kootenay Fort (PFC) 1813-1814

Flathead Area

1. Fort Spokane (PFC) 1812-1813+
2. Fort Flathead (PFC) 1812-1814

Snake River Area

1. Donald McKenzies Outpost (PFC) 1812-1813
2. John Reed's Post (PFC) 1813-1814

Okanogan River/Thompson River Area

2. Thompson River Posts (PFC-NWC-HBC) 1812-

Columbia River Area

1. Fort Astoria [George] (PFC-NWC-HBC) 1811-1818

Willamette River Area

1. Wallace House (PFC) 1812-1814?
2. Willamette Post (NWC, HBC) 1813-1830s

Land Based Fur Trade Ships Active on Coast 1811-1814

Beaver (1811-1812); Dolly (1811-1813); Isaac Todd (1814); Pedlar (1814); Tonquin 1811)

The period 1811-1814 marked a new direction for the fur trade on the Pacific slopes. Apart from the Winship brothers' 1810 failed attempt to set up a post on the Columbia River, land based fur trade had not been attempted from the Pacific Ocean. This excludes, however, indigenous fur trade from the interior to the coast. Enter German immigrant John Jacob Astor who set up the Pacific Fur Company to exploit a commercial network involving New York, the Pacific Northwest, Russian America, Hawaii and China. In an effort to dodge restrictions on US trade with both Britain and France during these days of Napoleonic Wars, Astor hedged his bets by hiring as many experienced Canadians as possible. That was risky as his main competitor was a Canadian company. But setting up on the coast presented challenges quite different from those of the interior.

Enter the Pacific Fur Company

Unlike the interior, the coast of the Pacific Northwest was one of the most densely populated areas in the Americas. With this density came a vigorous defence of property and traditional rights, internecine warfare, slavery and, for better or for worse, more than two decades of trading furs with outsiders.

Nothing permanent had been built by outsiders at the mouth of the Columbia or in the area. Most ships had either wintered over or briefly traded. Some had left progeny.⁴⁹ A captain Bishop of the Ruby had planted an experimental garden there in 1795 on a sandy island at the mouth of the Columbia and visited to check on the growth.⁵⁰ The Lewis and Clark post had lasted only a few wintery months. It was important then that mutual benefit be part of the ground rules to be negotiated. Ignoring this could prove otherwise. In 1787, the second mate, purser and four seamen of the Imperial Eagle captained by Charles Barkley learned that maxim to their peril when they rowed up the Hoh River [WA] to trade and were never seen again.⁵¹ In 1808 the Russians had learned this the hard way while on their way to investigate a suitable place for settlement in California.⁵² In November while the Nikolai anchored at Destruction Island (off the mouth of Hoh River), the vessel parted its anchor and, after being cast ashore, was wrecked. The survivors made it to the mainland and tried to walk to Gray's harbour to rendezvous with a companion vessel, but the Quillayute natives attacked the crew, killing one sailor and taking four woman prisoners. The rest escaped into the woods but were eventually taken as slaves by the Makah and passed as slaves to various settlements around Juan de Fuca.⁵³ Many, including the captain and his wife died over the years of captivity. In 1809 and 1811, however, two maritime fur trade vessels rescued a total of fourteen survivors and took them back to Sitka. For the fur trader, doing business on the coast required some deft handling.

Astor partially covered his bets when he sought out experienced but disgruntled NWC men “who, not being provided for in some late arrangements, had left that concern in disgust”⁵⁴ and would most likely oppose the NWC if necessary. In his two pronged approach to reach the mouth of the Columbia, one by sea on the ship Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] and the other overland under Wilson Price Hunt, approximately half the men on the Tonquin (three quarters if you exclude the crew) and two thirds of the overland expedition were Canadian.

The ones who came via the Horn first went to New York via Lake Champlain and down the Hudson in a canoe to New York City where their uniqueness drew crowds:

The appearance of this unusual kind of craft on the American waters, with the cheerful chantings of its crew, their feathered caps and sylvan appearance, as they approached the gay city of New York, attracted such a crowd of spectators of all classes around them, as left but little space to land; but what was the astonishment, when, in the twinkling of an eye, two of the crew were seen to shoulder their craft, capable of containing two tons weight, and to convey it to a place of safety on terra firma.⁵⁵

An impressed John Jacob Astor offered the men a drink and proclaimed that six Americans could not have done what the two Canadians had done.⁵⁶

The long and tedious six-month sea voyage, however, was another matter. According to Ross, the Captain, Thorn, was “a precise and rigid man, naturally hot-tempered, expecting instant obedience at the slightest sign.”⁵⁷ Franchere was more generous, calling him “stern” and “irritable.”⁵⁸ Thorn’s actions, however, were beyond that. On the Falkland Islands, for example, he chose to abandon a group of men who did not make it back to the vessel in time and it was only Robert Stuart holding a gun to the captain’s head that caused the vessel to turn around to pick up the men.⁵⁹

The growing resentment towards the captain resulted in his isolation by and from the Scottish and French Canadian fur traders. They used the familiarity of their respective cultures to isolate, humiliate and punish him without challenging him:

Sullen and silent, both parties passed and repassed each other in their promenades on deck without uttering a word; but their looks bespoke the hatred that burnt within. The partners on the quarter-deck made it now a point to speak nothing but the Scotch dialect; while the Canadians on the fore-castle spoke French—neither of which did the captain understand; and as both groups frequently passed hours together, cracking their jokes and chanting their outlandish songs, the commander seemed much annoyed on these occasions, pacing the deck in great agitation.⁶⁰

IMAGE 44 “Attack and Massacre of the Crew of the Tonquin” (1838). From Nathaniel Currier, Voyages to the South Seas, Indian & Pacific Oceans. Edmund Fanning, 1769-1841.

Dislike was mutual. Washington Irving reported Captain Thorn's opinion of French Canadians aboard the Tonquin:

Then as to the artisans and laborers who had been brought from Canada and shipped at such expense, the three most respectable, according to the captain's account, were culprits, who had fled from Canada on account of their misdeeds; the rest had figured in Montreal as Draymen, barbers, waiters, and cariole drivers, and were the most helpless, worthless beings 'that ever broke sea-biscuit.'⁶¹

Perhaps this deep seated anger explains why Captain Thorn, after picking up twelve Hawaiian labourers⁶² so viciously beat and then abandoned a crew-member whose only crime was that he was late returning to the ship.⁶³ Maybe this is also why he so easily sent eight men to their deaths at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22 and 25, 1811.⁶⁴ Three of them, the Lapensée brothers and Joseph Nadeau were young and had been put by their parents under the care of Alexander McKay in Montreal. Their loss only hardened the men's attitude towards their captain.

The Scots and the French were not the only ones that sought to regroup around their cultural roots. When the Hawaiians reached the mouth of the Columbia and were about to bury one of their own who had died there, they retreated to familiar ritual. The body of Peter the Hawaiian was buried with materials at hand: biscuit, pork and tobacco. The group of islanders:

put the biscuit under the arm of the deceased, the pork under the chin and the tobacco under the testicles or genital organs. Then they put the body in the grave and after covering it with sand the gravel they formed a double line, with their faces turned eastwards. One officiating as priest went to fetch water in his hat and having sprinkled the two rows of Islanders, began a prayer to which the others responded. Then they rose and departed and made their way towards the ship without looking back.

⁶⁵

After undoubtedly negotiating with the local natives, probably a chief like Comcomly, for an area on which to build a post, a post was constructed and a garden dug. Possibly participating in the negotiations may have been an interpreter in his twenties, Jack Ramsey, a mixed descent Chinook and Englishman whose father had deserted his ship in the area many years previously.⁶⁶ When the Tonquin departed on June 1, 1811 to trade along the west coast of Vancouver Island, it picked up an interpreter, Joseachal, at Gray's Harbour, someone who could speak English and who also belonged to a group from Nootka Sound. The trading plan was a fateful decision as the West Coast of Vancouver Island had largely been depleted of its sea otter population and the Wakashan speaking population was in a nasty mood. For example, in 1801-1802, several deserters from the Manchester had been ritually killed at Nootka and it was felt people like the deserters were detracting others from trading there.⁶⁷ As well, in 1803, the entire crew but two men of the American vessel Boston had been massacred when the ship was seized. Previous insults as well as insulting behaviour of the captain were the justification.⁶⁸ When the Tonquin reached Clayoquot Sound, in late June the local natives were waiting for the first European vessel to appear to avenge a previous kidnapping of some local men by a Captain Ayers who abandoned them off California.⁶⁹ Consequently the vessel was attacked, and thirteen men on the ship and about two hundred natives were killed. The largest loss of life occurred when Alexander McKay, who had been with Mackenzie in the north, appears to have set off the powder magazine. The only survivor was Joseachal⁷⁰ who relayed the fate of the Tonquin and its men to Astoria.⁷¹ With this, the Astorian enterprise lost not only men but also its trading goods.

IMAGE 45 Portrait of Wilson Price Hunt. From The Centennial History of Oregon, 1811-1912, Vol. 1, by Joseph Gaston and George H. Himes, 1912.

The second advance to Astoria was led by Wilson Price Hunt who headed an overland expedition from Michilimackinac, the staging depot at the juncture of Lakes Huron and Michigan, to the mouth of the Columbia. As Hunt was the only man other than Astor who had a plurality of shares, he was the de-facto head of the Astorian adventure. But the expedition had its own troubles. After Hunt recruited men in New York and Montreal, his group left Michilimackinac in the summer of 1810 and wintered over on the Missouri at the mouth of the Nodaway River. He struck out again in April after a short trip to St. Louis to recruit more people to bring his group up to full strength. After they⁷² crossed the Continental Divide and reached Henry's Fork, Hunt made an error in judgement, releasing the horses in favour of dugout canoes that they made out of cottonwood trees.⁷³ They found out only too late how unstable the canoes were on the rapids of the Snake River.⁷⁴ Hunt divided his then fifty-four men there into four groups. Hunt took twenty-one men, partners Ramsey Crooks twenty, Donald McKenzie five, Robert McClellan four and clerk John Reed four men. They all encountered varying degrees of hardships and eventually straggled into Astoria. Hunt arrived February 15, 1812.

Various members of the overland expedition began arriving at Astoria. On January 18, 1812, Donald McKenzie, Robert McLellan and John Reed arrived with eight others. This was followed by W. P. Hunt who arrived on February 15, 1812 "with 30 Men, a Woman & 2 children, in 6 Canoes."⁷⁵ The women and two children were the wife of Pierre Dorion. It wasn't until May 11, 1812 that bedraggled Ramsay Crooks and John Day arrived at Astoria.

Of all the members of the various groups of the overland expedition that experienced severe difficulties on their way to Astoria, none so graphically illustrated strength, loyalty and resolve over difficulty than the group that was led by Ramsay Crooks. Crooks himself had not been well on the overland expedition and as he was unable to ride his horse had to at times be dragged on a litter.⁷⁶ After the expedition abandoned their canoes, Crooks made a feeble attempt to return to Henry's Fork with five men to find Indians with horses or to retrieve his horses that they had abandoned but, realizing the futility of it in light of the oncoming winter, turned around in short order continuing the westward trek. He regrouped and the parties trekked down opposite sides of the river.

For twenty-eight days Crooks's group walked an average of eleven or twelve miles a day. Each day for the first eighteen days they ate the equivalent of half of one normal meal. During the next ten days, twenty men subsisted on a single beaver, one dog, some chokecherries, and the boiled soles of a few worn moccasins.⁷⁷

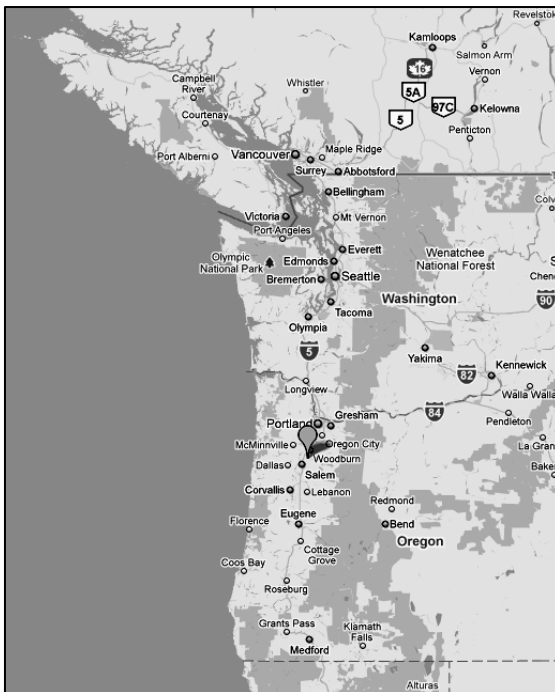

IMAGE 46 Present day map of Willamette Valley area, Google Maps, 2009.

Starved, weakened and barely able to sustain themselves down the Snake River, Crooks made a decision to let his men go on while he stayed with John Day, who thought he was dying and had asked to spend his last days with the leader of his party. Crooks vowed to stay with Day until he either died or recovered. Day revived and, continuing their journey, they were helped by both the Snake and Umatilla Indians, but when they travelled to the Columbia falls, they were stripped of all their possessions, including clothes, by the natives who were used to extracting tribute from those passing by. Consequently, they retreated naked upriver again to the friendly Umatilla who revived them once again. It wasn't until May 1812 that Robert Stuart eventually located Crooks and Day, now hardly recognizable, near the mouth of the Umatilla River, from which point they were taken down river. They reached Astoria on May 11, 1812. The following month, having had enough adventure, both struck out on June 29, 1812, to return eastward only to be robbed of their horses in the Rocky Mountains by Crow Indians.

After the completion of the perilous overland expedition, Hunt ran into further complications, largely because of the War of 1812. The arrival of the PFC vessel Beaver in May 1812, having left New York in October 1811, brought five additional clerks who included Ross Cox and a partner, John Clarke. After reprovisioning in the Columbia and starting in August 1812 with

George Ehninger as ship's clerk, Hunt used the Beaver, in the absence of the lost Tonquin, to explore trading possibilities along the coast and with Russians at Sitka. Because of a variety of circumstances, he did not return to the Columbia right away but sailed to China where the Beaver remained for fear of being impounded as a result of the conflict. He chartered the Albatross to bring furs but didn't get back to Astoria until August 1813 only to find the partners ready to abandon the enterprise. Hunt then went to Hawaii where he purchased the Pedlar; in another error in judgment he left the Nor'Wester Duncan McDougall in charge in his absence. When he was gone, McDougall, fearing the seizure by a British man-of-war, sold the fort and contents to the NWC. When Hunt returned at the end of February 1814 on the Pedlar which he had bought in Hawaii, he found that the PFC had been sold by McDougall and Donald McKenzie to the NWC. Hunt took two years to reach New York after he stayed around Astoria to tie up loose ends. He spent his final years in Missouri.⁷⁸

But what of the lives of the men during the short existence of Fort Astoria? All were put to work on building a substantial post at Astoria with the main buildings and stockade. The work was hard, no doubt. The success of constructing Fort Astoria was overshadowed by the loss of the Tonquin. However, the competing NWC had already established posts in strategic areas to the north and east and so no time was wasted before other construction was begun on PFC posts. Progress was slow as, by July 15, 1811, the residences had not yet been constructed and the men had to sleep at one end of the warehouse.⁷⁹ What followed were Fort Okanogan, Wallace House, Thompson River, Fort Spokane, Donald McKenzie's outpost, Fort Flathead and Kootenay Fort (see Appendix: Forts and Posts). They ranged in quality from the driftwood construction of Fort Okanogan to the much more impressive Fort Spokane. The latter was meant to impress and draw native furs from the nearby NWC post. The competition manifested itself when David Thompson and his group of French Canadians and Iroquois arrived at Astoria on July 15th.⁸⁰

Ramsay Crooks and John Day, tired of the hardships, followed through their desires and returned east. However, the ordinary labourers and canoe men did not have those options open to them. Occasionally, however, an ordinary worker thought differently.

The men worked together as they were expected to, with relatively little protest being uttered even though morale was occasionally low. Although the fur traders were known for espousing grand ideas amongst themselves, occasionally independence of thought coupled with action emerged. It happened with Paul Denis Jeremie. The French Canadian's presence in New York, where he was hired on for the Astorian Expedition, may have influenced the boldness of his subsequent behaviour.⁸¹ After the tumultuous voyage on the Tonquin and the setting up of the Astorian post, the conditions at Astoria were not what he had expected and he feigned illness and even proposed joining a group to return on the Lewis and Clark route, a suggestion for which he was severely reprimanded. While fighting off venereal disease and under the ruse of working well, he secretly cached his clothes as well as items taken from stores such as wine, rum, biscuits, gun powder, knife, saw, twine, etc., to make his way up the Willamette River. On July 26, 1811 and breaking solidarity, Jeremie was turned in by his fellow fur traders and in response wrote an explanatory note saying that he was going his own way and generously added that in spite of the fact that he was not free and was "Ill Youse" by the company, he would not speak ill of it. For his actions, he was put in irons and fed the biscuit and butter he had stolen.⁸² Jeremie tried a second time around November 10, 1811 intending along with the two Belleau brothers to go all the way to the Spanish settlements to the south. They got only as far as Sauve Island with their firearms, ammunition and a light canoe⁸³ when they were taken prisoner and held for ransom by a local chief. Freedom of the three cost clerk Gabriel Franchère "8 blankets, copper kettle, an axe, a pistol in poor condition, a powder horn and some shot." After the group returned downstream without blankets for warmth, Jeremie was put in irons once again until December 22, 1811.⁸⁴

But that was not the end of Jeremie. A year later on November 24, 1812, through obvious powers of persuasion, Jeremie managed to convince the partners and clerks to use a home remedy to cure the Hawaiian Tuana's venereal disease. They killed a horse, eviscerated it and placed Tuana inside. Needless to say, it did not work.⁸⁵

In spite of the fact that the men were often coming down with colds, they were a remarkably healthy lot. The only disease that presented hardship was venereal disease, the cure of which was the application or insertion of mercury (see Appendix: Medicines), a task that would generally be given to the clerks. The other medical condition which occasionally presented itself was scurvy, which was curable. No one died from it.

For the fur traders, a smooth working relationship with the natives on the Pacific slopes was paramount. The PFC was no exception and the establishment of fur trade posts was always a negotiated affair. As well, marriage to native women had overtones of a quid-pro-quo agreement of mutual benefit. No doubt many of these relationships endured into long lasting ones. When it came to native indiscretions, however, uneven justice was meted out. Often the pilfering of items from the fur traders was overlooked but occasionally retribution became harsh. Many items had been pilfered along the Snake River but they were dismissed as the price of trade. However, at the end of May 1812, a native on the Snake River stole a silver goblet which Astor had given to John Clarke to present to Alexander McKay. It had taken on a different meaning now that McKay was dead. An enraged Clarke, who believed "in the doctrine of intimidation,"⁸⁶ overreacted by constructing a gallows hanging the individual in spite of pleas and offers of compensation from the natives. It was a needless act of severity for which other fur traders paid severely. John Reed and his party were killed in January 1814 in a likely act of revenge for this over-reaction.⁸⁷

Although intimidation was not a usual practice, penalties were severe for those who deliberately murdered a fur trader. Archibald Pelton, a Bostonian who had crossed the Continent with Hunt, had become partially deranged because of the difficulties. At Astoria he would disappear for days at a time living only on berries and it was on one of these camping outings that he slashed a "Killymuck" trying to steal from his tent. In April 1814, after two years of plotting revenge, the Killymucks finding him alone dispatched him with an ax. In response, Donald McTavish solicited the assistance of local chiefs, kidnapped the Killymuck culprits, and staged a show trial in which the jury was made up of both company men and native men and women. Found guilty by the jury, the culprits were executed the following morning at the end of the fort's wharf in front of a large gathering of natives.⁸⁸

As a result of Pelton's observed behaviour, the word "pelton" entered Chinook jargon for the word "crazy," also becoming the base for the word "partlelum" or "pahltlum," meaning "drunk" or full of rum or "lum."⁸⁹

The North West Company Takes Over

All changed, however, when the NWC appeared at Fort Astoria in 1813. As war had broken out the year before, through a combination of fear, intimidation, reasoning and bargaining, the NWC negotiated largely with their fellow Canadians and former NWC employees the sale of the PFC's Fort Astoria to the NWC. Astor's plan to hire ex-NWC employees to buffer the effects of the embargo had backfired. Those who wished to stay signed on with the NWC⁹⁰ while those who wished to leave went out in canoe brigades in orderly fashion in the spring of 1814.⁹¹

IMAGE 47 Fort Astoria as it was in 1813. From Journal of a Voyage on the North West Coast of America During the Years 1810–1814, by Gabriel Franchère, 1854.

To cope with PFC to NWC regime change, social order at the post had to be reaffirmed, particularly amongst the native wives. In 1814 as the change over was taking place, the wife of Iroquois Ignace Salioheni who had come to the coast some time a few years earlier found herself at the receiving end of such a reassertion. Duncan McDougall's wife, the daughter of Chief Comcomly who retained traditional authority over the area of Fort Astoria, chose April 14th while Salioheni was away up the Willamette to assert her position. As Salioheni's children were playing with some "trifling things," McDougall's wife, whom Alexander Henry thought "haughty and imperious" took the children's playthings away from them and sent them off crying. Salioheni's wife, exhibiting the Iroquois pride of her husband, slapped McDougall's wife. A "dreadful row" ensued and several women ended up in the bay.⁹² Three weeks later, on May 6, Ignace's wife and family were sent outside the fort to the house with the "Nepisangues" to make room for storage inside the fort. Social order had been restored

With the NWC clearly the victor in the contest for spoils, loyalties were severely tested and resulted in some acrimony. Of the six partners who remained after the death of Alexander McKay, Robert Stuart, Ramsay Crooks and Robert McClellan had already returned to New York in 1812 with dispatches to Astor. David Stuart returned after the buyout but Duncan McDougall and Donald McKenzie, the latter of whom returned briefly to Montreal, decided to work with the North West Company.

For clerk Gabriel Franchere to whom trust mattered, the actions of McDougall and McKenzie were unforgivable:

D. McDougall, as a reward for betraying the trust reposed in him by Mr. Astor, was made a Partner of the Northwest Company, crossed the mountains, and died a miserable death at Bas de la Riviere, Winnipeg. Donald McKenzie, his coadjutor, went back to the Columbia river, where he amassed a considerable fortune, with which he returned, and living in Chautauqua County in this state, where he died a few years since unknown and neglected: he was a very selfish man, who cared for no one but himself.⁹³

Franchere did not factor in McDougall's having married Chief Comcomly's daughter. To Irving, the marriage, performed in an elaborate ceremony, was nothing more than an alliance of immediate interests,⁹⁴ and by inference, should not have superseded the loyalty to Astor himself. Clerk Alfred Seton had admitted that generally things had gone much better at Astoria after the marriage⁹⁵ although he had nothing good to say about McDougall himself.⁹⁶ Personality was probably a factor in McDougall staying behind.

As for the clerks whose contractual arrangements were less generous than those of the partners, there was little reason to stay as well. Of the seventeen clerks, one John Reed was killed, four chose to temporarily join the NWC to ensure wages before leaving, eight left right away without signing up and four, Alexander Ross, Ross Cox, Thomas McKay and Ovide Montigny, decided to stay in the area with the North West Company.⁹⁷ Perhaps Ross's reason for joining with the opposition NWC was that he felt cheated in that Astor had filled the Columbia vessels with useless and unsaleable goods that couldn't be sold elsewhere.⁹⁸ Not to be outdone, and as a kind of back-handed slap at Ross, Irving repeated Captain Thorn's remarks that Ross was "as foolish a pedant as every lived."⁹⁹ The motivations for the other two clerks are unknown but perhaps Thomas McKay's attachment to his recently deceased father might have been an anchoring factor. Because there were so many clerks working for the Pacific Fur Company, the legacy of personal journals and thoughts like no other period of the fur trade on the Pacific slopes remains. What we know about the sparse records of the NWC period that followed (1814-1821) was largely left through the writings of Alexander Ross and Ross Cox.

Although many ordinary fur trade workers returned east or cannot be traced afterward, many nonetheless decided to stay and put down roots. Others left for various reasons at the transfer of regimes. Some were angry. Bazile Brousseau left for Montreal in a huff in 1814 with an aim to sue Astor for his wages. However, for book-binder and tailor Moses Flanagan, shoemaker Benjamin Roussel, and tailor Richard Milligan, former merchant Regis Bruguere and consort Jane Barnes, opportunities were just too great elsewhere. For Hawaiian William Karimou, it was likely the pull of adventure that took him as far as Fort William on Lake Superior. The carpentry skills of John Patterson were needed on the Albatross and so he joined that vessel. For those with more utilitarian professions such as hunters and trappers (Etienne Lucier, Jean Baptiste Gardepied, Joseph Gervais), middlemen (Jean Baptiste Dubreuille, Jacques Lafontasie), carpenters (Louis Labonté), handymen (George Ramsay), millwright (William Canning) and blacksmiths (Francois Ducharquette, Michel Sanson, Francis William Hodgens, Augustine Roussil), there were opportunities at Astoria and the Oregon area.

Through sheer persistence, Francois Payette stayed and rose to become post master and clerk. Flexibility was the key. For example, Jean Baptiste Ouvre, a milieu, ended up cooking for Dr. Tolmie's wife at Fort Nisqually. Michel Sanson, a blacksmith continued to make himself useful by also making blanket capots for Indian trade that could not be traded as blankets. All chose native or mixed descent wives and raised families in the area. Most who stayed lived out the rest of their lives on the Pacific slopes but occasionally people like Augustin Roussil stayed around and raised a family, but in later years found the attraction of his home in Canada too great and so left in 1832. Others, like George Kirby Gay, left but returned to start a new life twelve years later.

The Hawaiian John Cox was one of many to find service on the west coast. He had come to Astoria in March 1811 aboard the Pacific Fur Company vessel, Tonquin. Cox came with full-blown confidence as, for over thirty years, many Hawaiians had circumnavigated the globe several times, paraded through the streets of cities from Boston to Canton, and come back with great stories of lands beyond the islands. King Kamehameha had consolidated power on the islands and the power of the kapu (taboo) to hold society had begun to lose its hold. With this behind them, twelve Hawaiians had landed at the mouth of the Columbia and all proved competent but one in particular stood out. Perhaps it was a desire to see more but John Cox was perfectly at home with the myriad of cultures that presented themselves and had no compunction about moving with other cultures. According to Thompson, at Astoria, Cox was exchanged for Michel Boullard, who was ill, tired and weak. This exchange could very well have taken place at the mouth of the Snake River several days later but wherever, Cox was on his way up the Columbia. Just how comfortable Cox was with his situation was revealed by Alexander Ross who said that "Cox was looked upon by Mr. Thompson as a prodigy of wit and humour."¹⁰⁰

Besides brawn and stamina, fur traders needed wit, humour and companionship to survive the boredom and elements and other challenges that faced them.

1814-1821 – A Period of North West Company Dominance

New Posts Erected 1814-1821 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts)

New Caledonia Area

1. Fort Alexandria (NWC-HBC) 1821?-1960

Snake River Posts

1. Snake Country expeditions (NWC-HBC, etc.) 1819+

The Columbia River Posts 1811-1871

1. Fort Nez Percés (NWC-HBC) 1818-1855

Southern Oregon Posts

1. Southern Expeditions 1819+
2. McKay's Old Establishment (NWC) (1820-?)

Land Based Fur Trade Ships Active on the Coast 1814-1821 (see Appendix: Ships)

Alexander (1817-1821); Colonel Allen (1815-1816); Columbia [1] (1814-1816); Columbia [2] (1817-1818); Levant (1817-1821); Nautilus (1819)

The 1814-1821 period saw the North West Company in a position of monopoly on the Pacific slopes. Its land based fur trade now functioned in New Caledonia, Kootenay and Flathead and the Columbia River. In spite of this exclusivity, clerks like Alexander Ross used the term "monopoly" guardedly:

It is a well known fact that the North West Company had no exclusive right to have any portion of the Indian country. Their right was in common with every other adventurer, and no more.¹⁰¹

Pieces of the monopoly construct were brought together by people such as John Stuart and adjustments had to be made. Between May and October 1813, Stuart had travelled from Fort St. James part-way down the Fraser, overland to Kamloops and Okanagan and down the Columbia to Astoria. He was essentially piecing together native routes but it meant that now a significant proportion of this new route was on land, which made horses more important for transport.

As well, with competition out of the way, NWC and PFC posts had to be merged. In some cases it was easy. Since posts at Thompson River and Spokane were virtually side by side, the best one was chosen and taken over. For example, at Spokane, the NWC moved into the much more impressive PFC post. Some smaller redundant posts were simply abandoned (see Appendix: Forts and Posts).

Seven Years of North West Company Monopoly on the Pacific Slopes

For the NWC, the Columbia River depot meant that ships were to play a much bigger role. Consequently, it was during this period that crewmen, crews and voyageurs on the supply ships came into their own. With NWC ships supplying New Caledonia via the Columbia and up the newly opened inland route, maritime operations gained greater importance. Partners, clerks and even medically trained doctors could now arrive by sea rather than by the punishing overland route.¹⁰²

During the seven year period, 1814-1821, the NWC seemed to have bad luck with doctors or surgeons working on the Pacific slopes. In 1816, soon after the Colonel Allen arrived in the Columbia, a Doctor White, who was supposed to take care of medical affairs ashore at Fort George [Astoria], committed suicide by jumping overboard and drowning. The Colonel Allen's own surgeon on the same visit appeared quite normal when he visited the Boston ship Sultan captained by Caleb Reynolds, at anchor nearby. He poured himself a whiskey, returned to his cabin on his own vessel and shot himself in the head. Other doctors were quite willing to stay but unfortunately couldn't. Around this time an Edinburgh doctor by the name of Crowley only wished he could stay after it was revealed that he had shot a man in cold blood in his home city and he was packed off to go on trial in Scotland.¹⁰³

One person who arrived on the Isaac Todd in 1814 and who could never have made it overland was the consort to Donald McTavish, Jane Barnes, an illiterate English barmaid accompanied by all her finery. Natives flocked to the fort to see her in a new dress every day. On hearing that she might be sent home, the son of Chief Comcomly, resplendent in his own fancy dress, red paint and whale oil, offered to give her relations one hundred sea otter pelts and offered her a lifetime of relative luxury. She turned him down and, upon the death of her provider, Donald McTavish, went to Canton where she found better prospects with an Englishman attached to the East India Company.¹⁰⁴

The NWC British ships were not to last servicing the West Coast. Given the punishing East India Company licensing fees for British ships trading into China, and South Sea Company fees for trading on the North West Coast, NWC maritime operations changed gears after the arrival of the Colonel Allen in 1816. From that point on, the NWC hired American vessels through the Perkins Company of Boston. Subsequent Perkins' vessels that supplied the Northwest coast on behalf of the NWC during this period were the Alexander (1817-1821), Levant (1818-1820), Nautilus (1819) and Houqua (1822) (see Appendix: Ships).

This period also marked a change in which trading was done with the natives, particularly in the Snake Country. Because Donald McKenzie was familiar with the area, he along with his recording clerk Alexander Ross, was given the task of reorganizing the interior and the Snake Country. At the 1816 Fort William gathering the decision had been made to use the horse as a major conveyor of company trappers and goods into and out of the South and Snake countries.¹⁰⁵ This had the advantage of accessing territory previously not accessible to canoes.¹⁰⁶ As well, it signalled a change in relations with the native peoples who had previously trapped and traded furs. The brigade members would now do their own trapping as well as trading with the natives. McKenzie's first step in 1818 to accommodate this new arrangement was to set up Fort Nez Perces as a staging point to replenish future Snake Country expeditions (see Appendix: Forts and Posts).

In spite of their diminished role, the indigenous population remained key to the survival of the fur trader, as well as the fur trade industry. Therefore good relations were essential. Although the fur traders classified different native groups as "roguish," "tranquil," "honest," and "incontinent," etc.,¹⁰⁷ their close dealings with them would indicate at least some level of understanding for the underlying reasons for indigenous behaviour. Ross recognized that the men of the NWC sometimes “burst through the legal and sacred rights of others.”¹⁰⁸ In spite of using these labels, the average fur trader would have had some sense of the reality of the fur trade game: intrusion onto native territory, disruption of native food supplies, a diminishing availability of food and resources, interference in traditional alliances, expected behaviour within native hierarchies, internecine warfare, slavery, exacting of tolls in nexus points of trade, food gathering and trade. In the balancing act between self interest and survival, the negative generalizations were fur trader guides for precautionary measures, behaviour and trade.

Sometimes the labels given to local peoples were apt and served as cautionary warning signals. One particularly irritating point for the fur traders was loss of important goods by theft and how to deal with it. Pilfering by natives was considered a price outsiders had to pay on traditional native territory. This was particularly the case around nexus points such as the Columbia Dalles where sometimes the extraction of tolls could rise to a level of extreme violence; such acts had to be dealt with in a variety of ways. Several attacks at the Dalles were met with armed opposition. As noted before, John Clarke’s overreaction resulting in the hanging of one individual in Snake Country created disastrous consequences for years. At the other end of the scale, in February 1817 when the Okanogan people helped retrieve horses stolen by the Sinapoils, they were not punished as it was obvious they were starving.¹⁰⁹ Careful weighing of outcomes had to go into any punitive actions taken by the fur traders. The balance between alienating the native groups and appearing weak was a fine line.

Sometimes the rhetoric was chillingly real and threatening, so a quiet retreat was the best survival tactic. On February 18, 1818, Harmon wrote about retreat from the Fraser River area as a strategy for survival:

While there, the Natives had concerted a plan to massacre us all; but I discovered it, and kept my people on their guard. The Indians, perceiving this, dared not attempt to execute their bloody and unprovoked purpose.¹¹⁰

As well, fur traders had to be cautious that they were not drawn into native-to-native retaliations. For example, at Fraser Lake on June 18, 1815, when visiting Nataotins had been shot over a gambling argument, Harmon was forced to take extra precautions and the Nataotins had promised to “return with a large Band of their relations to avenge the death of their Companions.”¹¹¹

On the flip side of the coin, some native groups showed indifference to the traders and ridiculed the follies of their own people who fell into the trap of overindulgence.¹¹² Others, like those at Spokane House, played on the guilt and generosity of the traders blaming them for all the ills that had befallen them. In short, they had broken their arrows for guns and, now that they had no powder or balls for their guns, “the white men are very bad, and have deceived us.”¹¹³

During this second decade of the nineteenth century, the fur trade still depended on the surrounding natives for a continuing supply of food and so good relations were essential. As many of the posts were along rivers such as those in New Caledonia, the fur traders depended on salmon runs. John Stuart noted in April 1815 that the salmon failed somewhat every second year and completely every fourth year. While starvation conditions were shared amongst the natives and fur traders, tact and reward were essential.¹¹⁴

The fur traders were not entirely without their own resources. To compensate for the failure of the salmon runs, the voyageurs turned to horse meat as a ready alternative. The journals are full of the killing of horses for food. After the horses, the presence of dog as a food source was essential and this appears many times. Dog owning engagés couldn’t let themselves get too attached to their dogs. While on the Spokane brigade from Fort Okanogan in the winter of 1814-1815, John Stuart’s dog, a healthy English water spaniel called Ponto was killed as his meat was deemed best for the proprietors over the native dogs which were skinny and emaciated in the winter.¹¹⁵

Produce from gardens during this period grew in stature amongst the more established posts. For example, in 1815 at Spokane, potatoes, melons and cucumbers grew in abundance. At first the natives were disinterested in following this planting as the men thought that if the women followed suit, they would abandon collecting fruits and roots in the autumn and they would become lazy. This changed over time when it was discovered how delicious the fruits and vegetables were and a sentry had to stand guard so that the garden produce would not be stolen.¹¹⁶ In October 1816 at the northerly Fraser Lake, Harmon was able to get forty bushels of potatoes from one bushel he planted. In his northern climes, turnips, barley and other food plants did well.¹¹⁷

During this period, the surrounding natives were essential to the survival of the fur trade and tradition had to be followed when carrying out bartering. According to Cox, within the Columbia plateau region, the natives would come into the post with their pelts, throw them down and squat in a circle around them. Taking out a pipe (clay bowl and reed stem) they would light up, and turning to several cardinal points, would give a puff. The pipe would be passed around until the tobacco was burned. The fur trader, a proprietor or clerk, would hand out some free tobacco, which they would then smoke before the bargaining would begin.

When the smoking terminates, each man divides his skins into different lots. For one, he wants a gun; for another, ammunition; for a third, a copper kettle, an axe, a blanket, a tomahawk, a knife, ornaments for his wife, &c., according to the quantity of skins he had to barter.¹¹⁸

Dealing with Languages

With such a close association with the natives and people speaking a polyglot of languages, communication for the fur trader on the Pacific slopes was fraught with difficulties. On the one hand for each distinctive group, their own language was a protective barrier allowing a person to hang onto social relationships within his own culture. On the other hand, if one tried to effectively carry out daily activities or be social and communicate in several languages there was a certain inevitability of mixing the languages. Apart from the local native language or dialect, the fur trader might find himself using the mixed Chinook jargon. In addition, there was Gaelic, Hawaiian, English and French. Keeping a grip on one's own language was sometimes difficult.

Some, like the methodical, organized Daniel Williams Harmon did not appear to have any difficulty handling the local and fur trade languages as his journals reflected a steady even hand from 1800 to 1819. He was careful in sorting out his languages. While he taught his children to write English, he spoke to them entirely in Cree so they could communicate with their mother. At the same time, French was reserved for his wife.¹¹⁹

Ross Cox found his own language deteriorating by the summer of 1816: "Bad French and worse Indian began to usurp the place of English, and I found my conversation gradually becoming a barbarous compound of various dialects."¹²⁰

It is reasonable to assume that, as French was the main lingua franca of the fur trade at this point and the French Canadians brought with them a body of songs and stories from centuries in the fur trade, there may have been little deterioration in their language abilities. Further, as most of the French Canadians had not been trained in the written language and most everything had to be communicated orally, the essentials of the French language were constantly reinforced orally. Just how the Hawaiians fared language-wise is unknown. Where the Hawaiians were grouped, there probably would have been less of a loss of language than with those who functioned at isolated posts.

Finan McDonald was a case in point of a loss of language or having never properly perfected a single language in the first place. Having brought his native Gaelic with him from Inverness-shire as a child to Canada he sought to improve his English. Prior to joining the North West Company he had to absorb French as a functioning daily language. Although he seldom remained more than one winter in a single place and had a great facility to acquire native languages, he was never able to master them. When according to Cox he was distracted, he would speak the "most strong and ludicrous melange of Gaelic, English, French, and half a dozen Indian dialects."¹²¹ Over time, his writing showed that he was never able to completely master the written language for, in an April 5, 1824 letter to John George McTavish, commenting on his activities in Snake territory, he wrote:

We had Saviral Battils with the nasion on the other side of the Mountians. Poore Meshel Bordoe was kild with 5 more of the Band there dath was revenge as well as we Could revent it for no less than 68 of them that remain in the Planes as Pray for the wolves and those fue that askape our Shotes they had not Britch Clout to Cover them selves wee Shoe them what war was they will not be so radey to atack People.¹²²

The Iroquois

IMAGE 48 "Iroquois Indians." c1914. William Alexander Drennan, copyright claimant, 1914. Taking the Long View: Panoramic Photographs, 1851-1991, Library of Congress.

During this eight year period, the mix of the predominantly French Canadian engage and British clerks changed as more Iroquois were brought onto the Pacific slopes. Many, having helped to deplete the furs on the plains,¹²³ had already moved to the area west of the Rocky Mountains as independent freemen. An additional impetus came in 1816 when at the Fort William gathering it was decided by NWC partners to bring in large numbers of Iroquois from the Montreal area in that they might "by their example teach others."¹²⁴ From 1816 large numbers entered the Pacific slopes.¹²⁵

The Iroquois took on a variety of jobs. Those under contract were employed mainly for their canoeing, hunting and trapping skills but they also filled in as boat builders, blacksmiths, carpenters, coopers, woodcutters, etc. They could even be found in the vegetable gardens at various times.

For the more independent freemen, it was another matter. By 1818, the local natives began to "consider them as intruders" whose interests did not coincide with those of the locals. Their indiscriminate killing of animals both young and old drove the local natives such as the Carriers to harsh actions. In September 1818, they killed an Iroquois, his wife and two children.¹²⁶

Further south, in 1817 the Iroquois associated with the NWC were creating problems in Flathead Country in their insistence in "trafficking privately with the Indians." If the negotiations broke down and fighting ensued, the other fur traders would be endangered. In one such case, to demonstrably bring failed negotiations to a conclusion, Donald McKenzie paid the natives for a horse for which the Iroquois Grand Pierre had been bargaining, took out his own pistol and shot it dead. The disgruntled Iroquois, in retaliation for this humiliation, decided to assassinate McKenzie but the plot was foiled when another Iroquois raised the alarm and McKenzie was able to extricate himself from the situation. He further resolved the situation by separating out the Iroquois to different posts and assignments.¹²⁷ In spite of this altercation, the Iroquois were considered too valuable to let go, an opinion shared by many in the fur trade.¹²⁸

The Iroquois need for companionship was problematic as, according to Kamaranski, it was difficult as so few of them had brought wives with them. Consequently many of the Iroquois' "tools of the trapper's trade: steel traps, guns, knives and blankets" would disappear with the Iroquois on their nightly visits to local native women and would have to be replaced by the company.¹²⁹

IMAGE 49 Fort McLeod, Parks Canada. Photograph by author, 1991.

By 1820, however, the Iroquois were also being seen as a threat to the NWC. On Saturday, June 11, 1820, it was noted at Stuart Lake that Iroquois had traded furs at McLeod Lake post for much needed ammunition. They were part of an advance HBC party trying to convince the natives on the Pacific slopes to trade with the HBC.¹³⁰ Hence, the Iroquois, brought in to teach others by example, now posed a threat.

The Hawaiians

IMAGE 50 Artist's rendering of Kanaka Village, Fort Vancouver.

The Hawaiians were making their mark during this time as well. Because of the paucity of surviving NWC records, however, it is difficult to determine the exact number who worked on the Pacific slopes or those who joined the PFC and continued working into the NWC regime. A few can be followed. John Cox had put down roots. People like Joshua who had come on the ship Beaver were last seen heading east with the overland brigade in 1814 and were not heard from again. Others present a clearer picture. Hereea and Como (aka Henry Como) who joined in 1817 and 1818 respectively broke the usual pattern by spending considerable time in the interior. Kaharrow and Keekanah who had joined in 1817 lived out their lives on the Pacific slopes closer to the coast. Some went back. Frank Kanah, who joined in 1814, worked on the coast eventually rejoining his Hawaii family in 1831. Similarly, Ottehoh worked twenty-two years, and Tourawhyheine thirty years before returning to Hawaii and their respective families. Mackaina and Moumouto who both arrived in 1817 chose to settle in the Fort Vancouver and Willamette areas. Peeopeeo chose the familiar Fraser Valley as his future home and the home of many of his descendants.

Resistance and Overcoming Boredom

With such a disparate group of people working together, challenges to the NWC and officers came in many forms. One of the most creative was a Russian blacksmith by the name of Jacob. He gave new meaning to sheer audacity. After arriving at Fort George in 1816 in irons aboard the Colonel Allen, having been charged with plotting to kill the captain, he showed enough contrition to cause his release to the blacksmith forge. While there, he managed to convince eighteen people, most of whom were Hawaiians, to desert and head off to California with him. The deserting group was pursued by an interpreter and five Indians who managed to convince all but Jacob to return. Not to be outdone, Jacob came back at night and robbed the stores. He returned again in broad daylight, this time disguised as a native woman as part of a plan to attack the post. As no inducement would bring him back and because he was breeding disaffection amongst the natives, he was kidnapped and brought back to the fort, put in irons until the autumn and shipped out.¹³¹

Not all resistance was as extreme. Usually cajoling or reason was enough to persuade workers to return. For example, when James Keith was told that the men could no longer go on and were exhausted, he chose to see reason rather than interpret the men's action as an act of rebellion.¹³² Sometimes when the challenge became a threat, brute force was required. When the six foot Basil Lucier challenged Finan McDonald, himself not a small man, and threats became challenges, McDonald challenged Lucier to fight with a "musket, sword, or pistol." When Lucier said his only weapons were his fists, McDonald called his bluff, stripped off his coat, called him un enfant de chienne, and challenged him to fight comme un polisson at which point, feeling outflanked, Lucier returned to work.¹³³

IMAGE 51 “December – soft snow misery” (1870s). Sketches of Hudson Bay Life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880. UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

Not all resistance was conflictual for resisting boredom in passing the winter sanely for the clerks was a continuing inventive process. While letters were slow in making their way to the posts, Cox and McKenzie discussed various aspects of the church, monks and poets, writers, the various ways to cook food. Even haggis.¹³⁴ The mixed-descent son of William McGillivray, Joseph McGillivray, pined for the days in Montreal that roared with life, drums, parades and flying flags. He found his pork, arrow-root, taro-root, tea and coffee without sugar to be tasteless. The only flavours he could derive were from his strong souchong tea and molasses.¹³⁵ For the ordinary voyageur, it was a matter of smoking, singing and spinning tales, a coping mechanism built up over the centuries of the fur trade. For Harmon ensconced at Stuart Lake the temporary absence of his conversation partner was difficult.¹³⁶

One of the ways to combat boredom was the use of circulating library books for those who could read. As Harmon expressed, one fifth of the time was engaged in trading and four fifths of the time at his disposal. Reflecting in May 1813 he made the best out of each book that he read:

there are few Posts where they are not tolerably well supplied with Books but it is true they are not all of the best kind, however, there is something to be learnt to our advantage out of every Book when read with due attention—and I often think that were I deprived of a few I have I should experience many an unpleasant & solitary hour, for even with their aid I but too often feel moments of deep melancholy.¹³⁷

For the more educated, such as Joseph McGillivray, not having sufficient library books at Fort Okanogan in February 1814 made him pine for intellectual company as it appears his French Canadian and Hawaiian company were not sufficient stimulation. He pleaded to Ross Cox in a letter:

This is a horribly dull place...The library wretched, and no chance of my own books till next year, when the Athabasca men cross the mountains. If you, or my friends at Spokan, do not send me a few volumes, I shall absolutely die of ennui.¹³⁸

Nonetheless he survived on the Pacific slopes with his mixed descent wife, writing an insightful and now historically valuable report describing Fort Alexandria in 1827.

For the nimble witted Irishman Ross Cox, as his share of the “travelling library was on too small a scale to afford much intellectual enjoyment” he turned the situation into a game. As the library consisted of one book of hymns, two song books and Darwin’s Botanic Garden,¹³⁹ which he wanted to burn as it reminded him of his icy remote condition in the winter of 1815-1816. He made the best of the first three. As the French Canadians could not join them in the English hymns, the English speakers took great joy in mangling the only three they could manage, “Yankey Doodle,” the “Frog’s Courtship,” and the “Poker.”¹⁴⁰

Because of the paucity of fur trade reading material, the songs grew in content, becoming the basis for puns and double entendres when they weren’t reciting details of their school-boy adventures and pranks. Above all, the library kept the men from distraction. By the summer of 1816 Cox was fed up: “Horse-racing, deer-hunting, and grouse-shooting were pleasant pastimes enough, but the want of companionable society rendered every amusement ‘stale, flat, and unprofitable.’”¹⁴¹

Of course there were minor attention grabbing distractions. For example, on April 11, 1814, when the serious minded Harmon was busy writing letters, he failed to notice that his roof was on fire and was saved by his staff before it advanced too far.¹⁴²

Over the years, of course, the libraries grew in size and helped many fur traders pass long, dark, and cold winter hours (see Appendix: What Fur Traders Read).

Building, Constructing and Repairing Posts in the Summer

During the warmer months there was much more to do, for all were involved in building and other activities. In the spring of 1816, for example, all hands were busy re-building the various buildings of Fort Okanagan (see Appendix: Forts and Posts). In fact, for the forward thinking Cox everything pointed to the site to be good for future settlement.¹⁴³ During the rebuilding time, they feasted on “salmon, horse, wild-fowl, grouse, and small deer, with tea and coffee.”¹⁴⁴ They had to work around intense heat and mosquitoes which were kept away by smoking pipes or burning rotting wood in iron pots. Any rattlesnakes they found in the buildings or their beds, they turned into meals providing the serpents did not bite themselves first, poisoning their own meat.¹⁴⁵

The building of one fort, Fort Nez Perces (Walla Walla) in July 1818, on a nexus point of trade and cultural activities was an important construction. It was meant to be the staging point for future Snake expeditions but, as the area was important to the natives, there was considerable resistance to the setting up of the post. The French Canadians who started work on it were intimidated into suspending their work. After they had constructed a temporary enclosure, the twenty-five Canadians, thirty-two Owhyhees, and thirty-eight Iroquois felt more secure.¹⁴⁶

Illnesses and their Cures

Clerks and officers were not only overseeing the construction of new posts, they often had to fill in for the absent doctors in the region. Given their inability to retain steady doctors, the NWC was fortunate that these people were able to carry out some basic medical treatment using a variety of approaches. According to Cox, the main trading posts were:

supplied with well-assorted medicine-chests, containing books of directions, lancets, & c. An assortment of the more simple medicines is made up for each outpost; and as each clerk must learn how to bleed, we generally manage, between low diet, salts, castor oil, opodeldoc, friar's balsam and phlebotomy, to preserve their health unimpaired, and cure any common accident which may befall them.¹⁴⁷

IMAGE 52 Amputation instructions from Charles Bell's Illustrations of the Great Operations of Surgery, Trepan, Hernia, Amputation, Aneurism and Libotomy. London: Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, 1821. Plate X.

Still, clerks and others had to treat themselves in the field. For example, in 1814 it took a month for Ross Cox to get over severe sunburn and eye damage he received from scorching blinding sun rays from the partially melted April snow.¹⁴⁸ Frostbite was always a problem and the painful but best cure was to rub the affected area with snow some distance from the heat of the fire. A few years before, one clerk by the name of Campbell at an unknown location didn't take the advice and died after gangrene set in.¹⁴⁹

Sometimes the clerks had to perform services outside the company sphere; however, there was always a danger in doing this as a well-meaning clerk could be accused of causing the death of a person and be likewise killed. On October 15, 1815, Harmon was presented with such a dilemma when natives sent for him to cure a young woman who was dying. When the reluctant clerk found her, so the Carriers assured him, they knew she was dying so he administered Tarlington medicine to relieve her pain. She died several days after but her relations said that a certain Indian with his magic had been the cause and Harmon was exonerated.¹⁵⁰

IMAGE 53 Illustration for operation for an aneurism from Charles Bell's Illustrations of the Great Operations of Surgery, Trepan, Hernia, Amputation, Aneurism and Libotomy. London: Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, 1821. Plate XVI.

Sometimes during this period the NWC drew on the help of natives to cure one of their own. When one of the proprietors brought his mixed descent wife from Forts des Prairies to Fort George, "she fell into a deep consumption." Fearing she was dying in the damp climate, her husband sent her to the much drier Fort Okanogan thinking the more familiar climate might cure her. However, her hair continued to fall out, her eyes sank and she became a walking skeleton. An old Indian, upon seeing her, said he knew how to cure her. To do this, he killed a dog, opened the belly and placed the legs and feet of the patient inside. When the dog became cold, he took them out and wrapped them in warm flannel. This was followed by the patient drinking a concoction of bark in a glass of port wine. He repeated this procedure for the next thirty-two days until almost every dog in the area was killed. The fortunate woman gradually began to improve and, when Cox saw her in 1815 at Rainy Lake, she was in perfect health.¹⁵¹

Marriage and Families

During this period and beyond, native and mixed descent wives played a pivotal role in the survival of their fur trader husbands. Some wives were undoubtedly brought in from the east of the Rockies, others acquired locally. Some marriages endured beyond the traditional and familiar geographic territory of the wife. Alexander Ross, who spent considerable time in the Okanogan, for example, paired up with an Okanogan woman for life and together they had thirteen children living out their lives in the Red River area. As Daniel Williams Harmon was about to leave the Pacific slopes, partly driven by a religious conviction, he resolved to take his wife and family with him giving her the choice of staying in Vermont or to leave if she didn't like it. If she were to stay, he would marry her formally. Obviously the bonds of affection had grown and he didn't want to leave her in the Carrier area where "widows" were treated very cruelly.¹⁵²

Fur traders often married native women of the same status as themselves for political, social and economic reasons, sharing class privileges. In 1813 Duncan McDougall married "Ilchee," a daughter of Comcomly, chief of the Chinooks. In 1817 when he left, McDougall did not take his wife with him and Ilchee moved back into her class level by marrying a Chinook Casenove who succeeded Comcomly on his death in 1830. Such marriages of expediency served an immediate purpose but, as can be seen with Alexander Ross and Daniel Williams Harmon, bonds sometimes grew stronger over time. Officers married daughters of chiefs; lower status traders married lower status Indians. Such a visible class equivalency was particularly important in the initial stages when the fur trade was setting up in an area. Native and fur trade order and status was visibly

IMAGE 54 HBC employee H. Bullock Webster commented in the 1870s: “We generally get in good supply of provisions for Xmas – and the Indians as a rule bring in all the “luxuries” of the season such as moose nose, reindeer tongue, beaver & wild geese – also fresh trout caught under the ice with nets.” “Buying Provisions for Christmas” (1870s). Sketches of Hudson Bay Life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880. UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

maintained for all to see. Sometimes marriages were expeditious, done to patch over severe miscalculations. In 1819, when a NWC employee was killed by a Cowlitz and NWC retaliation resulted in the death of twelve largely innocent Cowlitz, some quick moves had to be made. To patch up alliances, Peter Skene Ogden had to go through a marriage ceremony with the daughter of a Cowlitz chief.¹⁵³

For the ordinary engaged marriages anchored the fur traders both socially and physically. Socially such marriages carried privileges in both the fur trader and native spheres. Physically, there was a bond of security between the two communities. However, along with the security offered by these marriages came obligations and loyalties that were sometimes tested as they were played out in later years. Fur traders had to take sides in internecine warfare and had to pay dowries, etc. Nonetheless, when the average fur trader eventually put down roots and settled, it was often to the traditional territory of his wife.

The End of the North West Company and its Monopoly

In the latter years of the seven-year monopoly NWC reign, two events took place signalling its demise. The first was the 1818 Convention which stipulated that the area was shared jurisdiction between the USA and England. One of the first moves to put this in operation was the 1818 restoration of property seized during the War of 1812. Fort George [Astoria] on the south bank of the Columbia had been symbolically seized on December 1, 1813 by Captain Black of the HMS Raccoon. It was likewise symbolically returned in a ceremony in October 1818 when HMS Blossom arrived at the mouth of the Columbia with both British and American officials on board. The American flag was raised but as soon as the vessel left, NWC business went on as usual, the import of the ceremony having no effect on the day to day affairs of the Montreal company. The other was the 1816 Seven Oaks massacre, the violent culmination of the HBC-NWC rivalry, which took place at distant Red River. After countless lawsuits and countersuits and the death of Lord Selkirk, the only resolution was to eliminate the HBC-NWC rivalry by amalgamating the two companies. And so they did in 1821. The winner, the HBC drew on some of the characteristics of the NWC and from 1821 was to be the dominant force on the Pacific Slopes for the next fifteen years. The HBC was left to deal with claims of sovereignty.

1821-1825 – The Transition Years

New Post Erected, 1821-1825 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts)

New Caledonia Area

1. Fort Babine (HBC) 1822-1971

Kootenay River Area

1. Kooteney Post (HBC) 1821-1871

Flathead Area

1. Fort Flathead/Saleesh House (HBC) 1821-1847

The Columbia River Area

1. Fort Vancouver (HBC) 1825-1860
2. Fort Colville (HBC) 1825-1871

Land Based Fur Trade Ships Active on Coast 1821-1825 (see Appendix: Ships)

Houqua (1822); Lively (1823); Onwhybee (1822-25+); Vigilant (1824)

The years 1821 to 1825 were years of transition for the fur trader on the Pacific slopes. The cut-throat trading and real wars between the HBC and NWC had come to an end with the HBC as the clear victor with the amalgamation under the Deed Poll of 1821.¹⁵⁴ Under the new set of rules the HBC officers who had received salaries and bonuses were now to share in the profits, just as the old partners of the NWC had. More problematic was expecting former adversaries, whether officers, clerks, voyageurs or labourers, to work harmoniously with one another. Former NWC men like Peter Skene Ogden and John McLoughlin had to be gradually integrated into the HBC regime on the Pacific slopes. It was not an easy changeover as all fur trade employees west of the Rockies had worked for the NWC. Large numbers of people had to be eventually let go; some became freemen on their own and others simply returned to their original homes.

Life in New Caledonia

Life in New Caledonia continued in much the same way as, in the area, it was considered business as usual. Attrition of personnel was difficult to ascertain because of the paucity of records. Desertions sometimes occurred but humiliating punishment for Paul Guilbeau's desertion from McLeod Lake Post on October 11, 1823, for example, was memorable. Two days after his desertion he was brought back by George McDougall and John Tod, leading Guilbeau by a cord tied to his neck.¹⁵⁵ There is no record of him deserting again. He was in for the long run but eventually died in California in 1849.

For all intents and purposes, houses continued to be built, gardens planted, and charcoal made in charcoal pits. It was a lengthy process for on November 7, 1823, it was reported that charcoal being made in the pit was almost done, but that Hyacinth Desloges (Lavigneur) would "still require to remain there eight days to finish the whole."¹⁵⁶ Since much charcoal was needed, considerable time was spent making charcoal in a "coal furnace" or "charcoal furnace." If in the pit of tightly packed logs the fire started at one end was too hot, the charcoal would disappear. If the logs were too wet, the state of charcoal could not be achieved. The whole process kept the engagés busy.

Repairs went on throughout the year. In May 1823 Etienne Roy hauled in wood for Hyacinth Desloges to square for the flooring of the store as most of it had become rotten.¹⁵⁷ During the winter repairs continued to be made, for at the end of November 1823, Hyacinth Desloge arranged the hall door while Martin the blacksmith worked at the bellows all day. An example of the diversity of jobs can be seen a few days later:

Paul Brown repairing old Sledges, Martin at last finished the Bellows, made two cramps for the Door of the present Salmon Store and prepared old Steel to make a Drawing Knife to plane Sledges with.¹⁵⁸

During the spring, when the sap was flowing, birch rind would be peeled for canoes and resin collected, refined and mixed with charcoal and tallow for waterproofing. Getting good bark at that time was always challenging and experienced people like Waccan, one of the Picards in the area and J. B. Ettue were sent out. Sometimes enterprising native women would arrive with sap used for patching and would be awarded with beads.¹⁵⁹ Other times when natives appeared with more valuable items, such as a sail that had been lost from clerk Thomas Fleming's canoe they were rewarded handsomely with "a Pair of Leather Leggings and half a foot of Tobacco."¹⁶⁰

Large clinker built modified York boats were constructed to haul goods over lakes and rivers. Building such boats was a combined effort of labourers sawing boards and blacksmiths making nails. Such was the activity in the spring of 1825 at Fort St. James.

The sawyers have for some time passed, been employed sawing Boards & Planks for two Batteaux, and the Smith is making nails for the same purpose – the only thing he is good for.¹⁶¹

IMAGE 55 Seminal events were duly celebrated and a description of such an event, probably at Fort St. James, illustrates a continuity of such celebrations; however by 1870 it shows a shift in tone and attitude now that the area was part of a greater Canada. HBC employee and artist H. Bullock Webster described the event: "Those who are lucky enough to be able to leave their forts & go to Headquarters for Xmas have lots of fun, amongst other things there is invariably a "Ball". All the voyageurs & labourers &c are invited together with their wives and daughters (all halfbreeds as there are no pure white women so far north). The dancing consists entirely of jigs and reels & the music a violin and drum. All the women sit on one side of the room and men on the other. The men chooses his partner dances the jig or reel & then takes the "fair one" back to her side of the room. The women never utter a word and allways look as demure & serious as possible (when alone tho' quite the reverse). The men on the other hand yell all the while they dance & give vent to the most fearful war whoops. The dresses are most amusing. The women with the beaded leggings & gorgeous silk handkerchief on their heads & the men in the flashiest of leggings and beautifully worked deerskin coats. They all wear moccasins." Sketches of Hudson Bay life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880, UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

In 1825, caulking it in the fall, probably after a summer of runs down the river, fell to Jean Baptiste Jolibois.¹⁶²

Dogs continued to be the main form of transportation, particularly small travois and sledges. Ownership of dogs was sometimes ephemeral, as dogs would follow different people from one post to another.¹⁶³ As there was often a shortage of food, dogs were often sent from one post to another which had a better supply.¹⁶⁴ Of course, when food became short, the dogs themselves were often killed for meat, although, if they were killed unnecessarily for food, the men would be chastised.¹⁶⁵

Although horses had been on the plateau area for generations before the arrival of the fur traders, there is no indication that they were regularly used by the fur traders in central New Caledonia other than at Fort Alexandria and Thompson River until 1823.¹⁶⁶ However by June of that year, they were actively hauling

timber¹⁶⁷ and by August the men were harvesting hundreds of bundles of hay.¹⁶⁸ Horses were brought from the south but not all could make it and some would arrive in emaciated condition.¹⁶⁹ For the fur traders, sometimes the horses would wander from the pasture and the workers would spend up to half a day trying to find them.¹⁷⁰

Obtaining food continued to be a problem for the fish runs were sometimes late or absent. The natives were the main suppliers of fish but the HBC also set its own nets with marginal results. To supplement the diet, gardens were planted. During the short growing season of New Caledonia, gardens would be ploughed in April with tin covered wooden ploughs, which frequently broke.¹⁷¹ In May the seed potatoes saved from the previous winter were planted and fertilized with recycled manure. Planting of turnips, barley, onions, peas, carrots, beets and cabbage followed. Fences were built around the gardens to keep in the animals but not enough to keep out the black flies and ground squirrels. Journal entries in June and July of 1820 revealed a state of anxiety over the progress of the gardens:

There are a kind of small Black flies that destroy all the cabbages who were coming along remarkably well. Sowed some raddish seed. Owing to the ground itself not having been hoed, the potatoes do not come on so well as I have seen.

My cabbage come on finely and so does everything else except the Turnips, very few are come up the seed being damaged & they being sowed in bad ground. The small Black flies have almost eat up the whole of those that came up, therefore I apprehend we will not have any.¹⁷²

Sometimes a frost in June or July would ruin a crop of potatoes although those grown inside the palisades or by the gates had a better chance of surviving. The men and native women would help with the harvest from August to October.

Much time was spent building and repairing structures, chinking the walls with thick mud and brightening the inside with an application of a finer lighter clay to reflect the much-needed light. Planks turned out in the saw-pits would be used for floors. As buildings were repaired fairly frequently, plastering and mudding was done regularly.

During this period, native internecine skirmishes continued to be of concern to the fur traders for fear of being caught in the crossfire and revenge of relatives. Avoidance was a survival technique as was pacification. Sometimes natives deemed friendly to the trade would be given refuge inside the posts. For imminent threats, all fur trade employees would retreat to inside the stockades and man the bastions.¹⁷³ Occasionally native hostilities manifested themselves inside the stockade. For example in the summer of 1823, Joseph Bagnoit and Belone Duplante were killed inside Fort George as they had threatened to reveal to James Murray Yale that his wife had not been faithful. Consequently, the post was shut down completely both for protection and as a lesson to the local natives who had come to depend on the post.

Celebratory times also continued. The usual Mardi Gras was one such occasion. On February 6, 1824, 450 salmon, along with beans and turnips arrived at Fort St. James, in time for celebration. The feasting began two days later on Tuesday:

This morning The men at Day light Saluted me with a fair Volley of Musqueting when they were invited into the Hall and treated with Shot (Suet?), Spirits and Cakes after which I presented them with a Keg of reduced Spirits in Mr. Stuarts name to drink to the Company's Health, they then retired to their Houses and sometime after invited me to partake of their Breakfast which I did and after they had sung a few songs I left them to themselves – In the Evening I invited them into the Hall which a few of them at least those who were not in liquor and felt inclined to dance accepted off and passed an Agreeable Evening Dancing & Playing until about midnight when they decently retired not one that came in to the Hall leaving it in the least deranged – and I am pleased to be able to remark that I have every cause to be satisfied with the whole of their comportment during the Day – Quâ and several of the Indians of the Village came in the morning but as they gave but little assistance – I gave them a few glasses of reduced Rum and gave Quâ a Quart of weak Rum at 2 foot Tobacco to go and Smoak at his lodges as I did not wish to have them about the Fort while the men were drinking.¹⁷⁴

George Simpson's Visit and the Sorting out of Personnel

George Simpson, the ambitious Scot who had been recently hired as governor of the Northern Territory, had a clear intent to make a renewed HBC more profitable when he made his first visit to the Pacific slopes. In 1824-1825 as he used the Kootenay and Columbia Rivers in his first journey to explore the contentious Columbia area,¹⁷⁵ New Caledonia was not part of his itinerary. Personnel were still in a state of flux, some later deserting in Snake Country for better prospects. As well, the American fur traders had advanced into the Rockies and were threatening to encroach on the HBC monopoly.

In the lower Columbia, even though many NWC employees signed up in the area to continue with the HBC,¹⁷⁶ the London HBC Governor and Committee considered abandoning the whole lower Columbia altogether. Through the persuasive powers of George Simpson, they were persuaded that they should not, mainly because the Americans would take advantage of the loss of monopoly control and move onto the Pacific slopes.¹⁷⁷ George Simpson, convinced of a profitable future on the Pacific slopes, came to the area essentially to whip the enterprise into shape or at least to make suggestions to that effect. He decided to move Fort George [Astoria] to the north bank of the Columbia River near the mouth of the Willamette but also build Fort Colville at Kettle Falls. The rationalization of personnel proved somewhat difficult.

Probably the hardest hit were the Iroquois. The 1816 NWC experiment to bring in large numbers of Iroquois to bring the company to a profitable situation was quickly coming to an end. By 1822-1823 with about sixty-five Iroquois in the area, a large number had already chosen to go their own way. Their choosing an independent path was prescient for in 1824-1825, while George Simpson was wintering over at Fort George [Astoria] and musing over future operations, he spoke of the “useless Iroquois” about the place.¹⁷⁸ As almost all Iroquois had come from the Montreal area, the seat of the NWC, their retained loyalties were problematic. One Iroquois Miaquin Martin, who had worked with Jaco Finlay, had already formed his own group (most of whom had joined at the same time in the Montreal area) to sub-contract to the HBC but his singular efforts were not to last.¹⁷⁹ The group disbanded in 1822-1823. Of the fifteen, eight quit or deserted for better prospects, four returned to the Montreal area, two later settled in the Willamette and the fate of one is unknown. Further to this fragmentation, almost half of the eleven men who disappeared into Snake Country in 1822-1823, either deserting or having been killed, were Iroquois.¹⁸⁰ The remainder were British, French Canadian and probably American.

Some Iroquois, however, escaped company strictures altogether and settled comfortably in the area. George Tewhattohewnie who had been in the area with the NWC in 1813 found he could function quite well separate from the company. By 1822 he was a freeman and the following year was located at Gray's Harbour with several slaves shooting sea otter. His possession of slaves suggests that he married locally inheriting his wife's slaves and hunting rights. He was still flexible enough to attach himself to a company for when the 1824-1825 Fraser River James McMillan expedition from Fort George was passing through, George took one of his several slaves whom he sent back to Fort George, and joined the group to explore for the future site of Fort Langley.

Given their trapping and hunting abilities, the Iroquois gravitated to the Snake expeditions. On the Snake expedition of 1824-1825 Ross was faced with “Canadians, half-breeds, Iroquois, and natives of different nations” and with the “consent of all” appointed the most influential person of each group to be in charge.¹⁸¹

IMAGE 56 Sir George Simpson. Painting by Stephen Pearce, 1857.

In the case of the Iroquois, this appeared only to reinforce their sense of independence. On May 9, 1824 he bubbled with frustration and resentment towards the Iroquois when he wrote in his daily journal:

These people "the Iroquois of Canada" surpass everything that is bad
They were the first to turn back on the voyage
They were the first to trade their ammunition with Indians
They were the first to sell their guns to Indians
They were the first to desert the party
They were the first to object to making the Road in the Mountain
They were the first to object to watching horses
They were the first to break through the rules of the 20th Octr
They were the first to play tricks about traps¹⁸²

From that point on Iroquois numbers gradually declined.

It wasn't only the Iroquois who were targeted as a troublesome group. George Simpson had a dislike for the mixed descent former NWC employees whom he felt "thoughtless" and "dissipated" and too loyal to their old employer. At the same time, he wanted to take in more young Scots to become junior officers; as well, he felt that the right class of French Canadians were a "superior class of Men."¹⁸³ The mix of people was changing.

During this period, the Sandwich Islanders saw a change in their status as well. Hawaiians who had been working along the Pacific coast since the 1780s, initially aboard ships, later on land, had always been available as labourers. The three dozen relatively young Hawaiians inherited by the HBC from the NWC at amalgamation¹⁸⁴ continued to be paid in food and clothing for the next two years. By 1823, having proven their dependability and trustworthiness, Chief Factor John Dugald Cameron recommended that the Hawaiians be paid £17 a year putting them on equal footing with the Canadian and European servants. However, this was met with protests from the other servants who insisted that the work done by the Hawaiians was in no way equal to what they were doing. George Simpson, who normally did not abide protest, listened and, in an act to save the company money and reach a consensus, reduced the pay to £10 a year which seemed to satisfy all at that time. In fact, he insisted that fifteen more Sandwich Islanders be added to the thirty-five already working for the HBC.¹⁸⁵

IMAGE 57 "Isles Sandwich: Maisons de Kraimokou, Premier Ministre du Roi, Fabrication des Etoffes": Alphonse Pellion, artiste, 1819 aboard the French corvette Uranie. Atlas Historique, Voyage Autour du Monde. Paris, 1825.

While recommending an increase in Sandwich Islanders, George Simpson also recommended an increase in French Canadians whom he considered "better adapted for Columbia voyaging."¹⁸⁶

The Scots, often in clerk or higher positions, tended to stay longer for their higher rewards if they showed competence. In New Caledonia it probably became obvious to well meaning William Scott McBean that he was not going to be promoted and so, after starting in 1821, stayed for his five year contract. John McDonnell stayed for ten years after starting in 1821. Similarly, the McDougall brothers, George and James, continued on through until 1830, James having served since 1806. Long serving John Stuart left in 1825. In the Columbia long serving clerks and officers were also leaving. In 1822, Donald McKenzie moved and later took on a position as Governor in Assiniboia. In 1825, long serving Alexander Ross also chose to leave and settle in Red River. Finan McDonald, who had been in the area since 1807, was preparing to leave for Upper Canada. Others had dug in for the long run. Archibald McDonald, who started in 1821 at Astoria, and who fathered Ranald McDonald, stayed until 1845. In 1824, former NWC man, Dr. John McLoughlin was parachuted into the Columbia to take over its management.

During the transition, regulations appeared for native spouses and mixed descent children.¹⁸⁷ Native and mixed descent wives and children had always been a part of the fur trade but some native women hung around the posts for security but made themselves unwelcome by being gossips and drawing on the scarce food supply (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [McLeod Lake Post]). John Stuart wrote in his 1823-1824 report after the murder of two employees resulting from the affairs of James Murray Yales woman:

I would fair hope that the Governor & Council of the Northern Factory will publish a law prohibiting the admission of native women into their forts -- Mr. Yale has already of himself discarded the one he had and so has Mr. McBean -- But there are still two at Kilmaurs who, in 1821, deserted the husbands Beds & left the Company's Fort, but was afterwards admitted in direct opposition to my wishes -- And she (as the sister of a woman that long resided with Bapt Boucher) having been nearly brought up at the Fort, and one that I known will cause me no Broils.¹⁸⁸

Still, records reveal that the New Caledonia posts were a hub of activity for men, women and children. Chief Trader William Brown at Fort Babine was living with a mixed descent woman but a previous native wife and child were still living in the post under his protection. Clerk James McDougall was living with a mixed descent woman and Mr. McDonell had a native wife and one child. Interpreter Jean Baptiste Boucher (Waccan) had three of his children living with him. John Stuart was married to a mixed descent woman with a child of his own and Joseph McGillivray's boy, who he had brought from the Columbia. In spite of this, John Stuart felt that there weren't enough women around to do the labour required.¹⁸⁹

In consequence of the concern of the burden of families on HBC profits, the July 1824 York Factory Council decreed that any officer or servant would have to sign an agreement before being allowed to take a woman and they would have to provide for them both during their service and after they left. At the same time, they were encouraged to take their children with them when they left the country.¹⁹⁰

This period also saw the construction of three new posts, Forts Alexandria replacing perhaps a small construction, Forts Umpqua (along Umpqua River, Oregon) and Babine (Fort Babine, B. C.). Winding out this period was the construction of two Columbia River posts, Forts Vancouver and Colville. They were to play a major role in the activities of the Columbia (see Appendix, posts).

Shipping arrangements were somewhat tentative during this period. The last of the American Perkins' vessels, the Houqua, arrived in 1822 with goods for both the old NWC and new HBC. From this point, chartered British vessels such as the Lively and Vigilant would carry HBC goods. The Onbybee, which had been trading on the coast since 1822, was going to play a larger role in the next few years.

This period also saw the entry of the Americans onto the Pacific slopes for the second time to share in the spoils of the fur trade. In 1822, Ashley & Company formed in St. Louis to exploit the Rocky Mountain area. In 1825, the Missouri Fur Company under William Ashley, unable to penetrate territory controlled by the Hudson's Bay Company, began the annual Rendezvous system straddling the Continental Divide.

IMAGE 58 As part of the sixteen years of annual Rendezvous from 1824 to 1840, six (1833, 1835-37, 1839-40) were held at the confluence of Green River and Horse Creek, west of present day Daniel, Wyoming. A sign commemorating the Rendezvous reads: 1824 Green River Rendezvous 1840. A market place of the fur trade, from the Mississippi to the Pacific, from Canada to Mexico, where trappers, traders and Indians came to barter for the first great resource of the west. Six rendezvous were held here, gathering not only furs but information of geographical importance to weld the final link in exploration of the new world. It is a tribute to the brave men, both red and white, who blazed the trails for culture and progress, and to the lowly beaver who gave it impetus. Commemorated – each year, the second Sunday in July. Sublette County Historical Society Inc. Photograph by author, 1992.

1825-1846 – Growth, Challenges and Adaptation

New Posts Erected, 1825-1846 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts)

New Caledonia Area

1. Fort Chilcotin (HBC) 1829-1844
2. Fluz-Kuz Post (HBC) 1844-1849
3. Connolly Post (HBC) 1827-1892

Flathead Area

1. Fort Connah (HBC) 1847-1871

Snake River Area

1. Fort Hall (CRFTC-HBC)
2. Fort Boise (HBC)

The Columbia River Area

1. Fort William (CRFTC-HBC) 1834-1836
2. Fort Shepherd (HBC) 1858-?

The Willamette River Posts

1. Champoege post (HBC) 1842-1861
2. Willamette Falls sawmill (HBC) 1843-1854

Southern Oregon Posts

1. Desportes' Camp (1826-?)
2. Fort Umpqua (HBC) 1836-1852

Coastal Posts

1. Fort Nisqually (HBC-PSAC) 1833-1869
2. Fort Victoria (HBC) 1843-?
3. Fort Rupert (HBC) 1849-?

4. Fort McLoughlin (HBC) 1843
5. Fort Simpson [Nass] (HBC) 1831-?
6. Fort Stikine (HBC) 1840-1849
7. Fort Taku (HBC) 1840-1843

Lower Fraser River Posts

1. Fort Langley (HBC) (1827-?)

Land Based Fur Trade Ships Active on Coast 1825-1846

SS Beaver (1836-1846+); Broughton (1826-1830?); Cadboro (1827-1846+); Chenamus (1842-1845); Chinchilla (1826-1828); Clementine (1839); Columbia [3] (1836-1846+); Convoy (1825-1836); Cowlitz (1841-1846+); Diamond (1843); Diana (1827-1837); Dryad (1826-1835); Eagle (1828-1834); Europa (1834-1836); Forager (1840); Ganymede (1829-1836); Isabella (1830); Lama (1831-1838); Maryland (1840); May Dacre (1834); Nereide (1834-1839); Omhyhnee (1822-1830); Prince of Wales (1845-1846+); Rasselas (1836); Sumatra (1837); Tally Ho/Chichagon (1826+); Valleyfield (1842-1843); Vancouver [1] 1827-1834; Vancouver [2] (1839-1846+); Vigilant (1824); William and Ann (1825-2189)

The twenty-one year period from 1825 to 1846 was an intense time for the HBC as well as others jockeying to claim the spoils of the Pacific slopes. Overseeing HBC management throughout was the recently appointed larger than life Dr. John McLoughlin. It was a time of predominantly HBC post construction carried out to sustain its monopoly position over the entire region even though the 1818 Convention had stipulated shared jurisdiction. With the ominous threat of the drawing of an international border, the posts were generally constructed north of the Columbia River, as the HBC felt the international boundary would fall along the river itself. During this period, the HBC trading monopoly was often challenged. From Americans sailing up and trading on the Lower Columbia River and Boston merchants setting up shop in the interior, to early settlers setting up their own cattle companies, challenges appeared on all fronts. Also into the mix came vanguard missionary thrust, a threat on an entirely different level. This was followed by a very large influx of American settlers moving in to claim their share of the Oregon region. For the fur trader, both active and retired, this was an erosion of a way of life. As largely passive by-standers they saw their loyalties and beliefs challenged.

Life Continues in New Caledonia

Far to the north in New Caledonia life continued in much the same way that it had before for the fur trader. Horses were in regular use in the trade, replacing dogs to some extent. This meant that stables had to be built, hay gathered and tack made for various uses of the horses. They were used for ploughing until the use of oxen in the 1840s. On occasion, horses would be killed for food when the fish runs failed. Occasionally horses would break from their corrals or when they were being transferred in groups from one post to another, and they sometimes reverted to a wilder state and refused to follow. As horses were most often bought from the Indians, local natives were sometimes responsible for the theft of them.

Natives were still key to the fur trade in New Caledonia as they generally hunted and trapped animals, bringing their furs, which their wives had stretched and treated, directly to the post. The indigenous people were also responsible for country produce which could be used at the post. According to Catholic missionary Adrien Morice, around 1835 the natives were bringing in birch bark, gum, sturgeon oil, pemmican, Indian rice, buffalo robes, snowshoes, dressed buffalo, reindeer, moose skins (mostly for windows) and buffalo tongues.¹⁹¹ In exchange, they would receive kettles, axes and knives, guns and ammunition, wearing apparel, and blankets. Hunters were given free ammunition.¹⁹²

New Caledonia wasn't without its own problems. Natives occasionally claimed the protection of the post especially when mutual adversaries of the HBC were killed or maimed by natives friendly to HBC aspirations. For example, in August 1829, a native by the name of Yintee from Babine Portage had obtained powder and balls from the HBC to kill a "villan" by the name of Saniah. After the killing Yintee and his mother, he claimed "protection of the fort" which was granted right away. The killing may have had some merit for the body lay untouched for twelve days before friends took it to Tatche and burned it.¹⁹³

Free Iroquois continued to be a challenge to the HBC monopoly as well as the indigenous people in New Caledonia. For the HBC, they were not only selling ammunition to the natives, something which the HBC also sought to control, but they were also undercutting HBC trade goods prices.¹⁹⁴ Others were concerned as well about the Iroquois taking so many of their furs. This appears to be the reason Tete Jaune (Pierre Bostonnais), his brother Baptiste Bostonnais and their respective families were killed in 1826 while passing a branch of the Finlay River.

Routines in Other Posts

Subtle changes had to be made in life at various posts. Life at Fort Langley required some adjustment after it was realized in 1828 that it could not be the Pacific Depot as planned, as the Fraser River was just too dangerous to carry supplies into the area and furs out of the interior. That position went to Fort Vancouver (see Appendix: Forts and Posts). To survive, Fort Langley had to diversify and so employees saw themselves branching out into a variety of occupations. Barrels were made for fish exports to various parts of the Pacific, trade items were created in the blacksmith's forge, animals were looked after and crops carefully nurtured.

IMAGE 59 "Our haircutter" (1878). Sketches of Hudson Bay Life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880. UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

Otherwise life carried on. For the married men, the wives would do the cooking. At noon on Saturday, the wives and/or married men would line up at the stores for their weekly supply of salted meat, sugar, tea, flour and a dram of rum. Any food in addition to this would have to be taken on credit. The wives would then prepare food on a daily basis. Even though direct trading with local natives was forbidden as all trade was to go through the company, occasionally diets were enriched with traded items.

Fort Langley was moved upstream in 1839 to accommodate its enhanced role of providing foodstuffs for Russian America as part of a Russian American Fur Company-Hudson's Bay Company agreement of that year. Dairy farms were also added and thriving agriculture supplemented fish exports (for a more complete list of duties, see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort Langley]). Children also worked but, unlike Forts Vancouver and Simpson, there was no teacher at Fort Langley to dispense formal education.¹⁹⁵

Life at each post took on distinct characteristics. At the staging post of Fort Alexandria daily routines functioned around the many brigade horses with constant repairing of corrals, saddles and tack being an on-going process. Supplies of hay had to be brought in and stored for winter feed. Grains were grown, ripened and harvested to supply the more northerly posts. Families formed, grew up and died at this Fraser River post. Men were often noted as repairing their houses in this dry zone. Here, tact and diplomacy were necessary as the natives were vigorous defenders of their fishing and trading rights making administration of the outposts of Forts Chilcotin and Fluz Kuz at times very difficult. Along the brigade route that had been developed was the Thompson River post which was deemed too valuable as a staging post to close down, and so kept alive by the sufferance of the HBC even though it was unprofitable. Life there was similar to that at Fort Alexandria, the biggest change to come when it took on the role as a supplier in the gold rush beginning in 1858 (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort Alexandria]).

The records are relatively silent on the Kootenay and Flathead posts but the fur traders adjusted to the semi-permanent nature of the posts. At this time, the area was administered from Fort Colvile and many of the accounts collapsed into those of Colvile, itself a bustling post.

Life in the Snake River Country

Life in the Snake Country was different again from that in the established posts. It was nomadic. The men who took along their families rode horses and stayed in their “lodges” or tents along the routes. A group would consist of over fifty men and their families, over two hundred traps and more than two hundred horses, a formidable sight. As they were also trappers, they had to branch out into various parts of the country often coming into contact with the natives who had previously trapped themselves. During this period, the starting point was Flathead Post where contracted servants and freemen with their families would gather in their lodges or tents to ready themselves for departure. There, amongst the clamber of different languages and an array of ethnicities, they would be issued guns, ammunition and traps for which they would later pay in furs. The wives, although rarely mentioned, were vital, making clothes, preparing food, setting up tents and skinning the catches. Simpson despaired at what he perceived as a lack of control as there was constant “gambling, buying chopping & changing of women Slaves Horses & Dogs with the Natives.”¹⁹⁶ He also despaired at what he perceived as layabouts at the posts waiting for the next expeditions, as he wanted to denude the Snake Country of all the Beaver “as fast as possible to discourage American trapping.”¹⁹⁷ For some engagés, the American presence presented opportunities and so in May 1825 a number of fur traders quit for the American party.

IMAGE 60 Former site of the Oregon Trail. Trail ruts visible. Photograph by author.

Sometimes the competitive spirit was set aside for co-operation of competing groups. On April 11, 1831, an American Fur Company party of fifty-seven men, under Lucien Fontenelle and Andrew Drips, had arrived and encamped in the same area. At that time freemen were still quitting the HBC, Fontenelle agreed that he would not supply them until they had paid their debts. Other times lines of loyalty were blurred, for on April 17 John Work had to struggle without much support to get back horses that were being taken:

Things appeared to become severe. F. Payette and the Halfbreed Indians and Sateaux St. Germain, a Sateaux Indian, and St. Kanotta, a Nippising Indian, took to their arms to support me. I am sorry I cannot say so of the Canadians of my party whether free or engaged men. P. Bercier and A. Letendre both freemen were the only ones that took to their arms. The others looked on with folded arms & left me to struggle for the horse, which I took back, without interfering notwithstanding some of the engaged men were called upon to do so.¹⁹⁸

Relations were not always this amicable, for at various Rendezvous fur traders got into scrapes with each other. One particular raucous event was the Rendezvous of 1832 at Pierre’s Hole, on the Teton River at the present day Idaho-Wyoming state border, where one thousand people and two thousand to three thousand horses and mules gathered. The mixture of competing interests, such as the American Fur Company and the Rocky Mountain Fur Company, and a variety of native groups not always friendly to one another were brought together in a volatile mixture. An undetermined number of fur traders and natives were killed.

Travel also exacted a toll in the Snake River Expeditions. One group, on July 3, 1830 was almost back to Fort Vancouver when, at the Dalles their canoe was caught in a whirlpool and twelve people drowned. As well as the loss of three hundred beaver pelts, all the written records of the expedition were swept away.¹⁹⁹

Maritime Activities

IMAGE 61 Launch of the North West America at Nootka Sound (1778), which serves as an example of a very early ship building endeavour on the Pacific coast. . By John Meares.

During the period 1825-1846, the maritime aspect of the land based fur trade came into its own. An ambitious ship-building program got under way in 1825 at the newly established Fort Vancouver where the men put together a thirty ton oak framed and pine planked sloop, the Broughton, too small for coastal service, so it was assigned to the Columbia River for a number of years. Around the same time a vessel twice the size was launched from the Columbia River post and named the Vancouver. Poorly built and in need of replanking right away as well as lacking in material for caulking, it was eventually put into service in 1828. In 1834 it ran aground at Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Islands. Because of the difficulties of obtaining the right material and having qualified people, construction of large vessels at Fort Vancouver was not attempted again until 1845 when the alcoholic James Scarth designed and put together the Prince of Wales, fondly dubbed, “the barge.”

The Americans, having prospered in the maritime fur trade, now instructed their vessels to explore the land based fur commerce. The Onhybee, which had been on the coast since 1822 was joined by another vessel of the same Boston partnership, the Convoy, at the mouth of the Columbia and, seeking to expand their commercial activities, took their business as far up-river as the Dalles. Having briefly traded in 1827 at the mouth of the Columbia for furs and cut spars²⁰⁰ it came back in 1829 along with the Convoy to give the HBC some serious competition. Bache Goodriche, an American fur trader who had established himself at the Dalles, intercepted furs coming downriver and ran them down to the Onhybee at the mouth. In late winter 1829-1830, Dominis sent men upriver to the Dalles to support Goodriche but HBC clerk James Birnie and eight men were much more persuasive and signed the American trader as an HBC servant. The new relationship was not to last for in the summer of 1830 Goodriche drowned along with eleven others.²⁰¹ As well, the presence of competition had forced McLoughlin to pay five times the price for furs. When one of the mates on one of the American vessels became seriously ill, he was boarded at Fort Vancouver for several months. It was at this time, according to Hall J. Kelley the advocate of Oregon settlement, that Captain Dominis gave away Kelley’s Oregon settlement plan to John McLoughlin. A devastating consequence of this last visit was the “intermittent fever” (probably malaria) that the Onhybee brought with it resulting in the death of three quarters of the natives in the area.²⁰² By comparison, very few fur traders died in the Fort Vancouver vicinity.²⁰³ The Onhybee did not return to the coast and has not been traced further.²⁰⁴

Those who died of the “intermittent fever” would have been buried at the Fort Vancouver graveyard. The records are short on burial rites prior to the arrival of the missionaries but a May 6, 1833 Fort Vancouver funeral for a servant by the name of “Plant”²⁰⁵ was recorded by William Fraser Tolmie:

attended Plant’s funeral—the procession made up by McL. [Dr. John McLoughlin], Cowie [C.T. Robert Cowie] & self & about 25 servants, Europeans, islanders & Canadians, set out from Plant’s house. The coffin unpainted, slung on pieces of canvas & thus borne by four men, passing through a pretty grove of young oak & other trees, we arrived a burial ground which is situated about a gunshot to N. of fort, in a fertile upland meadow greatly beautified by wild flowers & trees in flower. The funeral service read by the Govr. [McLoughlin] The great want here is the ground is not being inclosed, some of the graves are surrounded with palisades but the greater number are merely covered with stones & logs of wood.²⁰⁶

IMAGE 62 The Beaver, post HBC ownership, F. W. Howay, British Columbia from the Earliest Times to the Present, vol. II. Vancouver: S. J. Clark Publishing, 1914. Plate between pages 322-323.

As late as 1840, the Maryland was challenging the HBC at Willamette Falls. Many American vessels, such as the Chinchilla (1826-1828), Tally Ho (1826-1827), Diana (1827-1837), Europa (1834-1836) and Rasselas (1836+), serviced the Russian fur trade. Some, such as the Clementine (1839) poached and traded along the coast. The May Dacre (1834) supplied Nathaniel J. Wyeth in his Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company ventures and the Chenamus (1842-1845), a supply vessel, represented a transition to American commerce.

The HBC used a variety of approaches to keep their own vessels sailing and products moving. For example, the Lama (1832-1838), Dryad (1830-1835) and Ganymede (1830-1837) had made voyages under previous owners but were then purchased by the HBC. Others such as the Nereide (1834-1839), Eagle (1828-1834), Cowlitz (1841-1846+), Vancouver [2] (1839-1846), Columbia [3] (1836-1846+) and William and Ann (1825-1829) were based in the British Isles and made regular voyages to and from England over a number of years. Others such as the Vancouver [1] (1827-1834), Cadboro (1827-1846) and SS Beaver (1836-1846+) stayed almost exclusively on the coast. Not all were fortunate for the William & Ann (1829), Isabella (1830), and Vancouver [2] (1846) came to grief at the mouth of the Columbia as did the Vancouver [1] (1834) at Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Islands. Other vessels such as the Sumatra (1837), Forager (1840), Valleyfield (1841-1842) and Diamond (1843) were chartered when HBC vessels were not available.

IMAGE 63 Reconstruction at Fort Vancouver. Photograph by author, 2005.

Whether crew members came from a coastal or overseas vessel, there was some interaction once their ships were secured at Fort Vancouver or reached other coastal posts. Holds, which carried in supplies, had to be rebuilt to carry furs back to Europe. This could take several weeks and no doubt was done by crew-members as well as Fort Vancouver carpenters and other engagés. Some may have done jobs at the posts. Some crew members stayed behind to work on coastal shipping while land based fur traders also took to ships such as the Beaver which required two days of cutting of wood for one day of sailing under steam. Rebellious crews such as the group who rebelled on the Nereide in 1837 and the Beaver in January 1838 relied on the officers of Fort Vancouver and Fort Simpson respectively to help resolve the issues.

Some issues could not be resolved and that was the excessive drinking by the ships' masters. Captains John Minors was sent packing in 1830, Thomas Sinclair in 1833 and Charles Humphreys in 1846. Aemilius Simpson simply died from a failed liver in 1831.

The coming and going of these vessels had some impact the native population which felt that the spoils of unguarded vessels were ripe for the picking. One example would be the William and Ann and the Clatsop nation in 1829. On March 11, the William and Ann and all hands were lost (the captain, the mate, fourteen men and boys from England, and ten Sandwich Islanders) at Clatsop Point at the mouth of the Columbia. A Company vessel was sent down to investigate its loss and found the contents of the ship to be in possession of the natives. When they refused to give up their booty, the Company sent a schooner with fifty-nine men down to the village to shell it. This punitive action killed the chief and two men.²⁰⁷ When the small sixty ton Vancouver ran aground on Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Islands on March 3, 1834, the crew, fearing attack from the local Haida who had lit several fires indicating a large presence, jumped in a small boat and rowed to Fort Simpson. The ship floated free and the natives stripped the prize of everything. No record has been traced of any following punitive action against the Haida.

Conflict and Conflict Resolution

As in previous years, punitive action between 1825 and 1846 against natives ranged from diplomacy to violence. Even though the HBC was primarily an economic organization facilitating "the continual unimpeded movement of people and goods, it was sometimes necessary to take noneconomic actions."²⁰⁸ On January 29, 1828, for example, when five of a group of HBC servants were returning from the newly established Fort Langley by way of the Hood Canal, they were killed²⁰⁹ and a woman taken captive to be a slave. According to McLoughlin, the local Clallam "murdered them merely for the sake of their apparel & Arms & the murderers had Dances among themselves to celebrate the deed." In an act of bravado a certain Clallam had vowed that they would be ready for a fight, should the HBC exact revenge.²¹⁰ Word of the upcoming retaliation spread quickly and Columbia River natives from the Dalles to the coast offered to join the HBC on a revenge attack. McLoughlin turned down offers as doing so would exacerbate native –to- native internecine troubles and the employment of natives in the venture would make the HBC appear weak and unable to meet a challenge to protect itself. Instead, an HBC expedition of sixty-three people was sent out. The village of Dungeness was destroyed by cannon and burned, canoes destroyed and according to Ermatinger, twenty-five natives were killed.²¹¹

IMAGE 64 Cannon inside bastion, Fort Vancouver. Photograph by author, 1992.

Another event happened in 1828 which involved theft and humiliation resulting in murder. During the 1826-1827 Rendezvous, seventeen men had joined American Jedediah S. Smith as part of his 1826-1829 Southwest Expedition in and out of California. On July 12, 1828 in the Oregon Country on his journey north near the mouth of the northern Umpqua River [Smith River] a "Kelawatset" [Kuitsh] stole an axe which was forcibly taken back by Smith's men with a humiliating gesture, leading the culprit to believe that he was about to be hanged. On July 14, 1828 about one hundred incensed and humiliated Kelawatset were let into the camp and attacked the men there, killing fourteen of Jackson's men while three others plus Jackson managed to escape.²¹² One barely made it up the coast losing his clothes and knife to marauding natives but friendly "Killimaux" took him to Fort Vancouver. The survivors made it to

Fort Vancouver. Alexander McLeod was sent out to recover the horses and furs over a month, for which McLoughlin paid Smith generously. As punitive action would exacerbate violence, none was carried out. Smith stayed at Fort Vancouver until March 1829.²¹³

When punitive action or retaliation was delayed, often cooler heads prevailed and matters resolved themselves. After a Hawaiian by the name of Maniso had arrived on the Isabella, which sank at the mouth of the Columbia in 1830, he was sent up to Fort Langley to cut up fish for export. It was on one of his trips to the river that he suffered a seizure, stripped himself naked and wandered off. As his clothes were on the river bank but no body was evident, seemingly pointing to murder, there were calls for retaliation by the HBC servants. Calmer voices prevailed and in two weeks, Maniso, now a walking naked skeleton, wandered back into the post. The only casualty was Maniso's dignity and he was quickly sent back to Hawaii.

Sometimes punitive action was delayed for years. For example, on October 10, 1833 HBC engagé Joseph Richard, who deserted Fort McLoughlin, was stoned to death by some local boys. The gravity of the act got buried in subsequent action when a local chief was taken hostage in an attempt to secure Richard's release. This in turn caused the local natives to attack the HBC men and the whole matter had to be settled with gifts to the locals. In the meantime, the original matter of Richard's death rested and no punitive action was taken. Seven and a half years later, when George Simpson was visiting Fort McLoughlin on his third visit to the Pacific slopes, and it was revealed to him that Tsoquayou who had carried out the action was wandering around the post, Simpson "took measures for sending the fellow to a distance, as an example to his friends."²¹⁴ When Simpson returned to the post a few weeks later, he cryptically noted:

He was...soon to be removed for ever from his own people, as a commutation of the capital punishment which he so richly deserved.²¹⁵

Whether the punishment was actual banishment or another action has not been determined.

Fur trader's wives sometimes acted. Around 1841 Charles Ross' mixed descent wife from Lac la Pluie took matters into her own hands while looking after the Fort McLoughlin trade shop in her husband's absence. When local natives from the area drew some knives on her son, she grabbed a pike and chased them around the fort until she drove them out.²¹⁶ No one was harmed.

Fur trader James Douglas' wife treated a threat on her husband's life somewhat differently. According to a compilation of several slightly different versions of the story, in 1828 when James Douglas went into a native camp and executed a native who was involved in a murder of two employees of Fort George in 1823, the natives took matters into their own hands at Fort St. James and demanded compensation for the relatives of the deceased, something which Douglas himself refused. It was only when Amelia Connolly, his wife, threw them various items from the fort that they released Douglas.²¹⁷

Sometimes the rules of engagement were not straight forward and the men had to reach deep into the strictures of their own societies. Such was the case when dealing with sexually aberrant behaviour within the Company space. Around 1836 when the men working at the Fort Vancouver docks were repeatedly propositioned by a male native dressed as a woman, most were offended and the man was flogged for his "abominable proposals." In spite of these repeated punishments, the native kept coming back making the same proposals. Meredith Gairdner, the nearby hospital doctor who was also suffering from consumption, one day took matters into his own hands and, with the help of other nearby servants took the two-spirited native into the Company hospital and castrated him. Gairdner was called into account as he was told that this did not fall into his expected duties.²¹⁸ Other than this, there is no record of Gairdner being reprimanded further for this or for even his next act when, in the interest of craniometry, he crept into the graveyard and stole the skull of Chinook Chief Concomly and sent it to England.²¹⁹

A New Reality and Attempts at Schools for Children

Aside from the commercial threat to the HBC by water the next potentially serious threat came overland with the arrival of a Boston ice merchant, Nathaniel J. Wyeth. Stirred by the exhortations of New England promoter Hall J. Kelley²²⁰ for the USA to claim the Oregon through settlement, Wyeth arrived in the Columbia in 1833 in such a hastily and poorly organized expedition that he had to beat a quick retreat back to Boston.²²¹ Even though the expedition was more of a fizzle than a threat it brought about the beginnings of incremental change. One member of this expedition, John Ball, caught the attention of John McLoughlin who needed a teacher to instruct his son David to read, as well as other native and mixed descent boys whose parents had served the Company. This was a new departure. Although Ball stayed for only four months, the school was a success in spite of the fact that many of the children spoke a variety of native languages. His successor, Solomon H. Smith, being short of textbooks copied the only available arithmetic textbook by hand and taught his approximately twenty-five pupils English through “Murray’s Grammar” (see Appendix: What Fur Traders Read).²²² In 1834, McLoughlin toyed with the idea of employing officer’s wives, whom the Committee felt could be used as teachers.²²³ By December 1834 another teacher, Cyrus Shepard, was teaching about thirty-five young “scholars” the sciences plus religious instruction. By 1835 the curriculum had expanded to reading, writing, arithmetic, grammar, geography, religion and morality, concluding the studies by singing a hymn, after which they would go out and work in the post’s garden for the rest of the day.²²⁴

The school’s progress, however, began to unravel with the arrival of the Rev. H. Beaver and his wife Jane who considered the Fort Vancouver School their exclusive purview and that it was to be an extension of Church of England school learning. For the moral and religious aspect of the classes McLoughlin favoured Roman Catholicism whereas Beaver preferred Church of England doctrine inspired teaching. When McLoughlin heard about Beaver’s teaching in the classroom, he reacted by inviting those who had any French Canadian blood relationship to come to his house in the evening to receive Roman Catholic instruction. This only partially resolved the issue.

Over the next few years, because of the Catholic-Protestant in-fighting, as well as a charge that one of the teachers, John F. Robinson, had been molesting students, and the crowded conditions in which the students were boarded, HBC officers who had sent their children to the school withdrew them.²²⁵ In spite of the fact that in the spring of 1840 a large number of schoolbooks, alphabet sets, and spelling cards had arrived, in 1841 Lieutenant Wilkes of the US Exploring Expedition found the school to be a “small manual labor school”²²⁶ attesting to its evolved curriculum.

As an offshoot of the Fort Vancouver school, William Fraser Tolmie gave lectures to the local Klickitat starting in 1837 which the natives “attended in great numbers.” According to James Douglas this was successful in curbing crime amongst them.²²⁷

Apart from the HBC’s later role administering the Colony of Vancouver Island where it provided teachers, the only other post that had a teacher during the fur trade was Fort Simpson. Between 1840 and 1843, Edouard Alin taught at the school during the week, doing light jobs on Saturdays and reading the Bible in French on

IMAGE 65 Portrait of Nathaniel J. Wyeth.
“Nathaniel J. Wyeth And The Struggle For Oregon
(With Portrait).” Harper’s new monthly magazine.
Vol. 85, Iss. 510, November, 1892.

Sundays. Otherwise, the officers of the various posts often home schooled their own children or sent them off to be schooled at Red River.

Teachers Connected with the Hudson's Bay Company in its Role as Fur Trade Enterprise and Colonial Administrator on Vancouver Island

Name	Place	Years Active
Alin, Edouard	Fort Simpson	1840-1843
Ball, John	Fort Vancouver	1832-1833
Barr, Robert	Fort Victoria	1853-1857
Bayley, Charles	Fort Victoria/Nanaimo	1851-1856
Capendale, Ann	Fort Vancouver	1835-1836
Capendale, William	Fort Vancouver	1835-1836
Clark, Charles	Craigflower/Ft. Vic.	1855-1859
Edwards, Philip L.	Champoeg	1835
Finlay, Christopher	Nanaimo	1856
Kaulehelehe, William R.	Fort Vancouver	1845-1860
Kelley, Hall J.	visiting teacher	1834-1835
Pambrun, Andrew D.	tutor, teacher	1851+
Roberts, George B.	Fort Vancouver	1835-1836
Robinson, John F.	Fort Vancouver	1836-1837
Shepard, Cyrus	Fort Vancouver	1834-1835
Smith, Solomon H.	Fort Vancouver	1833-1834
Staines, Emma F.	Fort Victoria	1849-1855
Staines, Robert J.	Fort Victoria	1849-1854

HBC Monopoly Challenged on Land

New challenges emerged in 1834. Nathaniel Wyeth returned to Boston, organized a company on better footing and came west over the Rocky Mountains with fifty-eight men with plans for fur trading posts, a salmon fishery, a colony, etc., and sent a ship around the Horn to meet him at the Columbia once again (see Part 2 of Introduction: Companies [Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company]). This time he brought overland forty men who had signed up with him, two scientists and their attendants, two missionaries and four attendants and six independent trappers. With him came a new reality for the fur trader in the Oregon territory, an area which up to this time had functioned under the HBC. Wyeth's competition to set up a commercial venture, in spite of its failure from a string of bad luck prohibiting him from effectively competing with the London company, was a wake-up call for the HBC. Within a year, fourteen of Wyeth's men were lost through drowning and encounters with the natives. Others became ill, and consequently he returned east in 1836, a defeated man selling Fort Hall to the HBC. Even though the Convention of 1818 stated that the territory would be jointly shared, the HBC exerted its monopoly position putting Wyeth out of business in 1837. The HBC turned Wyeth's Fort Hall into a supply post rather than a fur trade post.

Missionaries and the Fur Traders

On another level, Wyeth's expedition brought in Americans, some of whom were to put down roots. Two of these were missionaries who were to be part of the new spiritual direction. Up to 1829, the spiritual guidance of the fur traders had been left to the officers of the fur trade companies or the people themselves. It hadn't always been like this, for from 1775 to 1795 Spanish priests had accompanied their central and South American Spanish vessels in their efforts to establish sovereignty and from 1799, Russian Orthodox priests abounded in Russian America trying to save the souls of the Aleut, Tlingit and stray Russians.

It was not until 1829 when Connecticut missionary Jonathan Smith Green arrived on behalf of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to explore the coast for the possibility of foreign missions, that the idea of proselytizing was renewed. It was all a bit much for Green, for after reaching Russian America in

March, he was appalled at the drunkenness, intertribal warfare and antipathy towards outsiders and said so in his published journal which was mercifully published much later in 1915.²²⁸

Starting in 1834, with the arrival of each missionary, the previously comfortable role of the fur trade employee and the HBC was becoming less so. Some missionaries carried doctrinal grudges against the Catholics while advocating American, and largely Protestant, settlement. First arriving in 1834 with the Wyeth Expedition were Jason and Daniel Lee. Jason had been chosen by American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to set up a mission in the Oregon Territory. After setting up their mission in the Willamette Valley, they carried on amicable relations with the HBC for several years. Being a Protestant beacon in an area dominated largely by majority Roman Catholic fur traders, the mission became a magnet draw for American settlement and, as a result on a trip east in 1838-1839, Lee asked Congress to extend protection to the settlers living there. Paradoxically, this more secular and political role served to distance Jason not only from the HBC but also his benefactors in the east. Because mission funds were being used for secular disputes rather than conversion activities, Lee was recalled to the east by the Home Missionary Board to justify his expenditures. Jason's brother Daniel recorded his experience with co-author Joseph Frost in Ten Years in Oregon, published in 1844.²²⁹

The Lee brothers were only the initial vanguard. Around the same time another travelling missionary generated considerable US interest in the area. In 1835 Rev. Samuel Parker came out to investigate the possibility of a Presbyterian Congregationalist Oregon mission. When he arrived at Fort Vancouver on October 16, 1835 John McLoughlin took pity on him as he looked much older than his fifty-five years, and provided food and shelter for him for the winter. When he returned to the East coast, his The Journal of an Exploring Tour beyond the Rocky Mountains, published in Ithica, 1838, proved so popular that five editions were published.²³⁰

Cognizant of a potential threat from largely American missionaries advocating American settlement, the HBC sought to bring out its own spiritual caretakers. The first were a married couple quite unsuited for the job. Church of England missionary Herbert Beaver and his wife Jane were sent into the predominantly Catholic fur trade in 1836 to render both educational (see above) and religious instruction at Fort Vancouver. After they arrived, they toyed with the idea of leaving right away but an 1836 petition from both Protestants and Catholics (who asked that he conduct his services in French)²³¹ urging them to stay had the right effect. Nonetheless, he despaired at the conditions:

No legal marriage, no regular Baptism, no accustomed rites of Burial; Men, for the most part, not practicing, and women totally ignorant, of the duties of religion.²³²

Apart from his complaints about lack of proper accommodation, adequate furniture and a variety of food appropriate to his station, Beaver's desire to impose religious order was starting to thin by November of 1836 when he found:

We could however cheerfully bear every inconvenience, provided no interference was exerted as to my clerical duties...the other day, I was shocked...at hearing that the scholars, by command, had been paraded on the River Beach, and sung there an hymn. Sacred music should only be used on solemn occasions, but it is made here a common entertainment of an evening, without the slightest religious feeling or purpose.²³³

Described on the one hand as "highly intellectual"²³⁴ and on the others as having "a feminine voice, with large pretensions to oratory, a poor delivery, and no energy,"²³⁵ Herbert Beaver was clearly out of his element. If conversion to the Church of England's way was the Beaver's goal, they did not succeed. Even though they managed to baptize 124 mainly children who were attending their school and perform nine marriages, many chose not to continue in Protestant rites as represented by the various American religious groups. The French speaking children Beaver baptised went on to carry on their religious practices in the Catholic Church. Of the adults that he baptized (Basile Poirier, Pascal Caille and Joachin Thibeault), none chose to get married under the English parson but within a few years went on to get married in the Catholic Church. However, if there was any question of converting Catholics to Protestants, those adult French Canadians who were brave enough go through Beaver's Church of England rites of marriage (Adolphus Chamberlaine, Amable Petit, Andre St. Martin and Francois St. Pierre) all got remarried in the Catholic Church within eighteen months.

There was, however, a greater continuity with English speakers who were more at home with the Church of England. Although a few of the children of the English speakers who were baptized under Beaver went on to participate in Catholic rites, none of the English speaking adults were remarried again in the Catholic Church.²³⁶ When it came to language and religion, people sought comfort within their areas of familiarity. During their two-year run at teaching, baptizing, marrying and burying people, the Beavers did not let Fort Vancouver hierarchy intimidate them. For example, Beaver openly chided McLoughlin and Douglas in a letter to Deputy Governor of the HBC, Benjamin Harrison, stating disdainfully that the two officers were living “in a state of Concubinage.”²³⁷ In spite of the pervading, palpable acrimony James Douglas felt charitable in 1838 insisting that the Beavers had “succeeded in awakening[,] a more general desire for religious knowledge.”²³⁸ However, when they departed on the Columbia in November 1838,²³⁹ they had made themselves so unpopular with most at Fort Vancouver that they were not missed.

At the same time, American missionaries were moving into Oregon territory with an aim to convert the natives. Marcus and Narcissa Whitman, sent out by the Presbyterian-Congregationalist American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions set up their Waiilatpu mission in 1836 in Cayuse Indian country. At the same time, Henry Harmon Spalding and his wife established the Lapwai mission in the Clearwater Country [Idaho], twelve miles from the confluence with the Snake River. There he printed the first books in the Nez Percés tongue in 1839. Congregational minister Cushing Eells and Elkanah Walker working for the American Board of Missions, began their Tshimakain mission between Spokane and Fort Colville in 1838. Not all were successful as Asahel Munger and his wife were sent overland by the North Litchfield Association of Connecticut in 1839 to bolster the Waiilatpu and Lapwai missions. Munger, frustrated at not being able to convert the Indians, lapsed into insanity and performing an act to emphasize his own martyrdom, drove nails through his hands that resulted in his death from gangrene.²⁴⁰

Jason Lee and his brother were not the only missionaries sidetracked from a conversion agenda. Others found themselves in head-to-head direct secular conflict with the fur traders. Alvan F. Waller was a Methodist who, in an effort to open a mission at Willamette Falls, pre-empted land adjoining that of John McLoughlin. A complex situation of overlapping claims and perceived HBC hegemony in an increasingly American populated land became the subject of much correspondence and legal action that carried on for years. McLoughlin eventually lost the claim to Waller, an American citizen who was claiming it in his own right, whereas McLoughlin, still a British subject had claimed it in the name of the HBC.²⁴¹

Mission doctors were also swept into the role of furthering American interests. Concerned over the lack of success of American settlers’ attempts to form a government in an area in which the HBC exerted considerable influence, Willamette Methodist mission physician Ira L. Babcock was elected supreme judge with probate powers at a meeting at the Mission House on February 18, 1841. On May 2, 1843, he presided over a meeting to choose a provisional government, forcing many settled fur traders to take sides in the jurisdictional issue.²⁴² The names of twelve of the fifty-two who voted for it are contained in the biographies.²⁴³ Not all historians agree on just who the fifty were who voted against it, but American historian Frederick V. Holman managed to trace the names of forty-one whose names appear in the biographies.²⁴⁴

Feeling largely ignored by the events that appeared to be overtaking them, French Canadian settlers who had begun settling in the Willamette Valley responded by taking matters into their own hands even though they had not seen a Roman Catholic priest since their days in Lower Canada or Red River. Partly in response to Jason Lee’s Methodist Mission in the Willamette Valley and news that a Church of England minister was on his way, they took the initiative on July 3, 1834 addressing a petition to the Bishop of Red River to supply a priest. As there was no response, they sent out a second petition in February 1835 to which they got a reply from Bishop Provencher saying that there were no priests available at the time and that one would be sent out as soon as possible. Relieved, the group with names of eighteen households representing about one hundred men, women and children in total responded with a letter of thanks to Provencher. The increasingly concerned group sent a second letter dated March 8, 1837 stating that they “have much neede of some Assistance from you for we have almost Every Religion but oure own...” also noting that they had built a chapel in anticipation of a priest’s arrival.²⁴⁵ Having got wind of the request, word from London on January 25, 1837 recommended against bringing in Catholic priests. They reasoned that placing priests so close to the Methodist Mission would cause conflict between the Indians and the two Christian factions, the subtext being that it would be bad for business. John McLoughlin, on the other hand, supported a Catholic station as it “would prevent American Missionaries acquiring influence over the Canadians.”²⁴⁶

Administrators in London acquiesced to advice from the field and two Catholic priests came with the annual brigade, arriving in 1838. The two, Francis Norbert Blanchet and Modeste Demers²⁴⁷ brought with them centuries of understanding of the lives of the fur traders and easily fit into the HBC mould that had developed in Oregon. Despite being urged by the HBC to set up in the Cowlitz north of the Columbia, they soon moved south of the Columbia where most fur traders had settled.²⁴⁸ As testament to their resilience, Blanchet spent thirty-two years ministering to the people in the area while Demers worked from the Willamette up into New Caledonia touching on many of the fur trade posts. In 1846, Demers was appointed bishop of Vancouver Island while Blanchet became an archbishop in Oregon, both publishing widely.²⁴⁹

On their way to Fort Vancouver where the two men arrived in November 1838 they were kept busy doing a whirlwind of marriages (legitimizing “natural” marriages) and baptisms down the Columbia touching at places such as Fort of the Lakes, Fort Colville, Fort “Okinagan” and Fort Nez Percés. Their first baptism at Fort Vancouver was a Louise “Tchinouk” who may have been ill at the time and in need immediate spiritual attention. However a week later, besides Catherine Humpherville, the priest F. N. Blanchet was able to baptize three of P. C. Pambrun’s children, marry P. C. Pambrun and Catherine Humpherville, while legitimizing five of their children. That same day, Modeste Demers performed the following two ceremonies, quite typical of the baptisms of the time:

This 8 December, 1838, we priest undersigned have baptized Marie, born the day before, natural child of Peter Wagner, engagé, and of Stens, Tchinouc, infidel. Godmother Catherine Russie who, as well as the father, has not known how to sign.

Mod. Demers, priest, Miss

This 8 December, 1838, we priest undersigned have baptized Rose, born the day before, natural child of Paschal Caillé, engagé, and of Louise, Kawitchin [Cowichan], infidel. Godmother Catherine Russie who, as well as the father, has not known how to sign.

Mod. Demers, priest, Miss.

The first Catholic burial at Fort Vancouver took place on January 11, 1839 “in a piece of ground reserved to serve as the cemetery for the Catholics of Fort Vancouver.” It was Louise Tchinouk, their first baptism.

It wasn’t until 1845 that the HBC became proactive once again, bringing in a Protestant minister who could administer to the mainly Protestant Hawaiians. The man picked for the job was William R. Kaulehelehe, the product of Kawaiahao church in Honolulu. He and his wife served HBC interests at Fort Vancouver from 1845 well into the 1860s. However, their trying to implement rigid, temperate behaviour made them somewhat unpopular with their fellow Hawaiians who so thoroughly enjoyed the secular life. They moved to Victoria with HBC interests and he spent his last years as an interpreter.²⁵⁰

Emerging Settlement and Shifting Political Realities and Adjustment

Even though the missionary presence to date had a minimal affect on the lives of the fur traders in the still disputed Oregon territory, the same can’t be said for the incoming overland settlers and entrepreneurs. As much as Nathaniel Wyeth was unsuccessful at challenging the HBC monopoly, Ewing Young’s fortunes were quite opposite. In 1834, Young and twelve others brought in two hundred Californian horses to Fort Vancouver, the sale of which John McLoughlin rejected as he felt that they had been stolen. Young then established a claim in the Willamette opposite Champoege and supplemented his income by distilling liquor. In 1837 he formed the Willamette Cattle Company and with ten others brought in six hundred head of cattle. Prosperous by the time of his death in 1841, the probating of his estate forced the issue of legal jurisdiction in the area.²⁵¹

Settlement by fur traders in the Willamette Valley which had started probably in 1829 with Etienne Lucier, was slow up to 1834 taking in a few people a year. Many had left the fur trade for their homes elsewhere. However, with Pierre Bellique, Nathaniel J. Wyeth, Ewing Young and Calvin Tibbets setting down roots that year an increasing number of people began to settle. While not all stayed, the count by James Douglas in 1838 underscores the true number there for he found twenty-three Canadians, eighteen Americans from California, etc., and ten clergymen and teachers attached to the mission for a total of fifty-one people.²⁵² However, two years earlier a petition by settlers to Red River had revealed almost one hundred mostly French Canadian men, women and children.²⁵³ Amongst the fur traders working in the Columbia and elsewhere, there was a “restless desire...to escape from our service to the Colony.”²⁵⁴ From 1840, a growing number of retiring fur traders (often with their families) staked out their claims in the Willamette: sixteen in 1840, twenty-eight in 1841, fifteen in 1842, sixteen in 1843, eleven in 1844, eleven in 1845 and ten in 1846. Nonetheless, this number paled in comparison to the Americans arriving by wagon train, rafts, etc. In 1839, Jason Lee had estimated that the American population was about one hundred but by 1843, it had risen to about 1500. It was double that in 1845. According to American historian, Oscar Osburn Winther, a new era had arrived and “to settlers and fur men alike a transition was rapidly and unmistakably taking place.”²⁵⁵

Loyalties aside, as settlers flooded the land, the former fur traders had to use whatever resources they could muster. People like Jean Baptiste Depaty McKay whom visiting American government agent William Slacum reported was the first settler in the Willamette,²⁵⁶ had much to lose. When American school teacher John Ball stayed with him in September 1833, he shared the one-room space with two of McKay’s wives (the third one being absent), seven children, four or five slaves and two or three hired Indians, along with several cats and dogs.²⁵⁷ McKay supplemented his lifestyle, certainly unorthodox by the newer standards, by selling furs and grain to the HBC. When he died, however, his descendants drifted back to the more familiar Umpqua region.

Others had marketable skills. Stone mason Amable Arquoitte, who had lived out his fur trade career in the Columbia, chose to settle in the Willamette. By doing so he was able to supplement his income to support a growing family by doing stonework for Fort Vancouver as well as selling furs and grains.

For people like the reasonably educated American, Osborne Russell, the path was easier. He came to the Willamette after working out of Fort Hall and having a religious conversion, arriving in time for a vote on a new form of government occurring in 1843. Even though he became a member of the Executive Committee, he didn’t make a land claim until 1845 and, still a single man, eventually moved to California where he spent the rest of his bachelor’s life.

In 1840, mountain man Joseph L. Meek sought out friends for security. He settled in the Willamette (a land claim near Hillsboro) close to his friends George Ebbert and Robert Newell. As well, he participated in the formation of the Provisional government and participated in the Cayuse War of 1848.

For Iroquois such as Charles Tchigte who had established themselves early in the Willamette, selling furs and wheat to the HBC from their farms helped supplement their income.

With the influx of people from the east came the inevitable sorting out of legal systems under which everyone was to function. Up to this time, the HBC, having held a monopoly position, functioned under its own charter powers, which by fiat carried the laws of England, plus the Canada Jurisdiction Act of 1803 which had been made available to the fur trade companies for the punishment of more serious crimes.²⁵⁸ It was easy under the first fifteen years of HBC trading monopoly in the area. That is why American fur trader Alexander Carson didn’t think twice when he wrote his will in 1829 signing everything over to fellow American William Canning. He deposited it at Fort Vancouver. Upon Alexander Carson’s death nine years later in 1838, probate by the HBC was a relatively easy matter under its charter powers.²⁵⁹

With the arrival of the American settlers, who were used to their own set of laws and were nurturing a sense of manifest destiny, considering that the United States was destined to extend west to the Pacific Ocean, there was a veritable legal vacuum. Into this vacuum stepped Jason Lee who, in 1838 had put aside his rather unsuccessful attempts at conversion of the natives for more temporal aspirations. According to historians Frederic William Howay, et al, the missionaries became “more traders and colonizers than missionaries” as they “were behind the annual crop of petitions and resolutions.”²⁶⁰ The first such petition, both reasonable and thoughtful, was signed in March 16, 1838 by thirty-six people who had chosen to settle in the Willamette. About half had some connection with the HBC, from being fully contracted servants in the past to doing part-time work for them.²⁶¹ Jason Lee, during his 1839 visit to the United States, took this petition with him as “A Memorial/Petition to Congress to Extend Jurisdiction to Oregon Country.”²⁶² Lee may have felt that this had fallen on deaf ears for a second petition was sent in the fall of 1839 to the Senate and House of Representatives – much more alarmist, and signed by sixty-seven people, almost twice as many as before.

This time, however, in a March 18, 1840 letter to John McLoughlin, the settled former fur traders, perhaps with a tinge of guilt, were beginning to have second thoughts about the tone of the language of the petitions and wished to withdraw their names. Of the eighteen who signed the letter (sixteen French Canadians and two with British names, Thomas McKay and William Johnson), all wanted to withdraw their names because of “unjust reflections on the Hudson’s Bay Company.”²⁶³ Three of the eighteen were sons indicating an intergenerational loyalty to the HBC.²⁶⁴ As Thomas McKay, John McLoughlin’s son-in-law, was one of the signers perhaps he had advised the French Canadians to consider upsetting the HBC. Alternatively, the recently arrived Catholic priests may have quietly spoken to their flock about the dangers of the American Protestantism. Residual loyalties to the HBC may have re-emerged. Perhaps it was a combination of all three. The records are silent on this.

By 1841 with Americans flooding into Oregon and quickly outnumbering the fur trade settlers of the previous decade, three meetings took place with a more serious intent. With Jason Lee taking on the role as chairman, the first meeting was held at the settlement of Champoege on Feb. 7, 1841. It was general in nature and discussed the need for the formation of some governing body. However, two days later, the wealthy settler, Ewing Young, died leaving no will, no known heirs and several debtors and creditors amongst the settlers. Now matters were not as easy as they had been with the Carson-Canning probate. Consequently a second meeting was held on February 17 with Lee once again officiating and the following day, at a meeting February 18, 1841 at Mission House, Ira Babcock was appointed supreme judge with probate powers. Former fur trade employee William Johnson was appointed High Sheriff and William McCarty, Pierre Belleque and Xavier Laderout appointed constables. What looked to be the formation of a government fell through at the third meeting on August 1, 1841 when they were advised by the visiting American Commodore Wilkes and John McLoughlin to await on a decision from the US Congress.

By the winter of 1843, the American settlers were vastly increasing, outnumbering the settled fur traders; as well, predators were attacking livestock. Such was impetus for another meeting. Consequently a gathering was held on February 1, 1843 at the Oregon Institute [Salem] to set up legal boundaries to keep out the wolves creating the first of the “wolf meetings.” With a more permanent organization in mind, a second meeting was held on March 6th which set in motion the organizing of a provisional government. At the third decision-making meeting on May 2, 1843, by a vote of fifty-two to fifty, the settlers voted to create a provisional government. Of the fifty-two who voted for the creation, fifteen had had some previous association with the HBC. The only former HBC employee of French Canadian extraction was Etienne Lucier. He had voted with his friend, Francois Xavier Matthieu. Matthieu was a fellow French Canadian who had participated in and subsequently escaped from the aftermath and possible jail term because of his participation in the unsuccessful French Canadian nationalist rebellion of 1837-1838. After arriving in Oregon in 1842, Matthieu stayed with and obviously connected with Lucier, enough for Lucier to loosen his HBC ties. For Lucier it was not a stretch. He had come overland with the American PFC in 1811 and had got his first taste of the Willamette in the winter of 1813-1814. After becoming a freeman in 1822, by 1826 he was raising horses in the area. When a subsequent employment contract with the HBC had come to an end in 1828 and the HBC did not want him settling in the Willamette without the protocol of returning to his point of origin, he packed up his family and returned to Lower Canada. While there, he failed to make the proper connections, and a frustrated Lucier and family returned to the familiar Willamette. Even though John McLoughlin took compassion on him and let him settle, Lucier no doubt harboured some lingering resentment, and so casting off memories of HBC dominance may not have been difficult for him. For the rest of the French Canadians, it was another matter. All voting settlers of French Canadian extraction living in the area, with the exception of Matthieu and Lucier, voted against the Provisional Government but it wasn’t enough to defeat the proposal.²⁶⁵ Its passing meant the beginning of a Provisional government that allowed the people of Oregon to pass laws, tax, build infrastructure and even authorize involvement in wars or uprisings. This was the new reality. The creation of the Oregon Provisional Government lasted through the boundary settlement of 1846 by the Treaty of Washington to the appointment of Oregon as a US territory in 1848; however, it took the arrival of the first governor in March 1849 to declare that US laws and government were in effect from that point on.

What did the new governmental structure²⁶⁶ mean for the former fur traders? Up to this point, the former fur trade settlers lived in a relatively free independent community and could work out matters between themselves. The American mountain men could reach a common understanding between themselves and the former HBC

McLoughlin had the hut that Williamson built removed on the basis that it was on HBC land. Cooler heads prevailed and the Executive Committee of Oregon assured McLoughlin that Williamson was in the wrong.²⁷⁶ A James Douglas private letter written March 5, 1845 to George Simpson revealed a sense of disorganization, for according to Douglas, the American arrivals were “branching out into every direction, and settling wherever fancy leads them” and they were itching for a fight.²⁷⁷

Outside Oregon, sentiment was also being whipped up against the HBC and the men it brought. Missouri Senator Thomas Hart Benton stated in the Senate, probably in 1844, in a moment of pure exaggerated puffery “that the Hudson’s Bay Company either by their servants or by the Indians over whom they had influence caused the murder of five hundred of their Citizens.”²⁷⁸ At the same time, he advocated that the only reasonable border that could be drawn was at the 49th parallel, unlike the Provisional Government which had expanded the claim of Oregon much to the north to 54 40, soon to become the rallying cry for James Polk.

In spite of the fact that in December 1843, the Oregon Legislature expanded the limits of Oregon Territory to 54 40 while at the same time confining the jurisdiction of Provisional Government to the south bank of the Columbia,²⁷⁹ the English from England showed considerable disinterest. It was no more evident than when the HMS Modeste visited the Columbia in the summer of 1844. James Douglas took the Captain and officers around the Willamette introducing them to anyone and everyone but the officers showed very little interest. Similarly the Canadians, “without displaying much enthusiasm, nevertheless, gave her Majesty’s Officers a warm reception” while the Captain showed a decided disinterest in their future.²⁸⁰ John Dunn, an HBC employee who witnessed evolving events, felt that the HBC was somewhat complacent in securing its claims as he considered they:

were content, not only with the possession of the country, as the chief partners, with the almost exclusive enjoyment of its trade; but rested on the consciousness of their just, moral, and judicious conduct as traders and occupiers under the right of imperial tenure.²⁸¹

The old ties of unquestioning loyalty of people like HBC clerks were also becoming tenuous and by 1845 they were looking after their own interests. Long serving clerk James Birnie bought one fourth of the shares of Albert E. Wilson’s sawmill that he set up at Cathlamet for, as James Douglas stated, “he took the plunge, in sheer despair of any thing being done for him in the service.”²⁸²

The HBC sought different ways to continue its power in the area. Along with the fact that many of the daughters of the French Canadian farmers were being trained by the nuns in Blanchet’s establishment at St. Paul, the Catholic Church was seen as an important and useful ally to the London company maintaining its position in Oregon. James Douglas, ever the businessman, urged Simpson to give greater support to the Roman Catholic missionaries, so that the HBC could “keep them in a state of dependence on our assistance.” As well, it would have the effect of “preventing the intrusion of foreign Priesthood” and make the Roman Catholic Church a devoted ally to the HBC “cause.”²⁸³ He also urged that the HBC should at all costs continue to be the main supplier in the area to the American newcomers, since the HBC would “lose caste” if it were to scale back its sales even though they were losing money having to give out much on credit to poor people who could not pay.²⁸⁴

In the meantime, life at Fort Vancouver continued as it always had. John Dunn’s 1840s description of Fort Vancouver and its adjoining Kanaka village in the late 1830s and early 1840s presented a picture of business as usual, tranquility and even domesticity:

The front square is the place where the Indians and trappers deposit their furs, and other articles, and made their sales, &c. There may be seen, too, great numbers of men sorting and packing the various goods; and scores of Canadians beating and cleaning the furs from the dust and vermin and coarse hairs, previous to exportation.

Six hundred yards below the fort, and on the bank of the river, there is a neat village, of about sixty well built wooden houses, generally constructed like those within the fort; in which the mechanics and other servants of the Company, are in general Canadians and Scotchmen, reside with their families. They are built in rows, and present the appearance of small streets. They are kept in a clean and orderly manner. Here there is a hospital, in which the invalided servants of the Company and, indeed, others who may wish to avail themselves of it, are treated with the utmost care. This is attended by Dr. Tolmie, the resident surgeon of the fort.²⁸⁵

A Move into Agriculture

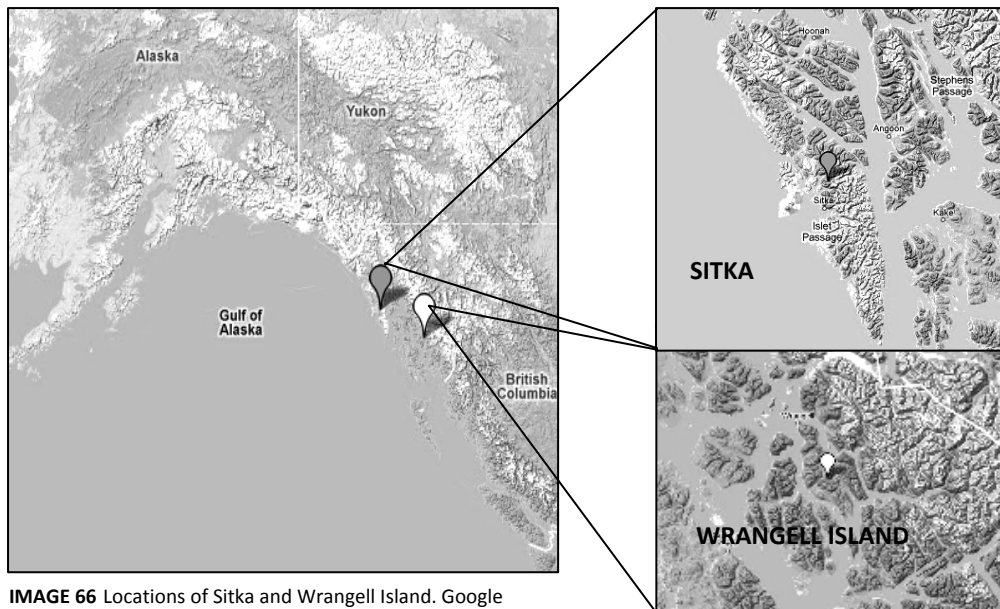

IMAGE 66 Locations of Sitka and Wrangell Island. Google Maps.

Matters were changing for the fur traders elsewhere on the Pacific slopes, particularly along the coast, for two reasons. The first was an agreement struck between the Hudson's Bay Company and the Russian American Company. After a meeting between George Simpson and Baron Wrangell in Hamburg in January 1839, a deal had been struck between the two companies to give the HBC, starting June 1, 1840, ten years of trading rights along the panhandle providing the HBC supply Sitka with foodstuffs and two thousand sea otter pelts each year. The British were also to take over the Russian post at Point Highfield [on Wrangell Island], as well as build their own posts which the HBC would hand back at the end of the agreement.²⁸⁶ To facilitate this, a shift in organization had to occur. The Puget Sound Agricultural Company was established to oversee agriculture operations at Fort Nisqually, Cowlitz Prairie, Fort Langley and Fort Vancouver. Fort Nisqually, which had originally been set up in 1833 to capture furs at the end of Puget Sound, recognized as early as 1835 the farming potential. As the main PSAC farm, it increased its farming activities and hired European farmers to look after its sheep and cattle. The activities of the Cowlitz farm were also turned over to PSAC. Some fur traders made a relatively easy transition to the agricultural life. Fort Langley moved its location upriver to an area more favourable to food production.

This change in policy meant a change in the lives of the former fur traders, their wives and children at Fort Langley. Farming was now front and center. Dairy farms had to be tended to. Now the 'fur trader' could be doing agricultural duties as well as making barrels and curing fish.²⁸⁷ A transformation had also taken place at Fort Nisqually. Typical early fur trade days at Fort Nisqually would have followed the same pattern as the following three journal entries from one week in October 1833:

Saturday 22nd Trade 15 skins in all from the Payallipas and some petty Indians from the neighborhood of House. One of the horses missing since last night, and a fruitless search has been made for him. Have put the store into some degree of order.

Sunday 23rd An Indian from near the Chutes, with 8 skins offered 5 for a gun this morning, and returned frequently during the day, endeavoring to come to terms.

Monday 24th Trade 12 Beavers of which the Indians mentioned yesterday gave 9 for woolens. He was more importunate for presents than any others, but was dealt with in the usual manner.²⁸⁸

Although the records are missing from June 1839 to January 1846, three separate entries from the journals from January and February 1846 reflect just how things had changed:

Tuesday [January] 27th Cattle counters returned bringing accounts of 2270 head of cattle. ...Killed a large hog for Mr. Heath.

Friday [January] 30th Heavy showers. Evening clear. Lucier, Boulanger and Latour squaring wood for new barn. All spare hands with Edgar and McLeod commenced dressing wedder flock but were interrupted by the rain. Afterward Bastian and Michael thrashing oats. Indians grubbing sapling stumps from extension of garden ground.

Monday [February] 2nd Showery. Bastian sent off to Muck with two ox ploughs, and to bring home a load of meat. Montgomery having been instructed to slaughter in the plains some of the large oxen that cannot be driven away from the Douglas River. Michael with three Indians sent to split fencing for potato field at Edgar's. Steilacomm and Basptiste with oxen to plough the ground. Boulanger, Latour, Lucier and Paquet squaring wood for new barn. John Macrae who landed from the steamer yesterday, set to repair cart wheels assisted by Wiscom and Kahannui. MacDonald and Wren sawing boards for roof of store.²⁸⁹

The engagé of the fur trade days adapted with apparently little effort, as cattle and sheep and agricultural products rather than furs were becoming the mainstay of these select operations. Adding to the mix were the considerable numbers of Britains who were brought in to do specifically agricultural duties. On April 27, 1846, when the border was being drawn, seventeen employees mainly from Forts Simpson and Langley made a vain attempt to claim 640 acres (one square mile) each in an effort to maximize HBC/PSAC possessory rights.²⁹⁰

The Cowlitz Farm also emerged at this time in an area where the Cowlitz natives had almost all succumbed to diseases,²⁹¹ for in 1841, when George Simpson passed through the area, it was difficult to find one village occupied.²⁹² At the now large farm Simpson found that “there were already about a thousand acres of land under the plough, besides a large dairy, an extensive park for horses.”²⁹³ The employees were annually harvesting eight to nine thousand bushels of wheat, four thousand bushels of oats as well as barley, potatoes, etc.²⁹⁴

IMAGE 67 A farmstead in British Columbia, F. W. Howay. British Columbia from the Earliest Times to the Present, vol. II. Vancouver: S. J. Clark Publishing, 1914. Plate facing page 81.

Realities at Coastal Posts

Further up the coast, the work-style adjustments were not so marked. For Fort Simpson, which had been set up in 1831 and moved in 1833 further out on the coast, life changed little. The first post on a toe-hold of land near the mouth of the Nass River was meant to capture furs coming down the rivers before they reached the Russians to the north. When the HBC decided to close this post in favour of one on a bigger land space, the Nass River natives objected to the point of violence at seeing their right to extract tolls from interior Indians coming to trade vanish (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort Simpson]). A visiting William Fraser Tolmie, who chronicled the event, sailed to his assignment at Fort McLoughlin and sought escape from the realities of the Coast by engrossing himself in two books that he had acquired from Captain John Dominis of the Bolivar Liberator “Tom Cringle’s log, [set in Bombay] and Lander’s Voyages in Africa.” (For other books see Appendix: What Fur Traders Read).²⁹⁵

The men at the new site of Fort Simpson on the Tsimpsean Peninsula also learned at the new site that it was no place for agriculture. On May 25, 1835, when John Work’s men tried to dig a garden for potatoes the ground was such a tangle of roots that the men had to dig up to a meter to get rid of them. However, it was only when the soil, peat, sand and shells (no doubt part of an old midden) was made rootless and drained to draw off the water could the potatoes be planted.²⁹⁶ Further, in June, when they tried to take the stumps out of the garden the hollows would fill with water and the sand flies would attack the men.²⁹⁷ Hoping for some assistance from the tides, the heavy stumps and brush wood were dumped in the harbour, and as they would neither float away nor readily burn, considerable effort was spent trying to get rid of them so they wouldn’t clog navigation.²⁹⁸

The first HBC post on the Russian American [Alaskan] panhandle was Fort Stikine, established in 1840. This was not the first attempt at doing so. The HBC had tried once before in 1833 under the terms of the 1825 Anglo Russian Treaty to establish a post but had been sent packing by the Russians. (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort Stikine]). By the spring of 1840 they were back in force ready to feed the Russians and in turn to assume control of the Russian post on Wrangell Island [Wrangell, Alaska].

What subsequently happened at Fort Stikine showed the very real difficulty of trading along the coast, the need for astute strong leaders and just how the worst and the best could manifest themselves when conditions were allowed to deteriorate.

The HBC faced an uphill challenge from the beginning in that they were not the one to have initially negotiated space and laid the groundwork with the Stikine-Tlingit natives to set up a post on their territory. The Russians, who had been holding the space with their own post since 1833, had come to their own agreement on limits and accessions in trading. It would appear that ample amounts of alcohol were involved.²⁹⁹ Now the HBC had to establish its own agreement with the Stikine-Tlingit, having already established it with the Russians. HBC gifts to wealthy clan heads had assuaged them that there would be no interference in the indigenous coastal peoples' right to extract tolls from interior groups who had over the generations come down the rivers to trade with American, Russian and British trading vessels along the coast. The HBC, as well as earlier trading vessels, had found out rather painfully at the first site of Fort Simpson and Fort McLoughlin just how vigorous the natives could be defending their trading role rights (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort McLoughlin, Fort Simpson, Fort Takul]). As well, to ensure enforcement of their roles, the chief's status and prestige, as well as to make sure that trade was in his favour, Chief Shakes at Stikine constructed a lodge on a nearby island very close to the post. The degree of scrutiny was intense, creating constant tension.

Secondly, as the traders were in territory in which the Russians claimed sovereignty, they no longer could depend on the rules of Upper Canada for support. The fur trade employees were aware of their functioning outside the usual ambit of British claimed territory perhaps relieving them of the usual strictures of behaviour.

Third, the HBC presence needed a sober, skilful negotiator to work his way through this minefield of pre-conditions for trading on territory which was claimed by both the Russians and the Stikine-Tlingit peoples.

After taking over the post on June 1, 1840, HBC employees rebuilt the post making it more defensive as about one thousand natives camped about the post. Chief Shakes used the small gift of clothes, a gallon of rum and a kettle that were given to him to ridicule the HBC and threatened that the lives of fur traders were at risk if fur prices were not raised. The same natives who threatened to completely destroy the Russian built grist mill if they were not given higher prices ridiculed the Hawaiians who could not shoot guns. Internecine struggles resulted in natives seeking refuge in the fort and others blockading themselves in their own lodges to avoid gunfire being exchanged. Additionally the demonstrable killing of native slaves at random if Chief Shakes could not extract more rum from the HBC did not add to any trading harmony.³⁰⁰

In spite of the palpable acrimony pervading the whole area, food including fish, venison and potatoes, was traded on a regular basis with natives coming from the surrounding area. Nonetheless, the strained atmosphere brought out the extremes in fur trader behaviour. To begin with, the leadership was flawed to successfully steer through this minefield of a variety of behaviours. John McLoughlin Jr., the son of Dr. John McLoughlin, in spite of a checkered past had been placed in charge. Not having proper support to run a smooth operation, his drinking and violent behaviour and beatings of his men became so pronounced that his own men plotted against him, even signing a pact for his assassination in December 1841.³⁰¹

One of the main instigators in the plot to kill McLoughlin was chronic alcoholic Canadian Urbain Heroux who had been jailed before joining the HBC for burglaries and robberies. His early HBC working record did not record anything out of the ordinary but soon after working at Stikine he began robbing the stores of liquor and was put out. In the early morning of April 21, 1842 after being threatened by employee William Lasserte a drunken McLoughlin grabbed a rifle and ran out into the middle of the open area of the post yelling "Fire, fire." They did, with Urbain firing the fatal shot. Another person implicated was Iroquois Pierre Kanaguasse.

The Hawaiians collectively sprang into action, taking the body aside, washing it and preventing others from defiling it. A coffin was built and McLoughlin buried at the post until his body could be taken to Fort Vancouver.

George Simpson, who happened into the area just five days after the event, following a brief investigation found the murder to be "justifiable homicide," a verdict for which Dr. John McLoughlin could not forgive the Governor. Urbain was taken to Sitka but the Russians refused to prosecute as it was deemed not to be their affair. The principals involved were sent to York Factory but, as the whole affair was proving to be too costly, the charges were dropped and people went on their way.

Activities carried on at Fort Stikine to a lesser extent, and the fort was abandoned in 1849 near the end of the agreement.

The second policy change to affect the engagé on the coast was the argument between John McLoughlin and George Simpson over whether it was best to serve the coast with posts or boats. Because Simpson won the argument, and because Fort Vancouver was threatened as the administrative center for the Pacific slopes, a new coastal site was sought out and in 1843 a new post, Fort Victoria located on the southern end of Vancouver Island, was erected. Forts McLoughlin and Taku were both closed that year with the move to center operations at Fort Victoria, from which the coastal posts would be serviced. During the ten year life span of Fort McLoughlin and three year life span of Fort Taku, both being at the mouths of important rivers, faced similar problems of native vigorous defence of their traditional trading rights. Fur trading would have to be carried on from Forts Victoria, Simpson and Stikine.

Other Posts and Border Settlements

IMAGE 68 British-United States Boundary, Yahk River, F. W. Howay. British Columbia from the Earliest Times to the Present, vol. II. Vancouver: S. J. Clark Publishing, 1914. Plates between pages 322-323.

Up to and including 1846, with the drawing of the international border at 49 degrees latitude between present day Washington and British Columbia, life in the Kootenay and Flathead area continued in much the same way that it had before. As the temporary posts were administered from Fort Colvile, much of their lives were shared with those in that post. A summer trip was performed by land with horses and the fall trips by water. By 1841 on the other hand, Colvile had become a bustling, very productive location with cattle and fields of several hundred acres that produced wheat, maize, potatoes, peas, oats, barley, turnips, melons, cucumbers etc.³⁰² A nearby grist mill gave the whole area a sense of permanence and the neatly built and well furnished, very clean cedar houses gave the scene a sense of domesticity.³⁰³ HBC servants tended to stay longer (see Appendix: Forts and Posts [Fort Colvile]). To top it all off, Father De Smet in August 1845 built a log chapel on the top of the nearby bluffs.

By the early 1840s, with most all commercial furs harvested from the Snake Country, Fort Hall took on a new role of supplying migrating people making their way overland. The Fort Boise post was rebuilt in 1838 in a more permanent adobe to check the American competition rather than harvest new sources of furs. With a sustaining garden as well as pigs, horses and cattle, furs were not of primary importance.

In New Caledonia, life continued on relatively unchanged with its interdependent posts and unpredictable fish runs.

If anything represented the mix of the fur trade in the years before the major change of the border being drawn, it was George Simpson's observations as he was ascending the Cowlitz River in 1841:

Our bateau carried as curious a muster of races and languages as perhaps had ever been congregated within the same compass in any part of the world. Our crew of ten men contained Iroquois, who spoke their own tongue; a Cree, half-breed of French origin, who appeared to have borrowed his dialect from both his parents; a North Briton, who understood only the Gaelic of his native hills; Canadians who, of course, knew French; and Sandwich Islanders, who jabbered a medley of Chinook, English, &c., and their own vernacular jargon. Add to all this, that the passengers were natives of England, Scotland, Russian, Canada, and the Hudson's Bay Company's territories: and you have the pretest congress of nations, the nicest confusion of tongues, that has ever taken place since the days of the Tower of Babel.³⁰⁴

On June 15, 1846, the Treaty of Washington, also known as the Oregon Treaty, was signed in Washington, D. C., finally settling the territorial dispute between the US and Britain which had lasted from the Treaty of 1818 (also known as the London Convention, Anglo-American Convention of 1818 or the Convention of 1818). The HBC posts and the engagés and officers who accompanied them now in undisputedly American territory were Forts Nisqually (now operated by PSAC), Vancouver, George, Umpqua, Colvile, Okanogan, Kootenay, Boise and Hall.

From now on there would be two realities for the fur traders, one south and one north of the 49th parallel. In three short years, there would be two realities north of the international border.

1846-1858 – New Realities, Upheaval, Change and Retreat into the Shadows

Flathead Area

1. Fort Connah (HBC) 1847-1871

The Columbia River Area

1. Fort Shepherd (HBC) 1858-?

Lower Fraser River Area

1. Fort Hope (HBC) 1848
2. Fort Yale (HBC) 1848

Land Based Fur Trade Ships and Other Vessels Related to the HBC 1846-1858

-SS Beaver (1846-1858+); Cadboro (1846-1858); Colinda (1854); Columbia (1846-1849); Cowlitz (1846-1850); Harpooner (1849); Mary Dare (1847-1853); Norman Morison (1850-1853); Otter (1853-1858); Pekin (1851); Prince Albert (1854); Prince of Wales (1846-1850s); Princess Royal (1854-1858); Recovery (1852-1858+); Tory (1851); Una (1850-1852); -Vancouver [2] (1846-1848); Vancouver [3] (1852)

Paralleling the decline of the fur trade, the period 1846-1858 was one of considerable change. Some fur traders rushed to settle in the Willamette in 1846-1847. In 1847-1848 the measles epidemic wrecked havoc on the native population and was indirectly responsible for the massacre at the Wailatpu Mission. The years 1848-1849 saw the discovery of gold in California and some fur traders taking advantage of the new opportunities. Massive desertions occurred. In 1849, Vancouver Island was made a colony and opportunities opened up for the fur traders to settle on southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands. As well, throughout the decade the fur trader and his family sought out the place to settle which best suited his needs and the needs of his native or mixed descent wife. The year 1858 saw almost the complete collapse of the fur trade in mainland British Columbia when gold was discovered and the mainland was made a British colony.

Continued Settlement in Oregon Territory

Immediately after the drawing of the border, free land in the Willamette Valley was still the preferred place of settlement. The continuing presence of nearby Fort Vancouver, although eclipsed in importance, countered the subtle and sometimes overt anti-Catholic and anti-mixed descent rhetoric of the American settlers. Into this mix the fur traders came from all over the Pacific slopes for their own particular reasons. Paschal Caille (Biscornet) had spent time at posts in New Caledonia and along the coast, but his nine years at Fort Vancouver helped him to choose the more salubrious climate of the Willamette Valley to settle and raise his blended family. An early association with the Catholic priests on their westward journey in 1838 may have drawn mixed descent Pierre Deschamps from his seven years in Snake Country back to the Willamette. There he settled with his mixed descent wife and raised a family of eight children. Following a pattern established in the fur trade, upon Pierre's death in the 1860s, his widow married Jean Baptiste Jeaudoin, son of long time fur trader Charles Jeaudoin. After fourteen years in the fur trade, a large proportion of which was spent in the Snake Country, French Canadian Joseph Sebastien sought to put down roots with his Flathead (Cayuse) wife in the Willamette where they raised their six children. For Nazaire Dupre, working in the gardens and fields of Fort Colville for ten years had taught him enough about agriculture that he had confidence to bring his wife and young family with him to the Willamette. French Canadian Caesar Beaudouin had spent most of his work years at Fort Vancouver, but it was possibly his association with the South Party for three years that convinced him to settle there with his mixed descent wife and raise their family. Mixed descent John Finlay brought his Chinook wife of four years to the Willamette with him to build a new life after thirteen years in the fur trade. Their stay in the area did not last long nor did he have time to begin a family as his wife Catherine died three years later and was buried in her traditional territory of Chinook. After spending fifteen years at Fort Simpson where he did a lot of carpentry work, Jean Baptiste Proveau chose the Willamette as the best place with the greatest opportunity. He may have brought his wife with him to his new home.

The following year, settlement continued. Charles Diamare (Baron) no doubt used his carpentry skills to support his wife and child. Thamire Liard left the familiar territory of New Caledonia where he had worked for fourteen years, to start a new life with his wife in the Willamette. His wife, an Okanogan native, succumbed within a year and he soon married the mixed descent daughter of another fur trader. Another, Octave Martel, who also spent his entire career in New Caledonia, also chose the Willamette to raise his family. Red headed Scot, John McKay, also known as Rouge McKay, had spent most of his working life in the Colville area where he farmed. However, he chose the Willamette to live and raise his family with his mixed descent wife. Another Scot, John McLean, appears to have started his settled life with his wife Betsy Chehalis in the Willamette but then moved to Clatsop County closer to the coast.

Other fur traders sought out areas such as Lewis County to put down roots. Following in the footsteps of others who had already settled, there were John Calder, Jean Baptiste Chalifoux, Xavier Kateman, Joseph Lagarde, Louis Latour, Ignace Loziere, Anawiscum McDonald and George Barber Roberts.

Not all took farms. Clerks tended to look elsewhere. In 1849 with the changing nature of the area, George Traill Allan, Archibald McKinlay and Thomas Lowe formed a partnership setting themselves up as merchants in Oregon City and San Francisco.

The mixed descent fur traders got a reprieve when the Donation Land Act passed by US Congress in 1850 included the wording "every white male settler or occupant of the public lands, American half breeds included."³⁰⁵ Simply put, the US Congress allowed public land to be donated to Americans or those who declared their allegiance to the US, if an individual cultivated and lived on it for four consecutive years. Consequently, there was a surge in those applying for Donation Land claims in the Willamette.

When Washington Territory separated off from Oregon Territory in 1853, the fur traders already claiming possessory rights in Lewis County, now part of the new territory, further took advantage of the Donation Land Claim Act which allowed them to claim larger pieces of land. They joined a number of HBC and PSAC servants who had put down roots there from the early 1840s.³⁰⁶ There was a similar surge in Clarke County (includes Cathlapotle, old Fort Vancouver area and Washougal) and Pierce County (includes Nisqually and Roy).

The Hawaiians were left out as their numbers showed. In 1846, 119 were working at the Fort Vancouver posts and the surrounding farms that still provided a modicum of protection and permanence. Two years later, that number was seventy-one and by mid-century, it was down to thirty-four. The Hawaiians were clearly not destined to share the spoils of the new American territories. Those who had stayed and sought the protection of the area still claimed by the Puget Sound Agricultural Company at Fort Nisqually stayed for some time still. Likewise those still working under the protection of the HBC at Fort Vancouver tenaciously hung onto their place within Kanaka Village. By the early 1850s the Kanaka village had begun to deteriorate and the US Army had built its own post nearby. The few remaining Hawaiians such as John Cox and Dick were dying off and buried in the nearby HBC graveyard. The last person to hang on was William Kaulehelehe and his wife Mary Kai who had preached to their fellow Hawaiians during the dying days of the HBC fur trade south of the 49th parallel. On March 12, 1860 Kaulehelehe was given orders by the US Army to remove himself from the area but, on being told by John Work to hold his ground, watched as the buildings, including his own, were gradually torn down and burned. Kaulehelehe did what many Hawaiians did at that time, he headed north to British territory.³⁰⁷

The Measles Epidemic: Loss and Consequences

The peace and order of fur traders' lives south of the international border was all about to change in 1847. On July 23 of that year at Walla Walla Paul Kane noted that a native boy arrived at his camp with the news of the return from California of a long absent war party carrying with them a certain sickness.³⁰⁸ This was the introduction of measles into the Lower Columbia, which was to be carried further westward by the Oregon trail migrants, new hosts for the virus, and spread amongst other hosts such as the employees of the HBC and the local Cayuse. Although the fur traders had experienced several waves of epidemic disease in the past, what makes this different is the documentation, the journals, observations and church records, revealing its true extent in the area of the Lower Columbia. The total devastation caused amongst the natives can only be guessed at.

The disease began its spread into the lower Columbia from its entrance into the Walla Walla area in July.

Individual cases may have been in Vancouver earlier, but the epidemic did not take hold at the Vancouver post until November. The course of the epidemic at Fort Vancouver from November 26, 1847 to February 23, 1848 can be followed through Lowe's journal.³⁰⁹ During the period to May 20th, eleven active and retired servants and one visiting Hawaiian succumbed. Ten of the eleven who died were Hawaiians,³¹⁰ mirroring a similarly high death rate in Hawaii. One possible explanation for this was that in 1846 a number of Hawaiians died at Fort IMAGE 69 "Indians bringing a dead comrade to the fort for burial." Sketches of Hudson Bay life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880, UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

Vancouver from some unknown ailment, possibly typhus,³¹¹ which may have left many weakened and unable to resist measles. The officers at Fort Vancouver were not always accurate counters. On December 31, 1847, Peter Skene Ogden stated at Fort Vancouver that "the measles and dysentery were raging at Vancouver when I took my departure. 210 were on the sick list but fortunately not a death." This is somewhat misleading for it doesn't reflect the reality that already five Hawaiians had died during the crisis period. An additional six Hawaiians succumbed after that date at the post and five elsewhere.

However, at the Cowlitz farm, not far away, the epidemic amongst the servants ran from December 11 to January 4, after which it appeared to sweep through the settlers. Only one death was reported although many came down with the one of two strains that were virulent at the time.³¹² One Hawaiian died at Cape Disappointment, and later in the summer as the disease swept up the coast, one at Fort Victoria and four at Fort Langley.³¹³

The disease continued up through the travelled routes of the interior as well as up the coast. At the coastal post of Fort Simpson 10% of the 2500 natives in the immediate vicinity died but no contracted servants. Unfortunately the records do not extend to the families. As well, we know through Robert Galois' research that the epidemic continued into the following year in the interior but, once again, incomplete records don't allow us to gauge the real impact of the disease on HBC servants and their families.³¹⁴

A closer look at this particular epidemic reveals the devastation caused just amongst the fur traders and their families. Of all the servants, the hardest hit were the Hawaiians who may have had no previous exposure or immunity to the disease. The French Canadians, Iroquois, British and mixed descent had probably contracted measles and thus were immune. For some residing in the Columbia area, first contact appears to have been in July 1847.

The Pacific slopes and indeed the whole of the new world had been swept with epidemics and losses, particularly in the indigenous population, were enormous. Records were spotty for both the intermittent disease of the early 1830s and the smallpox outbreak of 1837, but the measles outbreak of 1847-1848 is unique for a greater number of records reveal the casualties in fur trade families. It presents a microscopic view of just the families generally around the lower Columbia River. In all, thirty-seven fur trade families were affected. Fourteen wives, eleven native and three of mixed descent, died leaving a father to bring up the children. Children were not spared, for twenty succumbed to the disease. Twelve families suffered the loss of more than one child. Two older Iroquois, who had perhaps never been exposed to the disease, died. One Hawaiian servant with a family succumbed, leaving a wife to fend for herself.

IMAGE 70 Forceps. William Gibson's Institutes and Practice of Surgery; being outlines of a course of lectures, vol. I. Philadelphia, James Kay, jun and borthor; Pittsburgh, C. H. Kay, 1845. Plate II.

The French Canadians, Iroquois, and people of British and mixed descent were generally spared, likely having acquired immunity with early childhood exposure to the disease. Based on the age of their children, some native wives may have been going through post partum recovery. The vulnerability brought about by undernourishment and the general privations of winter might have meant the difference between recovering from the disease and dying from it. Further, the natural immunity of the children, especially neonatals would have been immature. For the Hawaiians it was another matter. The Hawaiians represented one third of the work force (119/368), but 90% of the deaths within the fur trade. They appeared not to have acquired any immunity in their lives. Although during the seventy years of outside contact, waves of epidemics had reduced the Hawaiian population at home from 500,000 to 94,000 there is no evidence that measles was present in the Sandwich Islands. For example, neither the scourge of 1804-1805 nor the 1826 epidemic were measles. However, King Kamehameha III's quarantine laws of 1839 couldn't keep out the measles of 1848 which killed between ten thousand and forty thousand Hawaiians. So, even though the servants who died on the Lower Columbia had been away from Hawaii anywhere from three to seventeen years, they had never experienced measles. A lack of acquired immunity, therefore, appears to be the major contributing factor. The Catholic missionaries did their bit by giving them Christian names to facilitate their entry into heaven.

All of this was miniscule when compared to the number of native deaths, which was likely catastrophic. Here traditional medicine appears to have worked against them as the usual method of curing diseases was to spend time in a sweat lodge followed by a plunge in cold water. In fact, the way to cure measles is to hydrate the patient and keep warm.³¹⁵

Just how prepared was the Hudson's Bay Company for this epidemic on the Lower Columbia? Fort Vancouver was fortunate as it had Dr. Forbes Barclay and Fort Nisqually had William Fraser Tolmie who, although less qualified than Barclay, could effect treatment for the measles. Aside from John F. Kennedy at Fort Simpson, the remainder of the posts had to rely on officers who had to glean their medical knowledge from previous training, books or their native wives.

In the absence of case books for the surgeons during this period, one can only guess at their treatment. Instead, we have to look at the Apothecary Shop or Dispensary at Fort Vancouver which supplied Vancouver and other posts. Of the 166 medicines at Fort Vancouver about thirty-eight may have been used: eleven to deal with the crisis, seven for recovery, eleven topical applications, and nine would have probably been used but would have had no effect.

THIRTY-SEVEN MEDICINES AND APPLICATIONS POSSIBLY USED AT FORT VANCOUVER

Possibly Used during Crisis (11)

Hydrocyanic Acid
Aromatic Sulphuric Acid
Prepared Chalk
Honey (?)
*Extract of Liquorice, Root of Liquorice
Turpentine Oil
Syrup of Opium
Tincture of Opium: Laudanum
Chloride Solution of Soda
Phosphate of Soda
Root of Valerian

Possibly Used for Recovery (7)

Subnitrate of Bismuth
Conserve of Roses
Ginger Powder
Ipecacuanha
Carbonate, Red Oxide & Sulphate of Iron
Muriated Tincture of Iron
Uva Ursi Folia

Possibly Used for Topical Application (11)

Tartrate of Antimony
Carbonate of Lead
Rosemary Oil
Citrine ointment
Savine ointment
Sulphuric ointment
Spread Adhesive Plaster
Burgundy Pitch Plaster
Lead Plaster
Spermaceti
Impure Carbonate of Zinc

Possibly Used but Having no Effect (9)

Aloes
Spirits of Ammonia
Ammoniacum
Antimonial powder
Powdered charcoal
Sulfate of Copper
Gentian Root
Sulfate of Quinine
Squills: (powder, dried root, syrup of)³¹⁶

How did the fur trade families who experienced loss cope? There was a restoration of order within a year or two, for the men had married again and, more often than not, continued to produce more children. It is possible that continued reciprocal kinship privileges with the native community carried on to some extent with their surviving children.

The consequences of the measles for some missionaries and residual feelings were considerable. Marcus and Narcissa Whitman worked amongst the natives at their Waiilatpu mission for six years before Marcus returned east briefly where he urged Americans to settle in the increasingly disputed Oregon territory. Paradoxically, with the rush of white immigrants and their accompanying diseases such as measles which killed many Cayuse, the Cayuse grew uneasy and disillusioned and in November 1847, turned on the members of the mission, killing thirteen including Marcus and Narcissa Whitman and capturing many. Because of previous relatively harmonious relationships between natives and fur traders, many of whom were mixed themselves, many white Protestant Americans suspected HBC-Catholic-fur trader complicity in the sad affair. News of the massacre helped in passing the 1848 bill that made Oregon, already a US possession by fiat, a US territory. A recent faithful reconstruction of the mission shows the importance placed on the role of the Whitmans.³¹⁷

Even though many of the other Protestant missionaries had little contact with the fur traders, they nonetheless had an impact on them with the beliefs they carried with them. Some, like William Henry Gray, who had worked at the Lapwai Mission in the last 1830s, carried an anti-HBC bias with him, a bias which he put into print in 1870.³¹⁸ After the Waiilatpu massacre, Henry Harmon Spalding and his wife moved to the safer area of Brownville on the Calapooya River where they published letters accusing the Catholics of being behind the 1847 Waiilatpu killings.³¹⁹ Congregational minister Cushing Eells and Elkanah Walker with their wives left their Tshimakain mission after the massacre. Later, in Walla Walla Eells established Whitman Seminary, which later became Whitman College.³²⁰ Methodist David Leslie and his wife, amongst other things, ran a boarding school in Oregon City where she taught many fur trade children.³²¹

Divided Loyalties

The measles epidemic was one of the sparks that ignited the Waiilatpu massacre and, by implication, contributed to anti-fur trader and anti-Catholic sentiment. Another factor was the ever-growing influx of immigrants who largely ignored traditional rights of natives. A further component was the growing native disillusionment with their own spiritual and medical power, which had failed to meet the challenges of the quickly changing landscape, but also their dabbling with the new spirituality of the immigrants, which had failed to protect them.³²² For the Cayuse it was the end of a long process. The introduction of horses had meant that expanded trade networks, greater chances for conflict and disease, and trading in food and horses would bring them the goods they wanted. Although relations with the fur traders were steady, a growing disillusionment with the various forms of Christianity was turning into resentment, more so when this new spiritual embrace failed to prevent deaths from measles. Further, incoming emigrants were stealing native horses, pillaging native food supplies and abusing natives³²³ and so it took little, then, to trigger a violent reaction as it did in November 1847 when Whitman, his wife, ten men and two children were killed and others were taken hostage.

IMAGE 71 Sign at Jocko Valley is located in western Montana and is now part of the Flathead Indian Reservation. A sign indicates the fur trade related origin of its name and post fur trade difficulties. Named for Jacco (Jacques) Raphael Finlay, a fur trader and trapper in the Kootenai and Flathead Indian country. 1806-1809. By treaty of August 27, 1872, the Flathead Indians were supposed to have relinquished claim to their hereditary lands in the Bitter Root Valley, accepting the present reservation in lieu thereof. Charlot head chief of the Flatheads, always denied signing the treaty although when the papers were filed in Washington his name appeared on them – possibly a forgery. Arlee (pronounced Ah-lee by the Indians) was a war chief and did sign the treaty so the Government recognized him thereafter as head chief. Charlot never spoke to him afterwards. Photograph by author, 1992.

For the predominantly Roman Catholic fur traders, the interlocking relationships with the Cayuse led to charges of complicity in the terrible affair. The fact that HBC officer Peter Skene Ogden and priest Augustin Magloire Blanchet, brother to Francois Norbert Blanchet and who had taken up residence amongst the Cayuse twenty five miles from Walla Walla, were able to negotiate a ransom for the prisoners only fuelled suspicion.³²⁴

The complexity of fur trader lives and the testing of loyalties before, during and after the event was embodied in Nicholas Finlay born to Jacques Raphael “Jocko” Finlay and probably Teshwentichina, a Spokane woman. Unlike his Protestant grandfather, the Finlay family had slowly been subsumed into the mainly Roman Catholic culture of the fur trade. As well, unlike his many brothers and sisters who had a Chippewyan mother, Nicholas had a Spokane mother, and so there was a slightly different focus to local loyalties. He grew up in the Spokane House area and considered himself an original settler, worked for the HBC, married an Iroquois woman and then a Cayuse woman and so his loyalties were pulled in several directions. When he finished his employment trapping with the HBC largely in the Snake Country/Flatheads area around 1844-1845, he lived near the Congregational Tshimakain Mission of Elkanah Walker and Cushing Eels. Around 1847, Finlay moved south to work at the Waiilatpu Mission, a site not far from the HBC post of Nez Perces/Walla Walla, and set up his lodge a few hundred feet from the mission house.

At the height of a then measles epidemic, a false rumour was spread among the Cayuse by Joe Lewis, a mixed-descent malcontent who had arrived with the wagons in 1847, that Whitman had intended to poison the Cayuse and take their land. Given his association with the mission, this presented Nicholas Finlay with conflicting loyalties, one to his extended family and their whole belief system and the other to the mission and its cultural package. Since the subsequent plot to kill Whitman was hatched in Nicholas' nearby lodge, he had full knowledge of it but failed to warn Whitman, perhaps fearing for his and his Cayuse wife's life. Or, perhaps he believed that such an event would never happen for the records are replete with angry traders sitting around an evening fire, fancifully plotting revenge for offending occurrences. Indeed, when questioned by Whitman about the rumours of a massacre about to take place, Nicholas denied it, even though he may have sensed that it could be carried out. On the day of the killings, November 29, 1847, while Nicholas and Joseph Stanfield, another employee, were casually milking the cows, three mixed descent children, which included, John and Stephen, two sons of John Manson, escaped the ongoing carnage to Finlay's lodge. Loyalty to his native side kicked in and Nicholas spirited them to Fort Nez Perces the next day and told HBC clerk William McBean the news. Finlay, who did not partake in the slaughter, went north to the Colville Valley and in February, evoked fear in the local missionary population, when he tried to enlist members of his family to join the Cayuses in resistance to the newcomers. In spite of the accusations of HBC involvement in the plot, action was not taken against Nicholas although the Cayuse did erupt in war against the Americans. In the 1850s, having not been punished for his apparent involvement, Nicholas lived in the Colville Valley, near brothers Patrick, Miaquam, Augustin and down the valley from brother James. In the 1860s, he and his family moved to the Bitterroot Valley. Nicholas eventually settled in the Jocko Valley in Flathead country in Montana, joining Joe Lewis (who was eventually killed in an attempted stagecoach robbery in 1862) from his Waiilatpu days. Nicholas died after 1886 probably on the Flathead Indian Reservation where he had been living with his family.

The Pull of Loyalties for Nicholas Finlay

Other fur traders and their descendants who were looking forward to a settled post fur trade society were also drawn into the ensuing Cayuse War. Most of the forty-seven who served in 1847-1848, did so in Company D, 7th Regiment with a smattering of others in other regiments.³²⁵

The Fur Trader and the California Gold Rush

IMAGE 72 Panning on the Mokelumne River, Northern California.
Wikimedia Commons.

The California Gold Rush of 1848-1849 once again shook up the lives of both settled and working fur traders. For many it was a self-directed Diaspora and an intentional movement away from a way of life. For the settled HBC former employee in the Willamette and elsewhere, as well as for the engagé still toiling away for the HBC, this new event meant opportunity. It all began in February 1848. While establishing a sawmill for John A. Sutter near Coloma, California, James W. Marshall had discovered gold on the south fork of the American River. At first, reaction in Oregon Territory to the news was slow. The news, first carried from San Francisco to Oregon on the 31st of July 1848 via the captain of the schooner Honolulu, was greeted sceptically. It was only when the Henry arrived on August 9th and the Mary Dare arrived from the Sandwich Islands on August 23rd that people began to believe the story. The clincher was a letter from ex-governor Boggs of Missouri, who wrote that much gold was found on the American River in California. From that point, the rush was on.³²⁶

For those who had settled along the Willamette River in Oregon, it was opportunity and an easy leap for many had been on the Southern Expeditions and knew the territory well. As well the Willamette presented an easy access to northern California over the Siskiyou Mountains or an opportunity to sail from the Columbia to San Francisco. For those who were still working, particularly at Fort Vancouver, opportunity trumped loyalty to the HBC. Almost a third broke contract and left either overland or by boat. For those who came by boats, they could take a boat upriver to Stockton, Sacramento City or Marysville at the mouth of the Yuba River. From there they would take pack mule trains into the hills and mining camps.³²⁷

J. S. Holliday estimated that when the news reached Oregon in August 1848, perhaps four thousand men headed for the mines. Hard to substantiate, but some came by ship to San Francisco; others left with wagons and families in tow through the Siskiyou Mountains via the Rogue River and Shasta Valleys.³²⁸ According to Horace Lyman who arrived in August 1849, "Oregon was nearly depopulated by emigration to California."³²⁹ Most of the Oregon overlanders, according to Holliday, ended up in the Trinity River mines in northern California. By December 1849, there were well over forty thousand men from all over the world searching for gold.

Over the next few months, the Willamette Valley virtually emptied of its settlers. Father Bartholomew Delorme, who may have been asked by Father Blanchett to go with the group as chaplain, was in California by the end of May 1849, baptising and burying the dead and overseeing the spiritual needs of his flock. St. Joseph's College in St. Paul closed down in June.

What happened to the lives of the people who went? Some moved around. A typical example would be Joseph Laverdure who went to Clear Creek and the Trinity River in 1849 where Pearson B. Reading discovered gold and worked there and then came back to Yreka in 1851 where he filed his claim. In 1849 he may have followed Father Delorme who had to go to San Francisco because he became ill. Laverdure then went north in 1851 to Frogtown, where he looked around and staked out a claim. When the Laverdures left Yreka and Frogtown, they went to Cow Creek in the Azaelia area [now on I5]. They homesteaded there and had their sons-in-law on both sides of them, the Saidens and the McGinnis'. They continued to do hardscrabble farming but also continued to do some mining. Susan McGinnis, the daughter of Angelique and John, married a couple of miners and loggers and so the family continued.³³⁰

Others were not so lucky and succumbed likely to the diseases in California at the time. Often the spouses of French Canadians would marry fellow French Canadians upholding language, religion and culture. Hypolite Brouillet succumbed in the goldfield on August 31, 1849; his widow married Cyrille Bertrand in December. Joseph Bourgeau died leaving a wife and three children. His widow married Theodore Gervais, a French Canadian independent settler. Jean Baptiste Dubreuille who was very familiar with the California area having been on several southern expeditions left behind his Chinook wife and six children. In 1851 his widow Marguerite Yougoulhta married fellow French Canadian and long time fur trader, Charles Plante. Paul Guilbeau was another who perished in California leaving behind a blended family and his second wife Francoise Cayuse. The following year, she married long time fur trader and dairy farmer, Laurent Sauve.

For others it was a lonely end. Bachelor Jonathan Buck, who had served as a mate on HBC ships, managed to settle in the Willamette before leaving for the gold fields of California in 1850 where he died. When he succumbed he may have felt a certain sense of loneliness if not abandonment for he never knew that seventeen letters written by his family to him starting in 1844 had not been delivered to him for a variety of logistical reasons.³³¹

Charles Plante made it into the gold fields and appears to have stayed for a few years. In 1854 when he returned to register his land claim, it had all been a bit much for him and, on his way home from the surveyor's office, he died at the home of a friend. By that time he had gone through four wives and it has not been traced who his fifth wife subsequently married. Some who stayed on may have acted as guides as the territory was familiar to them.

Richard Stokum, on the other hand, was working happily enough at Fort Nisqually until his wife died on July 29, 1849. Two months later on September 22, 1849, he deserted.

Fort Vancouver's cooper, Marie Louis Haquet, deserted from Fort Vancouver for the gold fields, came back at an undetermined date, continued to raise a family and served under Captain Maxon in the Yakima Indian wars of 1855-1856.

Just how many died from typhus, typhoid or any other diseases is unknown. Eden's Colvilles estimate of November 14, 1849 was perhaps begrudgingly high and somewhat apocryphal when he stated to George Simpson:

At least one half of the Canadians who went from this quarter to the mines have left their bones in California, which seems a most unhealthy part of the world - & several have returned worse off than they started, having had to borrow money to return. This will have some effect in stopping desertions, I hope.³³²

Those who survived returned to Oregon generally within a year. What were the factors that drove people back? First, there were simply too many people working for too little gold as described by William Shaw in 1851 at Stockton:

Stockton is situate on a plain, and is a central point, it is well adapted to supply the placers of the interior; but it is considered unhealthy, from the swamps surrounding it, which are flooded in the winter time. When we arrived, tents, wooden frame buildings, and calico houses, were being rapidly erected; along the bank were piled heaps of merchandize, in chests and casts, destined for the diggings; while mules and drays, with a concourse of bustling people, were hurrying to and fro; clouds of dust at times obscured the view, and cracking of whips and shouting we hear on every side.³³³

The challenges the fur traders faced were complex. On the one hand, as Shaw noted in 1851, his fellow white gold seekers "declared that coloured men were not privileged to work in a country intended only for American citizens."³³⁴ Nor were they to be hired or coerced as cheap or free labour. The underlying reason appears to have been a competitive unfairness in hiring numbers of non-whites who could extract more at less cost. He noted that the “gang-system was very obnoxious to the Californians, and several parties of that description were abolished; the obligations and agreements entered into being cancelled and annulled by the fiat of the vox populi.”³³⁵ Coupled with this was the attitude towards the Indian, a genetic heritage often shared by the gold seeking former fur traders who brought along their native wives. As J. D. Borthwick remarked about the Indians at the time, “they must be moved off, and make way for their betters.”³³⁶ The French Canadians were marginally better, for Bruff only condescendingly observed on May 5, 1850 in the Lassen’s Ranch area, “A party of Oregonian half-breed Frenchmen, camped close by, are on a big drunk.”³³⁷ Life for the fur trader in such an environment must have been very taxing.

Many, however, did return, albeit none the richer, to continue on with their lives.

Absence, however, could lead to marital breakup. In 1849 Joseph Plouffe (Carillon) left his family and seven children on the farm and headed south to California. After leaving, he learned that his wife, Therese, had left their house to follow James Bouche. Plouffe returned to try to locate his wife and eventually located Therese and James in Oregon City where, after several arguments, Plouffe was shot by James Bouche in the lower abdomen. The musket ball lodged in Plouffe's body and he died instantly. Governor Lane of Oregon ordered an inquest on the body but James Bouche fled north to continue his life in New Caledonia. Widow Therese married Baptiste LaRoque on September 9, 1850.

Thomas McKay led a wagon train, organized by Peter Burnet, to the California gold rush, returning November 18, 1849 no doubt to be with his family. He did not live long after that for he died sometime before April 19, 1850 and was buried in the fields of his claim near Scappoose.

The fur traders may have returned within a year for purely practical reasons. Aside from the fact that there were just too many people, they may have left to guard their properties back in the Willamette or even to plant crops.³³⁸ As well, the search for gold was moving to stage two. The surface gold was no longer available and what was needed was capital, organization and people. The family level of organization of the retired fur traders was no longer appropriate and they simply returned home.

Opportunity and Desertions

Desertions from ships and posts caused an unprecedented deterioration of HBC order. Almost the whole crew deserted one ship in Hawaii and left for the goldfields. Almost a third of the employees at Fort Vancouver deserted. Slightly fewer deserted from Fort Nisqually, both posts being strategically located south of the international border. The further north, the fewer desertions as it was just too difficult to get to the California gold fields.

In late 1849, the Cowlitz had difficulty holding its crew particularly on its way back from London. In January 1850 while in Honolulu most of the crew became mutinous taking advantage of opportunity and demanded higher wages and, failing that, deserted. Three of the apprentices were put in irons waiting to be sent back to England. The rest likely boarded one of the many ships heading for San Francisco.³³⁹ Still, for some, the choice was not that easy, torn between obligation and opportunity. Such was the case with nineteen year-old apprentice Robert Lawrence. Not joining the desertions from Honolulu, he chose to desert on shore but eventually returned, was put in irons and then released. Apologetic, he continued with the Cowlitz but, on April 6, 1850, three weeks after his arrival at Fort Victoria, he deserted along with William Dean and Arthur Orbell. He no doubt headed for the California gold fields and, like most, returned empty handed for, by June 1851, he was back at Fort Victoria working on the Cadboro. He worked on the Cadboro at least from June 25 to November 1, 1851 and perhaps at Fort Victoria but deserted once again on August 10, 1852.

Several desertions took place from the steamer Beaver in August 1849. While William Fairfoul and John Moloney, the engineer’s servant quit and were not heard from again, John Willey returned to live in Nanaimo for a year or two before he died. Joseph Champagne, who had previously quit Fort Victoria in 1845, needed little prompting to leave the steamer Beaver at the same time as his fellow crew members. However, the next year he was back farming in Marion County, Oregon where he stayed until the death of his first wife. After that, he moved south to the French settlement west of Roseburg, Oregon where he became a farmer and raised a family.

Edwin Roberts deserted the barque Columbia on May 5, 1849 for the California goldfields with eight other seamen, James Brooks, John Phillips, William Baker, John Thompson, William Murray, Abraham Dyke, Abraham Holland, Peter Petrelius and Alex Brands. Several of the crew had asked for a discharge but it was not granted, and so Roberts, who was in charge of the stores, raided the stores and left with the men. He appeared on the account books for four more years before his name was finally dropped. Because of his desertion, William Murray never received two letters that were sent from his mother in Aberdeen, Scotland.³⁴⁰

Other vessels suffered from a smattering of desertions. Joseph Horne served out his apprenticeship in the Columbia region but had a habit of stealing, refusing work and spending time in jail. On August 20, 1849, while working on the Mary Dare, he deserted but like many others, he appears to have returned, working from 1859 to 1863. Three more who deserted from the same vessel were not heard from again. They included Robert Raddon, who along with a likely relative, Lewis Raddon of the Beaver went off record.

For Hawaiians, the possibility of gold represented an alternative to the fur trade. The greatest number of Hawaiians who quit their jobs for better prospects were twenty-three from Fort Vancouver, a logical place as the nearby Willamette went deep into Oregon on its way to the promised riches of California. Small numbers deserted from other posts, for, unlike Fort Vancouver, it was just too difficult to get to California. Living in the Fort Vancouver Kanaka village or at the nearby Fort Vancouver farms it would be relatively easy to leave for the gold fields. Once they crossed the Columbia by boat, they could use a combination of boat, wagon road, ferry, or horses which they could obtain from local farmers to make their way south along the Willamette and over the mountains into California on routes established by several south expeditions. By and large the Hawaiians appeared to have purposefully severed ties with the HBC for less than 15% returned to work for the HBC. One reason is that they did not have families to anchor them down. It is possible they may have perished, found employment elsewhere or returned to Oahu from San Francisco. Of the three who returned to Fort Vancouver, Karreymoure may have been ill and seeking help for he died within a few months. Newanna, who went on to settle on San Juan Island, may have just liked the place. Thomas Como was of mixed descent and thus rooted on the Pacific slopes.

Konea who left his work at the Cowlitz farm returned shortly as he had a family to look after. Some were reluctant to make the journey. Keave'hacow and Kalama missed their opportunity at Fort Langley, but when Thompson River opened up for gold, both left but again returned to Nisqually.

According to one report, the miners were chiefly from Oregon and were recalled to protect their land claims.³⁴¹ According to Governor Lane's report in October 1849:

The Gold excitement occasioned the absence of a large part of our labouring population. Many of them have failed to put in crops; fine farms are lying idle, consequently the crops this year will fall short of the average. ³⁴²

Perhaps the overlanders were eyeing the empty farms "depopulated by emigration to California." As well, there was a backwash of disappointed miners coming north "to Oregon to repair their health and fortunes" and "spreading over the prairies."³⁴³

Many returned from the gold fields to settle land claims. Joseph Couture, one of the many deserters from Fort Vancouver, returned shortly, living out the rest of his life in the Willamette, Nez Perce and Fort Colville areas. In the fall of 1849, Pierre Pariseau quit Fort Umpqua but was back in short order settling a claim in Marion County. He later moved to the Douglas County area, took a backwoods claim and lived mainly by hunting and leading an otherwise active life. Antoine Petit (Gobin) quit the HBC in 1849 but when he returned the following year, he did not continue with the HBC. By 1870, he was living on Cowlitz Prairie and boarding John Landis, a stage driver from Indiana. The gold dust that Antoine Plante and his family got from the gold fields was spent on medicine to cure him of a fever from which he went bald. Around 1852, Plante and his family settled on the Spokane River at a strategic crossing, about forty miles east of Spokane.

Allan McLeod was another person who could not make up his mind. He deserted the Cowlitz Farm on February 24, 1849, came back to work the following year but deserted shortly after, was rehired and quit for the last time in 1852.

Donald McLeod and his family followed the gold to Montana when it was found there. On September 22, 1849, John McLeod, lured by better prospects, deserted his job at Fort Nisqually as a farm manager for the California gold fields; however, his search for gold was fruitless and he was happy to return the next year.

IMAGE 73 Reconstructed blacksmith's shop, Fort Vancouver. Photograph by author, 1992.

John McLoughlin's son David had better luck at finding gold. He resigned from his job as clerk in 1845 ostensibly to look after his father's affairs in the Willamette but, being swept up by the gold fever of the time, hired Indians to work for him and managed to acquire about $20,000 in gold dust.

The California gold rush was just the beginning for some. Narcisse Montigny followed up in 1858 by going to the Fraser River gold rush. Louis Ledoux (Daunt) returned to become a member of the paramilitary Cowlitz Rangers and by 1860 had taken on the role of packer.

Thirty-four year old Fort Vancouver blacksmith George Aitken left for California in 1849 and returned to settle in the Willamette Valley without seeking re-employment with the HBC. Amable Arquoitte spent only three months in California before returning to the Willamette. Cooper Charles Bayfield returned to the Fort Vancouver area but not to the employment of the HBC. Cooper James Bichan went to California but has not been traced further. Charles Bird went from the Fort Vancouver farm at 4th plain, returning in 1850. He worked briefly for the HBC in 1855-1856. James Brannan, after being shipwrecked on the Vancouver in May 1848, decided he had had enough and deserted for California in February 1849 and was not heard from again.

The story of Andrew Sublette from the Sublette trading family is somewhat different. In the 1840s he lived at the Sublette farm in Missouri, pursued gold in California and eventually settled in Los Angeles where, when hunting, was killed by a bear.

IMAGE 74 "A rough and tumble with a grizzly." Sketches of Hudson Bay Life by H. Bullock Webster, 1874-1880, UBC Rare Books and Special Collections.

Wars, Fur Traders as Recruits and the End of the HBC Activities

South of the international border after the mayhem of the measles epidemic, Cayuse War and California gold rush, retiring French, Scottish and mixed descent fur traders, many with wives, sought wider settlement areas. The Cowlitz and Nisqually areas were also favoured in addition to the Willamette. Spokane County (which included the long-time favourite Spokane River area), Stevens County (which includes Chewelah, and the Colville Valley area), and Walla Walla County (which includes French Valley, a sprawling area and French Town which was renamed Lowden) became other favoured areas for settlement. Here, the Beauchemin, Brancheau, Brisbois, Dorion, Dauny, McBean, Pambrun and Raymond families chose the last area in the early to mid fifties to put down roots. Generally, relations between these settlers and local natives were good, reflecting the long established relationships with the NWC and HBC. However, continued American settlement on traditionally Indian land coupled with the different attitudes and policies of the new administration meant that tensions were once again on the rise and peace was not to last.

Three treaties in May and June 1855 contributed to these tensions. The Umatilla, Walla Walla and Cayuse were coerced to move to a reservation in north eastern Oregon, a second group to the Yakima Indian Reservation and the third, the Nez Perce, to an area that took in land which included parts of Washington, Oregon and Idaho. However, when gold was discovered on the Yakima Reservation and white miners moved onto the reservation, the Yakima, later joined by the Cayuse who had previously stood their ground, rebelled and the Yakima War of 1855-1859 erupted. Although the threat to the settled fur traders was less than that to the American settlers, nonetheless many families removed themselves to other parts of the country to stay out of harm's way. Others were called up. On October 13, 1855, seventy-five mainly settled fur traders and their male descendants were called up in Portland to serve in the war against the Yakima Indians until the close of the war or until discharged. They were to serve in Captain N. A. Connoyer's company 'K' of the first regiment of Oregon mounted volunteers, commanded by Colonel James W. Nesmith.³⁴⁴ This regiment served almost exclusively for former HBC employees.

In another part of Oregon Territory, annual skirmishes from 1852 between the Rogue River Valley Indians and Americans resulted in full-scale conflict by October 1855. It was at that time that Joel Palmer, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, decided to move all Indians in Western Oregon onto two reservations, the Siletz [Lincoln County] and Grand Ronde [Polk County].³⁴⁵

The Colville Indian Reservation³⁴⁶ in Washington Territory was not created until April 9, 1872 and almost immediately reduced in size on July 2, 1872. The earlier reservations became home to several first and second generation fur traders. Jean Baptiste Vautrin, who lived on Vancouver Island into the 1880s and at least three of his children, went south to live either on or near the Grand Ronde Indian Reservation. The move was strategic, likely to be closer to the wife's relatives. He died and was buried there. Louis Shanagrate's son, Joseph, gravitated to the Grande Ronde where he became judge of the Indian councils and head of the Indian police.³⁴⁷ Joseph Desautel had spent years living around the Colville Reservation and his descendants subsequently moved onto it.

Between 1854 and 1856, a series of treaties micro-managed by Washington Territory Governor Isaac Stevens took place. His efforts led to the creation of nine relatively smaller Indian reservations west of the Cascades and north of the Columbia River.³⁴⁸ Given its strategic location and previously good working relationship with the natives, the HBC/PSAC post of Fort Nisqually was caught up in the change. Nisqually Chief Leschi, who also doubled as a horse tender for the HBC/PSAC on Yelm prairie, was dissatisfied with the terms of the Medicine Creek Treaty of 1854 and, in the summer of 1855 reportedly traveled across the Cascade Mountains to consult with his Yakima Indian relatives (on his mother's side), a group then on the verge of war themselves.³⁴⁹ As in the Cayuse War of 1846, employees of the Nisqually post had to make choices. Natives who had taken refuge at the post in 1855 were arrested by US authorities and taken away.³⁵⁰

Sometimes the personnel at Fort Nisqually could only stand by receiving news or as spectators to the unfolding events. On December 8, 1855 they learned:

News came here this morning that Lieutenant Slaughter and also three of his soldiers had been killed – four soldiers were also wounded. It seems to have happened through carelessness on the part of the whites. Lieut Slaughter had taken up his quarters in an old log hut with large crevices between the logs, and had a large fire in the centre of the house. No watch was kept outside, the night being very dark the Indians are enabled to approach close to the house and thrust their guns through the openings in the logs. Lieut. Slaughter was shot through the heart, also three of his men killed, and four mortally wounded. The Company is ordered to Steilacoom.³⁵¹

Other times the action was closer to home. On March 5, 1856, nervous soldiers who were guarding the Nisqually post felt that there were natives ready to attack and so “fired guns from the openings in the Bastions at intervals all night.”³⁵² An examination in the morning proved that no one had been there. For the people at the post, however, work continued on as normal. Martial law was declared by the Governor of Washington Territory and when three employees with Indian wives refused to leave their homes, they were arrested.³⁵³ On May 21, 1856, one of the red-shirted volunteers shot a native by the name of Bob, who was cutting firewood in the post. Dr. Tolmie and a group of men, largely witnesses, left the post two days later to have the volunteer brought to justice but were instead mocked and had to retreat to the safety of the post.³⁵⁴ In spite of Tolmie making a spirited appeal for the life of Chief Leschi, whom he saw as a man caught up in an unfair conflict, the Nisqually chief was eventually on February 19, 1858. To top it off, over three thousand acres had been removed from HBC/PSAC land and given over to an enlarged Nisqually Indian Reservation in January 20, 1856.

From the late 1850s on, the HBC, PSAC and fur traders south of the 49th parallel faced increasing pressure from American settlers. Post records show a diminishing labour force and an HBC merchandizing supplies and agricultural products. Both sides postured to the point of excess. Vessels such as the Cadboro and Harpooner were seized for trivial matters, such as attempting to avoid newly imposed duties on a few items. Initially inflated HBC and PSAC claims were negotiated for claimed land and later increased to include loss of trade, navigation rights and loss of cattle and rents. Under the Convention of July 1, 1863 a Joint Commission sat to review the claims and in 1869 an award for $650,000 was given for the extinguishment of all rights to the American territory.³⁵⁵ On a US government to HBC negotiating level, there was a level of understanding unlike that of “public opinion of pioneers and land-hungry settlers.”³⁵⁶

Cutting Losses: The Formation of the Colony of Vancouver Island

For those fur traders who were still working for the HBC north of the 49th parallel, the California gold rush south of the nearly three year old international border had less influence. Unlike the massive desertions from HBC posts in Oregon Territory, relatively few deserted. Part of this may have been geography. Whereas Fort Vancouver was geographically positioned to access California via the Willamette Valley, more northerly posts possessed no such advantage. The farther north, the less likely one would make the difficult overland trek. Hawaiian Tom Keave, for example, deserted at Fort Langley, but the distance to California might have dissuaded him for he was soon back at work. Even though Fort Victoria was best positioned, most men stayed at their posts. On the ships on the other hand group dynamics probably fuelled the sailors’ sense of mobility and persuaded five from the Beaver and four from the Mary Dare to desert on August 20, 1849. With opportunity on the horizon, a few were looking for any way out. On April 16, 1849, the obstreperous James Weyland used rain as an excuse not to work. That September, Weyland saw his opportunity and deserted along with Robert Allid in the Cadboro in September 10, 1849. The twelve HBC miners who deserted from Fort Rupert at the same time left as they felt they weren’t being treated properly as colliers.

Sometimes the desertions were delayed. No doubt enticed by the stories of gold in California George Wishart, Charles Lobb and Albert F. Hale deserted the Norman Morison on May 11, 1850 for the coal carrier, the barque England lying at anchor near Fort Rupert. In fear of being captured and taken back and no doubt punished, the trio fled to the woods and, fearing that they were going to be attacked, struck out first but were killed in the process.

Still, during 1849 an intact HBC north of the border presented realistic, secure employment opportunities. At the same time, the fur trader was being presented with another option in 1849 – Vancouver becoming a British colony.

That Vancouver Island became a colony was a reaction and an effort to cut losses. As the Oregon Territory to the south was filling up with Americans and so to forestall a “peaceful penetration” of Americans into British territory, “British statesmen felt the necessity of taking some step to secure the territory that had been legally obtained”³⁵⁷ by the Treaty of Washington of 1846. Arguments were presented showing that a fur trading company would not be suitable as a colonizing agent.³⁵⁸ Because of animosity surrounding the idea of giving exclusive title of Vancouver Island to the HBC, the HBC in its own defence got R. M. Martin to produce The Hudson's Bay Territories and Vancouver's Island extolling the Christian virtues of the London company.³⁵⁹ This assurance was probably not necessary as the HBC's strong capital position, its history with native people and the fact that Sir John Pelly at the same time was Governor of the HBC and of the Bank of England all helped to persuade the British Government that the HBC was the right body to administer the new colony of Vancouver Island.³⁶⁰ Shortly after Queen Victoria signed the grant on January 13, 1849, Colonial Secretary Earl Grey modified the terms of the grant. Originally to be operated on a corporate basis under the Wakefieldian system of colonial administration, Grey kept the essentials of the Wakefield system but modified the terms insisting that the land be sold at a reasonable rate. The HBC was allowed to keep 10% of the proceeds while spending the remaining 90% on needed infrastructure. The carrot and stick idea was that labourers would work and save to purchase their twenty acres that would qualify them to vote. However, buyers had to come up with a pound an acre. As well, the HBC had decided to keep several square miles around Fort Victoria for itself. However, historians point out that the Vancouver Island colonial regime, under the aegis of the HBC, was less than successful citing the inadequacy of the modified Wakefieldian land law system which was implanted on an essentially non-agrarian Vancouver Island and the HBC's failure to bring out large numbers of non-native settlers. Indeed, James Douglas, who was aware of the effectiveness of the American distribution of free land, and given that the agricultural land on Vancouver Island was very limited, had recommended free grants of land.³⁶¹ For all the weaknesses inherent in the Wakefieldian system, historian Richard Mackie refuted an apparent lack of success, showing that by bending the rules, the HBC was able to circumvent the untenable aspects and create a more inclusive viable colony.³⁶²

The logic behind the Wakefieldian system was that it would reproduce a stable English social hierarchy that would oversee ordered colonial agricultural settlement. Theoretically labourers would be provided with an enticing model of upward mobility in that they could save, purchase land and become full voting members of the colony. However, as Mackie points out, fur trade employees settled in the Willamette to farm, whereas on Vancouver Island, with its limited agricultural possibilities, employees "left the company in order to trade, fish, mine, log, retire, and farm."³⁶³ As well, between the years 1851 and 1858 officers, clerks and professionals made up almost 30% of the landowners, while labourers made up 56% of the landowners, thus fulfilling the terms of ordered settlement.³⁶⁴

Officers, particularly Chief Factors and Chief Traders, were drawn to the new colony as its new social order mirrored the familiar HBC hierarchy. A focal point would have been Chief Factor James Douglas, one of the grand old men of the fur trade, now Governor of the Colony of Vancouver Island. In December 1849, Douglas purchased several hundred acres of land near the old post. Other chief factors, William Fraser Tolmie, William Henry McNeill, John Work, and Roderick Finlayson, all eventually chose the area for their retirement homes. Chief traders also flocked to the area. John Frederick Kennedy and James Murray Yale ended their days there. A.C. Anderson chose nearby Saanich for his farm, Henry Newsham Peers chose Colquitz and Charles Dodd purchased land in Victoria as well as Lake District. John Sebastian Helmcken, Joseph William McKay, Hamilton Moffat, William Mouatt, George Stewart Simpson, Thomas and William Charles, John M. Wark and the long suffering John Tod all chose the Victoria area to live out their days with their native and mixed descent wives.

With these officers a certain tradition carried on in true HBC legacy fashion. One of James Douglas' daughters married J. S. Helmcken. James Murray Yale's daughters married Henry Newsham Peers and George Stewart Simpson. John Work's daughters married Roderick Finlayson and William Fraser Tolmie. William Henry McNeill's daughter married Hamilton Moffatt. Although James Birnie had chosen to stay south of the border, one daughter married A. C. Anderson, another John M. Wark. Although John George McTavish departed for elsewhere, his daughter married Charles Dodd. Donald McAulay was elsewhere, but his daughter married William Henry McNeill. They provided a network of relationships.

The role of the HBC, no longer possessing the exclusive right to trade with the natives, had shifted in that it was in fact administering a new British colony. In this role, to extinguish native claims to certain areas, James Douglas negotiated fourteen treaties between 1850 and 1854 in which the land was conveyed over to the HBC as legal agent. Traditional village sites and fields were retained and the natives were at liberty to hunt and fish as they had done traditionally. Eleven of the treaties took place around the Fort Victoria area, one at Nanaimo and two at Fort Rupert.³⁶⁵ The last treaty that Douglas was able to negotiate was signed in 1854. England was no longer interested in providing money as it had been at war in the Crimea for over a year and no further money was available.

In spite the HBC still being the main colonial administrative agent, conveyor of Indian treaties and the main employer on the island, its place of primacy was clearly eroding. The social and political world of the fur trade long tolerated in the name of peace, order and company profits was not to continue. Different forces were coming into play and class, race, gender and behaviour now mattered. The attitudes of Victorian England transported to the colonies were hardening, a possible tiring from the reform movement and unrest of the 1830s and 1840s. Non-Victorian behaviour in far off Vancouver Island was beginning to be seen as aberrant. The monolithic class structure of the HBC was fractured by the appearance of officers of the Royal Navy now attending Esquimalt, where ships docked, and English government officials and businessmen settlers now assuming major roles.

The women, once pivotal to the fur trade, were favoured by their gender but not by their race or racial mixture. Mixed descent daughters, particularly of officers, long favoured as eligible brides, could now hone their social skills in finishing schools such as St. Ann's Academy set up by a Catholic religious order from Quebec in 1858.³⁶⁶ However, as Sylvia Van Kirk pointed out, "racism could indeed negate social aspiration." Daughters of officers were often judged by their degrees of Indian-ness. In the 1850s it was remarked that although the Ross daughters were fine looking, their obvious Indian blood put them on the "edge of society."³⁶⁷ In 1861, Sophia Cracroft remarked that Jane Douglas, who had married ranking HBC officer Alexander Grant Dallas:

has a very bright complexion, pretty dark eyes & the other features very tolerable—but the great width & flatness of the face are remarkable, & even her intonation & voice are characteristic (as we now perceive) of her descent.³⁶⁸

For the men, it was a mixed story. One standout was the son of the very bookish William Fraser Tolmie. Born of mixed descent in 1867, a year after Vancouver Island and British Columbia united and the fur trade was becoming a distant memory, Simon Fraser Tolmie followed his father's footsteps by training to be a veterinary surgeon in Ontario. He returned to British Columbia where he entered politics, eventually becoming premier of the province from 1928 to 1933. For others, the story was not as glowing, as mixed male descendants of officers were not nearly so fortunate as their sisters. Both race and gender worked against them. In a society with an increasing plurality of white males, mainly tradesmen from the British Isles, the relatively privileged life of an officer's son presented a slippery slope towards lassitude, particularly as an escape when being disparaged for his race. The "gaol records" of later years in the colony attest to such a resigned behaviour.³⁶⁹ Yet, others, such as Dr. John Frederick Kennedy and John Ross did not fall through the cracks and went on to lead productive lives.

Society's high expectations were not placed on the ordinary retiring HBC servants to the same degree. For those who chose to settle on Vancouver Island, life was somewhat easier. Many were already working on Vancouver Island while others were drawn from the coast as well as the mainland. Still others south of the international border had memories of the Cayuse War and wanted to avoid the Yakima Wars in Oregon Territory. Sometimes they were drawn by family ties.

Friendships and interconnecting family ties drew some to Vancouver Island from the south of the border. For example, George McKenzie, the mixed-descent millwright who had been previously assigned to Fort Victoria to build a mill, was the first of a group to come. He was followed by his father-in-law, James Goudie a twenty year veteran of Fort Colvile. John Greig, the son-in-law of James Goudie, was the next to follow. The last raised a family and, after dissatisfaction with the lime he mined at Thetis Lake, began to quarry lime at Tod Inlet, a quarry which was eventually converted into Butchart Gardens.

Taking advantage of the opportunity to become naturalized subjects in British territory, several Hawaiians found a place for themselves during the colonial regime. For example, Ebony, Tom Keave, Balau, Tamaree and Pakee became members of the Voltigeurs volunteer police force in Victoria. Around 1856 in Victoria, Keave and seven others, (four of whom may have independently arrived on the scene) bought city lots in Victoria. Others moved to nearby locations.

In 1853, after working three years at Fort Rupert, Jim Kimo followed the large exodus of miners to Nanaimo where he contentedly lived in a cabin with a cabbage patch. There in the coal-mining settlement, dressed in a bright red sash and tasselled cap, he undoubtedly enjoyed his job as night watchman, calling "All's Well" at midnight while he simultaneously fired his gun and struck his drum. His job was abolished in 1860, at which point he went to Fort Langley. Perhaps the shock of leaving Vancouver Island was too much, for he died the following year.

Mixed descent Thomas Ouamtany or "one-arm Tomo," had been in on the construction of Fort Victoria and so chose familiar surroundings to settle. Working out of Nanaimo from 1856 as a handyman and leader of the Iroquois, he also found a calling as an interpreter. He was suspected by some of killing his wife in 1863 and cannot be tracked after 1868.

Other Iroquois found that settling on Vancouver Island was not to their liking at all. In 1853, at the age of forty-two, St. Regis Iroquois Thomas Sagoyawatha, or "Big Tomo", decided to settle in the colony where he had worked for ten years. In 1853 this Nanaimo axe-man tended to become entangled in brawls. In one fight one of his fingers was bitten off. That is what possibly drove him from Vancouver Island to Fort Langley where he worked until 1858. He ended his career at Simpson in 1862.

The resident French Canadians found the Island colonial system comfortable enough to choose to live out their lives there. Three quarters of those working on Vancouver Island in 1849 chose to settle. This group had been working an average of thirteen years with the HBC, and their youthful average age of 33.5 years meant they still had several years in which to start afresh. As well, most had coastal or local wives obtained at their coastal fort postings. A typical example of a "settler" would be Frederick Minie, from St. Eduard, Lower Canada. He spent fourteen years with the HBC, largely at Fort Victoria, as both a blacksmith and carpenter, both marketable occupations in the new colony. On August 26, 1853, at the age of thirty-six, Minie purchased Victoria town lot #361, where he and his mixed descent wife raised three of their children. From 1862, he started a second family with another wife.

Very few French Canadians working on the mainland where they had put down stakes in their wives' native territories chose to come to Vancouver Island. However, several came from the north coast with northern wives possibly to get away from Fort Simpson where under the pressures of increased traffic and alcohol, post discipline and the native social fabric had begun to unravel. The colony presented a safe alternative.

Jean Baptiste Jolibois spent thirty-nine years in the fur trade, part of them at Fort Simpson, before settling on Vancouver Island and acquiring land which was paid for by the colony. Soon, however, his heirs were the beneficiaries, as the unfortunate Jean was run over by a cart in 1861.

Another twenty-two year employee of the fur trade, blacksmith Camil Raymond was also someone who spent eighteen years at Fort Simpson where he most likely partnered with his northern native wife. At Simpson, HBC punishment for spiriting other people's wives through the fort drain once sent him to the Russians but an open reward of two blankets brought him back to Simpson in the arms of the natives. By 1853, a more chastened Raymond settled into tranquil domesticity with his northern wife and child on a city lot in Victoria.

Emanuel Douillette did not fit the pattern of settling in his wife's territory. This twelve year HBC veteran of the Kamloops area retired in 1851, bringing his Shuswap wife and four of their eventual six children to Vancouver Island where he managed a farm. Not all was bliss in his Vancouver Island home, however, for, in December, 1853, he got caught up in his own pig war with the neighbouring Rev. Staines when Staine's pigs ended up in Douillette's possession. The story is somewhat contradictory as to who got punished for what but the unfortunate Douillette succumbed to it all at the beginning of January 1858.

Basil Bottineau was too far away in 1849 to participate in the California gold rush so in May 1855 he, with two Canadians and nine Stikine natives, struck out to find gold in the Stikine area.

Some like Francois Xavier Cote found himself in the goldfields through later employment. In October 1861 he was sent by the HBC on a survey expedition, led by Robert Homfray, to Bute Inlet to survey a route across the Chilcotin Plains and into the gold fields of the Cariboo. The group experienced considerable hardship and had to be rescued by local natives.

In the fall of 1850 when gold was discovered on the Queen Charlotte Islands, Pierre Lagace was dispatched by John Work from Fort Simpson with a party of natives to determine the extent of the gold find. The Haidas, determined to protect their own interests, frustrated Lagace's effort, forcing him to return without information.

Jean Baptiste Brulez was drawn back to the territory of his wife – in a somewhat circuitous route arriving after the Island colonial period. The thirty-one year old Brulez, whose very name augured an important event in his life, had been working only nine years with the HBC when his carelessness caused the burning down of Fort Langley on April 11, 1840. He stayed around to help rebuild the fort but, perhaps as a form of punishment, was sent down to the Snake Country where he worked for a further two years. Perhaps a little bitter, he quit in 1844 and settled in the St. Paul area of the Willamette Valley. In 1850, however, he resettled in Lewis County [Washington]. Around 1859, preferring to live in territory familiar to his Sooke wife, Brulez, wife Marguerite and family joined a large cavalcade of freight wagons and a freight train and moved north. There they settled at the mouth of the Sooke River and grew feed on land that Brulez finally pre-empted on September 18, 1884.

The colony of Vancouver Island drew settling fur traders to it for a variety of reasons, not the least of which was geographical familiarity and familial ties. The new type of governance was a challenge for those of the officer class but, for others, a favourable place to settle.

One Last HBC Stronghold: The Interior

During the period 1846 to 1858, north of the 49th parallel and apart from Vancouver Island, the HBC still controlled a vast area on the coast and mainland. Personnel still served in the cluster of New Caledonia posts as well as Fort Kamloops or Thompson River, Fort Langley (now including Forts Hope and Yale), and the coastal post of Fort Simpson.

In the New Caledonia area, in which one might loosely include the Thompson River/Kamloops area, settlement still consisted largely of servants' houses around the posts, a necessary move as life could not be sufficiently sustained through agriculture as it could further south. Agriculture was better the further south one ranged. Generally, however, personnel still depended on the HBC for survival. Nonetheless, ever since the mid 1830s under Peter Skene Ogden, life had much improved. Rice, flour, beans bacon, tea, sugar as well as milk and butter were now more commonplace and life more tolerable for the engage.³⁷⁰ Catholic priests had been coming in since 1842, lending a new sense of order familiar to many but absent for many years.³⁷¹ Families such as Waccan Boucher's offspring had learned to live off the land as well as depend on the HBC.

For the Bouchers, however, the end of an era came on August 26, 1849 when sixty year old Waccan succumbed to the after-effects of the measles:

Sunday, August 26, 1849 Old Wacca [sic] departed his life at 6 O'clock this Evening leaving behind him a helpless wife and poor children.³⁷²

The "helpless" statement stands in stark contrast to the illustrious career of the man himself. Perhaps it was an expression of sympathy. Alternatively, his wife may have become too dependent on the post, possibly at the expense of relations with others outside the post.

The New Caledonia interpreter and enforcer who had come out with Simon Fraser had excelled at everything he did whether he was acting as an interpreter, guiding a canoe, running a dog train or making snow shoes. If trouble arose at a particular post, he was sent off to create an air of stability and occasionally took charge of a post in the absence of an officer. Boucher could always be relied upon to obtain food for the Company and its employees even when food was scarce. He had up to seventeen children, the exact number had not been determined. Now he was gone, to be replaced at Fort St. James by long time employee, Jean Baptiste Lapierre.³⁷³

Although the Bouchers were prominent in the New Caledonia region, the region as an HBC monopoly controlled area did not have enough drawing power to retain all the children. The first to leave was Francois. After spending nine years working at a variety of jobs at local New Caledonia posts, in 1843 he moved south and became a settler in the Willamette Valley, Oregon, where he raised a family. In 1851, he returned to work for the HBC at Fort Vancouver, likely doing odd jobs and, according to records, went east over the Rocky Mountains to Canada sometime in 1852. Raised in New Caledonia, young James joined the HBC in 1841 and, in 1844, following his brother François south, he became a settler in St. Paul in the Willamette River Valley, Oregon. There, in 1848, he married with the intention of raising a family. However, family tradition holds that, because on June 8, 1849, he shot and killed Joseph Plouffe, his wife's uncle and guardian, he had to make a quick exit and flee north to familiar territory to begin his life again. Once again in New Caledonia, from 1851-1853, he appeared to work casually for the HBC and then steadily until his retirement.

George Waccan Boucher started his career with the HBC in 1850 at Fort Alexandria, worked in the Victoria/San Juan Island area and Fort Simpson before moving back to San Juan.

Joseph on the other hand joined the HBC in 1857 and chose in later years to settle in the North Forks of the Thompson River area and then worked as a labourer in the Lytton-Cache Creek area.

William, remembered as "Billy Bouchie", was a capable linguist who learned seven native languages. Upon the death of his father in 1850, he took over family responsibilities and from 1858 to 1862 worked for the HBC. He chose the Quesnel area in which to settle when pre-emption became available. The lives of sons Jean Marie and Pierre appear to have gravitated mainly around the Fort St. James area, continuing the tradition and making themselves useful and valuable HBC employees.

The Ogdens were another prominent family in the New Caledonia Region. Although Peter Skene Ogden had spent some time there, not all his children made it their home. Charles, like his father, moved around south of the international border and only returned north in 1860 when pre-emption was a reality, eventually settling at Lac La Hache, British Columbia. Young Isaac who was born in New Caledonia, joined the HBC around the age of fourteen and worked at the Fort Vancouver Sales shop, never returning, for he was killed over a game of cards in 1869 at Champoege, Oregon. Michael Ogden, who worked for eleven years in the New Caledonia area, moved south to take charge of Fort Connah in the Flatheads and died in Montana. Peter, the oldest son, chose to live and work through his career in New Caledonia. Following in the footsteps of his father, he was known as one of the perpetrators of the "club law" which saw discipline through violence. He was reprimanded by George Simpson for his heavy handedness.

From 1846 when pre-emption of land was not available, experienced employees began drifting away from New Caledonia and heading for retirement areas elsewhere or Canada which was still a Great Lakes/St. Lawrence River enclave. From 1846 to 1854 on average five seasoned, experienced employees retired annually, heading out in March of each respective year.³⁷⁴ As well desertions were leaving an increasing shortage of personnel. On September 19, 1850, "Perish" Boucher deserted on the flimsy excuse that Donald Manson "did not pay attention to him." After his capture at an Indian camp the following day, he experienced the "club law" getting "a sound thrashing" with fists, probably administered by Donald McLean.³⁷⁵ According to Father Morice, a stop-gap plan was hatched by the HBC to employ natives as regular employees (beyond their usual menial tasks but still to be paid in kind) to replace the absent regular servants.³⁷⁶ He also hinted at a pervading malaise amongst the native population which had evolved after years of contact:

morality, peace, and order among the natives who have been cursed with...[the]...introduction of intoxicants.³⁷⁷

The Catholic priest accused the officers of ignoring the "wild orgies" among the employees and freely distributing "large kettlefuls of liquor" and implied that such events were covered up by the London company.³⁷⁸ His finger pointing is not supported by existing records.

Although the records are sparse, it would appear that leadership had begun to weaken within the region as building workmanship appeared to become lax. On December 2, 1852 at Fort Babine, for example, the doors were "tumbling to pieces." Rather than blaming the carpenter, the journal writer blamed the man in charge of the post.³⁷⁹

In spite of this deteriorating state, not all people chose to abandon the area. John McDougall, who had spent a total of six years in New Caledonia and Kamloops, returned. Having missed the 1849 gold rush, in 1858 he left his new comfortable home in Victoria to seek gold in the Thompson River area. After discovering gold, he successfully worked a claim in the Tulameen/Similkameen area. Later in 1861, with the proceeds of his claim, and during the time more waves of Europeans began to scour the land for further gold, McDougall and his young family headed for the familiar Okanagan area where they pre-empted land at Okanagan Mission; he moved to the west side of the lake in 1890. His 320 acre ranch in Guisachan was purchased by Lord and Lady Aberdeen, the future Governor General of Canada.³⁸⁰

Argyle clerk Neil McLean McArthur claimed that the HBC was not properly supporting him in Fort Hall [Idaho] and so quit in 1854 and later chose the Hat Creek [British Columbia] area to settle.

Some came back to the area for temporary work. Having retired on Vancouver Island, Leon Morel and André Balthazard in May 1856 were made chief contractors for the construction of Fort Shepherd, the replacement of Fort Colvile. Upon Morel's return to Vancouver Island, he became a member of the Voltigeurs from December 1857 - March 1858 and may have followed the gold rush for in August 1858, a "Frenchman named Morel" was in a fight with the natives above Yale and received a gunshot wound to the groin. This Morel returned to Victoria where he was nursed back to health.

HBC officer Donald McLean got into the service industry. He retired from the HBC in 1860 to the junction of Hat and Bonaparte Creeks with his six-foot native wife, Sophia, and their many children. There, along with a ranch, they built a restaurant to service miners on their way to the Cariboo goldfields. After his death, his family was left in abject poverty when a friend failed to register his land claim and consequently his boys, years later, went on a murderous rampage.³⁸¹

Others came north with the influx of miners from the south. Andrew Dominique Pambrun retired in 1855 but according to oral tradition probably came up from the Walla Walla area to the Fraser River gold fields in 1859-1860. Edouard Belanger came up from the Willamette Valley to the Fraser River gold rush in 1858 but was drowned there. In 1858 William Pion became a packer for miners. Ranald McDonald whose world wide adventures are chronicled in his own life story involved himself in mining ventures north of the border in his later life.

The defining year of change was 1858 and the gold rush. More fur traders saw opportunity when in late 1858 the Colony of British Columbia was proclaimed. The HBC monopoly was no longer, and land transformation allowing greater participation for the former HBC employee was in the works. The following year, Douglas instructed his gold commissioner and magistrate Philip Nind to set aside occupied Indian villages and lands as reserves. That and pre-emption rules were formalized by a proclamation by Douglas on January 4, 1860. Now, former fur traders could stake out land, improve it and purchase it at a minimal rate to acquire a land title deed. One just had to be a British subject or become a naturalized British subject by swearing allegiance to the Crown.

IMAGE 75 Entrance to Fort Simpson (1868) from Emil Teichman's A journey to Alaska in the year 1868' being a diary of the late Emile Teichman, edited with an introduction by his son Oskar. Kensington: Cayme Press, 1925.

Fort Simpson: Vibrant but Problematic

The coastal area was a different story. It was problematic if one intended to stake out land for settlement and agriculture on the coast north of Vancouver Island. Agricultural land was in short supply. During the 1846-1858 period Fort Simpson was the only major operational port left on the coast outside of the two posts on Vancouver Island (Forts Victoria and Rupert) and a Russian American area post (Fort Stikine), the last of which appeared to operate only with a skeleton crew until 1849. Simpson had grown to become a major hub for native to native interaction, for shipping, and for Company as well as non-company trade. As such, the rules of engagement had become somewhat blurred.

The native village which had grown up adjacent to the HBC post had, according to Simpson, an estimated 1841 population of eight hundred “as home guards, under the protection of our guns.” By 1857, William Duncan counted 2,325 men, women and children, perhaps high as some of the young children found it to be a game and made an effort to be counted twice.³⁸² As well, in the late 1840s, a large number of Tsimshian had moved their winter quarters to the fort site.

IMAGE 76 Fort Simpson from the Beach (1868) from Emil Teichman's A journey to Alaska in the year 1868 being a diary of the late Emile Teichman, edited with an introduction by his son Oskar. Kensington: Cayme Press, 1925.

Additionally, it had become a hub of native trading activity drawing in numerous Haida, Tlingit and other Tsimshian nations trading everything from slaves to potatoes to eulachan oil to prostitutes. On August 19, 1856, the HBC could only observe when visiting Haida, after having killed an American in the south and ransacked his house, brought back with them nine Nisqually women.³⁸³ The HBC could only observe once again when on February 11, 1858 a visiting Tongas chief had a slave woman killed at a potlatch.³⁸⁴ Simpson called it “a resort of a vast number of Indians.”³⁸⁵ One contributing flaw in this otherwise ideal location was that it was located close to Russian America where alcohol was freely used during trade and so the HBC responded in kind.³⁸⁶ Alcohol only exacerbated inter-tribal rivalries played out alongside the populated post. The availability of alcohol also played to the weakness of employees who were otherwise protected by the Company post site unless they chose to live outside in the “home guard” village. Employees who had difficulty working because of venereal and other diseases were regularly spirited off to Nanaimo or Victoria for treatment. Others, tiring of the game and able to persuade natives to take them south, deserted in canoes.³⁸⁷

Amongst this seeming chaos, Fort Simpson was also a lively and vigorous place where family formation very frequently took place. The extant records show a large number of births to HBC employees accompanied by a high infant mortality rate, not uncommon for the time. With marriage came privilege, and wives could live within the walls of the post. But the privilege extended beyond living within the palisade to freely sharing HBC goods with outsiders. On August 5, 1857 when John Spences' wife sold the post's rum or brandy to natives she may have been asked to leave.³⁸⁸ In the summer of 1858 when it was found that John Sabiston was reselling stolen Indian shop blankets and rum through Felix Dudouaire's wife, Sabiston was ordered to live in the men's houses while his wife took all her children and an immense quantity of property out of the fort and went to live in the Indian lodges.³⁸⁹ HBC employees stole to supplement their own alcoholism. On May 23, 1857, William Fraser took a ladder and smashed a second story window of the Indian shop from which he took a bale of fifty blankets, trading each pair of blankets for a bottle of rum.³⁹⁰

In spite of this, relations with the homeguard community were always paramount. Very often native women were forgiven for indiscretions. For example, on September 27, 1856,

All the elite of the women in camp drunk again today. Madam Perrish Legace at the head of the drunk, she is the very devil.³⁹¹

Native relations trumped Western religious observances. On January 12, 1858, two employees were allowed to volunteer “to saw wood for the chief ‘Ilgeth’ for his new house”, but in the following month, when William Duncan wanted the HBC men to stay behind for catechism, William Henry McNeill insisted that they work.³⁹² When a child was accidentally crushed to death as Baptiste Desmarais was sawing a log, the child's family was compensated with blankets, a large amount of cotton cloth, shirts, handkerchief, tobacco leaves and “2 papers of vermillion.”³⁹³ On Nov. 24, 1856, after Pierre Turcot had beaten his wife unmercifully and her father struck Turcot, taking his daughter away with him, the father was compensated with two bottles of rum to keep native relations peaceful.³⁹⁴ The following year, Turcot had to ask permission to return to the fort after being off work for drunkenness the previous month. Two weeks later, perhaps in a moment of remorse, he was recruited by missionary William Duncan for his Men’s Night School but it is not known how long he studied.

From 1860, since Fort Simpson was essentially a native reserve with a pocket of land still owned by the Hudson’s Bay Company, little could be pre-empted for settlement. Hence, a large number of fur traders chose to leave mainly for Vancouver Island. Still others like Hans Peter Berentzen chose to stay. Other descendant families of the fur traders settled comfortably within the context of the Indian Reserve.

The Lower Mainland: Fort Langley and Settlement

For the period 1846-1858, Fort Langley presented a very different story to that of Fort Simpson. Nestled on the banks of the Fraser River surrounded by the rich soil of the Fraser Valley, it had become less of a fur trade post than a source of exports for fish and agricultural products. In some respects it was like Fort Colvile, quiet, peaceful and confident in its role in the area. Consequently many fur trade employees chose to put down roots in this familiar territory.

Some had grown old in the area and had put down deep roots. Peeopeeoh, for example, was too well entrenched and old to move elsewhere. Having joined the fur trade as a nineteen year old in 1817, Peeopeeoh by 1827 had already begun to raise a family at Fort Langley, a post which he had helped establish. This long serving Hawaiian sawyer and cooper eventually put down his tools in 1852 to retire in Derby, the original Fort Langley site where he had lived all along. It is uncertain how long after the gold rush he lived, for two years after being asked to leave Derby for a new Langley site, he pre-empted land across the river.

Between 1860 and 1863, William Cromarty who had long worked at the cooperage alongside Hawaiians Charles Ohia, Peter Ohule and Maayo pre-empted 260 acres a distant eight miles north of Fort Langley. In 1868 he was made a school trustee and 1869 found him cutting and curing hams and making salmon barrels. As his first claim was somewhat distant from his place of employment, in August 1869, he pre-empted a further 160 acres on the south bank of the river only three and a half miles from Langley. On November 19, 1870 he retired but returned to work periodically to support his native wife, Salum’mia, and their family.

Ovid Allard spent much of his forty year career at Fort Langley. When the 1846 border was drawn, he established a new brigade route from Fort Kamloops to Fort Langley and oversaw the construction of Forts Yale and Hope. However, his lack of education and disagreements with James Murray Yale impacted on his career advancement and at one point he packed his family off in a canoe and went to Fort Victoria to hand in his resignation. He eventually returned to Fort Yale, where he stayed and in 1864 returned to Fort Langley to continue raising his family with his Cowichan wife and live out the rest of his life.

Like others, Bazile Brousseau worked past 1858 to his retirement the following year. He and his family stayed in the area.

Ehu came by a much more circuitous route to the area. The Hawaiian had trained as a teacher and worked south of the border until 1850, when he returned to the Sandwich Islands. In 1856 he went to the Langley area where he became a native teacher but in 1869 chose to settle with his Squamish wife on Burrard Inlet where he worked at a sawmill. This coastal area was also a draw for Iroquois Louis Oteakorie and his Kwakuitl wife.

The loss of a left hand did not stop William Henry Emptage from leading a full settled life. After working two years at Fort Langley and carrying milk pails in the crook of his arm and looking after HBC cows, he retired in 1858. On December 12, 1870, he pre-empted 160 acres at Langley Prairie and in 1873, as the settlement had grown around Langley, he and twenty-eight other landowners petitioned Victoria for Langley’s incorporation as a municipality. Finally, in 1875, he formalized his marriage to his Musqueam wife, Louisa and together they raised a family.

Kenneth Morrison came to Fort Langley in 1861 from having worked several years in New Caledonia and worked for a year in the cooperage. Taking advantage of the Cariboo gold rush, in 1860, Morrison and his wife Lucy Allard, daughter of Ovid, pre-empted 160 acres on the banks of the Fraser River not far east of Fort Langley and opened up a stopping house for miners. Two years later, they pre-empted a further sixty acres. When Fort Langley became a municipality, Kenneth Morrison was elected councillor in the election of 1873.

Samuel Robertson, who worked his entire career as a boat builder and carpenter, participated in the construction of nearby Fort Hope. He chose to live across the river at Albion where he took a Stolo wife, Julia. As there were rumours that the capital of the about to be formed Colony of British Columbia might be situated in nearby Derby and in order to secure an on-going income as he had retired in 1858, he built himself a combination saloon/roadhouse, "What Cheer House" in Derby or across the river in Albion. On February 7, 1860, he took out a pre-emption claim on 160 acres in Albion. Here he was to stay for the rest of his life and subsequently considerably enlarged his claim. The capital having been placed in New Westminster, in 1860 he dismantled "What Cheer House" and reconstructed it up-river at the palisades of Fort Langley as "The British Columbia Liquor Company" no doubt to capture the trade of the thirsty miners passing through. Samuel continued to farm in Albion, importing fruit trees from Scotland and grafting hardier varieties onto crab-apple trees. He is also reputed to have driven cattle up from Oregon. Robertson died on his Albion farm on December 17, 1897 and, along with his first wife Julia, was buried at Fort Langley.

Narcisee Fallardeau spent twenty-three years at Fort Langley, some of it as James Murray Yale's servant in the Big House. He, his Kwantlan wife Hélène and their family pre-empted 160 acres of farmland on the south bank of the Fraser River above Fort Langley and supplemented his farming activities as a shoemaker.

William Henry Newton split his time between Fort Victoria and Fort Langley where he spent seven years before returning to Fort Victoria. At Fort Langley, while continuing to raise a family in a large spacious house, he amassed a large collection of butterflies. His wife, Emmeline, the daughter of John Tod, on the other hand, found Langley at first lonely but managed to amuse herself and visiting officers in charge of interior forts with her playing of the piano. William worked until at least 1869, meanwhile acquiring a large plot of land near Langley in the Port Hammond area, but was recalled by the HBC to work at Langley in 1874 when Ovid Allard died.

Life on the Pacific Slopes After the Fur Trade

What brought the end to the fur trade in the last remaining area held by the HBC was the discovery of gold on the Fraser River in 1858. With the entry of thirty thousand miners came the urgency to set up a legal process to grant licences for those entering the Fraser River. As many of them were American, the British House of Commons responded by introducing a bill on July 8, 1858 which was to provide a legal structure for "New Caledonia" as the area was known to them. However, as a group of French Islands in the South Pacific had claimed that name, Queen Victoria herself decided to name the area British Columbia. And so, with that information, Sir James Douglas, the governor of Vancouver Island and former HBC officer, sailed with great pomp with decidedly non-fur trade types to Fort Langley where, on November 19, 1858, witnessed by about one hundred people, he gave the commission of Chief Justice of British Columbia to Mathew Begbie who, given his new legal authority, then swore in James Douglas as Governor of British Columbia. He was now to rule the new colony by decree. At the same time, all monopolistic trading privileges of exclusive HBC trade with the Indians were revoked, and a new era was to begin. For the fur trader, it was the end of an era in which the HBC would become nothing more than a merchandiser of goods and a clearing house for furs. Under the new legal framework, like their fellow fur traders south of the border, the fur traders were on their own and were to look after their own interests. Surveyors drew lines around Indian settlement areas and the rules of pre-emption were put in place.

Armed with the resilience, strength and adaptability learned in the fur trade, the now former fur traders were able to carry on. In 1866 the colonies of Vancouver Island and British Columbia united under the colony of British Columbia and in 1871 the colony joined the Dominion of Canada. The era had come to a similar end south of the international border in 1849. The Oregon Territory eventually fragmented into the territories of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and part of Montana all of which became part of the United States as fully-fledged states of the Union.

Descendants of fur traders who worked on the Pacific slopes have found their way into countries all over the world. They have become premiers, regal consorts, revolutionaries in China, business leaders, etc. They didn't disappear. They are all around us and nurture a certain pride in what their ancestors went through. Identity politics has drawn the descendants in several directions. Some have chosen to identify with First Nations/Indians and embrace that part of their heritage. Others who identify themselves as Métis have chosen to embrace their own unique heritage, of which the fur trade culture is a strong component. Still others have chosen to move into the larger provincial, state, national and world-wide community carrying with or even forgetting the lives of their ancestors who lived as fur traders. All, however, have a common bond of being part of the fraternity of having descended from fur traders.

Fur trader son Ranald Macdonald expressed this common bond best on August 29, 1891 when, in Marcus, Washington, he wrote a letter to his friend from Malcolm MacLeod:

You cannot imagine how much I have thought over your circumstances and as I expressed in my last how I wished you were here to share of our abundance. Perhaps there is no bond more sympathetic than that of the old HBC families, that web of sympathy is interwoven in the lives of each member of the different families. Why? I cannot explain, individuals we have for the first seen belonging to that Corporation whether a French Canadian or Iroquois that feeling comes. He is one of us. As to the solution, it is because he knows and understands the long years of suffering and privations endured and shared in the earliest days as the dawn of our civilization in the wilderness you and I have seen it, have been with nature face to face.³⁹⁵

Still more can be written on the descendants of fur traders on the Pacific slopes. This undoubtedly will be done over time through the voices of the descendant families. As one who has a deep interest in history but who is not a descendant of a fur trader, I leave it in the descendants' capable hands.

¹McMillan, p. 150, 162; It is safe to assume that furs, perishable and thus long since vanished, were traded for many thousands of years if one follows the Edziza (upper Stikine River) and Anahim (Chilcotin) obsidian routes to the Prairies of 8000 and 3000 BC respectively. Dentalium shells had been making their way from the Washington and Oregon Coasts from at least 500 BC. From the Plains location of Knife River, siliceous stones, suitable for flaking into tools had been making their way over the Rocky Mountains for several millennia as had Wyoming obsidian been making its way into Snake Country. Geoffrey J. Matthews et al. Historical Atlas of Canada, vol. I. Toronto: University of Toronto Press, 1987. Plate 14.

²Cebula, p. 44.

³HakSP Mackenzie, p. 301.

⁴McMillan, p. 228

⁵HakSP Mackenzie, p. 287, Metal had worked its way into the Finlay Forks region from the coast

⁶As an example, the Rev. Charles Grenfell Nicolay still perceived in as late as 1846 that the journey hinged on the strength of character of Mackenzie. "After not a few difficulties and dangers, which were overcome more by his own courage and self-possession than the constancy of his Canadians..." as in Nicolay's The Oregon Territory. London: Charles Knight & Co., 1846, p. 89.

⁷The occasional fur was traded but, for example, the coastal natives had become so accustomed to driving a hard bargain with the maritime fur traders, that little was available as a reasonable exchange. However, Alexander McKay's magnifying glass which was used to light fires was too tempting and they "exchanged the best of their otter skins for it." HakSP McKenzie, p. 377-378.

⁸HakSP McKenzie, p. 7.

⁹Alexander Mackay, Joseph Landry, Charles Ducette, François Beaulieux, Baptist Bisson, François Courtois, Jacques Beauchamp, Cancre (a native) and another unnamed native, both of whom served as hunters and interpreters. Joseph Landry and Charles Ducette had been with Mackenzie on his voyage to the arctic. HakSP Mackenzie, p. 257.

¹⁰ B. Watson, "Scots on the Coast", p. 17-20.

¹¹ A. J. Henry, p. 743; The members of the expedition were Captain Meriwether Lewis (head), Captain William Clark (assistant head), William Bratton, Jean Baptiste Charbonneau (a child, son of Touissant and Sakajawea), Tousaint Charbonneau (interpreter), John Collins, John Colter, Peter Cruzatte, George Drewyer (Drouillard) (interpreter), Joseph Fileds, Reuben Fillds, Robert Frazier, Sergeant Patrick Gass, George Gibson, Silas Goodrich, Hugh Hall, Thomas Proctor Howard, Jean Baptiste La Page, François Le Biche, Hugh McNeal, Sergeant John Ordway, John Potts, Nathaniel Pryor, Sakajawea (Shoshone wife of Charbonneau), George Shannon, John Shields, John B. Thompson, William Werner, Joseph Whitehouse, Richard Windsor, Alexander Willard, Peter Wiser and York, a black slave of Captain Clark.

¹² In several papers given in the US, I noted the non-native traffic of people and goods along the Columbia River, something which appears in the journals but has been left out of the foundation mythology which has grown up around the expedition.

¹³ Belyea, p. 21.

¹⁴ After Mackenzie's voyage to the Pacific, he continued on with the North West Company but a growing rift between the managing body and the wintering partners in the 1790s, coupled with his belief as to the necessity of extending a trade route to the Pacific, meant that plans were stalled. In January 1800, just after the expiration of his partnership agreement with the old NWC, he left for England only to return late that summer and form a new NWC which became known as Alexander Mackenzie and Company. Publication of his Voyages in late 1801 was followed by a knighthood two months later. In 1803 he joined the XY Company and in November the following year after the death of Simon McTavish, the fractious partnerships were brought together again to form a united North West Company and a new impetus for expansion took place. Lamb, The Journals and Letters, p. 22-40.

¹⁵ Of the twenty-four people who went down the river with Simon Fraser, there were nineteen voyageurs and Fraser mentioned only eight and because of variations of spelling, they are difficult to follow. Fraser, p. 23.

¹⁶ The reason for the Musqueam Natives forcing Fraser to turn back at the mouth of the Fraser River was that his men took a canoe without permission up river - 2008 conversation with a Musqueam elder

¹⁷ Fraser, p. 38-52.

¹⁸ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 122-123.

¹⁹ Fraser, p. 24.

²⁰ HBCABio Paul Bouche (La Malice)

²¹ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. ix.

²² In fact, Waccan was a mixture of French Canadian and Cree.

²³ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 122.

²⁴ ibid, p. 127.

²⁵ Harmon, A Journal of Voyages, p. 172-75.

²⁶ A NWC proprietor's directive in 1806 had forbidden the fur traders to take wives, something difficult to enforce. Fraser, p. 246n.

²⁷ Jennifer Brown's forward in Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. ix.

²⁸ A Roman name for Northern Britain later applied to the Scottish Highlands.

²⁹ Patrick Gass, A Journal of the voyages and travels of a corps of discovery under the command of Capt. Lewis and Capt Clarke of the Army of the United States, from the mouth of the river Missouri through the interior parts of North America to the Pacific ocean, during the years 1804, 1805 & 1806. Containing an authentic relation of the most interesting transactions during the expedition,-- a description of the country, -- and an account of its inhabitants, soil, climate, curiosities and vegetable and animal productions. By Patrick Gass, one of the persons employed in the expedition. With geographical and explanatory notes by the publisher. Pittsburgh, David M'Keeham, 1807.

³⁰ Newspaper clipping (source unknown), "With Thompson at Kootenae House for 1807," Cranbrook Hearth, December 1, 1925.

³¹ Personal communication with Linda Goodrich, an Australian descendant of François Quenneville, who was the son of Michel Kinville. Originally from website: www.geocities.com/Paris/LeftBank/4595/help.html

³² ChSoc XL, p. 392, 393.

³³ HBCABio Jaco Finlay.

³⁴ "Jaco children with Martin are off to their tent." UBC-Koer Thompson, vol. 10, p. 28.

³⁵ HBCABio Miaquam Finlay.

³⁶ UBC-Koer Thompson, vol. 10, p. 329.

³⁷ "We searched about to see if anyone had been here, but finding no Marks of any person, we set up a few Lines in Iroquois as we supposed only those People would pass here." Belyea, p. 176.

³⁸ Boatbuilder Bill Brusstar faithfully followed Thompson's descriptions and built a clinker boat of cedar planks and spruce roots. It was on display in the summer of 2009 at the Bonner County Historical Museum.

³⁹ UBC-Koer Thompson, vol. 10, p. 61.

⁴⁰ ibid, p. 12, p. 13.

⁴¹ Apissases (Asslin), Pierre Bercier, Francois Charpentier Sans Facon, John Cox, Jaco Finlay with additional children, Michel Kinville (Quenneville), Pierre Lacourse, Charles Lagasse, Basile Lussier, Finan McDonald, Duncan McDougall, James McMillan, Paul (Iroquois), Francois Rivet, Ignace Salioheni.

⁴² A few later fur trade families related to those in the Thompson journals: Apissases (Asslin), Beaudoin, Bercier, Berland, Brouillet, Gasper, Charpentier, Cottenoir, Cox (Hawaiian), Dubois, Dumond, Dupuis, Duquette, Finlay, Gervais, Gingras (1850), Gouin, Guerette, Humpherville, Kinville (Quenneville), Labonte, Lacourse, La Gasse, Laplante, Lucier/Lussier, McLoughlin, McKay, McMillan, Montour, Morigeau, Ogden, Paul (Iroquois), Pelletier, Pion, Rivet, Salioheni and Wadin.

⁴³ B. Watson. "Intermingling Cultures"

⁴⁴ The names of those who accompanied Joseph Howse have eluded me, only one of whom, Jaco Finlay, has been identified.

⁴⁵ Those with Andrew Henry were (L.Cather), John Hobaugh, (B. Jackson), (P.McBride), Jacob Regnor, Edward Robinson, and several others unnamed. Clements, p. 30; Chittenden, p. 144.

⁴⁶ Jaco Finlay returned to familiar territory and John Hobaugh, Jacob Regnor and Edward Robinson returned with the westward bound Wilson Price Hunt Overland Expedition.

⁴⁷ Phelps

⁴⁸ PrivMS Albatross; CU-B Phelps.

⁴⁹ One shipwrecked Spaniard perhaps as early as the 1750s, had fathered a child by the name of Soto on the Columbia River. ChSoc XLV, p. 83; A shipwrecked Englishman by the name of Ramsay had fathered several children in the 1780s. Lewis and Clark and Astorian journals. When Charles Bishop of the Ruby visited December 1, 1795, the Chief Tulathwell paraded a child which was apparently the child of the first mate, Mr. Williams. BCA log of Ruby, p. 95.

⁵⁰ Charles Bishop of the Ruby planted his experimental garden on a sandy island at the mouth of the Columbia in May 1795. His plantings included peas, beans, potatoes, peach stones, broccoli, mustard, carrots and celery. When he returned in October he found that the potatoes had done very well and he was a bit late for the radishes. Nonetheless, he tried again in January 1796 adding Indian corn and turnips. The records are silent on the results. Perhaps the natives harvested them. BCA log of Ruby, p. 104.

⁵¹ B. Hill, The Remarkable World, p. 41.

⁵² Alekseev, p. 141.

⁵³ R. A. Pierce, Russian America, p. 76.

⁵⁴ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 6.

⁵⁵ ibid, p. 11-12; Franchere, p. 45.

⁵⁶ ibid, p. 12.

⁵⁷ ChSoc XLV, p. 55.

⁵⁸ ibid, p. 196.

⁵⁹ ibid, p. 55; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 23-25.

⁶⁰ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 26.

⁶¹ Irving, Astoria, p. 37-38.

⁶² The Hawaiians were engaged for three years, "during which time we undertook to feed and clothe them and at the expiration of their contract, to give them goods to the value of one hundred piastres." ChSoc XLV, p. 70.

⁶³ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 41-43.

⁶⁴ Those who drowned on March 22, while trying to sound the channel entrance to the Columbia River were: Ebenezer Fox (the first mate), Bazil Roi (Lapensée), Ignace Roi (Lapensée), John Martin and Joseph Nadeau. Those who drowned on March 25 or 26, were Job Aiken, John Coles and Peter (a Hawaiian labourer).

⁶⁵ ChSoc XLV, p. 75.

⁶⁶ Thwaites, Original Journals, p. 301; Cox, p. 151-52.

⁶⁷ CRMMast Haskins' Journal of the Atahualpa, 1802-03 ["...suspicious that their residence among them & bad intentions, was the occasion which deterred the trading vessels on the coast from visiting them as usual."]; Jewitt, p. 90-91; OHS Levant, p. 122.

⁶⁸ Jewitt; YU-Bein Supercargo's Logs of Brig Lydia, 1804-05, July 19, 1805; HUL Captain Hill's report from Canton, Columbia Centinel, May 20, 1807, p. 1-2.

⁶⁹ ChSoc XLV, p. 90.

⁷⁰ Joseachal in Franchere, Narrative and Kasiascall in Ross, Adventures.

⁷¹ Franchere, Narrative, p. 126-127; A. Ross, Adventures, 158-166.

⁷² HBS-Bak Astor; As many as sixty as cited in K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 103-12.

⁷³ Lavender, p. 164.

- ⁷⁴ The deciding factor happened on October 28, 1811 when Antoine Clappine drowned when his canoe hit a rock and on November 1st Hunt decided to split up the group and continue by land. Hunt, p. 38-39; Lavender, p. 165.
- ⁷⁵ McDougall, p. 72.
- ⁷⁶ Lavender, p. 161.
- ⁷⁷ Lavender, p. 167.
- ⁷⁸ RosL-Ph Astoria; MHS Chouteau PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 16-18, 21, 24-27, 43, 44, 108-09, 115, 121-23, 128, 144-45; ChSoc LVII, p. 688, 688n, 689, 691-95, 698, 702; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 171; Hunt; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 108; Brandon, p. 57-78; DAB Ghent; Irving, Astoria, p. 103-294; Lang, p. 157-64.
- ⁷⁹ ChSoc XLV, p. 87.
- ⁸⁰ ibid, p. 87-88; UBC-Koer Thompson. Thompson's men accompanying him were Michel Bourdeaux, Peirre Pariel, Joseph Cote, Michel Boulard, Francois Gregoire and two Iroquois, Charles and Ignace.
- ⁸¹ ChSoc XLV, p. 45.
- ⁸² McDougall, p. 35-36.
- ⁸³ ChSoc XLV, p. 93.
- ⁸⁴ ibid, p. 95; McDougall, p. 63.
- ⁸⁵ McDougall, p. 136-37.
- ⁸⁶ Irving, Astoria, p. 407.
- ⁸⁷ ChSoc XLV, p. 153; Not all were killed by the Bannock Indians. Those who died this way were: Pierre Delauney, Pierre Dorion, John Hoback, Andre Lachapelle, Giles Leclerc, John Reed and Jacob Regnier. Francois Landrie fell from his horse and died, Jean Baptiste Turcotte died of tuberculosis and Edward Robinson's fate is unknown.
- ⁸⁸ Cox, p. 143-145.
- ⁸⁹ Ruby & Brown, The Chinook Indians, p. 150.
- ⁹⁰ HBCA NWCA 10, fo. 3-4; HBCA NWCA 10, fo. 6-8.
- ⁹¹ ChSoc XLV, p. 145.
- ⁹² Coues, p. 891.
- ⁹³ ChSoc XLV, p. 194-195.
- ⁹⁴ Irving, Astoria, p. 416-418.
- ⁹⁵ R. F. Jones, p. 116.
- ⁹⁶ "Although this life is irksome & disagreeable to me still I prefer it a thousand times to living in the same house with Mr. Duncan McDougall, who is a compound of all the mean & petty passions that generally disgrace the lowest of animals..." R. F. Jones, p. 132.
- ⁹⁷ Those whose signed up temporarily with the NWC before leaving the Pacific slopes: W. W. Matthews, Donald McGillis, Francis Pillet and Donald McLennan. Those who left without signing up: Benjamin Clapp, George Ehninger, Russell Farnham, Gabriel Franchere, John C. Halsey, Charles Nicoll, William Wallace, and Alfred Seton. Those who stayed: Ross Cox, Thomas McKay, Ovide Montigny and Alexander Ross.
- ⁹⁸ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 154.
- ⁹⁹ Irving, Astoria, p. 37.
- ¹⁰⁰ A. Ross, Adventures, p. 114.
- ¹⁰¹ A. Ross, Hunters, p. 65.
- ¹⁰² In April 1814 the Isaac Todd arrived at Fort George with proprietors Donald McTavish, John McDonald and clerks Alexander and James McTavish, Alexander Fraser and Alexander McKenzie. Also arriving was a Doctor Swan. Cox, p. 139.
- ¹⁰³ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 59-60.
- ¹⁰⁴ Cox, p. 140-41.
- ¹⁰⁵ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 56.
- ¹⁰⁶ HBRS XIII, p. xxxi.
- ¹⁰⁷ Cox, p. 145.
- ¹⁰⁸ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 65.
- ¹⁰⁹ Cox, p. 222-223.
- ¹¹⁰ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 172.
- ¹¹¹ ibid, p. 159.
- ¹¹² Cox, p. 170.
- ¹¹³ ibid, p. 163.
- ¹¹⁴ ibid, p. 193.
- ¹¹⁵ ibid, p. 185.
- ¹¹⁶ ibid, p. 189-190.
- ¹¹⁷ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 167.

-
- ¹¹⁸ ibid, p. 207.
- ¹¹⁹ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 167.
- ¹²⁰ Cox, p. 218.
- ¹²¹ ibid, p. 164.
- ¹²² HBCA B.239/c/1, fo. 124d.
- ¹²³ Karamanski, "The Iroquois and", p. 7.
- ¹²⁴ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 56.
- ¹²⁵ HBCA NWCAB 7, p. 31; NWCAB 10, p.20, 99; NWCAB 14, p. 40.
- ¹²⁶ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 173-74.
- ¹²⁷ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 109-110.
- ¹²⁸ "I have frequently heard the Canadian and Iroquois voyagers disputed as regards their merits, perhaps the former may be more hardy or undergo more fatigue, but in either a rapid or a traverse, give me the latter, from their calmness and presence of mind which never forsakes them in the greatest danger." Colin Robertson's 1819 letter to HBC Committee, HBRS II, p. 56.
- ¹²⁹ Karamanski, "The Iroquois and", p. 7.
- ¹³⁰ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, fo. 7d.
- ¹³¹ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 61-64.
- ¹³² Cox, p. 195-196.
- ¹³³ Literally, "a puppy" and to fight like "a misbehaving child." Cox, p. 166-167.
- ¹³⁴ ibid, p. 199-200.
- ¹³⁵ ibid, p. 131.
- ¹³⁶ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 150.
- ¹³⁷ ibid, p. 142-43.
- ¹³⁸ Cox, p. 130.
- ¹³⁹ Erasmus Darwin, grandfather to Charles and a Renaissance man himself, wrote the somewhat precious The Botanic Garden, A Poem in Two Parts; containing The Economy of Vegetation and the Loves of the Plants, with Philosophical notes around 1790. It is interesting that it even made it into the travelling library.
- ¹⁴⁰ Cox, p. 197-198.
- ¹⁴¹ ibid, p. 218.
- ¹⁴² Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 150.
- ¹⁴³ Cox, p. 206.
- ¹⁴⁴ ibid, p. 204.
- ¹⁴⁵ ibid, p. 205-06.
- ¹⁴⁶ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 120-21.
- ¹⁴⁷ Cox, p. 307-308.
- ¹⁴⁸ ibid, p. 130.
- ¹⁴⁹ ibid, p. 197.
- ¹⁵⁰ Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 164.
- ¹⁵¹ Cox, p. 208-09,
- ¹⁵² Harmon, Harmon's Journal, p. 174-175,
- ¹⁵³ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, 130-131.
- ¹⁵⁴ The extensive March 26, 1821 Deed Poll, signed by HBC secretary William Smith, can be found in HBRS II, p. 327-344. It details all aspects of the merger in terms of shares, new structure, appointments and basic HBC rules. The more business-like March 28, 1821 "Agreement for converting Capital in Hudson's Bay Stock at the terminat of the Articles of Partnership by effuxion of time" between the HBC and Messrs. McGillivrays' & E. Ellice can be found in HBRS II, p. 344-49.
- ¹⁵⁵ HBCA McLLkPJ 1, p. 15, 18.
- ¹⁵⁶ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, Nov. 7, 1823.
- ¹⁵⁷ ibid, May 6, 1823.
- ¹⁵⁸ ibid, Nov. 29; Dec. 2, 1823.
- ¹⁵⁹ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, June 5, 1820, fo. 6d.
- ¹⁶⁰ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, Nov. 23, 1823.
- ¹⁶¹ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 3, March 21, 1825.
- ¹⁶² HBCA FtStJmsPJ 4, fo. 39, 40.
- ¹⁶³ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, April 30, 1823.
- ¹⁶⁴ ibid, September 9, 1823; December 30, 1823.
- ¹⁶⁵ ibid, November 23, 1823.

- ¹⁶⁶ McMillan, p. 167; HBCA Fort St. James Post Journal 1823-24, B.188/a/2, May 6, 1823.
- ¹⁶⁷ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, June 11, 1823.
- ¹⁶⁸ ibid, August 17, 1823.
- ¹⁶⁹ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 4, fo. 25d October 27, 1824, May 11, 1825.
- ¹⁷⁰ ibid, fo. 25d.
- ¹⁷¹ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, May 19, 1823.
- ¹⁷² HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1, June 9, 1820, fo. 7, ibid, July 10, 1820, fo. 11d.
- ¹⁷³ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 2, March 23, 1824.
- ¹⁷⁴ ibid, February 8, 1824.
- ¹⁷⁵ The complete chronicling of this journey was in the form of a journal entitled "Remarks Connected with the Fur Trade in the Course of a voyage from York Factory to Fort George and Back to York Factory 1824-25," in G. Simposn, Fur Trade.
- ¹⁷⁶ HBCA NWCAB 9, p. 26-30.
- ¹⁷⁷ Mackie, Trading Beyond the, p. 36-38.
- ¹⁷⁸ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 89.
- ¹⁷⁹ Martin's groups, which functioned from 1820 but dissolved in the spring of 1822, consisted of: Jean Baptiste Chotoriortkon, Ignace Dehotionwassere, John Gray [Ignace Hatchiorauquasha], Louis Kanetagon, Ignace Kanetagon, Laurant Karatohon, Lazard Kayenquaretcha, Miaquam Martin, Charles Oghnawera, Charles Tchigt, Pierre Teanasogan, François Xavier Teanetorens, Joseph Tehongagarate, Lazard Teyecaleyeeaoeye and Jacques Tehotarachten. HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10.
- ¹⁸⁰ HBCA FtSpokRD 1, fo. 4d.
- ¹⁸¹ A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 212-213.
- ¹⁸² HBCA SnkCoPJ, fo. 21.
- ¹⁸³ E. E. Rich, vol. II, p. 408.
- ¹⁸⁴ Barman & Watson, Leaving Paradise, p. 62.
- ¹⁸⁵ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 91.
- ¹⁸⁶ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 91.
- ¹⁸⁷ HBRS III, p. 32-36, 94-95.
- ¹⁸⁸ HBCA McLlkPJ 1, (John Stuart) February 6, 1824, p. 60.
- ¹⁸⁹ HBCA McLlkRD 1, fo. 5d.
- ¹⁹⁰ Minutes of temporary Council held at York Factory, July 1, 1824 in HBRS vol. III, p. 94-95.
- ¹⁹¹ A. G. Morice, The History of, p. 130.
- ¹⁹² Morice, History, p. 111.
- ¹⁹³ HBCA FtStJmsPJ 15
- ¹⁹⁴ William Connolly's February 27, 1829 letter to George Simpson, HBCA D.4/122 as found in HBRS X, p. 239-240.
- ¹⁹⁵ B. Watson, "Family Life", p. 25-26.
- ¹⁹⁶ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 56.
- ¹⁹⁷ G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 46; HBRS IV, p. lxviii.
- ¹⁹⁸ HBCA SnkCoPJ 10, fo. 4-5d.
- ¹⁹⁹ Description of accident in McLoughlin's July 23, 1830 letter to Governor & Committee, in McLoughlin, Letters of, p. 119; YFASA 11.
- ²⁰⁰ Howay, "Brig Owhyhee in the Columbia, 1827," p. 324-329.
- ²⁰¹ On July 3, 1830, the following were drowned at the Dalles along with Bache Goodriche: Antoine Cantara, Joseph Grenier (Massa), François Lepin, Joseph Portneuf, Mrs. Portneuf, 2 unnamed Portneuf boys, Jacques Potvin (Vandette), François Rivet, Rocqueveur (a slave or cook for Mr. P. S. Ogden) and Antoine Sylvaillie. William Kittson's August 12, 1830 letter to John Rowand, in HBRS XXVIII p. 181..
- ²⁰² McLoughlin's Oct. 11, 1830 letter to Governor and Committee in HBCA FtVanCB 6, fo. 15d.
- ²⁰³ In 1830 the fur traders that appear to have died from the epidemic were Pierre Karaganyate and James Anderson and in 1831, Jacques Perreault, Louis Belair and Harry Bell Noah.
- ²⁰⁴ Howay, "The Brig Owhyhee in the Columbia, 1829-1830", p. 10-21.
- ²⁰⁵ This was probably a re-burial of Michel Plante who had drowned on the Salmon River in February 1832. If so, his body would have been exhumed and brought back to Fort Vancouver in 1833 for reburial. This may have been the reason why no one at the funeral expressed much emotion over his death although Tolmie claimed that "Plant" he had been a "bruiser" and had a "quarelsome disposition." W. F. Tolmie, p. 173.
- ²⁰⁶ ibid, p. 173.
- ²⁰⁷ McLoughlin's August 5, 1829 Fort Vancouver letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 5, fo. 8-9
- ²⁰⁸ Boyd, People of the Dalles, p. 145.

- ²⁰⁹ Jean Baptiste Bouisseau, Pierre Chartier, Alexander McKenzie, Antoine, Perreault, Jean Baptiste Terihongo.
- ²¹⁰ McLoughlin's July 10, 1828 letter to Gov. & Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 4, fo. 9d-10.
- ²¹¹ Ermatinger letters, June 17, 1828; McLoughlin's undated Fort Vancouver letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 4, 19d-21d.
- ²¹² Members of Jedediah Strong Smith's group who were killed in 1828: Thomas Daws, John Gaiter, John Hanna, Abraham La Plant, Joseph La Point, Manuel Lazarus, Touissant Maréchal, Martin McCoy, Joseph Palmer, Peter Ranne, John Reubescan, Harrison G. Rogers, Charles Swift and Thomas Virgin. Those who escaped: Arthur Black, Richard Leland, Jedediah Strong Smith and John Turner. In D. L. Morgan, Jedediah Smith, p. 341.
- ²¹³ McLoughlin's August 10, 1828 letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 4, fo. 23-24d; D. L. Morgan, Jedediah Smith, p. 256-279.
- ²¹⁴ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 203.
- ²¹⁵ ibid, p. 233; At this date, Joseph had acquired the name "François."
- ²¹⁶ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 204.
- ²¹⁷ BCA Tod; Morice, The History of, p. 139-52. Several variations of the story: Rev. George Bryce (The Remarkable History of the Hudson's Bay Company, Toronto, 1900; J. McLean; and Bancroft, History of British Columbia. Admiral Morseby had another variation in Two Admirals, London: John Murray, 1909, p. 122.
- ²¹⁸ McLoughlin's January 17, 1837 letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB, 15, fo. 67d-68; Correspondence regarding the Robert Shortness petition of March 25, 1843, HBCA FtVanCB 31, fo. 60d-61.
- ²¹⁹ The skull rested at the Royal Naval Hospital Museum until 1952 when it was returned to the Clatsop Historical Society. It was returned to Concomly's descendants in 1972 and buried near the chief's village site in Iwalco, WA.
- ²²⁰ Kelley, a promoter with vision, published "A general circular to all person of good character, who wish to emigrate to the Oregon territory, etc." in Boston 1829 as well as "A geographical sketch of that part of North America called Oregon, etc." Both were reprinted in 1918 in New York. His early pamphlets inspired such people as Nathaniel J. Wyeth and Captain Bonneville of the US Army to organize expeditions westward.
- ²²¹ Twelve Members of Nathaniel J. Wyeth's original twenty-five man unsuccessful 1832-1833 multi-purpose colonizing expedition who made it over the Continental Divide to Fort Vancouver were: Wiggin Abbot, John Ball, William Breck, Stephen Edmunds Burdett, Greely Sargent, John Sinclair, Solomon Howard Smith, Calvin Tibbets, Guy Trumbull, Phineas Whittier, John Woodman, and Nathaniel Jarvis Wyeth. In Overmeyer, p. 95-101.
- ²²² Hussey, Fort Vancouver, vol. II, p. 291-232.
- ²²³ McLoughlin's Nov. 18, 1834 letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 10, fo. 36d; HBRS IV, p. 130 n2.
- ²²⁴ Parker's Journal, as cited in Hussey, Fort Vancouver, Historic Structures Report, Historical Data, Volume 2, p. 292-293.
- ²²⁵ John Hussey, Fort Vancouver, vol. II, p. 294-299.
- ²²⁶ Wilkes, as cited in Hussey, Fort Vancouver, p. 299.
- ²²⁷ James Douglas' October 8, 1838 report to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 20, fo. 5-5d
- ²²⁸ J. S. Green; HHS Sandwichs, p. 178-79.
- ²²⁹ HBCA YFASA 14-15; YFDS 6, 10; FtVanASA 4-5; Brosnan & Gay, Life and Letters of Mrs. Jason Lee; "Methodist Annual Reports"; "Oregon Mission Record Book," p. 264; Gilman and Angel, Diary of Cyrus Shepard, p. 66; Brosnan, Jason Lee; DAM Ghent; Carey, A General History, p. 286-300; G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 170.
- ²³⁰ HBCA YFASA 15; FtVanASA 5; FtVanCB 12.
- ²³¹ Copy of petition attached to Herbert Beaver's March 10, 1837 letter to Benjamin Harrison (HBC Committee), HBCA A 11/79, fo. 39-46, as found in Herbert Beaver, p. 13.
- ²³² Herbert Beaver's Nov. 10, 1836 letter to Benjamin Harrison (HBC Committee), HBCA B223/b/14, fo. 1-10d, as found in Beaver, Reports and Letters, p. 2
- ²³³ Herbert Beaver's November 15, 1836 letter to Benjamin Harrison (HBC Committee), HBCA A 11/69, fo. 23-27, 28-28d, as found in Beaver, Reports and Letters, p. 22.
- ²³⁴ A. J. Allen, Ten Years in Oregon, Ithaca, NY: 1850, p. 162 as in Beaver, Reports and Letters, p. xii.
- ²³⁵ Gray, History of Oregon, p. xii.
- ²³⁶ CCR 1, 2; BCA-BCCR-CCCath.
- ²³⁷ Herbert Beaver's March 10, 1837 letter to Benjamin Harrison (HBC Committee), HBCA A 11/79, fo. 39-46, as found in Beaver, Reports and Letters, p. 35.
- ²³⁸ James Douglas' October 8, 1838 report to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 20, fo. 4d
- ²³⁹ HBCA log of Columbia 3; HBCA ShMiscPap 14.
- ²⁴⁰ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 160; Munger; E. Walker, p. 140, 182n; Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 21.
- ²⁴¹ HBRS VI, p. 187; HBRS VII.
- ²⁴² McLoughlin, John McLoughlin's Business, p. 111, 124; Gray, History of Oregon, p. 192; Boyd, People of the Dalles, p. 309-10.

²⁴³ Charles Campo, William Cannon, George W. Ebberts, Joseph Gale, Webley Hauxhurst, T. J. Hubbard, William Johnson, Etienne Lucier, Joseph L. Meek, William McCarty, Solomon H. Smith, Calvin Tibbets.

²⁴⁴ According to Holman's research, forty-one of the fifty who voted against the Provisional Government on May 2, 1843 were: Amable Arquoitte, Alexis Aubichon, Pierre Bellique, Louis Boisvert, Antoine Bonenfant, Silvan Bourgeau, Olivier Brisbois, Joseph Brunel, Paschal Caille (Biscornet), André Chalifoux, Adolphe Chamberlain, Joseph Cornoyer, Joseph Delard, Pierre Depot, Joseph Frederick Despard [a], David Donpier, André Dubois, Antoine Felix (Palaquin), Louis Forcier, Luc Gagnon, Joseph Gervais, Jean Gingras, Etienne Gregoire, André Lachapelle, Louis Labonté, Michel Laforté (Placide), Michel Laframboise, Augustin Lambert, Alexis Laprade, André Lonctain, Fabien Malois, David Mongrain, Jean Baptiste Obichon, Louis Ossin, Pierre Pariseau, Pierre Pepin (Lachance), Charles Rondeau, Thomas Roy, Xavier Seguin (Laderoute), Jacques Servant, Louis Vandal [b]; In Holman, p. 114-116.

²⁴⁵ CCR, p. xvii-xviii.

²⁴⁶ McLoughlin's October 31, 1837 Fort Vancouver letter to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 17, fo. 41d.

²⁴⁷ Bagley, p. 40, 58; Bishchoff, p. 236; J. M. Hill, p. 29-35; O'Hara, p. 26, 36, 118, 219; Morice, The History of; DCB Usher.

²⁴⁸ Correspondence with HBC regarding establishing posts north of the Columbia River is in the Archives of the Archbishop of Saint Boniface, Manitoba, and was published in Les Cloches de St. Boniface, June, July, and August, 1932, as found in Howay, Sage & Angus, p. 97-98.

²⁴⁹ F. N. Blanchet, Fiftieth Jubilee Sermon (1869), Letters on Catholic Missions, together with reply of the Secretary of the Interior (1871); Chinook Dictionary and Catechism (composed 1838 by M. Demers, and revised 1867 by F. N. Blanchet with corrections by Revol. L. N. Onge 1871); Historical Sketches of the Catholic Church in Oregon (1878-1910), and Historical Notes and References (1883); Modeste Demers, Chinook dictionary, catechism, prayers and hymns. Composed in 1838 & 1839 by Rt. Rev. Modeste Demers. Resived, corrected and completed, in 1867 by most Rev. F. N. Blanchet. With modifications and additions by Rev. L. N. St. Onge, Montreal, 1871.

²⁵⁰ HBCA YFASA 25-32; FtVanASA9-15; FtVicASA 10-16; BCA BCGR CrtR-Naturalization; RossBayCem; Colonial Secretary, Vancouver Island, Death certificates, in BCA Deaths; Klan

²⁵¹ McLoughlin's Nov. 18, 1834 letter to Governor, HBCA FtVanCB 10, fo. 35; YFDS 10; Brosnan, "The Signers", p. 180-181; DAB Ghent; Kenneth L. Holmes, Ewing Young, p. 180.

²⁵² James Douglas' October 8, 1838 report to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 20, fo. 6

²⁵³ CCR 2, p. xvii.

²⁵⁴ James Douglas' October 8, 1838 report to Governor and Committee, HBCA FtVanCB 20, fo. 7.

²⁵⁵ Winther, p. 100.

²⁵⁶ Slacum, p. 193.

²⁵⁷ Ball, John Ball, p. 103.

²⁵⁸ The HBC derived its authority and power from the Government of Great Britain by the terms of its Royal Charter. The Canada Jurisdiction Act of 1803 that was passed by the British Parliament in August of that year allowed for anyone who had committed crimes in 'Indian Country' to be taken to and tried in Lower Canada. However, the vagaries of the shared territory with shared trading rights gave no clear jurisdictional rights to either the US or Great Britain.

²⁵⁹ HBRS VI, p. 12-13

²⁶⁰ Howay, Sage & Angus, p. 91-92.

²⁶¹ HBCA FtVanCB 25, fo. 5-7.

²⁶² Fort Vancouver Catholic Church Records, vol. 1, p. 23

²⁶³ ibid, fo. 3.

²⁶⁴ Those fur traders (spelling as in biographies) who signed the March 18, 1840 letter to John McLoughlin wishing their names be withdrawn were: Amable Arquoitte, Pierre Bellique, Joseph Delard, Joseph Despard, Sr., Joseph Gervais, William Johnson [b], André Lonctain, Etienne Lucier, Thomas McKay, Jean Baptiste Obichon, Jean Baptiste Perrault, Toussaint Poirier, Antoine Rivet, Charles Rondeau, Xavier (Laderoute Seguin, The three sons were: Joseph Despard, Jr., David Gervais and Louison Lucier. In HBCA FtVanCB 25, fo. 3.

²⁶⁵ 52 for, 50 against.

²⁶⁶ HBCA FtVanCB 31, fo. 36-66.

²⁶⁷ ibid, fo. 38d.

²⁶⁸ ibid, fo. 40.

²⁶⁹ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 250.

²⁷⁰ The Hawaiians fell under a section contained within the new Oregon laws: "An Act in regard to Slavery and free Negroes and Mulattoes." It stipulated that anyone eighteen or older had to leave within a time period: two years for males and three years for females. In HBCA FtVanCB 31, fo. 49-49d.

²⁷¹ CCR 2, p. xvii, A-45.

²⁷² CCR 1, A-90.

²⁷³ James Douglas's April 4, 1845 letter to George Simpson, as in HBR VII, p. 190.

²⁷⁴ HBCA FtVanCB 31, fo. 52d.

²⁷⁵ McLoughlin's March 24, 1845 letter to William Miller, Consul General, HBCA FtVanCB 33, fo. 45d.

²⁷⁶ Osborne Russel and P. G. Stuart's March 21, 1845 letter to John McLoughlin, HBCA FtVanCB 33, fo. 46 [b]d.

²⁷⁷ James Douglas' March 5, 1845 Fort Vancouver letter to George Simpson as in HBR VII, p. 179.

²⁷⁸ John McLoughlin March 24, 1845 Fort Vancouver letter to William Miller, HBCA FtVanCB 33, fo. 47b.

²⁷⁹ James Douglas' March 5, 1845 letter to George Simpson as in HBR VII, p. 179.

²⁸⁰ ibid, p. 180.

²⁸¹ J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory, p. 120.

²⁸² James Douglas' April 4, 1845 letter to George Simpson as in HBR VII, p. 189.

²⁸³ James Douglas' March 5, 1845 letter to George Simpson as in HBR VII, p. 185.

²⁸⁴ James Douglas' April 4, 1845 letter to George Simpson as in HBR VII, p. 189.

²⁸⁵ J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory, p. 103-04.

²⁸⁶ E. E. Rich, vol. II, p. 654.

²⁸⁷ B. Watson, "Family Life", p. 25-26.

²⁸⁸ Dickey, October 22 to 24, 1833.

²⁸⁹ Dickey, January 27 to February 2, 1846.

²⁹⁰ Edouard Alin, Ovid Allard, George Blenkinsop, Charles Dodd, Narcisse Fallardeau, Dr. John Frederick Kennedy, Pierre Lagace, Thomas Linklater, Donald McAulay, Captain William Henry McNeill, Joseph Maurice, John Montgomery, William Pottinger, William Fraser Tolmie, Thomas Wade, Augustin Willing, John Work. In BCA PJ PSACFtNis.

²⁹¹ The intermittent fever (probably malaria) of 1830 and a smallpox epidemic of 1836.

²⁹² G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 176.

²⁹³ ibid, p. 178.

²⁹⁴ ibid, p. 178.

²⁹⁵ The similarity in literary tastes of both Tolmie and Dominis seemed to mirror their broader outlook and ambitions in life. Tolmie's son, Simon Fraser Tolmie, went on to become the Premier of British Columbia from 1928-1933 and Dominis's son went on to become the husband of the last reigning monarch of Hawaii, Queen Liliuokalani (1891-1895). John Dominis' house in Honolulu went on to become the residence of the Governor of Hawai'i whereas William Fraser Tolmie's house [Cloverdale] in Saanich, B.C. did not meet with the same honours, not making it past the late 1950s.

²⁹⁶ John Work, The Journal of John Work, January, p. 44.

²⁹⁷ ibid, p. 47.

²⁹⁸ ibid, p. 60.

²⁹⁹ Stikine Chief Shakes acted as if he expected large amounts of alcohol from the HBC indicating that the RAC had so accommodated him.

³⁰⁰ HBCA FtStPJ 1-2.

³⁰¹ E. E. Rich, vol. II, p. 715, posed the possibility that the depositions of the men were so biased that the truth may have been the opposite. The reason that Roderick Finlayson was taken elsewhere leaving John McLoughlin Jr. without proper assistance was that McLoughlin may have been deemed to have been doing such a competent job that Finlayson's assistance was not required. If so, this would cast a very different light on the subsequent murder.

³⁰² G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 151.

³⁰³ ibid, p. 150.

³⁰⁴ ibid, p. 176-77.

³⁰⁵ Debate, House of Representatives, Congressional Globe, May 30, 1850, column 3, and 10-93, columns 1-2 as cited in Barman & Watson, Leaving Paradise, p. 137-138; Largely the work of Territorial Delegate to Congress, Samuel R. Thurston, the Act of December 27, 1850 awarded 320 acres to a married couple, the husband and wife owning half in their own names, provided they arrive before December 1, 1850. Those arriving between 1850 and 1854 would receive half the amount. Those arriving after 1854 would have to purchase land at $1.25 per acre. General information from http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Donation_Land_Claim_Act.

³⁰⁶ The Organic Laws of 1843 and revisions in 1845 legalized the claim system until replaced by the Donation Land Claim Act.

³⁰⁷ Klan, p. 43.

³⁰⁸ Kane, p. 195-96.

³⁰⁹ BCA Lowe 1.

³¹⁰ In order of their deaths: Laeoitte, (William Payne, S.I), Tayapapa, Napoua, Jem Mamuka (a.k.a. Joseph Finamanut), Charley (a.k.a. Paul Cali), Tooyuouua, Kameoukai, Joseph Tayentas, Paynee, Kahela

³¹¹ "Feb. 22, 1848 Typhus fever possibly contracted by some of our people at Vancouver. We've had now 6 or 7 cases, symptoms very similar in all, & it appears to be contagious." G. B. Roberts, p. 100-241.

³¹² Dec. 31, 1847 "The greatest alarm prevails on account of the still spreading disease. It assumes two forms here. Those in whom the fever subsides immediately after the eruption suffer but little comparatively & are quickly restored to health. On the other hand the most part have their sufferings increase after the breaking out of the measles & remain a long time in a sinking state. There is a languor, a want of appetite & dreadful thirst. The Owhyhees are nearly well but have been troubled with a bad diarrheah, which I fortunately have the means of stopping by administering small doses of opium & Tonic mixture that was sent here for the dysentery patients." G. B. Roberts, p. 100-241.

³¹³ At Fort Victoria, Kanai; at Fort Langley, Kalemaku, Loawala, Honno and Tai-I died, presumably from measles.

³¹⁴ Galois, p. 31-43.

³¹⁵ Missionaries had a more jaded view. Reverend Ezra Fisher, American Baptist missionary in 1848 thought that the high mortality rate amongst the native people was due to the fact that they had "suffered long from the venereal."

³¹⁶ List was compiled from a conversations with John Norris, retired professor of History of Medicine, History Department, University of British Columbia.

³¹⁷ HBCA FtVanCB 28, 37; DAB Shafer.

³¹⁸ Gray, History of Oregon.

³¹⁹ Drury, The Diaries and Letters.

³²⁰ E. Walker; Drury, C. M., Elkanah and Mary.

³²¹ Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 21; Dobbs, p. 60-63; Boyd, People of the Dalles, p. 318-319.

³²² "each mission station enjoyed a vogue of popularity and influence with the natives, usually lasting a year or two. After this period of initial enthusiasm, the Indians grew less interested in the messages of the missionaries." Cebula, p. 121

³²³ Cebula, p. 125

³²⁴ DCB Blanchet

³²⁵ Victor, The Early Indian Wars, 1894, p. 503-20.

³²⁶ Silva

³²⁷ Holliday, p. 42.

³²⁸ ibid, p. 42.

³²⁹ From Home Missionary Vol 24, p. 45 as found in Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Emigration and Immigration, 1835-1870, carton 13, file 6.

³³⁰ Interview with Laverdure descendant, Lodi, California, July 22, 2007.

³³¹ Beattie & Buss, Undelivered Letters, p. 191-208.

³³² HBRS XIX, Eden Colville's Nov. 24, 1849 letter to George Simpson.

³³³ Shaw, p. 55.

³³⁴ ibid, p. 8.

³³⁵ ibid, p. 8.

³³⁶ Borthwick, p. 289.

³³⁷ Bruff, p. 353.

³³⁸ According to a Layward or Sayward they were recalled to Oregon to protect their land claims as found in Pioneer Reminiscences, MS 7, Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Emigration and Immigration, 1835-1870, carton 13, file 9; Gov. Lane's message in The Oregon Spectator on October 4, 1849 noted that many had failed to plant their crop as found in Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Mining, carton 15, file 4.

³³⁹ The sea traffic to San Francisco was considerable for "By the end of December 1849, 697 vessels had entered the harbour, delivering more than 41,000 Americans and foreigners, of whom fewer than 800 were women. Many of those whips were deserted by their crews, left to rot on mudflats or to creak at anchor, until in later years some would be resurrected to carry thousands back to the States." Holliday, p. 297.

³⁴⁰ Beattie & Buss, p. 222-224.

³⁴¹ From a Layward or Sayward in "Pioneer Reminiscences, MS 7 as found in Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Emigration and Immigration, 1835-1870, carton 13, file 9.

³⁴² Governor Lane's report in the Oregon Spectator, October 4, 1849 as found in Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Mining, carton 15, file 4.

³⁴³ From Home Missionary vol 24, p. 5, As found in Bancroft Library BANC MSS B-C 8, Oregon – Emigration and Immigration, 1835-1870, carton 13, file 6.

³⁴⁴ Victor, The Early Indian Wars, 1894, p. 555-557.

³⁴⁵ "The Grand [Ronde] Reservation was to hold, primarily, the Kalapuyans of the Willamette Valley, various bands from along the Columbia River and the northwest coast of Oregon, the Yoncalla (Calapooia), Umpqua, and Cow Creeks of the Umpqua Valley, the Montalla of the Western Cascades, and the Takelma [Rogue River] of the Rogue Valley. The bands of the Rogue River Canyon and the many Indian bands along the seaboard south of Cascade Head were assigned to the Siletz Reservation.” CCR 5, p. xix.

³⁴⁶ The Colville Reservation was to serve as a designation and home for the following Native groups: Colville, Nespelem, San Poil, Lakes, Palus, Wenatchi, Chelan, Entiat, Methow, south Okanogan, and Moses Columbia. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Colville_Indian_Reservation.

³⁴⁷ CCR 6, A-8.

³⁴⁸ Nisqually IR, 1854 [Pierce & Thurston Co.]; Puyallup IR, 1854 [Pierce & King Co.]; Port Madison IR, 1855 [Kitsap Co.]; Tulalip IR, 1855 [Snohomish Co.]; Swinomish IR, 1855 [Skagit Co.]; Lummi IR, 1855 [Whatcom Co.]; Port Gamble IR [Kitsap Co.] 1855 and the relatively larger Quinault IR, 1856 [Grays Harbor Co.].

³⁴⁹ Carpenter, Fort Nisqually, p. 175.

³⁵⁰ Dickey, Nov. 14, 1855.

³⁵¹ ibid, December 8, 1855.

³⁵² Dickie, Fort Nisqually Journals

³⁵³ Carpenter, Fort Nisqually, p. 178.

³⁵⁴ Dickey, March 5, 1856, May 21, 1856, May 23, 1856.

³⁵⁵ Elliott, “British Values in Old Oregon”; Messages and Papers of the Presidents, VI, 35 as in Howay, et al, British Columbia and the United States, p. 130-136.

³⁵⁶ Howay, p. 136.

³⁵⁷ F. W. Howay, et al, British Columbia and the United States. Toronto: Ryerson Press, 1942, p. 137

³⁵⁸ ibid, p. 137; opposition argument to the HBC were presented in J. E. Fitzgerald, An Examination of the Charter and Proceedings of the Hudson’s Bay Company with reference to the Grant of Vancouver’s Island, London: 1849.

³⁵⁹ R. M. Martin. It mainly quoted praise from both the Wilkes and Warre-Vavasour reports. The chapter called “Christian Conduct and Beneficent Policy of the Hudson’s Bay Company” (p. 111-136) gushed the virtues of the HBC.

³⁶⁰ Mackie, “The Colonization of”, p. 5.

³⁶¹ James Douglas to J. Pelly, December 5, 1848, p. 34 in HBRS XXXII, p. lii.

³⁶² Mackie, “The Colonization of”, p. 3-40.

³⁶³ ibid, p. 5.

³⁶⁴ ibid, p. 18.

³⁶⁵ On April 29, 1850 for country lying between Esquimalt and Point Albert a treaty was negotiated with the Teechamitsa Tribe. The following day additional treaties were signed around Victoria: Esquimalt Peninsula and Colquitz Valley (Kosampson Tribe); Victoria Peninsula south of Colitz (Swengwhung Tribe); Point Gonzales (Chilcowitch Tribe); North-West of Esquimalt Harbour (Wyomilth Tribe) and Point Gonzales to Cedar Hill (Che-ko-nein Tribe). On May 1, 1850 treaties were signed for Metchosin (Ka-ky-aakan Tribe); Sooke (Chewhaytsum Tribe) and North-West of Sooke Inlet (Sooke Tribe). On February 8, 1851, two treaties were negotiated at Fort Rupert with the Queackar and Quakeolth Tribes. A year later, on February 6 and 11, 1852 respectively, treaties were negotiated with the Saanich Tribe for both South and North Saanich. Finally, on December 23, 1854, a Nanaimo Treaty was negotiated with the Saalequun Tribe. British Columbia Papers Connected with the Indian Land Question 1850-1875, Victoria: Government Printer, 1875, p. 5-11.

³⁶⁶ Down

³⁶⁷ BCA Philip Hankin reminiscences, p. 166, as in Van Kirk, “Native Wives”, p. 188.

³⁶⁸ Cracroft, p. 12-13; The other Douglas daughters went on to marry others of rank within the colonial system. Cecilia married medical doctor John Sebastian Helmcken, Agnes married Arthur Busby, clerk to Matthew Begby and Alice married Charles Good, private secretary to James Douglas. As for the daughters of William Henry McNeill, Fanny married bank clerk and provincial secretary, James Judson Young, Rebecca married Thomas Elwyn, the provincial Gold Commissioner.

³⁶⁹ BCA BCGR-Gaols.

³⁷⁰ Morice, History of Northern BC; p. 178; HBCA FtStJms PJ 20.

³⁷¹ Morice, History of Northern BC, p. 229-33.

³⁷² HBCA McLLkPJ 20

³⁷³ HBCA FtAlexPJ 8, fo. 38d.

³⁷⁴ HBCA FtAlexPJ 7, fo. 55d, 65; ibid 8, fo. 25, 51d; ibid 9, fo. 7, 27d, 48.

³⁷⁵ HBCA FtAlexPJ 8, fo. 61.

³⁷⁶ Morice, History of Northern BC, p. 112-113.

³⁷⁷ ibid, p. 115.

³⁷⁸ ibid, p. 115, 118.

³⁷⁹ HBCA FtBabPJ 4, fo. 1.

³⁸⁰ Greening, p. 51.

³⁸¹ See Rothenburger

³⁸² When Simpson was there in 1841, he estimated a population of eight hundred home guard. (G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 206); When William Duncan took his census shortly after arriving in 1857, he counted 2325 men women and children. Murray, The Devil and Mr. Duncan, p. 36

³⁸³ HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 59d.

³⁸⁴ ibid, fo. 126d.

³⁸⁵ G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 206.

³⁸⁶ ibid, p. 208

³⁸⁷ An example of this would be William Henry McNeill's son who, on December 23, 1855, managed to muster a crew of nine Indians for his canoe and headed off with his woman for Victoria. HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 28d

³⁸⁸ HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 105d.

³⁸⁹ ibid, fo. 142, 144-144d

³⁹⁰ ibid, fo. 95d

³⁹¹ ibid, fo. 64d.

³⁹² ibid, fo. 123d, 126.

³⁹³ ibid, fo. 128d.

³⁹⁴ ibid, fo. 73.

³⁹⁵ BCA ADD MSS E.M22/m14/M22.

Notes For the Biographies

Surnames and First Names as they Appear in the Biographies

Surnames and given names in the biographical entries may vary considerably. Although company contracts and church records¹ helped stabilize the spellings, the widespread illiteracy amongst the fur traders themselves meant that clerks and others, in the absence of written support, wrote what they heard. A large variation of spellings occurred most often with French Canadian names, the most frequent of which has been chosen for biographical entries. The spelling of British names was more constant, not surprising given most clerks had similar backgrounds. The consequence is that spellings may or may not reflect the current name as used by many of the descendants in North America and around the world.

The French “dit” name tradition, started in the middle ages to distinguish people of the same name, carried into New France and the fur trade. A distinguishing “dit” name was an added name that could come from a particular seigneurie, a family grouping, an adoption, place of origin, etc. In the following biographies, “dit” names, as well as alternate names occurring in other ethnic groups, are bracketed in parentheses and immediately follow the surname. Nicknames or aliases which reflect an aspect of the particular individual are left in place after the first name.

Hudson’s Bay Company employees with the same name and under contract around the same time were distinguished with letter designations of [a], [b], [c], etc. Those from the HBC and other companies with the same name not distinguished by letters have been arbitrarily given numbers, such as [1], [2], etc. to differentiate between them.

French diacritical marks such as accent acute, accent grave, circumflex and accent cedilla are absent in the main name entries to prevent computer search engines in the digitized version by-passing the entry. However, French protocol is followed by an accompanying standardized form in squared brackets.

Generalized Birth Origins

Found in parentheses on the main entry line are generalized birth origins that help situate the person in the overall landscape. While not predictors of individual behavior, birth origins nonetheless hint at what the individual brought to the Pacific slopes into the fur trade. However, because of on-going dynamics of cultural exchange and change through intermixing and intermarriage, no single discipline has been used to select these ethnic and political identifiers. Roughly speaking a person of mixed descent is the progeny of someone whose parents or antecedents are from geographically distinct areas and cultures. This mixing would lead to new overlapping kinship, cultural and language affiliations and loyalties that obfuscate simple membership categorization. Native nations, long recognized by then contemporary chroniclers, are grouped linguistically although by this time, there was also considerable intermarriage and intermixing between native groups. The Euro-American sense of nation in which membership is affirmed by citizenship is also used. This is most frequently used for those in colonized Canada, America as well as in Europe.

Birth and Death Locations

Accurate birth locations are difficult to verify largely because of the recruitment process. Extant contracts note parishes or villages in which the individual signed on and these may not necessarily be the place in which the person was born because of the widely varied recruitment process. North West Company and Hudson’s Bay Company recruiters in Lower Canada [Quebec] could sign on people at their head offices, agent’s offices, specific posts or clerks would go out to country villages to sign on new recruits from the surrounding area. Similarly, in the Orkney and Hebrides Islands, the local agent would pin notices on parish church doors giving a time and place for potential servants to converge to sign on.² American fur traders signed on in various locations leaving little in the way of a genealogical paper trail. Hawaiian servants were taken on in numbers, an agreement being worked out under the aegis of the particular reigning monarch or his staff. Individual contracts similar to those otherwise used, with the exception of a few, may not have existed.³ The difficulty of establishing birthplaces with any certainty has also been compounded by the commonality of names within any of the traditional areas of recruitment whether it be in Lower Canada [Quebec], Upper Canada [Ontario], St.

Louis [Missouri], Hawaii, the Red River Settlement [Manitoba], Orkney, the Hebrides, Great Britain or Norway.

A Probably/Possibly Qualifier

Because of the nature of extant records, along with the uncertainty of birthplace, it is often impossible to be absolutely sure of ethnicity or nationality. For example, given the spread of the colonial French and French Canadians across the continent and the accompanying application of French names, separating out those with a French name between those of a purely European, mixed or native background with a French name can be problematic. Consequently the possibility or probability qualifier. Similarly, given the spread of the British and English around the world in the first half of the nineteenth century, one can never be absolutely positive that they were born in the same place in which they signed on in the British Isles or America. Those who signed on at the Hawaiian Islands are almost all, without a doubt, Hawaiians although, given the Polynesian movement around the Pacific from Tahiti, Samoa, New Zealand, the Marqueses and even Easter Island, one can never be absolutely certain as to the few from other islands who signed on in modern day Hawai'i.⁴ Therefore, to be consistent with the rest of the biographical entries, the overly cautious "probably" qualifier has been applied to the Hawaiians even though most are in fact Hawaiian.

Vocations, Years Worked and Locations of Work

Most vocations are self-explanatory and explanations for unfamiliar names can be found in the glossary. More often than not, vocation names represent a pay grade and don't always fully reveal the variety of jobs done. As records embraced work periods in terms of outfits, which begin on June 1st of one year and end on May 31st of the next, work periods overlap from one year to the next. Where discrete information is found reflecting a single date, a single year is written. Locations of work do not always represent the place where the fur trader spent the whole outfit but again for accounting purposes, the location to which that person was designated and spent much of his time.

The Difficulty of Geo-political Name Changes During the Fur Trade Era

As the time period covered in these biographies was a period of rapid geo-political name change, the same geographical entity can be known by several successive names. To avoid confusion, names given in the particular time period are followed by current contemporary geo-political names in square brackets. Native names are those recorded in the contemporary historic documents and no attempt has been made to add modern Native geographical or cultural nomenclature with their modern accompanying phonology.

Ontario and Quebec

The present day province of Ontario and province of Quebec have gone through many name changes from the days of New France.

Up to 1759	part of New France (includes greater part of North America)
1763-1774	British Province of Quebec (along St. Lawrence – modern day Quebec)
1774-1783	extended British Province of Quebec (includes much of modern day Ontario and the Ohio Valley)
1783-1791	with drawing of International Border, British Province of Quebec without Ohio Valley
1791-1841	Upper Canada [Ontario] and Lower Canada [Quebec]
1841-1867	Canada West [Ontario] and Canada East [Quebec] as the dual parts of the Province of Canada
1867	Canadian provinces of Ontario and Quebec (with separate legislatures)
1912	Ontario expanded northward to present size incorporating the Federally administered District of Keewatin; Quebec expanded northward to present size incorporating the federally administered District of Ungava

The Greater Pacific Northwest Overlapping Claim Jurisdictions

From the last decades of the eighteenth century to 1846, the area of the western slopes and Pacific Northwest became the theatre for contested Euro-American sovereignties. The consequence is that the area went by a variety of names that have been simplified here. For this study the names most commonly used are New Caledonia, denoting the area named by North West Company partner Simon Fraser and used colloquially in reference to central and northern British Columbia after the NWC was absorbed into the Columbia Department in 1827.⁵ The Columbia Department, a name favoured by the Hudson's Bay Company, is also used broadly here to cover the Columbia River drainage basin (Columbia District) and the lower Fraser River drainage basin. Oregon Territory, the name favoured by early advocates of extended American jurisdiction over the Pacific Northwest, is also used. In short:

Up to 1846	Columbia Department and New Caledonia [British claim] and Oregon Territory [American claim]
------------	---

After the international border was drawn in 1846 by Great Britain and the United States at 49° with a jog south around Vancouver Island, nomenclature on both sides evolved reflecting changing geo-political status. The Oregon Territory name remained as a US jurisdictional name for several years before being chopped into several other political entities and, eventually, American states. The remaining piece of the Columbia Department north of the border morphed into the HBC's Western Department and then into colonial British Columbia.

Vancouver Island

Up to 1849	HBC trading territory of Vancouver's/Vancouver Island
1849-1866	Colony of Vancouver Island
1866-1871	part of United Colony of British Columbia
1871+	part of Canada as part of Province of British Columbia

Mainland British Columbia

1805+	New Caledonia as the name given to the central and northern part of the present province of British Columbia
Up to 1846	Two names: New Caledonia and part of Columbia Department
1846-1858	During this last period of HBC monopoly trading rights in the area, the earlier New Caledonia name was used colloquially [as was the old remaining section of the Columbia Department incorporating the Lower Fraser River drainage basin]
1858-1866	Colony of British Columbia
1866-1871	The larger part of the Colony of British Columbia with the former Colony of Vancouver Island tacked on
1871+	The Province of British Columbia as part of Canadian Confederation

Oregon Territory south of 49th parallel

Up to 1846	Oregon Territory [American], Columbia Department [British]
------------	--

From 1846, territories broke off from the original greater Oregon Territory area and often changed sizes before becoming parts of American states that extended west of the Continental Divide.

Oregon Territory: 1848-1859	Oregon State: 1859
Washington Territory: 1853-1889	Washington State: 1889
Idaho Territory: 1863-1890	Idaho State: 1890
Montana Territory: 1864-1889	Montana State: 1889
Wyoming Territory: 1868-1890	Wyoming State: 1890
Utah Territory: 1850-1896	Utah State: 1896

Further Anomalies

The Colvile/Colville Conundrum

Fort Colvile, named after the HBC London Committee's Andrew Colvile who eventually became the HBC's deputy governor, 1839-1852 and governor 1852-1856. He is not to be confused with his son, Eden Colvile who became Associate Governor of Rupert's Land and who traveled throughout the region 1849-1852. The double "l" Colville spelling appears to be an American over-correction of the name which came about around 1860 with the establishment of the US military base on Mill Creek at Pinkney City, Washington Territory.⁶ The Colville spelling, sometimes erroneously applied to the HBC post, is used here to describe the surrounding area which includes a modern day city with the same name.

The Okanagan – Okanogan Split

From the time of initial contacts with the people of the Okanagan-Okanogan nation, scribes have tried to fix a common spelling coming up with a large variety of creations. When the dust settled, two spellings emerged, Okanagan for north of, and Okanogan south of, the international border.

Rivers, the Many Dalles and What was Navigable

As rivers frequently mentioned in the biographies were essential arteries or corridors to the fur trade and could be impediments to the fur traders, some understanding of the river courses and rapids is necessary.

The Columbia River Dalles

Along the 1,243 mile [2,000 km] course of the Columbia River's main transportation artery, from its Rocky Mountain Trench headwaters to the Pacific Ocean, many rapids and waterfalls occur at various intervals during its 2690 feet [820 m] descent to the sea. Many of these breaks colloquially acquired the name Dalles, French for flagstone, referring to the basalt rocks carved by the rapidly flowing river. That name stuck with two problematic rapids of the Columbia and one on the Okanagan. The Columbia River Dalles that presented the greatest problem to the fur traders are as follows:

1. The Dalles des Morts (Death Rapids) were a particularly nasty fast flowing set of rapids just upstream from Revelstoke, BC, and just north of the international boundary. They are now calmed, having been submerged by the Lake Revelstoke Reservoir.
2. The Dalles proper, the most well known, was composed of a series of rapids which stretched over twelve miles [19 km] on the Lower Columbia. The Dalles Dam has now calmed this turbulent stretch and the Dalles name also remains with a nearby city on the Oregon side of the River

The Okanagan/Okanogan River Dalles

The Okanagan/Okanogan River was relatively benign except for the twin waterfalls called the Okanagan Dalles, now Okanagan Falls at the south end of Skaha Lake, British Columbia.

The Fraser River's Travelled and Untraveled Portions

Because of the lay of interior plateau land, the Fraser River allowed a relatively smooth canoe passage from its headwaters in the Rocky Mountain Trench to the Fort Alexandria area. From that point on, it began a terrifying descent down towards the sea through the Fraser Canyon, a section so formidable that it was rarely traveled during the fur trade.

The Snake River

The Snake River runs through plains, gorges, and steep canyons before it enters the Columbia River, dropping a total of 7,570 feet [2,307 m] from its headwaters high in the Yellowstone area. Early travelers found out through first hand experience just how treacherous the river could be in parts and so horses rather than canoes were used in Snake River expeditions.

Other Political Entities East of the Rockies

Selkirk Colony/Selkirk Concession/Assiniboia/Red River Colony/Red River Settlement

1812-1818	In 1811, Thomas Douglas, 5 th Earl of Selkirk, was awarded by the HBC 116,000 square miles [300,440 sq. km] of territory to create a settlement colony, which he called Assiniboia. It was for displaced Scots to be on land traditionally held by several native nations and a growing concomitant Metis population, the offspring of fur traders by native women. The Colony was begun the following year in an area which, in present day terms, included southern Manitoba, small parts of Eastern Saskatchewan, northwestern Ontario, northeastern North Dakota and South Dakota and northwestern Minnesota.
1818-1869	With the drawing of the 1818 border and the loss of the subsidiary settlements such as Pembina to the US, the Red River colony for the purposes of this study continued largely within the southern Manitoba area as the Red River Settlement and has thus been generalized as a Manitoba concern.
1870	The Red River Settlement was rolled into the new Province of Manitoba
1912	Manitoba incorporated section of District of Keewatin expanding northward to present size.

Rupert's Land/Northwest Territories diffusion

1670-1870	The Hudson's Bay Company trading territory of Rupert's Land incorporated the entire Hudson Bay drainage system [northern Ontario and Quebec, the Laurentian watershed, Manitoba, most of Saskatchewan, southern Alberta and a portion of the Northwest Territories] until 1870 when the name changed to Northwest Territories.
1869	The Hudson's Bay Company relinquished Rupert's Land title to Canada and the Northwest Territories was created the following year.
1905	Formation of Province of Saskatchewan.
1905	Formation of Province of Alberta.

References

An explanation of archival and published sources can be found in the Sources section at the end of this publication.

¹ There are numerous examples of these, the best being the Catholic Church Records of Vancouver.

² Several conversations with former HBCA archivists, Judith Hudson Beattie and Ann Morton, 1990s.

³ An early quid pro quo working relationship with the Hawaiian Islanders had been established with the maritime fur traders, payment being in kind for work done. Engagement appears to have been voluntary with contractual terms added although little exists in the way of a paper trail of individual contracts. By 1811, the Astorians were feeding and clothing recruits for a fixed period of three years and when they returned at the end of that period they would be paid in goods valued at 100 piastres. (Franchere, Journal, p. 70). Terms varied over the years but the absence of paper contracts meant nothing surviving in the way of personal information

⁴ Uncertainty of Pacific island origin is compounded by the use of “T” and “K” in the spelling of names when each was the respective preferred spelling in Tahiti and Hawai’i. Again, the final written version depended on the clerk interpreting what he heard.

⁵ The NWC actually recognized four districts south of New Caledonia, the Thompson’s River District, Spokane District, Fort Nez Perces District and Fort George [Astoria] District. Mackie, Trading Beyond the Mountains, p. 24. They have been globalized as the Columbia Department.

⁶ Patrick J. Graham, compiler, Colville Collection, Book One, Colville, Statesman-Examiner, 1989, p. 48.

Abbott, Wiggin (? - 1834) (American)

Birth: probably Boston, Massachusetts

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - August 1834

Fur trade employee

Wyeth Employee, Wyeth's 1st Expedition (1832 - 1833); CRFTC Employee, CRFTC Brigade (1834).

Wiggin Abbott of Boston was the only person to accompany Nathaniel J. Wyeth on both of his expeditions. He originally left the Boston area on March 11, 1832 and arrived at Fort Vancouver on October 29, 1832. Here Abbott and John Woodman were released but did not appear to work for the HBC before they were rehired to make the return trip east. The Wyeth party arrived back in Cambridge on November 7, 1833. Abbott was rehired as a hunter and left Boston on February 7, 1834 and arrived in the Upper Snake area in July of that year. In the following month, he was killed by the Bannock Indians in Snake Country.

PS: OHS FtHallAB; CRFTCCB PPS: J.B. Wyeth, p. 73 SS: Overmeyer, p. 98

Able, E. (fl. 1825) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

Ash. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

E. Able acquired several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. Able probably attended other Rendezvous' as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains. There is a possibility that this was Ezekial Able, Ashley's father-in-law.

PS: MHS Ashley 2

See Also: Ashley, William Henry (Son-in-Law)

Abraham, William (fl. 1815 - 1816) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

William Abraham boarded the Columbia around December 23, 1815, possibly in Hawaii. He sailed with the vessel to China until February 29, 1816, at which point he went to India on the ship Mizon. He has not been subsequently traced.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Adams (fl. 1853) (Polynesian or Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

Adams shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853, sailed to the Northwest Coast, and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853, on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages on his return. He appears to have been part of a large Hawaiian Adams clan.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Adams, George (fl. 1834 - 1840) (probably Hawaiian or Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands (possibly born to Alexander Adams)

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, CRFTC Brigade (1834); HBC Member, Snake Party (1835);

CRFTC Member, CRFTC Brigade (1835); HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1840).

George Adams was one of twenty Hawaiians recruited in Hawaii for Nathaniel J. Wyeth's Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company in 1834. He and the others arrived in the Columbia River in September and twelve of them set out for Fort Hall in a brigade under Captain Joseph Thing. Starting out, conditions were very difficult with as little as two hours sleep a night and very little to eat. In November, twelve Hawaiians, including George, deserted. On March 12, 1835, Wyeth found seven of his runaway Hawaiians, including George, at Fort Vancouver. They rejoined Wyeth and returned to Fort Hall later that year. By October 10, 1837, George Adams had joined the HBC and was trapping on the Snake River. After serving three years with the group, he was discharged at the end of his contract and sent to Oahu on November 15, 1840. He, like others with similar names, could possibly be of mixed descent, inheriting his European surname through his father and being given a Christian name. He may have been a son of Alexander Adams, harbour pilot who had been in Honolulu since 1810.

PS: OHS FtHallAB; HBCA FtVanASA 4-6; YFDS 8, 11; YFASA 19-20 SS: Beidleman, p. 238
See Also: Adams, Jack (Brother)

Adams, (Kaanana) Jack [variation: Kaanana] (fl. c. 1848 - 1853) (Hawaiian or Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Hawaiian Islands (possibly born to Alexander Adams)Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - 1853*Maritime employee*HBC Passenger or seaman, Columbia (barque) (1849); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851).

Jack Adams joined the HBC in Oahu sometime before 1849, but can only be tracked when he arrived back in Oahu in December 1849 aboard the HBC barque Columbia. He re-enlisted and began to receive wages on January 6, 1850 sailing to the coast on the barque Cowlitz but deserting the vessel at Fort Victoria along with Kaina. He probably made his way to Fort Vancouver where he worked for a short period as a labourer, and on June 11, 1851, he again deserted. Jack Adams may have been a son of Alexander Adams.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 10; YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9-11; YFDS 21-22; 26-27
See Also: Adams, George (Brother)

Adams, James (? - 1841) (British)

Birth: probably EnglandDeath: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - April 1841*Maritime employee*HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841).

James Adams joined the HBC on August 20, 1840 in England. Adams arrived on the coast with the Cowlitz on February 5, 1841. Two months later at Fort Vancouver, when the ladder from which Adams and Robert Pelly were scraping the hull of the Cowlitz broke, both men fell overboard. Pelly was saved but Adams drowned. In spite of the use of grapnels and nets, Adams' body could not be located.

An undelivered 1841 family letter from Adam's aunt, Mary Ann Bishop, rests in the HBCA. The letter reveals that James Adams was an attentive nephew who sent money home to his family in England.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Cowlitz 1 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 151-52

Adams, John (? - 1811) (probably American)

Birth: possibly New York, New YorkDeath: Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island - June 1811*Fur trade employee*PFC Seaman, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

John Adams sailed from New York on September 8, 1810 on John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn]. As he did not appear on the Port of New York ship's manifest of September 3, he likely joined the vessel between the two dates. After a brief stopover in the Hawaiian Islands, he reached the Columbia River on March 22, 1811. Like most of his fellow crew members, he perished in the destruction of the Tonquin in the area of Clayoquot Sound in June 1811 after it was attacked by local natives.

PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 49

Adams, William (c. 1817 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles - c. 1817Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - December 1857*Maritime employee*HBC Stoker and trimmer, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1857); Apprentice engineer, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1857).

William Adams joined the HBC in London in 1852 as a stoker on the steamer Otter. He appears to have been a reliable employee, for he was rarely mentioned in the records and when the engineer, James Thorne, was intoxicated, Adams was able to get the engines going. Throughout his five years on the vessel, he sailed from Fort Simpson to San Francisco and all points in between. When he died in December 1857, three months after his wife, the whole crew of the Otter attended the funeral in Victoria.

William Adams had one wife, Margaret (?-1857), who died on September 10, 1857.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-5; BCA CCCath

Adamson , (Kaanana) John [variation: Adams, Kaananai] (fl. 1848 - 1853) (Hawaiian or Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - 1853

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1853).

John Adamson joined the HBC in Oahu in 1853 and died the same year, most likely at Fort Vancouver. Both he and Kaina may have died of smallpox, which was in the area at the time.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 10; YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9-11; YFDS 21-22; 26-27

Addington, Benjamin [variation: Adlington] (fl. 1853 - 1854) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853); Steward, Recovery (brig) (1853 - 1854).

Benjamin Addington joined the HBC immigrant supply vessel Norman Morison as a steward on August 14, 1852 for its voyage to the Northwest Coast. While on the coast, he joined the Recovery, which had been purchased from the Americans for coastal trading, and worked on it until about 1854. After 1854, Addington disappears from the active record.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1-2

Aganey (fl. 1837 - 1844) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1844).

Aganey joined the HBC in Oahu in July 1837, beginning his work at Fort Vancouver on August 10, 1837. He remained at Fort Vancouver until November 23, 1844, at which point he left for Oahu.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 4-8; YFDS 8; YFASA 19-20, 24

Agmoau, Charles (fl. 1855 - 1856) (possibly British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Charles Agmoau made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Agonaiska, Thomas [variation: Agoniasta] (c. 1789 - 1848) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1789

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - February 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Boute, New Caledonia (1831 - 1832); Boute, Thompson River (1832 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1835); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Boute, South Party (1836 - 1838); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Trapper, South Party (1838 - 1839); Freeman trapper, Columbia Department (1839 - 1840); Freeman middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Freeman middleman, South Party (1841 - 1842); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1844); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1847).

Thomas Agonaiska was one of the many Caughnawaga Iroquois who signed on with the HBC to work west of the Rockies. As he signed on as an experienced canoeist in 1830, he may have worked in the fur trade earlier as a Thomas Agoniasta was active in the eastern fur trade in 1821. In outfit 1842-1843, he deserted in California. Nonetheless, he was soon back on contract and he carried on working until 1847. He died at Fort Vancouver on February 14, 1848 during the measles epidemic.

Thomas had at least one wife and possibly children but none were recorded. His wife was Susan (c.1811-1848) of the Grand Dalles. Susan died February 17, 1848, three days after Thomas. Both were buried at the Fort Vancouver cemetery.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1; FtVanASA 2—8; YFDS 4a-7, 18; YFASA 11-22, 24-27; BCA Diar-Rem Lowe 1 PPS: CCR 1b

Ahao (fl. 1841 - 1844) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Victoria, Columbia Department - June 1844

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1844).

Ahao signed on with the HBC from Oahu in 1841 on a three-year contract, beginning work at Fort Vancouver on July 4, 1841. He completed his first contract and, just as he was about to begin a new one as a labourer on the barque Columbia that was anchored at Fort Victoria, he died. He may have been buried at the first Fort Victoria cemetery (now Johnson Street).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12, 15; YFASA 24

Aikane [variation: Aikani, Aikana] (fl. 1845 - 1850) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Willamette (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1847 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Vancouver farm (1849 - 1850).

Aikani joined the HBC in 1845 in Oahu on a three-year contract and spent the next four years in the area immediately surrounding Fort Vancouver. On September 10, 1849 he deserted, probably for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-29; YFDS 20; FtVicASA 1

Aiken, Job [variation: probably Jacob Aitken] (? - 1811) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scotland

Death: mouth of the Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - March 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Rigger and caulker, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

Scottish rigger and caulker, Job Aiken joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin on or before 1810 possibly in New York for its voyage to the Pacific Northwest. He was destined, after his arrival at the Columbia River, to command the yet-to-be-built schooner intended for coastal trade. In the spring of 1811, the barque arrived at the dangerous mouth of the Columbia River and, on March 22, in an attempt to sound the bar for safe passage, a longboat carried five valuable men to their death. Two days later, on March 24, in a second attempt to sound the bar, Aiken, John Coles, the sail maker, Stephen Weeks, the blacksmith/armourer and two Hawaiians embarked in a small longboat (pinnace) in which Aiken began to take soundings while the Tonquin followed under easy sail. However, the small craft was caught in the rip and pulled away from the Tonquin out to sea where it capsized. Aiken and Coles were immediately lost while Weeks and the two Hawaiians managed to save themselves. That evening, around midnight, while trying to get back to land, one Hawaiian died from hypothermia. The body of Aiken, one of eight to die in two days, was not recovered. On May 26, while the Tonquin was still at Astoria, his effects were disposed of on board the ship.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 48, 73-74 SS: Irving, Astoria, p. 60-61

Aillud, Robert J. (fl. 1847 - 1850) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Apprentice seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1848 - 1849); Apprentice seaman, Columbia (barque) (1849 - 1850).

Young Robert J. Aillud joined the HBC in London in 1843 when he began runs to Hudson Bay. About to embark on another run to Hudson Bay, he was sent ashore on June 25, 1847, being unfit for the voyage. This presented an opportunity for him for, on September 16, 1847, he sailed from London to the coast on the barque Vancouver. After unloading supplies at Fort Victoria, the vessel was wrecked on May 7, 1848 at the mouth of the Columbia; consequently, he was assigned to another vessel later that year. On April 16, 1849, while at Fort Langley, the young lad joined two others, fellow apprentice James Weyland and Elias Boys, who stopped work because they did not want to work in the rain. They apparently returned to work after they were reprimanded by the captain for their inappropriate behaviour. On July 11, 1849, Aillud left the Cadboro at Fort Victoria to join the barque Columbia on which he returned to the British Isles.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3-8; PortB 1; ShMiscPap 5; YFASA 28-30; YFDS 19-20; log of Cadboro 6; log of Columbia 10

Ainslie, Matthew [variation: Ainsley, Anisly, Ainsly] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Otter (steamer) (1855); Apprentice, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1859).

Matthew Ainslie may have worked on the HBC vessel Otter as early as 1855, but how he got to the coast is unclear. He joined the supply ship Princess Royal in Victoria on March 5, 1857 and continued to serve out his apprenticeship on that vessel.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; PortB 1; FtVicASA 5; log of Princess Royal, 3-5

Aitken, George [variation: Aiken] (c. 1815 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Greenay, Birsay, Orkney - c. August 1815 (born to Alexander Aiken and Margaret Johnston)

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1836); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Blacksmith, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1843); Blacksmith, Beaver (steamer) (1843 - 1844); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1849); Settler, Willamette (1850 - 1852).

Twenty-one year old Orcadian blacksmith George Aiken signed on with the HBC February 27, 1836 and sailed on the Prince of Wales to York Factory where he spent outfits 1837-1840; he then worked at Norway House in 1840-1841 before being assigned to the Columbia District in 1841. Aiken worked quietly and competently in the Columbia district mainly at coastal forts and on the steamer Beaver as a blacksmith until March 1, 1849 at which point he went to California, almost certainly to participate in the Gold Rush. He appears to have returned to settle in the Willamette Valley and had an association with the HBC until 1852.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 13; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-28, 30-31; YFDS 19; HBCABio

Alarie, John [variation: Allarie] (fl. 1847 - 1852) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Thompson River (1848 - 1852).

John Alarie joined the HBC in 1847 and worked for the next five years at an interior post or posts. He appears to have left the area after that.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-32; FtVicASA 1

Alauka (fl. 1844 - 1849) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1849).

Alauka joined the HBC from Honolulu in 1844 and spent the next five years at Fort Vancouver. On October 10, 1849 he deserted, probably for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-29; YFDS 20

Alder, Bryan (fl. 1828 - 1840s) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

Bryan Alder made HBC runs to Hudson Bay as early as 1828. After renewing a three-year contract in London on January 9, 1830, he sailed to the Northwest Coast on the Dryad and began coastal work on August 18, 1830. He serviced coastal posts until July 19, 1833, returning to England on the Ganymede. He was discharged in London on February 25, 1834 and appeared to make Hudson Bay runs much later in the 1840s.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV 2-3; HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a, 5a-5b; YFASA 11, 13; log of Dryad 1; log of Ganymede 1; ShMiscPap 14; PortB 1; log of Prince Albert 1-2, 8

Aliao (fl. 1844) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844).

Aliao joined the HBC from Oahu in 1844. After sailing to the coast, he worked at Fort Vancouver as a labourer until November 12, 1844, at which point he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24; YFDS 15

Alin, Edouard [variation: Edward Allan] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Death: possibly Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Simpson (1838 - 1843); School teacher, Fort Simpson (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1843 - 1847).

After he joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838, Edouard Alin had a mixed career at Fort Simpson. He was the first school teacher within the political boundaries of British Columbia although school teachers had taught for the HBC at Fort Vancouver for a number of years. Between 1840-1843, Alin appears to have had the task of running the school during the week, doing light jobs on Saturdays and reading the Bible in French on Sundays. Around 1846, in response to the establishment of the border, Edouard Alin, along with sixteen others, largely from the Fort Simpson area, unsuccessfully laid claim to 640 acres [259ha] (one square mile) of land around Fort Nisqually, land to which HBC/PSAC held possessory rights. He did not stay around to see his claim turned down, for he returned east of the Rockies to Canada in 1847.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 24-26; FtSimp[N]P] 4-5; BCA PSACFtNis; PPS: Dorothy, The Reminiscences...p. 305 SS: Meilleur, p. 209

Aliao (fl. 1825 - 1850) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - 1825

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1842 - 1845); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1850).

Aliao joined the HBC from Oahu on July 4, 1841 at about the age of sixteen. He spent the next eight years at forts on the Columbia River and, in August 1845, transferred some money to his mother in Hawaii. On September 25, 1849, he deserted, most likely for the gold fields of California. He must have soon returned, for he was in Clark County in 1850, living in the Kanaka village area. (The Kamus Alvoi of the 1850 Census is probably Aliao.)

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFDS 12, 20; SandIsAB 5; YFASA 24-29; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Allaire, Michel (fl. 1811) (possibly Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Kettle Falls/Okanagan River (June - August 1811 with David Thompson)

Almost nothing is known of Michel Allaire, who was with David Thompson on June 18, 1811 in the Flathead area. On August 21, 1811, he arrived with Hamelin, Beaulieu and Registre Bellaire at Kettle (Ilthkoyape) Falls, where he met Thompson. A week later, on August 28, he and Bellaire both went to the Okanagan (Oochenawga) River area.

PPS: Coues, New Light, p. 918; Columbia Journals, p. 170

Allan, George Traill (c. 1807 - 1890) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Perthshire (County of Perth), Scotland - c. 1807

Death: Cathlamet, Washington - 1890

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1830); Clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1842); Clerk, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1837); Clerk, Honolulu (1841 - 1847); Chief Trader, Honolulu (1841 - 1847); Chief Trader disposable in district, Columbia Department (1848 - 1850); Chief Trader, Columbia Department (1848 - 1850); U.A. Merchant, San Francisco (1850 - 1851).

It would seem natural that George Traill Allan, a slight, five ft tall [1.5 m], even delicate person of about one hundred lbs

[45.4 kg] seemingly not at all cut out for the rough and tumble fur trade, would start his career selling books and stationery in Glasgow. However, his brother, Dr. Allan, who had been Lord Selkirk's attending physician in North America, secured a position for him in 1830 in the HBC as a writer at York Factory. He was more needed at Fort Vancouver and so made his way overland to the Columbia River post. During his ten-year stay at Fort Vancouver, he had a name exchange with a Cascade native and was nicknamed "Twahalasky", or coon. Around 1841, he was appointed joint agent with George Pelly in the Hawaiian Islands post. In 1845 he was promoted to the rank of Chief Trader and during his stay on the islands he found the visiting American commodores much more arrogant than the English admirals. This bias may have worked against him for, in 1847, when he was replaced by Dugald McTavish, Simpson explained Allan's recall to him in a letter dated June 28, 1847:

I hope you may not be disappointed by your recall from the Island...The plain matter of fact is that we consider MacTavish a better man of business and accountant than you are, and politics and party spirit have been so high of late that, we think it is as well a stranger, who can have no bias, should be associated with Pelly, instead of you and that Gentleman continuing longer together (D. 4/36, p. 59d).

In October 1848, after going on furlough for one year, he gave notice to retire and settle in San Francisco. Using his acquired skills, he became commission merchant in a partnership with Archibald McKinlay and Thomas Lowe and was in 1850 listed as a merchant living in the house of McKinlay, where he stayed until 1851, at which point he went to Scottsburgh at the mouth of the Umpqua River. Under the name Allan, McKinlay and Co., he carried on business until about 1861 when he settled in Cathlamet. He was still alive in 1888.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV, 4; HBCCont; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-8; YFASA 11-15, 17-20, 22-23, 27-30; SimpsonCB; OHS 1850 US Census PPS: HBRS VI, p.383-4; HBRS XXX, p.200-01n; OHS Oregonian, April 12, 1888 SS: Lyman, "Reminiscences of Louis", p. 265

See Also: Grahame, James Allen \(Relative\); Grahame, Jeffrey C. \(Relative\)

Allan, Magnus (fl. 1843 - c. 1847) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843); Carpenter, Cadboro (schooner) (1843); Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1845); Carpenter, Prince Albert (barque) (1845 - 1847).

From the 1820s, Magnus Allan was a carpenter on Hudson Bay runs on such vessels as the Prince of Wales and the Prince Albert. In the fall of 1842, he shipped on the HBC vessel Columbia in London and sailed to the Northwest Coast. At Neah Bay on August 1, 1843, three months after his arrival on the coast, he began a three-month sojourn on the Cadboro where his skills were more needed. By October, he was back on the Columbia and, while returning to England, over-celebrated in Honolulu and had to be lodged in the local fort for a day by constables. After the ageing Allan arrived back in London on May 24, 1845, he served the next two years of his contract on Hudson Bay runs on the Prince Albert.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales I, 1-16; log of Prince Albert 1, 4-5; log of Columbia 6; log of Cadboro 1; FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24; PortB 1

Allan, Peter (fl. 1857 - 1859) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Rupert (1857 - 1859).

Peter Allan worked for the HBC at a northern Vancouver Island post until 1859.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5-7, 9

Allan, Robert [b] (c. 1810 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: London, England - c. 1810

Death: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Carpenter, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1838); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839); Carpenter, Cadboro (schooner) (1839 - 1840); Carpenter, Vancouver (barque) (1840 - 1841).

Robert Allan [b] served on the Prince George before he shipped with the HBC vessel Columbia in London on August 24, 1835 and sailed to the Pacific Northwest. Seven months after his arrival at Fort Vancouver on April 10, 1836, he joined the first of a series of vessels that took him to various coastal posts for the next four years. On November 14, 1840, he sailed from Fort Vancouver to England on the barque Vancouver.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; log of Columbia 1; FtVanASA 3-6; YFDS 7, 11; YFASA 19-20

Allard, Antoine (fl. 1821 - 1825) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Francois, Lower Canada

Death: probably Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Steersman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825).

Antoine Allard worked for the HBC in both New Caledonia and the Columbia. In outfit 1821, he was fined for misconduct and, at the end of his contract in 1825, returned to Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-5; YFDS 1a

Allard, Jason Ovide (1848 - 1931) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort Langley - September 1848 (born to Ovid Allard and Justine Allard)

Death: New Westminster, British Columbia - December 1931

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Apprentice post master, Fort Yale (1861 - 1865); Post master, Fort Shepherd (1866 - 1869); In charge, Company store at Wild Horse Creek (1867).

Born into the fur trade, Jason Allard became a later source of information about life in this period. Jason attended school in Nanaimo and at the age of twelve went to work for the HBC as an apprentice post master. As a young lad, he also occasionally interpreted for British Columbia Judge Matthew Baillie Begbie. He had many small adventures throughout his short career, but one of the most unusual happened at Fort Shepherd. While he was working at that borderline fort, he ordered the regular two hundred lbs [90.7 kg] of cheese for nearby Fort Colville; however, a gremlin extra "0" slipped into the order form and was signed by Colville's Angus McDonald as such. Some time later when the two thousand lbs [907.2 kg] of cheese arrived on horseback at Fort Colville, Jason was beside himself not knowing what to do with almost a ton of cheese. Finding the Fort Colville warehouse full, the exasperated young clerk located some recently emptied rum barrels and, wrapping the two thousand lbs of cheese in cloth, sealed it in the barrels, which he left outside. Over time the cheese melted and rum flavour fused into it. When McDonald tasted the new cheese, he was delighted and ordered it henceforth for breakfast, lunch and dinner. The story of "Allard's Cheese" spread and U.S. army officers came from as much as one hundred miles [160.9 km] away just to get a taste of this new culinary delight. Within two months, all two thousand lbs of cheese were eaten. Allard first retired from service on March 17, 1865 but finally left the service in 1869, angry at being upbraided for his familiarity with the young American army officers at Fort Colville. He led a full life after retirement (chronicled in "Jason Allard: fur trader, prince and gentleman") and in his later years was still recognized by the Cowichan natives as having inherited rights within the Cowichan group. As he spoke five native dialects plus English and French, in 1871 he was hired for a CPR survey crew. To supplement his income, Allard and his family would walk across the border and pick hops, but after his wife's death, he moved into New Westminster to be closer to the courts for interpreting. Jason Allard died December 16, 1931.

Jason Allard had one wife, Seraphine (?-?), a native from the Port Townsend area and had about twelve children.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 8-15, 17; BCA Guardian, August 5, 1874 SS: G. Green; Robinson; McKelvie, "Jason Allard", p. 243-257; Waite, p. 102-03

See Also: Allard, Ovid (Father)

Allard, Jean Baptiste (c. 1794 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1832).

Jean Baptiste Allard joined the HBC from Montreal in 1828 and worked west of the Rockies as a blacksmith at Fort Vancouver. He left the Columbia for Canada on August 1, 1832.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 3a-3b, 5a; YFASA 9, 11-12

Allard, Joseph [a] (fl. c. 1803 - c. 1848) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1840); Carpenter, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1842); Carpenter, Fort Simpson (1842 - 1843); Carpenter, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1847); Freeman settler, Fort Nisqually (1847 - 1848).

The carpentry skills of Joseph Allard were in demand by the HBC from the time he joined in 1838 and as he rapidly moved to different posts throughout the Columbia area. By 1847-48, he was a freeman at Nisqually and temporarily settled near Roy on a claim that was taken over by Francois Gravelle.

Allard, Joseph [b] (c. 1820 - c. 1873) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St. Charles, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Death: probably Fort Alexandria, New Caledonia

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1847); Middleman, New Caledonia (1848 - 1852); Middleman, New Caledonia (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Thompson River (1853 - 1854); Middleman, New Caledonia (1854 - 1860).

Nineteen-year old Joseph Allard joined the HBC in 1839 from Lachine. His first posting appears to have been the Fort George area, where he took a wife and had a child in 1842. He spent his career in New Caledonia and appeared at Fort Alexandria many times until the end of his contract in 1860, when he apparently retired, although he may have worked casually for the HBC for the next two years. By 1873, he was a widower, living as a farmer in the Fort Alexandria area.

Joseph Allard had two wives and two recorded daughters. His first wife was Marie, native from the Fort George area with whom he had Lizette (c.1842-1938) and Elizabeth (c.1848-?). On January 28, 1873, after the death of his wife, Joseph Allard married Elizabeth Tatzan (c.1846-?), from Testlee, B.C., at St. Joseph's Mission, Williams Lake. No further children have been traced.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-9; YFASA 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 16; FtVicASA 1-9; BCA StJosMiss
See Also: Bouche, William (Son-in-Law)

Allard, Ovid [variation: Ovide] (1817 - 1874) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St. Roch, Montreal, Lower Canada - July 1817 (born to Francois Allard and Suzanne Mercier)

Death: Fort Langley, British Columbia - August 1874

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Snake Party (1835 - 1839); Assistant trader, Fort Langley (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Langley (1841 - 1842); Indian trader, Fort Langley (1842 - 1843); Interpreter, Fort Langley (1843 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1846 - 1847); Carpenter, Fort Nisqually (1846 - 1847); Interpreter, Fort Langley (1847 - 1853); Post master, Fort Langley (1849 - 1850); Interpreter, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1858 - 1859); Clerk, Fort Yale (1859 - 1865); Clerk, Fort Langley (1864 - 1874); Post master, Fort Langley (1864 - 1874).

According to oral tradition, a seventeen year old Ovid Allard was articling for a notarial office in Lachine when he joined the HBC from that city as a middleman in 1834. He spent his first five years at Fort Hall [Idaho] and was second in command when Fort Boise [Idaho] was built in 1837. In 1839 the tall competent French Canadian was assigned to Fort Langley where he helped to build the new fort after it was burned down in 1840 by a careless Jean Baptiste Brulez. He spent much of his forty-year career at Fort Langley, and when the 1846 border was drawn, he established a new Brigade route from Fort Kamloops to Fort Langley. That same year, he, along with sixteen others each laid claim to 640 acres [259 ha] (one square mile) of land around Fort Nisqually in an unsuccessful bid to secure PSAC land. In 1847 he established Fort Yale and the following year, Fort Hope. According to Mrs. John Manson, during the salmon run at Fort Langley, Allard did all the trading with the natives for their salmon. "He used to stand at the wharf and had boxes filled with things to please them, beads, vermilion and other knick knacks," (Pioneer, p. 107), perhaps misstating the real situation as the natives were shrewd bargainers and knew the real price of their labour. Allard's education and competence posed a problem for an insecure James Murray Yale, who, from the 1850s, tried to keep Allard subservient through apparent mean spiritedness and a short temper. In 1853, Yale became so enraged at Allard for shooting his favourite, but vicious dog, and for Allard having provided barrels to a non-Company trader, that Ovid packed his family off in a canoe and went to Fort Victoria to hand in his resignation. James Douglas convinced him otherwise and sent him to Nanaimo where he arrived on March 11, 1854, as "supervisor of outside work". Four years later, on February 4, 1858, he left Nanaimo on the steamer Otter to re-establish a defunct Fort Yale, where he stayed from May 1858 to 1864. At that point he returned to Fort Langley and remained in charge there until his death on August 2, 1874.

Ovid Allard, whose family life was very complex, had two wives and seven or eight children. In Fort Hall, he married a native woman with whom he had Sennie (?-?). According to his granddaughter, Julia Hamburger Apnaut, Sennie was given away at Fort Langley by his second wife, Justine, to a passing Scottish trader, a Mr. McKay, by a jealous wife tired of Allard's doting on the youngster. Justine, on the other hand, claimed that the baby had fallen overboard and drowned in the river (the baby returned some years later as Marie and became the mother of Julia Hamburger Apnaut the story of which she chronicled in Indian Time). On February 22, 1853, he formalized his marriage to second wife, Justine, Cowichan (c.1823-1907), the sister of a Cowichan confederacy chief T'Soshia. Their children were Lucie (c.1842 -1924), Jason (1848-1931), Mathilde (c.1851-?), Sara (?-bap.1856-?), and Joseph (c.1862-?). Other Allard children may have been Marie (?-?), Laurent (c.1851-1860), and Eugenie (?-bap.1854-?). While at Fort Langley, a young daughter accidentally drank poison, died, and was buried by Ovid in a coffin made from boards in the floor.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5-6, 11, 20; FtVanASA 3-8; FtVicCB 23; BCA PSACFtNis; BCCR StAndC; Diar-Rem Allard SS: G. Green; E. Morgan; Lugin, p. 107; Waite, p. 99, 248; DCB Smith
See Also: Allard, Jason Ovide (Son); Morrison, Kenneth (probable Son-in-Law); Ohule, Peter (Relative)

Allcock, Richard (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Richard Allcock made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Allen, Robert [a] (1800 - 1845) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Greenwich, Kent, England - 1800

Death: Chinook, Oregon Territory - March 1845

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1835); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1838); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1839 - 1844); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1839 - 1844); Settler, Chinook Store (1844 - 1845).

Robert Allen joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 from Portsmouth, Hampshire, sailing shortly after on the HBC brig Isabella [William Ryan] for the Northwest Coast. On May 2, 1830, the Isabella was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia without loss of crew or much cargo. After this brush with disaster, Allen began his work in coastal shipping on the Dryad but left for London on the Ganymede three years later in September 1833. He took a side trip to Hudson Bay on the same vessel in the summer of 1834 before returning to the coast on July 27, 1835. This time he decided to stay and spent the next nine years in coastal shipping before settling in the Chinook area on November 30, 1844. His retirement was short lived for he died in 1845 and James Allen Scarborough was the executor of his will.

Robert Allen partnered with a native or mixed descent wife and had several children. One daughter, Mary Anne (c.1834-1930), became the future progenitor of a future premier of the Province of Alberta.

An undelivered June 4, 1833 Greenwich letter from a distraught mother, Mary Allan, who had received no money from Allen, rests in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella 1; FtVanCB 6; YFASA 11-13, 15, 19-20, 24, 27; FtVanASA 2-8; YFDS 3a-5b, 7-8, 12; log of Ganymede 1, 4; ShMiscPap 7, 14; log of Cadboro 5; PortB 1; log of Dryad 1; Allen's will, HBCA A.10/19, fo. 166; March 7 date of death in HBCA A.10/21, fo. 41; Beattie & Buss, p. 40-43

Allen, William (fl. 1837) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1837).

William Allen, who may be the same as William Arling on the 1834-1835 Fort Hall Accounts, appeared at the 1837 Rendezvous. He had obviously spent several years trapping, for he had lived two years with the Crow Indians and spoke their language. A good hunter, he travelled for some time with Osborne Russell and through his backwoods knowledge, managed to save Russell more than once.

PPS: O. Russell, p. 61, 64, 65, 66, 67, 69, 71, 72, 73, 75, 77,80

America (fl. 1822 - 1841) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1823 - 1825); Labourer, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Labourer, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1830); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Passenger, Ganymede (barque) (1831); Passenger or seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1841).

America, from Oahu, joined the HBC in 1822 after the merger of the two companies. Alexander Roderick McLeod mentioned him frequently in his journal account of the 1826-1827 Southern expedition to the Umpqua. On Sunday,

July 2nd, 1826, for example, "one of our Owhyhee's (America) is very unwell of a Breast Complaint since leaving Fort Vancouver." He was ill through August. America continued to be employed, as a middleman, or Indian trader, until November 1, 1831, when he was discharged and sent to Oahu on the Ganymede. He must have returned to the coast, for, on May 21, 1841, America boarded the Cowlitz at Fort Vancouver to work his passage back to Oahu.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-12; YFASA 3-9, 11; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanPJ 2 PPS: McLoughlin, p. 230

Ames, Edward [variation: Ned Aymes] (c. 1793 - ?) (probably British or American: Welsh)

Birth: possibly Wales, United Kingdom - c. 1793

Maritime employee

PFC Seaman, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Seaman, New Hazard (brig) (1811 - 1812).

Seventeen year old Edward Ames joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as a seaman before September 3, 1810 and sailed five days later from New York Harbour. In February 1811, after reaching the Hawaiian Islands, he tried to desert but was caught, tied up and flogged. Eventually he was left at Oahu, an act that paradoxically saved his life. He was sent ashore for a load of sugarcane that he and others loaded on a boat that had been left high and dry by the ebb tide. Believing that he had considerable time, he took a stroll but, during his absence, the tide came in and the captain's brother, James C. Thorn, left without him. Ames had to hire a canoe that took him to the side of the Tonquin, whereupon the captain got into the boat and beat Ames unmercifully, throwing him overboard. Ames' clothes were then thrown into the canoe and the Tonquin sailed without him. Brutal as this incident was, it saved Ames from the fate of his fellow crew members. He appears to have stayed in the Islands until October 7, 1811 when he shipped onto the Salem brig New Hazard along with fellow seamen Joseph Wings, Samuel Pace and Immanuel Pinto, but he didn't do too well on this voyage either. On October 29, 1811, on the way back to the coast, Ames let go of the brace block twice and consequently was flogged by the 2nd mate with a "piece of ratline stuff." His relations with the 2nd mate remained tenuous for the next year, and on September 20, 1812 while en-route to the Hawaiian Islands, Gale accused Ames of stealing the fore hatch key, later located in the armourer's forge, and flogged him. For his supposed crime, he was sent "to the main-top cross-trees till twelve o'clock in the morning." A few weeks later, on October 28, 1812, he went ashore at Honolulu harbour and disappeared from records. He likely joined another vessel.

PS: USNA Tonquin PPS: ChSoc XLV pp. 49, 70; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 58; Reynolds, The Voyage, p. 47-48, 50, 107, 110

Amiot, Alexis (fl. 1811 - 1821) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Death: 1821

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1811 - 1813); Boute, Pacific slopes (1819 - 1821).

Alexis Amiot appears to have first joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on December 30, 1811 to work in the Northwest. On January 27, 1819, he rejoined as a steersman for three years and is on record as being in the Columbia, probably as a member of the Express, in 1821 when he transferred from the NWC to the HBC. Within a few months, he was dead, as an 1821 entry shows the wages of the late Alexis Amiot going to his heirs. The circumstances of his death have not been traced.

Alexis Amiot's family have not been traced.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7, 9

Amundson, Amund (fl. 1857 - 1858) (probably Norwegian)

Birth: probably Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1857 - 1858).

Amund Amundson joined the HBC in 1857 on a contract that ended in 1861. He spent the initial years of this contract in the interior of what is now British Columbia. (An Anders Amundson appeared on May 19, 1855 on Serv Acc., 18-19, A.32/20, fo. 204 – but is probably not the same person.)

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5

Anaheurase, Simon [variation: Anaheurarie] (c. 1820 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840);

Middleman, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844).

Seventeen year-old Iroquois Simon Anaheurase joined the HBC in 1839, going west over the Rockies. His first assignment was helping to construct the short-lived Fort Taku [near the present city of Juneau, Alaska]. Around June 1840, he moved south on the Alaska panhandle to Fort Stikine [Wrangel, Alaska] and on October 12 took a local Stikine wife. At the fort he did a variety of jobs ranging from grinding wheat at the mill the men had constructed to twisting pack cords and making heads of tobacco. He likely competently carried out his duties for he was not cited in the journals. In April 1842 however, discipline appeared to break down in the fort and rum flowed freely allowing people like Simon to be drunk on a daily basis, for which the manager John McLoughlin Jr. struck him. As John Jr. was murdered in the early morning of April 21, most of the servants were implicated by John Jr.'s father Dr. John McLoughlin, of Fort Vancouver but, Anaheurase appears at least to have had prior knowledge of the conspiracy. On the night of the murder, McLoughlin ordered Anaheurase to accompany him and told him that he had been shot at previously by Heroux; Anaheurase could find no evidence of this. Because he had knowledge of the conspiracy, he was kept at the fort and eventually sent down to Fort Vancouver. Finally, in the spring of 1844, McLoughlin Sr. sent a large group of fourteen, which included the young Iroquois, back to York Factory.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 23; FtVanASA 6-7; FtStikPJ 1, 2; HBCA B.209/a/1, fos. 2, 17, 24, 28, 48, 89; FtVanCB 29, 30

Anahi [variation: Onaha] (fl. 1840 - 1846) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1843); Labourer, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1846).

Anahi joined the HBC from Oahu in 1840, arriving at Fort Vancouver in April of that year. He was sent on the steamer Beaver to Fort Stikine arriving on June 13 to perform as a labourer. Not being used to the cold, on December 19, 1840 he froze three toes on both feet although he had been told to warm himself if he felt cold. Three other Hawaiian Islanders froze that same night, none seriously. He was present at Fort Stikine during the murder of the post manager, John McLoughlin Jr., but likely did not participate in the event. He worked at Stikine until November 30, 1846, at which point he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-26; FtVanASA 6, 8; YFDS 17; FtStikPJ 1; PPS: ChamSoc VI, p. 358

Anarachtagara, Pierre (fl. 1849 - 1855) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman and labourer, Snake Country (1850 - 1855).

Pierre Anarachtagara joined the HBC in 1849 and continued employment until he deserted in 1855.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVanASA 9-12

Anarize, Joseph [variation: Anaricze] (fl. 1846 - 1849) (probably Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1847); Boute, New Caledonia (1847 - 1849); Boute, Fort Alexandria or Thompson River (1849).

Joseph Anarize joined the Hudson's Bay Company in 1846 and worked on the Pacific slopes until the end of his contract in 1849.

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-28; YFDS 18-19; FtAlexPJ 8

Anasse, Baptiste (fl. 1855 - 1856) (possibly Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Colville (1855 - 1856).

Baptiste Anasse joined the HBC in 1854 on a contract that ended in 1856, at which point he retired.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 11-13

Anatakarias, Peter (? - 1850) (probably Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Pacific Northwest - February 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850).

Peter Anatakarias joined the HBC in 1849 on a contract that was to have ended in 1852. He died on February 22, 1850 of unspecified causes, likely in the Columbia Department.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29; YFDS 20

Anatayaresse, Pierre (fl. 1817) (possibly Native : Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1817).

Pierre Anatayaresse is on record as crossing the Rockies to the Pacific slopes with Joseph LaRocque in 1817. It is not known when he signed on with the North West Company and he has not been traced after 1817.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10

Anawarion, Louis [variation: Anywarion, Aniwarion, Anywaryou, Annawarion] (fl. 1813 - 1830) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Steersman, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1821); Boute, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1821); Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821); Boute, New Caledonia (1821); HBC Boute, New Caledonia (1822 - 1824); Bowsman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); Bowsman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1828 - 1830).

Louis Anawarion first joined the NWC on July 20, 1813, working the following years in Amherstburg, Fort William/Lac La Pluie, Nipissing, Lac Ronde and Michillimackinac. On January 8, 1817 he signed a contract in Montreal specifically to work in the Northwest. He crossed the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque that year and in the fall of 1819, while he was in Snake Country, deserted from Donald McKenzie's party. When the NWC merged with the HBC, he was retained for services in New Caledonia. In 1826 he was paid in Montreal and from 1828, appeared to work with the cross-country Express.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 9; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 7; YFASA 1-2, 4-5, 8-11; YFDS 1a; FtVanAB 2a, 31

Anderson, Alexander Caufield (1814 - 1884) (British: English)

Birth: Calcutta, India - March 1814

Death: Saanich, Vancouver Island, British Columbia - May 1884

Fur trade officer

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Second in command, Fort McLoughlin (1832 - 1833); Second in command, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Apprentice clerk, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1835); Clerk, Ogden's Stikine Expedition (1834); Clerk, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1835); Clerk, New Caledonia (1835 - 1836); Clerk, Fraser Lake (1836 - 1839); Clerk, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1839 - 1840); Clerk in charge, Fort Nisqually (1840 - 1841); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Chief Trader in charge, Fort Alexandria (1842 - 1848); Clerk, Fort Alexandria (1842 - 1848); Chief Trader in charge, Fort Colville (1848 - 1853); Chief Trader disposable in district, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Alexander Caufield Anderson, who got his first two names from his father's business partner, had a full career in the fur trade. He additionally acquired a native name of S'gatch poose (scar on the cheek) on the Northwest Coast. Son of a retired British Army officer turned indigo planter, Anderson was taken from India to England in 1817. After working in a business house in Leadenhall Street, he joined the HBC in 1831 as an apprentice clerk around the same time as his brother, Robert. That same year he sailed for Montreal, and the following year, was transferred to the Columbia Department. He was second in command to Donald Manson when the latter built Fort McLoughlin in 1833 and in 1835, when he was transferred to Fort George; his first duty was to meet recruits from Canada and bring leather back through the Yellowhead ("leather") Pass. In 1840 he took over from an ill William Kittson at Fort Nisqually and was there for the visit of Commodore Wilkes in May 1841. In 1846 he was promoted to Chief Trader and helped establish a westerly new Brigade route from Kamloops to Langley to replace the old southern route through Fort Vancouver. He eventually retired June 1, 1854 and stayed a few years in Cathlamet, Washington Territory, near his father-in-law James Birnie becoming a naturalized American citizen on October 3, 1854. In 1858, he moved to Vancouver Island, settling at Rosebank, Saanich, near Victoria. His career didn't end, however, for he became the first Collector of Customs in British Columbia and Postmaster of Victoria. He was replaced as Collector of Customs because his deputy, Angelo, misappropriated Customs money. In 1876, under the new Dominion government, he acted as commissioner for the settlement of the Indian land question in B.C. (the Commission was dissolved in 1878). He also became inspector of fisheries and, while trying to find a suitable site for a hatchery, suffered exposure from which he never recovered.

Alexander Caufield Anderson had one wife and at least nine children. In May 1837 at Fort Alexandria, he married Elizabeth Birnie. Nine of their children were Elizabeth Charlotte (?-1918), James Robert (c.1842-?), Henry/Harry (c.1842-1893), Alexander (c.1845-?), Allen (a.k.a. Seton) (?-?), Agnes (?-?), Walter (?-?), Rose (c.1859-?) and Arthur Beattie (?-bap.1864-?).

Anderson Island, Puget Sound, Washington, Anderson Lake, Lillooet district, B.C., Anderson River, Boston Bar, B.C. and Anderson Hill, Victoria, B.C. were named after Alexander C. Anderson.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-9, 11; YFASA 12-15, 17-20, 23-25, 27-32; YFDS 5a-7; FtVicASA 1, 8; SimpsonCB; VPL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver District, North & South Subdistrict PPS: Van-PL Colonist, May 9, 1884; HBRs VI, pp. 384-86; HBRs XXX, p. 201n; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 240; Stanley, p. 87
See Also: Birnie, James (Father-in-Law)

Anderson, Anton (? - 1858) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably Norway

Death: probably Fort Rupert, Colony of Vancouver Island - July 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Beaver (steamer) (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1857 - 1858).

Anton Anderson quite likely came to the coast on the mutinous voyage of the HBC chartered vessel, Colinda, which arrived at Fort Victoria on April 17, 1854. After his arrival he worked until July 25, 1858 when he died, probably at Fort Rupert.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-3, 5-6, 9

Anderson, James [1] (fl. 1824 - 1828) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Stromness, Orkney

Death: probably Orkney, United Kingdom

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1828).

(This James Anderson may be the same as the following. The problematic piece of information is the marriage of James Anderson to Isabella Scott in Stromness on July 7, 1827 when in fact James was on the Columbia River. If, however, the marriage had taken place on July 7, 1826, then everything would fit as he probably would have been in Orkney between sailings.) James Anderson signed on with the HBC's William & Ann in London, probably in July 1824. The first return voyage (1824-1826), which spent four months trading on the coast, was uneventful for Anderson except for his March 24, 1825 fall on deck, in which he hurt his leg. However, on the outward second voyage (1826-1828), around the vicinity of the equator, Anderson went temporarily insane, but was much improved by the time the vessel reached Maui. After he arrived back in London on February 6, 1828, he appears to have returned to Orkney.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann, 1, 4

Anderson, James [2] (c. 1798 - 1830) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Stromness, Orkney - c. 1798 (born to Catherine Anderson)

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - December 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1828); Ship builder, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1830); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830).

James Anderson [2] likely joined the fur trade to give himself capital to start a new life but instead became one of its casualties. James appears to have drifted into the ship-building trade like many others at the port of Stromness. His father having died, James appeared to be the sole supporter of his family and in 1821 he was found working with Andrew and Marjory Skea and living with his widowed mother, Catherine Anderson. Six years later, on July 7, 1827, and having met Isabella Scott, he began a new life as a married man in Stromness. Possibly in an attempt to acquire capital to begin a successful married life, the following year, on April 21, 1828, he signed on with the HBC on a three-year contract as a carpenter/ship builder. He sailed to Hudson Bay that year, made his way overland and arrived at Fort Vancouver in the fall of 1829. There, James was engaged in repairing rather than building ships and was in the process of "giving a thorough repair to the Cadboro", when, on Christmas day, 1830, at the age of thirty-two, he died of "the fever". He was likely buried in the graveyard behind the fort.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV 2; HBCCont; YFASA 9-10; FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a; FtVanCB 8

Anderson, Peter [variation: John] (fl. 1810 - 1816) (possibly Norwegian)

Birth: possibly Norway

Maritime employee

PFC Boatswain, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Boatswain, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

Boatswain Peter Anderson (listed as "John Anderson, boatswain, foreigner" in the Franchere manuscript, but as Peter Anderson, New York Native in the New York ship's manifest) was possibly an immigrant from Scandinavia picking up work in New York. On September 8, 1810, he sailed from New York on John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn], beginning a tempestuous voyage around the Horn. Paradoxically, continual quarrelling with Captain Thorn actually saved him from the awful fate of his fellow seamen. On February 15, 1811, having had enough, he deserted on the island of Hawaii. Eleven days later, on February 26, 1811, he visited the New Hazard [David Nye] in the Kealakekua Bay area, but did not join the crew. His movements for the next five years have not been traced but Anderson was next found working as a boatswain on the NWC schooner Columbia [John Jennings] for two months in 1816. That same year the Columbia was in both Macao and on the Northwest coast, but it is uncertain whether Anderson actually worked on the Coast. On a previous voyage, Captain Jennings had shot the previous boatswain, but Peter Anderson appears to have survived his voyage.

PS: USNA Tonquin; HBCA NWCAB 1 PPS: Reynolds, The Voyage, p. 6; ChSoc XLV, p. 48, 60

Anderson, Robert [a] (c. 1811 - ?) (possibly Canadian: English)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Death: possibly Canada East [Quebec] or Canada West [Ontario]

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1834); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1836); Middleman or labourer, Fort Umpqua (1836 - 1838); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839).

Joining the HBC at Lachine, Quebec in 1832, Robert Anderson [1] appears to have spent his career in the Columbia Department. He returned east over the Rockies to Canada in 1839 at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFASA 13-15, 18-19; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 5b-7

Anderson, Robert [b] (fl. 1833 - 1838) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Birsay, Orkney

Death: possibly Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1833); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1833); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1836 - 1838).

Robert Anderson joined the HBC on April 29, 1833 as a labourer and sailed for York Factory on the Prince of Wales in June. He made his way overland and worked out his first five year contract at forts on the Columbia River. In March 1838, he left the Columbia for the east side and on September 29, 1838, he renewed for a further three years as a labourer for work east of the Rockies. He may have returned to the Orkneys.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I, 10; log of Prince Rupert IV, 7; YFASA 13-14; YFDS 5c, 7; FtVanASA 3-5

Anderson, William Marshall (fl. 1834) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Trader, Rendezvous (1834).

William Marshall Anderson attended the 1834 Rendezvous and kept an important diary. His experiences can be traced through his published 1834 journal and narrative.

PS: W. M. Anderson

Andre, Louis [standard: André] (fl. 1822) (probably Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

HBC Employee, Fort George [Astoria] (1822).

Louis Andre, who was working at Fort George in the spring of 1822, may have been part of the cross-country Express.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 11

Andreha, Johannes [variation: Joanes, Joahans Andrea, Andrews] (fl. 1814 - c. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Steward, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1816).

Johannes Andreha was a steward on the NWC ship Columbia in 1814 and re-engaged in Canton, China, on March 26, 1815 under John Jennings. During his time on the Columbia, Andreha sailed to Hawaii, Sitka and the Columbia. He was paid off by the NWC on February 29, 1816, at which point he continued on with the ship.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Anevagueron, Jacques [variation: Arrwaguiron] (fl. 1819 - 1820) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, New Caledonia (1819 - 1820).

Jacques Anevagueron, one of the many free Iroquois who roamed the west and occasionally worked for either the NWC or HBC, actually trapped and traded for the HBC prior to 1821. In December 1819, he was a member of the HBC party of free Iroquois who went from Smoky River into New Caledonia to trap. Throughout 1820, they trapped and traded and returned east of the Rockies in October 1820 with a great quantity of furs, much to the consternation of the NWC.

PPS: HBRS II, p. 214, 261

Anewscatcha, Antoine [variation: Louis Aneuscheachta, Anewsrta, Anewssta, Anewseaghta, Anociati] (c. 1817 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1817

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and bouté, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838) (on Athabasca River); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1838 - 1847); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1849 - 1869); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1849 - 1869).

Antoine Anewscatcha joined the HBC in Lachine in 1837 and spent much of his career at Fort Simpson. However, from 1853 his work there was sporadic and he may have been working at other locations or on HBC shipping.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; YFDS 8; YFASA 19-20, 24-32; FtVicASA 1-3, 7-15; FtSimp[N]PJ 9; BCA FtSimp[N]PJ PPS: BCA Morison, p. 67

Annance, Francis Noel [variation: Francois] (c. 1790 - ?) (Abenaki and Mixed descent)

Birth: St. Francois, Province of Quebec - c. 1790 (probably born to Francis Joseph Annace)

Death: probably Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); Hunter, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); HBC Interpreter, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Interpreter, Fort Nez Percés (1822 - 1823); Interpreter, Columbia Department (1823 - 1825); Clerk in charge, Fort Okanagan (1825 - 1826); Clerk, Thompson River (1826 - 1827); Clerk, Fort Langley (1827 - 1830); Clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Clerk, New Caledonia (1831 - 1832); Clerk, Fort Colville (1832 - 1833); Clerk, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1835); Clerk, South Party (May 1826) (recalled by McLoughlin).

Francis Noel Annance's mixed roots went back to around 1700 when, during a southern French and Indian War raid by the Abenaki, two New England white children (Samuel Gill and Rosalie James) were captured in Massachusetts and raised by the Abenaki. These two captives married, their descendants mixed with the Abenaki population and their children produced the progenitors of the Annance's of St. Francois [Odanak]. The Annances valued education, and Francis Noel's education at the Moor's Indian Charity School in Hanover, New Hampshire gave him a knowledge of the classics and a flourishing writing style unlike many of the other people he was to meet later. Annance joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on August 18, 1818 as a clerk and after the coalition with the HBC in 1821, acted as an interpreter and clerk. In 1824, he kept a journal of an advance expedition to the Fraser River to scout out a future site for Fort Langley. He was also in on the construction of Fort Langley in 1827 and stayed until 1830 as a clerk. The talented, multilingual Abenaki did his job competently but his mixed heritage may have slowed his promotion from clerk, as George Simpson said in his Character Book that Annance could "... have no prospects of advancement." In 1831, John McLoughlin denied Annance going to York Factory but Annance compromised by consenting to remain if he could only visit York. On March 20, 1832 Annance went over the head of McLoughlin when he petitioned Lord Aylmer, Governor-General of the Canadas, to colonize the area between the Fraser and Columbia River because of its agriculture potential. (Annance letter). Because of this, in the fall of 1833, he was sent to serve out his time as postmaster at the remote Fort Simpson [Mackenzie River]. His wife and two surviving boys may have remained on the Pacific slopes. In Fort Simpson, Annance had a romantic affair with Chief Factor John Stuart's country wife, Mary Taylor and tried to induce her to go to Montreal with him as his wife. Around 1835, he left the service and, according to descendants, may have farmed in Durham [Canada West] until he returned to St. Francis around 1845 with a new family. There he taught English and farmed and was still in good health when he appeared at the Woolrich-Connolly trial held in Montreal, testifying to the validity of country marriages. The date of his death has not been traced.

Francis Noel Annance had two families and at least five children. His first wife was an unnamed Flathead woman, with whom he had three boys, one of whom drowned. With his second wife, unnamed, he had a boy and a girl.

Annacis Island, in the Fraser River, is named after Francoise Noel Annance.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1-9, 11-12, 15; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFDS 2a, 3a-5a; FtVanASA 1-2; D.4/125, fo. 79; SimpsonCB; HBCABio; BCA Diar-Rem Annance PPS: HBRIS III, p. 426; G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 114-118, 133; G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 200n SS: Day, p. 76, p. 80; MacLachlin, "The Case for Francis", p. 35-39
See Also: Annance, Joseph (probable Brother); Plomondo, Simon (Relative)

Annance, Joseph (c. 1800 - ?) (Abenaki and Mixed descent)

Birth: St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1800 (probably born to Francis Joseph Annance)

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Columbia Department (1822 - 1824); Trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

No doubt the younger brother of Francis Noel, Joseph (more properly Francis Joseph) Annance, from St. Francois [Okanak], also had an early education at the Moor's Indian Charity School in Hanover, New Hampshire. Unlike his older brother, Joseph joined the HBC in 1822 as a trapper and was on the Pacific slopes between 1822 and 1825 with both Alexander Ross and Peter Skene Ogden in the Snake Country. Little is recorded of him but, on February 10, 1824, he left Flathead Post with Alexander Ross' Snake Party returning on November 23. The following month, on December 21, he left with Peter Skene Ogden's party but, on May 24-25, 1825, he deserted with twelve others to the American camp at Weber River [Utah] after he, Alexander Carson and John Grey paid their debts to Ogden. He then joined the American trappers and, in 1830, was trapping east of the Rockies in the upper Missouri area.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2-5; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3a; MHS Chouteau SS: Day, p. 76; MacLachlin, "The Case for Francis", p. 35-39
See Also: Annance, Francis Noel (probable Brother); Plomondo, Simon (Relative)

Ansell, Mr. (fl. 1854 - 1855) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Mr. Ansell made one return voyage to the coast on the Hudson's Bay Company supply vessel Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 1

Antoine, Emanuel (fl. 1835 - 1836) (possibly Spanish)

Birth: possibly Spain

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1835 - 1837); Cook, Ganymede (barque) (1835 - 1837).

Emanuel Antoine was engaged at Oahu on November 26, 1835 and was to return to England from Fort Vancouver on the barque Ganymede in 1836-1837. However, on the return voyage on September 10, 1836, he and James Manchester, a fresh recruit, "stole the yawl and run" at Valparaiso, Chile. He likely had a child in Chile for an Immanuel Antoine (c.1836-?), whose origin was "Spanish" was living on Saltspring Island in 1864.

PS: HBCA log of Ganymede 4; YFASA 15, 17; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3; ShMiscPap 14; BCA BCCR WesMeth

Apike (fl. 1843) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1843).

Apike joined the HBC in Oahu, as a labourer likely in 1843. He appeared to work in the Columbia from June 1, 1843 but was discharged to Oahu on November 15, 1843.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 23; YFDS 14

Apissases (Asslin) [variation: Appissassis, Appessassis, Apesasis] (fl. 1821 - 1822) (probably Native)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia River (1807 - 1812); Boute, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1822).

Apissases joined the NWC probably before he was with David Thompson, and is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821. He appears to have worked a very short time in the Columbia, for in outfit 1821-1822, he was transferred to Lesser Slave Lake.

PS: OA Thompson's Journal; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1, 7; YFASA 1

Applegate, Henry (fl. 1843) (British)

Birth: probably England

Death: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1843).

Henry Applegate shipped with the HBC in London as an ordinary seaman around September 6, 1842 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. On June 9, 1843, one month after his arrival, he transferred to the Vancouver, and presumably returned to England on it.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 6; log of Vancouver [3], 1

Arahota, Charles (c. 1794 - ?) (probably Native: Iroquois)

Birth: Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: probably Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Bowsman, New Caledonia (1829 - 1835); Boute, New Caledonia (1829 - 1835); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Boute, New Caledonia (1835 - 1844).

Charles Arahota joined the HBC as a bote probably in the Montreal area in 1829 and was assigned to the New Caledonia District. In 1844 he returned east of the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-20, 23; YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8

Archambault, Antoine (fl. 1823 - 1824) (probably Canadian: French or Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824).

Antoine Archambault worked for the HBC and may have been part of the Express.

PS: HBCA YFDS 1a

Archambeault, Charles (c. 1803 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1825).

Charles Archambeault worked for the HBC in the Columbia District in the 1820s. He may have been part of the Express for in 1825 he was paid in Montreal and appeared to work from there in the next outfit.

PS: HBCA YFASA 3-6; FtVanAB 1

Arcouet, Leon [variation: Jean Arquate, Arquoitte] (c. 1810 - 1843) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1810

Death: The Dalles, Columbia River - July 1843

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (June 1 1843 – July 1843).

Brother of Amable Arquoitte, Leon or Jean Arcouet, joined the HBC in 1841 as a middleman and appears to have spent his three-year career at Fort Vancouver. On July 3, 1843, while in a returning cross-country brigade boat fighting its way up through the Columbia River Dalles, Arcouet drowned when the boat was swamped in a whirlpool and the property lost. Also drowned was fellow crewman, Willaim Swanson. Arcouet's body was retrieved and likely temporarily buried on the spot for, three months later, his brother Amable brought Leon's body to St. Paul [Oregon], where he was buried (or reburied) on October 3, 1843.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 23; YFDS 14 PPS: HBRS VI, p. 108; CCR 2a
See Also: Arquoitte, Amable (Brother)

Argent, Charles (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Charles Argent made one return voyage to the coast on the Hudson's Bay Company supply vessel Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Arionase, Jacques (c. 1790 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Province of Quebec, British North America - c. 1790

Fur trade employee

HBC Bowsman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Bowsman, Columbia Department (1831 - 1832).

Jacques Arionase worked on the Pacific slopes from 1825 to about 1831. In outfit 1831-1832 he may have worked briefly in the Saskatchewan.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-9, 11; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 2b-4a

Arionga, Jean Baptiste [variation: Arghnionga, Orionga, Arignea] (fl. 1821 - 1826) (Native: probably Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis or Montreal, Lower Canada

Death: probably Fort St. James, New Caledonia

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1817); Middleman, Columbia District (1820); Middleman, New Caledonia (1820 - 1821); HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1823); Middleman, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1823); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826).

Jean Baptiste Arionga first appeared with the NWC when he crossed the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque in 1817 and again in 1820 indicating that he may have been a member of the cross-country brigade. He was in on the construction of Fort Babine in 1822 and in 1823 he signed his Fort Babine contract with an "X". Three years later, the lingering effects of venereal disease, which he picked up in the Columbia, debilitated him such that in March 1826, he could no longer walk and had to be taken from Fort Babine to Fort St. James on a cariole. He may have died shortly after for he has not been traced after 1826.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 2, 7; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 7; YFASA 1-2, 4-5; FtStJmsLS 1; FtStJmsRD 3; HBCCont; FtBabPJ 1; McLLkCB 1; FtBabCorr 1

Ariwhoianta, Andre [standard: André] [variation: Arewhanianta, Areuhoniente] (c. 1819 - 1842) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: Okanagan Dalles [Okanagan Falls, British Columbia] - May 1842

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Umpqua (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1839 - 1841); Middleman, New Caledonia (1841 - 1842).

André Ariwhonianta joined the HBC in 1836 as a middleman and worked in a variety of places. His second contract ended in 1844, but he was unable to fulfil it as he drowned at the Okanagan Dalles, May 31, 1842.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-7; YFDS 7; YFASA 19-22

Arneson, Martin (fl. 1853 - 1854) (probably Norwegian)

Birth: probably Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Martin Arneson made an appearance in 1853-1854 at Fort Victoria, as did a large number of Scandinavians. He may have come on the Colinda or another vessel, and appears to have left the area shortly after.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-2

Aroza, Michel (fl. 1811 - 1820) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: possibly Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1817 - ?).

Michel Aroza first signed on with the NWC on January 15, 1811 and, for the next six years, worked at Temiscaming, Amherstberg and Sault St. Marie/Fort William. On December 31, 1816 at Sault St. Louis he signed on again as a middleman and winterer for three years in the Northwest. He is on record as having crossed the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque in 1817 and likely worked in the area until the end of his contract in 1819-1820.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2

Arpent, Noel [variation: Arpin] (fl. 1821 - 1823) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); HBC Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); NWC Milieu, Fort Nez Percés (1822 - 1823).

Noel Arpent is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821 and returned to Montreal in 1823.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10

Arquoitte, Amable [variation: Arcouet] (c. 1798 - 1880) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Faubourg Saint Laurent, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - July 1880

Fur trade employee

HBC Mason, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Mason, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Mason, Fort Langley (1828); Middleman, Fort Langley (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Mason, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Mason, Fort Langley (1829 - 1830); Mason, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1836); Trapper, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1842+).

Brother to Leon Arcouet, Amable Arquoitte joined the HBC as a middleman at Notre Dame, Montreal on April 23, 1825 and spent his fur trade career in the Columbia Department. He was part of a June 27, 1827 party that left Fort Vancouver to establish Fort Langley in order to intercept furs going to the maritime fur traders. After spending most of his time as a mason at Fort Vancouver, he retired on September 1, 1833 but worked sporadically afterwards, for example, in 1834, he helped rebuild the powder magazine at the Fort. Paradoxically, he was one of the settlers who went to California in 1837 to break the Company's monopoly. He eventually became a Willamette River Valley settler and maintained an account with the HBC providing service as a mason or exchanging furs and wheat for Company goods. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon and on October 3rd of that year brought his brother's disinterred body from the Dalles and reburied it at St. Paul, Oregon. In the late 1840s, he spent three months in California during the gold rush. He eventually took a claim north of Donald, and became a U. S. citizen in 1851. While at work blasting for a mill canal in Oregon City, he was permanently blinded. Amable was buried on July 8, in the St. Paul cemetery.

Amable Arquoitte had one wife and eight recorded children. On January 28, 1839 he formalized his marriage to Marguerite Clacalam, Chinook, (c.1820-1870). Their children were Amable (c.1831-?); Michel (c. 1834-1915); Lisette (c. 1836-1897) and Jean (1839-?); Leon (1842-?); Isaac (1843-?); Marguerite (1846-1933) and an unnamed daughter (?-1848).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 6-9, 11-15; FtVanASA 1-6; YFDS 4b-7, 10-11; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a; SS: Holman, p.115; Arquoitte descendant
See Also: Arcouet, Leon (Brother)

Arthur, Peter (fl. 1836 - 1841) (possibly British: Scottish)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer (chief), Beaver (steamer) (1835 - 1840).

Peter Arthur, who joined the HBC in England in 1835, left his mark on the coast during his five years in coastal shipping. He was chief engineer of the steamer Beaver from August 24, 1835 to October 31, 1840, originally sailing it from England to the coast in company with the barque Columbia. He arrived on the coast in March 1836 and in that year, ever on the lookout for a good fuel supply, pronounced an exposed vein of coal on North East Vancouver Island (the later site of Fort Rupert) to be of good quality. However, less than two years later at Fort Simpson, he took part in, and likely helped organize the crew's mutiny against William H. McNeill's harsh treatment of the crew of the Beaver. He escaped punishment, however, no doubt due to the essential nature of his job and, in March 1838, even asked for a pay increase. James Douglas bristled at Arthur's drinking and Douglas' own inability to initiate punitive action against the engineer when the seaman and stokers had been severely punished. However, Arthur redeemed himself by moderating his drinking and continuing to work, apparently quite competently, in coastal shipping on the steamer Beaver until October 31, 1840 at which point he sailed for England on the barque Vancouver. Succeeded by Joseph Carless, Arthur arrived back in the British Isles in May 1841. He was last traced at 4 Wade Street, Poplar, London on November 10, 1841, when he received a letter of recommendation from HBC secretary William Smith. No doubt he had applied elsewhere as engineer.

Arthur's family has not been traced but during his tenure on the coast, his brother, Robert Arthur, wrote from Bateurire by Kennoway, Fifeshire, Scotland, enquiring after him.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-6; YFDS 7, 11; FtVanCB 12, 20, 23, 28

Artigosa, Vincent (fl. 1815 - 1816) (possibly Portuguese or Philippino)

Birth: possibly Portugal or the Philippines

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

Vincent Artigosa signed on with the NWC vessel Columbia probably in Canton on May 1, 1815. He sailed with the vessel until February 29, 1816, at which point he entered the Portuguese service.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Aruihunta, Louis (c. 1806 - ?) (Native: probably Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Death: possibly Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1848); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1848); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1848 - 1849).

Louis Areuhunta joined the HBC in 1846 and spent most of his career on the coast as a middleman and woodcutter on the coastal steamer Beaver. In 1849, most likely at the end of his three-year contract, he joined John Charles' Columbia Express Party and on Thursday April 5, 1849, took charge of the horses. He returned east over the Rockies to Canada in 1850 where he continued his employment.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 26-29; Journal of the Columbia Express Party, 1849, BCA 20.4 C38

Asanyenton, Jean Baptiste [variation: Asanayenton, Asanayanton, Asunayenton, Assanayunton] (c. 1803 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Boute, New Caledonia (1832 - 1835); Steersman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1836); Boute, New Caledonia (1836 - 1837); Steersman, New Caledonia (1837 - 1838); Boute, New Caledonia (1841 - 1842).

Jean Baptiste Asanyenton joined the HBC in 1831 and worked west of the Rockies until 1842. He may have periodically joined the cross-country brigade for, in 1837, he picked up his wages in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-17, 21; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-4, 6-7

Ashley, William Henry (c. 1782 - c. 1838) (American)

Birth: Chesterfield County, Virginia - c. 1782

Death: Missouri, United States - c. March 1838

Fur trade officer

Ash. Trader, Pacific slopes (1825 - 1826).

William Henry Ashley, an entrepreneur briefly active in the fur trade on the Pacific slopes, was responsible for setting up the Rendezvous system that was meant to replace established posts as centres of trade along the Continental Divide. Raised in Pawhatan County, Virginia, Ashley went to the St. Louis area [St. Genevieve] around 1802. He was involved in supply trains as early as 1808 and, around 1811, he operated lead and saltpetre mines with his friend Andrew Henry, who had been involved in the fur trade. This association continued during the war of 1812 when Ashley and Henry became active in the Missouri Territory Militia, with Ashley rising to the rank of General by 1822. In 1820, one year after moving to St. Louis, he was elected Lieutenant Governor of the new state of Missouri. Two years later, he entered the fur trade in partnership with Henry, who had considerably more experience in the field; they put together an expedition in which Henry ascended the Missouri to the mouth of the Yellowstone, where he constructed a post. He was followed by Ashley but the expedition was less than successful. The following year Ashley attracted to the expedition William L. Sublette, David E. Jackson, Thomas Fitzpatrick and Jedediah S. Smith, who was working with Henry on the Yellowstone River; but, an attack by the Arikarees cost the venture dearly in lives and trade. In late 1823 or early 1824, Henry withdrew from the partnership and, in 1825, Ashley crossed the Continental Divide to the west to trap the Green River area. That summer, various parties, including more than two dozen Hudson's Bay Company deserters, regrouped in the Burnt Fork River [Wyoming] area in July to establish the first Rendezvous. In 1826, Ashley returned to Rendezvous at Willow Lake [Utah] and at the end of the season, sold out to Smith, Jackson and Sublette (SJ&S), agreeing to supply them with goods. Although his presence on the Pacific slopes ended in 1826, he continued to supply SJ&S for the next few years. He was a member of the House of Representatives from 1832-1837. He died of pneumonia March 26, 1838 at the farm of his father-in-law, Dr. Moss, and was buried at his own request in an "Indian mound."

William Henry Ashley had three wives and no children. Around 1810, he married Mary Able (?-1821), daughter of Ezekial Able. Four years after her death, on October 26, 1825, he married Eliza Christy (?-1830). Two years after Eliza's death, in October 1832, he married widow Elizabeth Moss Wilcox.

SS: Morgan, The West of William; Chittenden, p. 247-51; Carter, "William H. Ashley", p. 79-90

See Also: Christy, Edmund (possible Relative); Able, E. (possible Father-in-Law); Henry, Andrew

Ashton, Joseph (? - 1815) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: South China Sea, Pacific Ocean - May 1815

Maritime employee

RAC Sailor, Chatham (brig) (1792 - 1792); Carpenter, Sitka (Sept. 25, 1812 – Oct. 4, 1812); PFC Sailor, Beaver (ship) (1812); Carpenter, Beaver (ship) (1812); NWC Carpenter aboard schooner Dolly, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); PFC Carpenter, Albatross (brig) (1813); Craftsman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); NWC Crew member, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1815).

Joseph Ashton's origins are obscure although at one point he claimed he had been with the Royal Navy's Lieutenant William Broughton when the latter sailed the Chatham up the Columbia River in November 1792. He does not, however, appear on the voyage's records. During a short period of three years, from 1812-1815, the middle aged or elderly ship's carpenter worked for Russian, American and British fur companies in the greater Pacific Northwest, then committed suicide off China. Before September 1812, Ashton had apparently worked for the RAC in New Archangel [Sitka, Alaska] for some time when he was spotted by New England fur traders as a potentially useful craftsman. As the ageing carpenter had somehow indebted himself to the Russian company, Captain Ayres of the Boston ship Mercury, through some pre-arranged but untraced agreement, paid down some of Ashton's debt, probably on behalf of the Pacific Fur Company. Finally, payment by the supercargo of the Beaver [Cornelius Sowle], Wilson Price Hunt, to Governor Alekxandr A. Baranov cleared Ashton of debt with the RAC, allowing him to begin work with the PFC. No doubt Ashton was to pay back the PFC by using his marine carpentry skills on PFC ships. From New Archangel [Sitka], Ashton travelled with Hunt on the Beaver to St. Paul Island and then to the Hawaiian Islands, where he disembarked with Hunt; the Beaver continued to China without them in December 1812. "Old Joe" as he was sometimes called, stayed with Hunt on the Hawaiian Islands until both returned to the Columbia on the Albatross in August 1813.

At Fort George, on October 19, 1813, Ashton signed on with the NWC that had taken over the PFC and, by December, he was rigging the NWC schooner Dolly. This ten ton vessel, the frame of which had arrived almost three years earlier on the PFC vessel, Tonquin, and now re-rigged and lying at anchor near the Fort Astoria wharf, was to be the home of Ashton for the next several months. From its decks Ashton shot ducks, but his floating home was not always secure. In February 1814, for example, he was robbed by six natives who stole a kettle and tried to kill him with a stolen axe. As a result, four Hawaiians were sent on board to guard him. As well, rot had set in the planks. Ashton's faculties also may have begun to deteriorate for Alexander Henry the Younger noted in his journals that Ashton was often doubted when he claimed that he heard reports of ship's guns at sea. An accident in May left him with an injured chest. However, he appears to have recovered from his injuries for, on August of 1814, he signed on as a crew member of the NWC schooner Columbia for its China run. On May 15, 1815, having just left China, Ashton showed symptoms of insanity, and, two days later, after appearing quite sane while working at the sails, he suddenly gave three war whoops, and leaped from the lee bow into the sea, where he was drowned.

Ashworth, Howard C. (fl. 1834) (British: English)

Birth: probably England (claimed his father to be Sir Richard Ashworth)

Other

N/A Guest, Fort Vancouver (1834); Passenger, Eagle (brig) (1834).

Howard C. Ashworth was one of the mysteries of the fur trade. He was an English adventurer and self proclaimed son of Sir Richard Ashworth, a perhaps fictitious lawyer on the English Northern circuit. Howard C. Ashworth was found by Captain (Sir) William Drummond Stewart, in the Rocky Mountains scrounging food from the American trappers of Nathaniel Wyeth's second expedition. Ashworth may have joined Wyeth's Expedition before it left Independence, Missouri on April 28, 1834 or possibly when he was in the Rockies; regardless, he was with the group when it arrived at Fort Vancouver on November 5, 1834. As the expedition included two missionaries who were given the luxury of a room inside the fort, Ashworth secretly moved in with them. However, an incredulous John McLoughlin, who perhaps saw through his charade, had him escorted out but allowed him to have biscuit, potatoes and salmon until Ashworth joined the HBC brig Eagle ten days later as a passenger for the Hawaiian Islands. Ashworth crossed the bar of the Columbia River on November 25 and arrived at Oahu on December 23, 1834. Just what turn his life took after that point has not been discerned.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 10; ShMiscPap

Asselin, Isidore (c. 1809 - 1840) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1809 (born to Michel Asselin and Louise [Lajoie] Asselin)

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman, New Caledonia (1834 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1840).

Isidore Asselin joined the HBC from St. Cuthbert in 1831 as a middleman, apparently leaving his family for employment west of the Rockies. A man with blond hair and a large nose, Asselin moved between the Columbia District and New Caledonia, and the fact that he only appeared on the account records would indicate that he adequately carried out his job. He left the area for east of the Rockies at the end of his contract in 1840. At that time, it was noted that his wife and their two or more children, all in the depths of miserable poverty, had left St. Cuthbert for the high country. It is not known if Asselin was reunited with his family.

Only Isidore Asselin's early family is known. On November 20, 1827, he married Marguerite Paquin at St. Cuthbert [Quebec]. The names of his two or more children have not been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-15, 19; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-5; PPS:/SS "Quebecois en Oregon"... p. 260

Assinchuru, Louis [variation: Assencharie] (c. 1809 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Death: possibly Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1836 - 1838); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1839 - 1840); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1839 - 1840); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1842); Woodcutter, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1842 - 1843); Boute, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1844).

Iroquois Louis Assinchuru joined the HBC from Sault St. Louis in 1835 and appears to have been a jack of all trades working in a variety of positions and locations. He went east of the Rockies to Canada at the end of his contact in 1844.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 19, 23; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-8

Atachsarar, Ignace (c. 1819 - 1845) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: possibly Canada, British North America

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman or bote, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Bote, Thompson River (1837 - 1842); Bote, Fort Alexandria (1842); Bote, Fort Colville (1842 - 1845).

Ignace Atachsarar, who joined the HBC from Sault St. Louis in 1836 as a bote, spent most of his career around the Thompson River [Kamloops] and Fort Colville areas. When he wasn't working as a boute, he served in a variety of labour capacities and returned east of the Rockies to Canada in 1845.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-8; FtAlexPJ 5; YFDS 7; YFASA 19-20, 24

Atachunish, Thomas (fl. 1837 - 1842) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1841 - 1842).

Thomas Atachunish, who signed on with the HBC in Lachine as a middleman in 1837, worked to the end of his contract in 1842 and then returned over the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-7; YFASA 17, 19-21

Atariachta, Thomas [variation: Asariachta, Alauachte] (fl. 1851 - 1860) (probably Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia general charges (1851 - 1852); Middleman, New Caledonia (1852 - 1856); Middleman, Fort Langley (1856 - 1860).

Thomas Atariachta appears to have joined the HBC around 1851. His contract ended in 1860, at which point he appears to have left his employment. He may have carried on transactions until 1862 when he disappears from record.

Thomas Atriachta appears to have had one wife, Marie, a Tsiminis (Somenos?)/Cowichan? (?-bap.1856-?). No children have been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-9; BCA BCCR StAndC

Atearonquash, Louis (c. 1808 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, New Caledonia (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1835).

Louis Atearonquash joined the HBC in 1831 and worked in the Columbia District. He disappeared from Columbia records in 1835. A later 1840 contract showed him to have been born around 1814 so his birth date is problematic.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 11-14; YFDS 4b-5c

Ateassta, Pierre [variation: Akais-sa, Akeija] (c. 1811 - ?) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1811 (born to Pierre Kalaton ha ne and Catherine Kwahwan ne)

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1837); Boute, Columbia Department (1837 - 1838); Boute, Fort Colville (1838 - 1842); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1844); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1846); Boute, Fort Colville (1846 - 1851); Guide to York Factory, Fort Colville general charges (1851 - 1852); Boute, Fort Colville (1852).

Pierre Ateassta joined the Hudson's Bay Company in 1833 from Sault St. Louis and served as a boute in the Athabasca on his way to the Columbia. He appears to have lasted about twenty years as a boute. Little is known about his life, but he stayed within the Fort Vancouver/Fort Colville area before retiring on March 1, 1852.

Pierre Ateassta had one wife and four recorded children. On January 17, 1843 likely at Fort Vancouver, he legitimized his marriage to Angele Louis André. Their children were Louis (1839-?), Catherine (c.1840-?), Sifroy/Sigfroid (1843-?) and Pierre (1845-1845).

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-9; FtVicDS 1 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b

Atiadongo, Ignace (fl. 1816) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Columbia Department (1816).

Ignace Atadongo joined the NWC on June 15, 1814 as a middleman to work in Michillimackinac. Two years later, when he was in the Columbia, probably as a member of the cross-country brigade, he was apparently married for his pay went to his wife.

PS: HBCA Liste; NWCAB 1

Atihataroues, Michel (? - c. 1823) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Freeman

U.A. Freeman, Snake Country (1822 - 1823).

Michel Atihataroues was listed as part of Pierre Tevanitagon's 1822 band of Iroquois freemen, which trapped areas such as the Snake Country. He could have joined Finan McDonald's Snake Party of 1823 but this is not certain.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4

Atkinson, William (fl. 1851 - 1868) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - May 1868

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1851 - 1853); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1855); Clerk, Fort Nisqually (1855 - 1856); Storekeeper, Fort Victoria (1856 - 1857); Storekeeper, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1858).

While William Atkinson was coming to Vancouver Island aboard the barque Tory, he assisted Charles A. Bayley in his on-board teaching of the immigrants. After he arrived in May 9, 1851 he worked at Fort Langley for two seasons before moving back to Fort Victoria where he was storekeeper until 1858 in Charles A. Bayley's store. Little is known of Atkinson but Bayley's description in his own words provides a glimpse:

"My old friend Atkinson being then in charge of the provision store was very much annoyed by a lady of "Ton" with an order for fresh fish, took her the length of the Fort to supply her and showing her a large tank of salt herring she became very indignant and remarked they are not fresh fish, he replied, the freshest I have Madam, closed the door and left." (Early Life..., p. 11)

In 1860 he lived on Broad Street in Victoria and some time after that, moved to farm in the Saanich area. William Atkinson was found dead on the Royal Oak Farm on Saanich Road on May 18, 1868 apparently from rupture of the heart.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-5, 9; BCA Victoria Directory, 1860, p. 25, Colonist, May 20, 1868; SS Bayley, "Early Life..." pp. 2, 11

Aubichon, Alexis [variation: Obishaw, Obishon] (c. 1792 - 1867) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1792

Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - September 1867

Fur trade employee

NWC Freeman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); HBC Middleman, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827); NWC Trapper, Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); HBC Trapper, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1828 - 1831); Trapper, South Party (1830 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Trapper, South Party (1836 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1841+).

Alexis Aubichon joined the NWC in 1814 and spent the next four years at northern posts. He joined the HBC at the time of the coalition in 1821 and for the next three years appeared to be part of the brigade between Montreal and the Columbia. From then on he served as a middleman and trapper in the Columbia and was sent with Work to establish Fort Langley. He became a freeman in 1829 but was still active for several years. After leaving the service at age fifty in 1841, he settled in the Willamette River Valley a few miles below Champoeg on the river, and the boat landing at that location was long known as "Obishon's Landing" (locally, his name was spelled Obishaw). There he voted against the organization of the Provisional government at Champoeg, on May 2, 1843. He was successful at farming for, in 1844 it was said that he had 270 horses, 1,800 cattle and 155 hogs.

On July 8, 1839 Aubichon married Mariane (c.1805-?), a Chinook woman and with whom he had seven children: Alexis (c.1822-?), Sophie (c.1826-?), Emilie (c.1830-?), Julie (c.1833-?), Catherine (c.1836-?), Philomene (1840-?) and Elizabeth/Isabelle (1843-?). Son Alexis was killed on a California expedition.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Asst]AB 4, 10-11; YFASA 1-9, 11-15; FtVanASA 1-2, 4, 6; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-7; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census PPS: CCR 1a, 2a; SS: Holman, p.115

Aubichon, Pierre (fl. 1821) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]Fur trade employee*NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1821); HBC Milieu, Columbia Department (1821).

Pierre Aubichon is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821. Within the next few months he returned to Montreal.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1

Auger, Celeste (c. 1837 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Fort Simpson [Nass], British Columbia - c. 1837 (born to Nicholas or Joseph Auger and Amelie, Nass)Death: possibly Fort Simpson [Nass], British Columbia*Fur trade employee*HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1855 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1857 - 1860); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1864 - 1865).

Celeste Auger appears to have been born, brought up and educated at Fort Simpson and, at the age of eighteen, began to work for the HBC. On March 5, 1858, when he registered at missionary William Duncan's Men's Night School, it was noted that he could read and write well. In 1860 he dropped out of sight for four years, and returned to work for one more year in 1864. It didn't last long - Hamilton Moffat beat him for stealing and other offences, and Celeste deserted on July 4, 1865.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 3-8, 12-13; FtSimp[N]PJ 9; UBC-SC Duncan
See Also: Auger, Nicholas or Joseph (Father)

Auger, Nicholas or Joseph (c. 1806 - 1885) (Canadian: French or Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1806 (born to Joseph Auger and Catherine Esclip)Death: Victoria, British Columbia - August 1885*Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1829 - 1831); Untraced vocation, Fort Nez Percés (1831 - 1832); Middleman or labourer, Fort Simpson (1832 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Known as both Nicholas and Joseph in HBC records, Auger joined the HBC around 1829 and spent the majority of his career at Fort Simpson where he was in on the building of the post at the second site. He did a variety of jobs, including making lime, and retired in 1854. In February 1859, the HBC purchased land for him in the Victoria District. In December of that year, his son Joseph, who had been living in Fort Simpson, arrived at Fort Victoria on the steamer Labouchere and, on the morning of December 5, was found lying on the ground, murdered. His coat, cap, and handkerchief had been taken. Nicholas Auger appeared to continue to raise a family in the area. He died in August 1885 and was buried on the 19th of that month in Victoria.

Nicholas Auger had possibly three wives and eight recorded children. On March 14, 1853 he legitimized his marriage to Amelie (?-?), Nass. Their children were Catherine (c.1835-?), Celestin (c.1837-?), Joseph (c.1839-1859?), Nicholas (c.1841-1858), Olivier (c.1846-1858) and Pierre (c.1851-1884). It is possible that Joseph (1859-1859), born to the native woman, Catherine, and Angelique (c.1860-?), born to the native woman Cecile (c.1822-1882), were also both Nicholas' children. Cecilia died on July 22, 1882.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8; FtVicASA 1-3; FtSimp[N]PJ 3-4, 6; BCA BCCR StAndC; Van-PL Colonist, Dec. 6, 1859; The Victoria Colonist, Jan. 18, 1885; BCA Evening Post, Jan. 19, 1885; 1860 "Shutazea" Directory, p. 25
See Also: Auger, Celeste (Son); Cook, William (Son-in-Law)

Auld, John (fl. 1832 - 1835) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employeeHBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Cook, Cadboro (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Cook, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1834 - 1835).

John Auld began work in the Columbia in outfit 1833-34 as an employee of the HBC. He helped to build the second Fort Simpson on the second site. (A John Auld, born c.1804, joined the HBC as an apprentice for five years on January 3, 1820, although his wages started on November 1, 1819. Servants' Contracts, 1820-1925, A.32/20, fo. 426).

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c; FtSimp[N]P] 3; ShMiscPap 14

Aupu (fl. 1840 - 1845) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1845); Goer and comer, Snake Party (1845).

Aupu joined the HBC in 1840 in Oahu and served to the end of his contract with the Snake party as a middleman. He worked until December 10, 1845, at which point he returned to Oahu, where he was paid his final HBC wages.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-25; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 16; SandIsAB 5

Aurtaronquash, Louis [variation: Awetaronquash] (fl. 1837 - 1861) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1838 - 1839); Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1840); Boute, New Caledonia (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Colville (1841 - 1843); Boute, Fort Colville (1843 - 1846); Boute, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Boute, Fort Colville (1847 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Colville (1855 - 1861).

Louis Aurtaronquash signed on at Lachine with the HBC as a middleman in 1837. He appears to have spent most of his time at Fort Colville.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-16; YFASA 17, 19-20, 24-32

Austen, Charles (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Charles Argent joined the HBC in London and made one return voyage to the coast on the supply vessel Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Austen, James [variation: Thomas] (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

James Austen, who also went by the name of Thomas Austen, sailed to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While there, he would have visited several coastal posts. The records are unclear, but he probably deserted on the coast.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Austen, John A. [variation: Austin] (fl. 1847 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1848 - 1849).

John A. Austen joined the HBC as a seaman on September 22, 1847 in London and sailed to the coast on the barque Vancouver. As the vessel was lost at the mouth of the Columbia on May 7, 1848, he was taken to Fort Vancouver and assigned to the Company's schooner Cadboro on November 1, 1848. On September 10, 1849, he deserted, most likely to the gold fields of California, and was not heard from again.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 5; YFASA 28-29; YFDS 19-20

Avain, George (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

George Avain made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4

Ayotte, Firmin [variation: Firminus, Freeman Yott, Iotte] (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1825 (born to Joseph de Pelagie Velmore)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Lachine Depot (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Middleman, New Caledonia (1851 - 1853); Middleman, Fort Langley (1853 - 1859).

Firmin Ayotte was hired on locally or in the Rupert's Land area and, after spending outfit 1848-49 at Lachine Depot, worked for the HBC in New Caledonia and at Fort Langley for 10 years. He married in the Fort Langley area but raised a family with another wife on one of the San Juan Islands, possibly Orcas.

Ayotte had two wives and three recorded children. On July 21, 1856, he married Susanne Keitse or Keltse at Fort Langley. No children were recorded and the fate of Susanne is unknown. By 1872, he appears to have had another wife, Louise (?-?), possibly from the San Juan Islands. Their children were James (c.1872-?), Joseph (c.1876-?) and Narcissus (c.1877-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-6; HBCABio; BCA StAndC; SaanMiss; FtAlex 1; OHS 1880 US Census, San Juan

Ayotte, Jean Baptiste (c. 1807 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1807

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846).

Jean Baptiste Ayotte joined the HBC in September 1843 on a three-year contract. At the end of his contract in 1846, he returned east of the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 25

Azure, Antoine Jr. (c. 1816 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1816 (born to Antoine Azure and Marguerite Assiniboin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Apprentice, Fort Simpson (1834 - 1836); Middleman, Snake Party (1836 - 1838); Middleman, South Party (1838 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1849); Middleman, Snake Country (1849 - 1852); U.A. Untraced vocation, Yakima Indian War (1855 - 1856).

Antoine Azure Jr. joined the service of the HBC in 1833 and one of his first duties was the construction of the second site of Fort Simpson [Nass]. He appears to have served as a middleman throughout his career until about 1852. He appears to have stayed in the Fort Vancouver area and was involved in the Yakima Indian war of 1855-1856 under Captain Maxon.

He was the spouse of Lisette Killimaux (c.1818-Oct. 8, 1845), who bore children Ursule (1840-?), Joseph (1842-?), and Pierre (1843-44); (a second son buried late 1844). On April 13, 1846, about six months after the death of Lisette, he married Marie Madeleine Cascades (c.1826-1847) but she died February 19, 1847. On February 7, 1855, Antoine fathered a new baby, naming her Marie Magdeleine (1855-?) after his second wife and five days later married the new baby's mother, Catherine Shoshoni.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFASA 13-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-8; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1b, 2a

Badayac (LaPlant), Pierre (fl. c. 1808) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Michel de Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Death: probably Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1838); Middleman, Fort

Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1834); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Settler, Cowlitz (1841+); U.A. Untraced vocation, Yakima Indian War (1855 - 1856).

Pierre Badayac (La Plant) joined the HBC from the parish of St. Michel of Yamaska in 1829 and served at or around Fort Vancouver until he became a settler in the Cowlitz area in the 1841-1842 outfit. He served in the Yakima Indian War from November 1855 to January 1856 under Captain Peers and later re-enlisted under Captain Warbass.

Badayac was married twice and had two children. His first marriage was to a somewhat frail seventeen year old named Lisette Coutenoir/Cognoir (c.1822-1842) [daughter of Michel Cognoir and a Chehalis woman] on April 19, 1839 but she succumbed on February 20, 1842. He later married Catherine and had two children, Catherine and Joseph (Lewis County Census).

PS: HBCA YFDS 3b, 5b-7; FtVanASA 2-6; YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-21 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b

Baden, John (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably England

Death: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

John Baden made one return voyage to the Coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison. He would have stopped at Fort Simpson and Sitka before returning to England.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Bagnoit, Joseph [variation: Beignot] (? - 1823) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Fort George, New Caledonia - 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1820 - 1823).

Joseph Bagnoit, who did a variety of jobs at Fort George such as bringing in leather from McLeod Lake, appeared to be an average servant although more than once he was referred to as a "lazy vagabond." (FtStJmsPJ 1, fo. 29) Like others, he was sometimes ill and was bled to restore his health. However, in the summer of 1823 he was at the wrong fort at the wrong time. At that time, Bagnoit and Belone Duplante were left in charge of Fort George [New Caledonia] while James Murray Yale went off to the posts at Fraser's Lake and Stuart's Lake [Fort St. James]. While, according to George Simpson, Yale was off on some frivolous pretext, two young natives, one of whom had been a former lover of Yale's woman, came and reignited the affair. When the two HBC servants threatened to reveal this to Yale upon his return, the two were butchered with a hatchet by the natives while they were sleeping. They ransacked the store and fled with Yale's woman, leaving Bagnoit and Duplante dead in their beds. The natives who were left, fearing revenge by the HBC, hid the store's ammunition under the floorboards. As the bodies were left for a day and a half, they were ravaged by the post's dogs until the two were buried behind one of the houses. When Yale arrived, they were re-interred on a bench across the river. In the following spring, because of the murders and because the perpetrators had not been caught, the fort was temporarily abandoned.

PS: HBCA FtStJmsPJ 1-2; YFASA 1-2; PPS: HBR3 III, p. 107; HBR3 X, p. 24

See Also: Duplante, Belonie

Bahia (fl. 1845 - 1850) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Columbia (barque) (1846); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1847 - 1849); Labourer, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1849); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1849 - 1850).

Bahia joined the HBC in Oahu on May 7, 1845 and worked as a labourer at coastal posts and on coastal shipping for the next five years. He returned to Hawaii in December 1849 and then, shortly after, re-enlisted for a further two years.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; log of Columbia, 9; SandIsAB 3, 10

Baikie, James [variation: Bakie] (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Walls, Orkney, Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850 or 1851); Steward, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1852).

James Baikie sailed to Hudson Bay either in 1850 or 1851 and made his way overland to the Fort Vancouver area. He worked for the HBC as a steward but was dismissed by Mr. Ballenden on July 10, 1852.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II, 1-2; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9; FtVicDS 1

Bailey, Richard (fl. 1851 - 1853) (probably British)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1851 - 1853); Freeman labourer, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Richard Bailey worked for the HBC as a freeman. He may have stayed in the area after his work with the HBC, as he appeared periodically on the accounts.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; FtVicASA 1-2, 5

Baker, Abel Jr. (fl. 1834 - 1836) (American)

Birth: possibly Boston, Massachusetts

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Clerk, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Clerk, Fort William [Sauve Island, OR] (1834 - 1836); Clerk, Fort Hall (1834 - 1836); Untraced vocation, Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company (1836).

Abel Baker Jr. came to the Columbia River from Boston as a clerk on the May Dacre [James Lambert] in 1834 and worked under Nathaniel J. Wyeth for almost three years. He appears to have worked at both Fort William on Sauve Island and Fort Hall. On December 5, 1836 as the company was breaking up, Wyeth requested that the HBC give Baker free passage out.

PS: OHS FtHallAB; CRFTCCB; HBCA N. J. Wyeth's Dec. 5, 1836 letter to HBC Gov. & Committee A.10/3, [request to HBC to provide passage for Baker] fo. 496

Baker, Charles (c. 1804 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Plymouth, England - c. 1804 (born to Charles Baker and Elizabeth Waycot)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Charles Baker joined the HBC in London on December 7, 1833 on a five year contract as a seaman. He sailed to the Pacific Northwest aboard the brig Eagle, worked on coastal shipping and returned to London May 12, 1837 to rejoin his family.

Charles Baker had one wife, Mary Ireland (?-?) whom he married on March 20, 1827 in Ashburton, Devon. While Charles was away, Mary had to work, as she needed the money, as a maidservant and may have had to live apart from her two children, John (?-bap. 1830-?) and Elizabeth (?-bap. 1835-?) during the time.

One HBCA undelivered letter from Mary indicates that, as Charles was such a poor letter writer, she thought that he was dead.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 5b, 6-7; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 4-5; MI 5; PortB 1s, HBCA C.3/14, fo. 19, 43; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 93-94

Baker, James (c. 1804 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly South Ronaldsay, Orkney - c. 1804

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Labourer, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1832); Cook, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1836); Personal servant, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1836); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Settler, French Prairie [Willamette] (1840+).

James Baker joined the HBC on May 15, 1824 and spent the majority of his career in the Fort Vancouver area. He was in on the building of Fort Langley and in 1827-28 was given extra wages by order of George Simpson. In outfit 1840-41 he was listed as a settler in French Prairie living in close association with Winslow Anderson who was working for Ewing Young. When Young died, Baker purchased several of his household items and animals. Baker was still alive in 1849.

James Baker had one wife and three recorded children. He and Betsy (?-?) Cascades/Chinook aka Pepispa produced children James (?-bap.1836-?), John (1839-?) and Guillaume (1842-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 19-20; YFDS 2a, 3a, 4a-7; FtVanCB 9; FtVanASA 1-6; BCA BCCR CCCath; OHS 1849 Census, Clackamus Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a

Baker, Joe [variation: Joseph] (fl. 1836 - 1841) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Beaver (steamer) (1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1840); Indian trader, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1841); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1841).

Joe Baker signed on with the HBC as a middleman in January, 1836 in Oahu and came to the coast on the Beaver's maiden voyage. Once on the coast, he worked as an Indian trader. Baker was unusual in that he had his Hawaiian wife with him. He worked with the Company until November 20, 1841 and then returned to Oahu with his wife.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 1; YFASA 15, 19-21; YFDS 6-7, 12; FtVanASA 3-7; log of Columbia 4

Baker, Micajah (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably American)

Birth: possibly New York, New York

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1812); Blacksmith, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); Blacksmith, Willamette House (winter 1813 - 1814); Trapper, Willamette House (winter 1813 - 1814).

Micajah Baker signed on with the PFC in New York the fall of 1811, sailing on the ship Beaver [Cornelius Sowle] on October 10. In May, 1812, he landed at Fort Astoria where he appeared to work continuously at a variety of jobs until 1813. At this point he appeared to get sick, especially with scurvy, off and on. After the PFC was taken over by the NWC, Baker didn't sign on with the latter, but instead wintered in the Willamette Valley with an agreement to trap for the NWC.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10 SS: K. W. Porter, John Jacob Astor, p. 475-478

Baker, William [1] (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849).

William Baker joined the HBC in London on September 6, 1848 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. On May 6, 1849 at Fort Vancouver, Baker and eight others couldn't wait for the discharge requested by the crew and deserted for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 30-32; P. S. Ogden's May 16, 1849 Fort Vancouver letter to Archibald Barclay, Correspondence, A.11/70, fos. 368-69

Baker, William [2] (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

William Baker made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison. He would have stopped at Fort Simpson and Sitka before returning to England.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Balau (fl. 1845 - 1858) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1847); Labourer, New Caledonia (1847 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1848); Labourer, New Caledonia (1848 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1854).

Balau joined the HBC in Oahu on May 7, 1845 and worked as a labourer at various posts until 1854 when he joined the militia group, the Victoria Voltigeurs. He was last recorded there in 1858.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; SandIsAB 3; FtVicASA 1-3; FtAlexPJ 7-8 SS: Koppel, p. 70

Baldwin, James (fl. 1815 - 1816) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

James Baldwin joined the schooner Columbia on the North West Coast as a seaman on August 8, 1815. He was paid off on February 29, 1816, probably in China, and went to Amsterdam on the ship Isabella.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Ball, John (1794 - 1884) (American)

Birth: Hebron, Grafton County, New Hampshire - November 1794 (born to Nathaniel Ball)

Death: Michigan, United States - February 1884

Other

HBC Member, Wyeth's 1st Expedition (1832); School teacher, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833).

John Ball, an adventurous lawyer, was briefly a school teacher and farmer in Oregon. After attending local school and receiving tutoring from his mother, he graduated from Salisbury Academy and then in 1820, Dartmouth College in New Hampshire. He supported himself by teaching while studying law which he began to practise in New York in 1824. Eight years later, while he was running an oil-cloth manufacturing plant, the adventurous Ball, along with John Sinclair, joined the overland Wyeth expedition to Oregon at Baltimore. As the expedition had not been well planned, Ball watched other members quit or fall away, discouraged by privation and intimidation by natives along the route. Ball himself kept going to the coast to get a taste of the Pacific and at Fort Vancouver was asked by Dr. John McLoughlin to teach the mixed descent children of the post, who spoke a variety of languages. His efforts were partially successful and so McLoughlin provided both him and Sinclair with tools, seeds, horses, etc., to farm in the Willamette, and former HBC employees helped him to erect a log cabin and plant a field of wheat. He stayed to harvest the crop but caught a fever and so decided to leave Oregon territory with his friend Sinclair. On October 18, 1833 he sailed from Astoria for Hawaii on the Dryad. Sinclair reshipped on a whaler at Golden Gate harbour to make his own way back to Boston, but Ball continued on to Hawaii and for the few weeks he was there, stayed with Stephen Reynolds. Thence he boarded the New Bedford bound whaler Nautillus which took him to the Society Islands, and around Cape Horn to Rio de Janeiro where he became a clerk on a United States sloop Bozer [Lieutenant Farragut] which took him back to the United States. He continued to practise law in Troy, New York, and later in Grand Rapids, Michigan, where he speculated in land, became active in politics, married and raised four children during the next forty-eight years. He never returned to Oregon again.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-14 SS: Ball, John Ball; Gaston, p. 652; Dobbs, p.32-34; OHQ, vol. III, p. 82-106; Overmeyer, p. 98-99
See Also: Sinclair, John

Ballenden, Jacob [variation: Ballendine] (1819 - 1848) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Evie, Orkney - July 1819 (born to John Ballenden and Margaret [Linklater] Ballenden)

Death: Fraser River - August 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Thompson River (1844 - 1845); Labourer, Fort Colvile (1845 - 1847); Farmer, Fort Colvile (1847 - 1848).

Jacob Ballenden was likely born in Evie, Orkney and later moved westward to Sandwick where, in 1841, he was working at the Manse at Quays. Likely in an effort to acquire capital to better his life, he joined the HBC on February 12, 1842 for five years. He didn't sail from nearby Stromness right away, for three months later, on May 24, 1842, he married Marjory Brass in Sandwick. The following month he sailed for York Factory on the Prince Rupert V, and that fall, his child was born. Ballenden was considered a person of excellent character but on August 7, 1848 he was found on the banks of the Fraser River shot through the heart, with his gun still at his side. The cause of his death, whether accidental or suicide, was not determined. He was buried on the spot.

Jacob and Marjory's child, Isabella Traill Clouston Ballenden, was born on November 26, 1842. The fate of Marjory [Brass] Ballenden has not been traced.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert V 1; YFASA 24-26, 28; YFDS 18-19; FtVanCB 38; SS: Hatfield, "On the Brigade Trail", p. 39

Ballenden, James [1] [variation: Ballendine] (fl. 1822 - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823).

James Ballendine [1] was in the Columbia Department in 1822-1823 but may also have been at Cumberland House, indicating work with the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 2

Ballenden, James [2] [variation: Ballentine] (c. 1822 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Evie, Orkney - c. 1822 (born to John Ballantine and Mary Linklater)

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1838); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1846 - 1847); Middleman or labourer, Cowlitz (1847 - 1848); Middleman or labourer, Fort Colville (1848 - 1849); Farmer, Fort Vancouver depot (1849 - 1851).

James Ballenden joined the HBC at Stromness on March 19, 1838 for five years, sailing to York Factory that year. He appeared in the Columbia records in outfit 1846-1847 with no designation (he likely crossed the Rockies into the Columbia in 1847) and was discharged in February 1852, after working as a middleman (likely a labourer) and farmer in several areas. According to his superior, Chief Factor John Ballenden, who spelled James' name Ballentine (no doubt to distance himself as they appeared not to be related), James Ballenden refused to obey the Chief Factor's orders and so was dismissed from the service, and paid only until October 1, 1851.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV, 11; YFASA 26-31; YFDS 18, 22; FtVanCB 39; FtVanASA 9; FtVicASA 9-16; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Ballenden, John (1810 - 1856) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Stromness, Orkney - 1810 (born to John Ballendine and Elizabeth Gray)

Death: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - December 1856

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Factor on furlough, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851); Chief Factor, Fort Vancouver (1851 - 1853); Board of Management, Fort Vancouver (1851 - 1853).

John Ballenden, whose father-in-law was Chief Factor Alexander Roderick McLeod, had a fleeting interest in the Columbia, finding himself in that district more from circumstances of sickness than by design. John appears to have lost his father in early childhood. He entered the service of the HBC on June 8, 1829 as an apprentice clerk, sailed to Hudson Bay on the Prince Rupert IV and served in a variety of posts east of the Rockies, becoming Chief Trader in 1844 and Chief Factor in 1848. In 1848 he suffered what may have been a stroke. While attached to the Columbia, and after furloughing 1850-1851 in England because of ill health, he found himself on his way to Fort Vancouver where he stayed on for two years, participating on the Board of Management until he went on furlough again. During his stay at Vancouver, he suffered what appeared to be another stroke, as he temporarily lost the use of his right arm. In 1854-1855 he was appointed in charge of the Red River Settlement at Fort Garry. He retired on June 1, 1856 and died at the end of that year.

On December 10, 1836 at Red River, John Ballenden married Sarah, a daughter of Chief Factor Alexander Roderick McLeod. Together they had three sons and three daughters.

PS: OrkA Cen1821; HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV 3; HBCCont; YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9; FtVanCB 40; SimpsonCB PPS: HBRS III p. 426-27; HBRS XXX, p. 202n SS: P. Russell, p. 15-18
See Also: McLeod, Alexander Roderick (Father-in-Law); Lewes, John Lee (Son-in-Law)

Balls, George (c. 1829 - 1889) (British: English)

Birth: probably Kent, England - c. 1829

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - November 1889

Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Steward, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1850 - 1852); Steward, Recovery (brig) (1852 - 1854).

George Balls arrived on Vancouver Island on March 24, 1850 on the Norman Morison. For the next four years he worked on the HBC coastal trade. In 1857, because he entered into partnership with George Mason in a combination of businesses which involved brick making, saloon keeping and real estate speculation, he was well poised for the boom that the gold rush brought to Victoria in 1858. Balls appears to have been the principal in the "Identical Saloon"

(Hanna), in which Mason worked during the off season when he was not making bricks. Brick making was temporarily abandoned in 1861 when the two bought an old scow schooner, Mary Ann, which carried supplies to and from Victoria. In 1862, their business, Mason and Balls, was located at Wharf and Yates Street. In 1865, the successful partners built another saloon in the "White Horse Hotel" (Hanna). This success, however, came to a crashing end in 1866 or early 1867 with bankruptcy caused by the colony's recession. Balls worked in Victoria for a few years and then disappeared from sight until 1886. At that time, another George Balls had been charged and fined for being drunk and disorderly. An indignant George Balls had the local paper print a clarification. The paper added: "For the sake of both, George Balls is going to try to get George Balls to take the pledge" (The Colonist, Sept 26, 1886). Balls died in 1889 and his funeral was held from the French Hospital, where he presumably died.

George Balls appears to have been a bachelor throughout his life although a daughter, Mary Elizabeth (1854-?) was born to an unnamed native woman.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-4; VPL 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 25; 1862 Victoria Directory, p. 54; The Colonist, Sept.26, 1886, Nov. 24, 1889; BCA Marriage SS: Mouat, p. 213; Hanna

See Also: Mason, George

Balthasard, Andre [standard: André] [variation: Balthazard] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Vaudreuil, Lower Canada - c. 1821 (born to Joseph Balthasard and Genevieve Rocbrune)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1849); Carpenter, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1852); Contractor, Fort Shepherd (1856); Carpenter, Fort Shepherd (1856); Labourer, Fort Langley (1865 - 1866).

André Balthasard joined the HBC in 1839 and served his contract in northern coastal forts. In 1844 Balthasard gave a deposition confirming to Dr. John McLoughlin that the men of Fort Stikine had been plotting against the officers. In 1853, he purchased a town lot in Victoria, where he lived for a number of years while still continuing to be active. In 1856, Balthasard and Leon Morel became the chief contractors to build Fort Shepherd, the replacement for Fort Colville and, in October 1861, Balthasard was sent on an advance party to Bute Inlet to survey a road across the Chilcotin Plains to the Caribou gold fields. The party lost their canoe and had to be rescued. Because of his carpentry ability, Balthasard was hired to work at Fort Langley for one year, from April 1865-April 1866.

André Balthasard had one recorded wife and six recorded children. On September 28, 1852, he married Ursule, Satsine (c.1827-1862). The Balthasard children were Joseph (c.1847-61), Denis (?-bap.1853-?), Monique (c.1855-1855), Zoe (1857-?), André (1859-1859) and Marcelle (?-bap.1862-?). Ursule Balthasard died, aged thirty-five, on May 10, 1862.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-31; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVanCB 32; YFDS 20; FtVicASA 1; FtVicCB 12; 26; BCGR- Land; BCCR StAndC; 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 25; SS: The Province, Dec. 22, 1894

Banks, Edwin (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

Edwin Banks made a return voyage to the coast on the HBC Norman Morison. While on the coast he delivered supplies to posts including Sitka, Alaska.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 30-31

Baptista, John [variation: Baptiste] (fl. 1829 - 1830) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1830).

John Baptista was hired on by the HBC around 1829 at an unknown location. He left Fort Vancouver for Oahu on November 10, 1830 on the Vancouver and was discharged there.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9-10; YFDS 3b-4a; FtVanAB 28; FtVanASA 2; ShMiscPap 14

Baptiste (fl. 1849) (probably Native)

Maritime employee

HBC Labourer, Cadboro (schooner) (1849).

Baptiste is a mystery figure. He worked on the schooner Cadboro for forty-four days in the Fall of 1849. Between November 26-29, 1849, when the Cadboro was anchored at Nisqually, Baptiste and friend Slogumas were sent out to cut wood for the ship. On November 29, the two spent all morning gambling in a native lodge. When this was found out, their axes were taken from them and they were sent on shore. The two smuggled themselves back on board and were not discovered until December 12 when the ship reached Victoria. Baptiste does not appear on record after that.

PS: HBCA log of Cadboro, 6

Baranov, Aleksandr Andreyevich (1746 - 1819) (Russian)

Birth: Kargopol, Russia - 1746

Death: Batavia, Pacific Ocean - April 1819

Fur trade officer

RAC Chief manager Russian Colonies, Kodiak (1790 - 1799); Manager, Sitka (1799 - 1818).

The chief figure in the control of the Russian territory, now Alaska, Baranov was a Siberian merchant who, when his business went badly in 1790, accepted an offer to manage a Russian fur Company in Kodiak. When the Russian American Fur Company formed in 1799, Baranov became virtual ruler of the area, a role which he held until 1818. During this time, he relocated to Sitka (Novo Arkhangelsk). Sitka was destroyed by the Indians in 1802, but Baranov was able to rebuild it with the help of the Russian navy. In 1812, he extended operations to Fort Ross in California and, briefly, to Hawaii. He was replaced in January 1818 by L. A. Hagemeister, and died on his way back to Russia the following year.

SS: R. A. Pierce, Russian America, p. 20-23

Barber, Richard (fl. 1847 - 1848) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1847); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1848).

Richard Barber set sail for the coast on the HBC vessel Mary Dare from London on October 31, 1846. One year later, on October 29, 1847, after having spent some time servicing coastal posts and Honolulu, he joined the Columbia for its voyage back to London, where he arrived May 22, 1848.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia, 9; YFASA 27

Barclay, Forbes (1812 - 1873) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Lerwick, Shetland Islands, United Kingdom - December 1812 (born to John Barclay and Charlotte Spense)

Death: Oregon City, Oregon - May 1873

Fur trade officer

HBC Surgeon, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1850); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1850).

Dr. Forbes Barclay had a rich and varied life. Son of a surgeon authorized by the HBC Committee to engage men in Scotland and nephew to Dr. Archibald Barclay, Secretary of the HBC from 1843-1855, Barclay was destined to work in the fur trade. He received his early education from his brother James, a school teacher. After failing to complete his surgeon's training at Edinburgh University, he joined the 1831 Arctic search expedition for Sir John Ross. Here he very nearly lost his life, as the vessel was shipwrecked with only he and a few others surviving, the group being rescued by the Inuit [Eskimos]. He was taken to the island of Fisco where he lived with the Danes for many months. He was returned to Scotland in a vessel which touched at Fisco. After this sobering experience, he returned to University and finally in 1838 got his medical certificate, (which now hangs on the wall of the reconstructed surgeon's quarters adjoining the reconstructed hospital in Fort Vancouver) from the Royal College of Surgeons in London. His wanderlust returned and he joined the HBC on September 13, 1839, boarding the barque Columbia the following day for the Columbia region, reaching Fort Vancouver in March 1840. There he served as surgeon and was librarian for the Columbia library in 1846. He retired in April 1850 and eventually went to Oregon City where he had an interest in a sawmill along with Dr. John McLoughlin. In Oregon City he became a U.S. citizen and a celebrated family doctor. He was also the Clackamas County coroner (1853-1873), City School Superintendent (1857-1872), mayor of Oregon City (1864-1873), and City Councilman (1864-1873). He died May 12, 1873 and was buried in Mountain View cemetery.

Forbes Barclay had one wife and seven children. In 1842, Barclay married Marie Pambrun (1826-?) with whom he had seven children: Jean Jacques [John James] (1845-1847), Peter Thomas (1847-?), Alexander Forbes (1849-1905), Adrienna Catherine Adah (1852-1934), Harriet Marie (1854-?), William Charles (1856-?) and Edmund F. (1859-1863).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 19-20, 24-29; FtVanASA 6-9; YFDS 16-17; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clackamas Co.; PPS: CCR 2a, 4a; In the Supreme Court, p. 151-55; Portland Oregonian, May 16, 1873; SS: Labonte, "Recollections..." p. 265; Hussey, Fort Vancouver Historic Structure, vol. 2, p. 72-74; Corning, Dictionary, p. 20-21; <http://files.usgwararchives.org/or/clackamas/bios/barclay440gbs.txt>
See Also: McLoughlin, Dr. John

Barker (fl. 1837 - 1839) (Stikine/Tongass Tlingit)

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1837 - 1839).

Barker, who may have received his name through a name exchange, was the mixed offspring of a Stikine/Tongass union and a person. He was noted for his activities around Fort Simpson and the rough treatment he received. Because of an 1836 quarrel between Massett/Skidegate and Tongass/Stikine natives, Barker decided to retaliate on September 4, 1837 when the former were approaching Fort Simpson in canoes. When he saw them coming, he ran to an island and fired on them with little effect. As Barker had few people with him, he was unable to continue the fight. Two years later, on September 25, 1839, the record noted that he had been troublesome for some time, although the reasons were not stated. On that day, he called the gatekeeper, Pierre Legace and all the other white men who were working at the fort, "slaves," an attitude which incensed the HBC servants. Legace knocked Barker down and cut his brow deeply. Barker went away and, after being told that he would get no payment for the injury, threatened to storm the fort with his gun. When Legace informed him that he was also ready, Barker did not carry out his threat.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3, 4

Barnaby, Charles [variation: Barnabe] (fl. 1853 - 1861) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Death: possibly Vancouver Island, Columbia Department

Maritime employee

HBC Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1856); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1856 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1857 - 1858).

The life of Charles Barnaby is somewhat unclear. He first appeared on record in 1849 when he was baptised in the Catholic Church in Victoria, so he likely arrived by ship around that time. Starting in 1853, he worked for the HBC on the Beaver and, in October, 1857, he joined the Fort Simpson establishment. Soon after, the illiterate Barnaby was recruited as a student in missionary William Duncan's night school. He continued work at the post but his work was considered unsatisfactory and so, on May 26, 1858, he left in a native canoe for Victoria. He may have stopped off along the way for, in August 1861, while just down from the Northwest coast visiting Victoria, he got roaring drunk on brandy-smashers, smashed one of the large chairs in Hypolite's Barber Shop and had to be taken into custody by the police.

On December 25, 1849, Charles Barnaby was baptised in Victoria. At that time, his father was dead.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-5, 9; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; BCA BCCR StAndC; Van-PL Colonist, Aug. 17, 1861, p. 3; UBC-SC Duncan

Barnes, Albert [variation: Barns] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Butcher, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Albert Barnes joined the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Barnes, Jane [variation: Burns] (fl. 1813 - 1819) (British: English)

Birth: probably England

NWC Passenger, Isaac Todd (ship) (1813 - 1814); Guest, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); Passenger, Isaac Todd (ship) (1814).

Jane Barnes, a barmaid who worked at a sailors' public house the Shovellers Arms in Portsmouth, England, was quite out of place in the fur trade of the lower Columbia. The flaxen-haired, blue-eyed but illiterate adventurer caught the eye of North West Company partner Donald MacTavish in March 1813, two days before he was to sail on the Isaac Todd to organize the new Department at Fort Astoria on the Columbia. Jane quickly packed all her dresses and came aboard. On April 23, 1814, after having made herself somewhat unpopular as a shipmate, the vessel arrived at Fort George [Astoria] and Jane became an instant sensation. With a new dress and hairdo every day, her daily walks on the beach drew crowds of natives who wanted to touch her. Children were named for her and a small boat built at Astoria was renamed after her. With her barroom humour, she tried to blend in with the fur trade officers but the more educated clerks saw through her pretensions as she attempted, often inaccurately, to quote literature and then hide in embarrassment, pretending to read a newspaper. As the nearly year-long voyage had taken the bloom off the romance and since MacTavish, who had abandoned Jane as a mate and was to soon travel overland to Montreal, a trip too difficult for a lady, Jane found herself under the care of Alexander Henry, a clerk. Fearing that Jane might be sent back, one of Clatsop Chief Concomly's enamoured sons, suitably made up in red ochre and whale oil (and already having four wives), offered to buy her for one hundred otter skins. Jane rebuffed the offer, angering the Clatsops, who contemplated kidnapping her. Further complications arose when, on May 22, both Henry and McTavish were drowned in the Columbia River. Consequently, in the Fall of 1814 Jane sailed on the Isaac Tod to Canton where she took up with a member of the East India Company and began living a life of considerable luxury. In 1819, after marriage and motherhood, she briefly returned to the fort, but apparently neither her behaviour nor language had improved.

PPS: Cox, p.140-42; ChSoc LVII, p.609, p.729-30, p.732, p.734-35, p.737-39; Coues, p.895-901 SS: ChSoc LVII, p.Ix-lxiii; Ruby & Brown, The Chinook Indians, p.158-59; OHQ, vol. XXXI, p. 125-35
See Also: McTavish, Donald

Barnston, George (c. 1800 - 1882) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Edinburgh, Scotland - c. 1800

Death: Montreal, Quebec - 1882

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Clerk, Fort Langley (1827); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1829); Clerk in charge, Fort Walla Walla (1830 - 1831).

George Barnston had a long and successful career with the HBC and a distinguished subsequent retirement. After training as a surveyor and army engineer, Barnston joined the NWC, on June 13, 1820 as an apprentice clerk and, following the coalition with the HBC, as a clerk. From 1820-26 he was in the York Factory District, at Red River and Bas de la Riviere. On June 22, 1826, because of his training, he joined Aemilius Simpson's York Factory Brigade for the Columbia and the following year he was a member of the party sent to establish Fort Langley on the Fraser. During this time, an encounter with botanist David Douglas sparked a lifetime interest in natural history. A visit to England in 1827 no doubt fostered a contact with the Royal Geographic Society of London, for which he collected insects and kept records. However, to Governor George Simpson, the educated Scot was overly sensitive, gloomy and even of unsound mind, to an extent that he thought Barnston would commit suicide (HBRS XXX 231). In turn, Barnston heaped such scorn on Simpson that the Company boss thought him quite "mad" (Hargrave Papers, p. 413). Barnston resigned because, according to Simpson he felt "neglected or ill" (HBRS XXX 231); after spending the 1830-31 season at Walla Walla, he was rehired for fear he might work for the Americans. In 1832, he took his wife and family east of the Rockies, where between 1833-40, he ran Fort Concord in the Winisk River area, and Martin Falls. He was appointed Chief Trader in 1840 and put in charge of Albany Factory until he went to England on furlough in 1843. When he returned in 1844, he took charge of additional posts and, in 1847, was appointed Chief Factor. After two more furloughs, he retired on June 1, 1863. During his almost twenty years of retirement, he was an active member of the Natural History Society of Canada and was its president in 1872-73.

George Barnston married Ellen, the mixed descent daughter of William Matthews. Ellen stayed with George and together they had eleven children. One of his children became a professor of botany at McGill University.

Barnston Island, in the Fraser River, is named after George Barnston.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA YFASA 4, 6, 8-9, 11; FtVanPJ 3; YFDS 2a, 3a; FtVanASA 1-2, 12; SimpsonCB; John McLoughlin's March 16, 1831 Fort Vancouver letter to George Simpson, D.4/125, [transferred to Walla Walla] fos. 77-79; Hargrave Papers, microfilm reel C-73, Series i, [HBC thinks Barnston "mad"] p. 413; PPS: HBRS III p. 427; HBRS XXX, p.230-32n SS: The Beaver, December 1941, 16-17; The Fort Langley Journals, p. 20-21
See Also: Matthews, William Wallace (Father-in-Law)

Barr, James (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

James Barr made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Barrett, Henry (fl. 1837 - 1839) (British: English)

Birth: probably Yarmouth, Norfolk, England

Death: possibly England

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); Carpenter, Cadboro (schooner) (1837 - 1838); Carpenter, Nereide (barque) (1838); Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

Henry Barrett signed a five year contract with the HBC on August 29, 1835 and the following year was working on the Coast. He left the coast for England on the barque Columbia on November 7, 1838 before the end of his contract in 1840.

Barrett, Patrick (fl. 1847 - 1849) (probably Canadian: English)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Assistant at hospital, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1849 - 1850).

Patrick Barret joined the HBC from Lachine in 1847. On September 1, 1849, near the end of his contract, he went to California, presumably to the gold fields.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-29; YFDS 19-20

Barris, William (fl. 1841 - 1844) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Vancouver (barque) (1841 - 1844).

William Barris joined the HBC in London as a steward on August 30, 1841 and sailed to the Coast on the HBC barque Vancouver. He likely returned with the vessel, arriving back in London on June 11, 1844.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11

Barthelemy, George [variation: Berthelemy] (c. 1819 - ?) (probably Canadian: English)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: possibly British North America

Fur trade officer

HBC Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1838 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1845).

George Barthelemy signed on with the HBC in 1838 in Lachine as a middleman and worked at coastal forts until the end of his contract in 1845, when he returned east of the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 24

Bartlett, John (1839 - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably Dorset, England

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1842); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1843); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1844); Seaman, Comlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1846 - 1847).

John Bartlett joined the HBC in London on September 13, 1839 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. While the vessel was at Monterey and San Francisco to pick up supplies, Bartlett tried several times to desert and had to be forcefully brought back to the ship. He refused to do duty until he was able to talk to Dr. John McLoughlin at Fort Vancouver. The talk seemed to work for, over the next seven years, Bartlett worked on supply and return runs and on coastal trade. However, on May 2, 1846 at Baker's Bay, he, along with two others, refused to obey Captain James Scarborough and mate William Mouat of the Cadboro and he was put off duty for a month while the ship went from Fort Victoria to Fort Vancouver. While at Fort Vancouver, on June 2, 1846, he was put aboard the barque Vancouver, on which he returned to the British Isles. He enjoyed his return voyage for he had to be sprung from jail for breaking the law. He would have arrived in London on July 13, 1847.

(There could be a problem with this entry. Columbia logs 1842-1853, C.1/248 lists London departing crew as James Bartlett old and James Bartlett. This could be father and son. A John Bartlett left the Columbia Nov. 30, 1846. Ships' Logs Columbia [barque] 1845-1848, C.1/250, fo. 135); (as he left with Henry Williams and David Miller, he was undoubtedly on the Cadboro and had the scuffle with Scarborough/Mouat.)

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Columbia 3, 4; YFASA 20-21, 24-26; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 11; log of Vancouver [3] 1, 2; Cadboro 5

Barton, George William (c. 1816 - 1842) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Blackwall, Middlesex, England - c. 1816 (born to Samuel Barton and Olive Barton)

Death: possibly England

Maritime officer

HBC Captain's apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Apprentice seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1831); Captain's apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Captain's apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1833 - 1836); 2nd mate, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1842).

George W. Barton joined the HBC in London on October 4, 1830 as a Greenwich Apprentice. He served as Captain Charles Kipling's apprentice aboard the HBC barque Ganymede on its voyage from London to the Columbia and followed Kipling to the Vancouver. However, at the end of 1832, around the time that Kipling ran the schooner aground, Barton worked temporarily under another captain but in 1833 was back under Kipling. On October 1, 1835, after servicing coastal posts for four years, Barton left the Columbia District for England on the Dryad under Kipling. In 1836 Barton was appointed 2nd mate of the Eagle [Charles Humphrey] which took him to Hudson Bay where he wintered because of bad ice conditions. Barton then made two round trips on the Columbia and eventually arrived back in London July 7, 1842.

George Barton had two wives and at least two children. In the 1830s, he partnered with a native or mixed descent woman in the Columbia and had a child probably by 1836. Probably in the summer of 1839, when George was temporarily back in the British Isles, he married Maria Ridley (?-?) and by 1842 had one child.

Three 1838 undelivered letters to George now rest in the HBCA. The first, from Maria in 1838 shows her knowledge and tolerance of George's Columbia family and implies her expectation of a forthcoming marriage to him. The mother's letter reveals a scattered family with siblings on ships to the West Indies, Quebec and Russia while another brother's letter reveals that he is also with the HBC on Hudson Bay runs.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 7, 14; YFASA 12-15, 20-21; YFDS 5a-6, 11; log of Eagle 3; FtVanASA 3, 5-7; MiscI 5; log of Columbia 3-4 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 139-42

Bastien, Joseph (c. 1803 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Death: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832).

Joseph Bastien joined the HBC from Maskinongé, Quebec, in 1829. He worked one three-year contract on the Pacific slopes and returned to Montreal.

Bastien's Pacific Slopes wife was Louise Saste. One daughter was Mary Ann (c.1833-?) who, after her father returned to Montreal, was raised in the Methodist Willamette Mission until she was fifteen. She married the son of Jean Gingras.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-12; YFDS 3b-4a; FtVanASA 2 PPS: CCR 2b SS: Munnick, p. 23
See Also: Gingras, Jean (Relative)

Bastien (Rocan), Narcisse (fl. 1840 - 1847) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1842); Middleman, California Estate (1842 - 1844); Labourer, California Estate (1844 - 1845); Middleman, California Estate (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Settler, Willamette (1846).

Narcisse Bastien (Rocan) began working for the HBC in 1840. He worked until September 30, 1846, at which point he settled in the Willamette.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20-26; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 17

Batchelor, Jonah [variation: Joseph] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Jonah Batchelor joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856, sailed to the Northwest Coast and deserted in Victoria on February 27, 1857, two weeks after his arrival there.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Bates, Edward (fl. 1852 - 1860) (British: English)

Birth: probably Surrey, England

Death: possibly Victoria, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1853 - 1854); Passenger, Otter (steamer) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1858).

When Edward Bates joined the HBC in England in early 1853 for the steamer Otter, he failed to tell his employer about a serious burn wound for fear of losing passage. After Bates sailed as a labourer on the steamer Otter, his condition was discovered and, when the vessel stopped at Stanley Harbour, Falkland [Malvinas] Islands, the resident doctor deemed him unfit for duty. Nonetheless, in July he took over from the ailing stoker and eventually arrived in Victoria in August, 1853 apparently recovered. From that point on he appears to have worked around the Fort Victoria area until after the fulfilment of his contract in 1857, when he purchased acreage from the HBC in the countryside. In 1860, he was working on the James Douglas' Fairfield Farm in Victoria.

No evidence of a family has been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-5; BCGR-AbstLnd; VPL 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 26

Bates, Thomas [a] (c. 1823 - ?) (probably Canadian: English)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1849); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria depot (1852).

Thomas Bates [a] joined the HBC from Montreal in 1845 and spent the next seven years working mainly at coastal forts and on the steamer Beaver. (It is possible, but unconfirmed, that Thomas Bates [a] was the same Thomas Bates who appears on the 1848 Muster Rolls for the Cayuse War as a Private in C, F, 4th and 8th Company.) Little is known of him although he is likely the same Bates who, on February 1, 1848, "was imprisoned [at Fort Vancouver] for drunkenness and rioting" (Lowe, "Journal"). On September 1, 1852, he was discharged and likely left the area in the following months. On July 29, 1854 he renewed his contract for three years at Norway House and continued his employment east of the Rockies.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-26, 28-32; YFDS 16; log of Beaver 1; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1; HBCCont; BCA Lowe 1; PPS: Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 504

Bates, Thomas [b] (fl. 1847 - 1850) (possibly Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Thompson River (1848 - 1849).

Thomas Bates [2] joined the HBC from Lachine in 1846. At the end of his contract in 1850, he returned east over the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-29

Batten, William (fl. 1833 - 1835) (British: English)

Birth: probably Middlesex, England

Death: possibly England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834 - 1835).

William Batten joined the HBC from Marylebone, Middlesex on May 4, 1833 on a three-year contract and made his way to the Coast on the Nereide, an arduous journey of a little less than one year. After his arrival on April 21, 1834, he was meant to continue with the Nereide on its return journey. However, he was hospitalized and could not join the return voyage. Instead, on November 10, 1834, he was transferred to the brig Eagle, on which he proceeded home to England.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Nereide 1; YFASA 14-15; YFDS 5c; ShMiscPap 14

Batter, John [variation: Batten, Batters] (fl. 1852 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1854); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1854 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1858).

John Batter came to Vancouver Island in 1853 as a labourer employed on the HBC steamer Otter. After arriving, he continued working as a stoker as the steamer plied the coast between Fort Simpson and San Francisco. He purchased acreage in the Victoria area and settled there, after he was discharged in May 1859. There is some doubt as to his sanity as, around August 29, 1859, he was said to be "partially deranged" (Colonist, p. 3) when he was shot in the calf by a Mr. Sandray (likely St. Gre) as the latter was trying to protect his chickens. It appeared that Batter had intended to steal a chicken while crossing the chicken yard. His loss of job may have had something to do with it.

No record of a family have been traced.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-5; BCGR-AbstLnd; BCA Vic. Gazette, August 30, 1859, p. 3; VPL The British Colonist, August 29, 1859, p. 3

Baunin, John [variation: Bannin] (fl. 1833 - 1835) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835).

John Baunin sailed on the Nereide on May 4, 1833 from London on an arduous, almost year long voyage to the Northwest Coast. The voyage was delayed for months stopping at Plymouth and Lisbon for repairs. After his arrival at Fort Vancouver and a quick turnaround, Baunin left the Columbia River post on May 28, 1834 for an equally long return voyage. After stopping at Valparaiso, the vessel eventually arrived back in London May 28, 1835. Baunin did not appear to sail to the Northwest Coast on any HBC vessels again.

PS: HBCA log of Nereide 1; ShMiscPap 14

Bayfield, Charles (c. 1825 - ?) (possibly Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Rupert's Land, British North America

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Apprentice, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1844 - 1846); Cooper, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1849); Freeman settler, Fort Vancouver (1850).

Charles Bayfield, likely hired within the Rupert's Land area, signed on with the HBC in 1841. At Forts Vancouver and Nisqually, he was cited in the journals as packing sheep skins and taking Rum puncheons to pieces for shipping to Victoria. Around 1846, Bayfield returned to Fort Vancouver where he worked until March 1, 1849, at which point he went to California, most likely to take part in the gold rush there. He returned to the area for, in later records, he is listed as being a freeman settler there.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-28, 30-31; YFDS 19 PPS: Dickey

Beacheno, Edmund [variation: Beaucheno] (fl. 1849 - 1850) (British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1850).

Edmund Beacheno came to the Coast aboard the Norman Morison as part of the Company's policy to colonize Vancouver Island. After he arrived, he was taken to Fort Rupert, from where he deserted in July 1850. Although his name stayed on the accounts for six more years, he likely left the area.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-30; YFDS 21; FtVicASA 1-3 SS: Mouat, p. 213

Beale, William (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

William Beale joined the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Beardmore, Owen Charles (fl. 1848 - 1851) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably Australia

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1848 - 1849); Apprentice clerk, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1851).

According to Dr. J. S. Helmcken, Owen C. Beardmore was a "tall, active, red, curly-haired, fearless, energetic, wiry and a little harum-scarum, good-natured fellow," and a "good-hearted, racy individual" (Helmcken, p. 303). Charles (or Charley) Beardmore was engaged by the HBC as an apprentice clerk in 1846. After arriving in Montreal in December 1846, he was sent to Temiskaming and then transferred to Fort Rupert in the spring of 1848. There, he was to be second in command to George Blenkinsop while Captain W. H. McNeill was away. While serving as apprentice clerk there, he lived in a house with a bracing atmosphere:

...a round log house... about a dozen feet square [1.1 sq m], minus a window. Inside there was a bunk on each side, an altar in the centre, upon which a fire of wood burned; the floor...covered with a few inches of sea-broken, sea-washed white clam shells. The roof had a hole in the centre, which served the purpose of letting out smoke and admitting air, light and rain--the latter pretty frequently (Helmcken, p. 306).

Beardmore had been at Fort Rupert for about a month when he stated that there was a rebellion in the making against the old order of the paternalistic HBC. His frequent comparison of his education with that of his superiors, as well as his frequent fault finding, did not go down well with people like James Douglas. As well, when three sailors were murdered near Fort Rupert in July 1851, Beardmore investigated and wrote a partially fabricated report to Helmcken, which he then corrected for Douglas because he was under oath to Douglas. Beardmore was "retired" (actually dismissed) by Douglas in 1851 and sailed to Oahu and thence to Australia. In Australia he successfully owned and ran a sheep ranch and, several years later, sent to the coast for his daughter, Mary Ann. In 1893, after she inherited her father's estate, Mary Ann travelled to Alaska to reconnect with her Tongas roots, and then returned to Australia.

Charles Owen Beardmore had children by Sahulla (?-?), a Tshutshenne woman of the Stikine nation. They had one daughter, Mary-Ann Frances M. (c.1849-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-30; FtVicASA 2; BCA BCCR StAndC; Diar-Rem Boss, p. 82-84 PPS: HBRS XXXII, p. lix, lx, lxi, 102n; Helmcken, p. 108, 303, 306 314, 315, 316-17

Beardy, Henry (c. 1827 - ?) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1827

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Snake Party (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Alexandria or Thompson River (1844 - 1845); Middleman, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Boute, New Caledonia (1846 - 1848); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1848 - 1849).

Henry Beardy joined the HBC in 1842 on a five year contract. In 1843-44 he took trappers to and from the Snake Country; and, on March 1, 1849, he headed for California, presumably lured there by the gold fields.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFDS 14, 16-17, 19; YFASA 24-28, 30; FtAlexPJ 7

Beattie, James (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

James Beattie made a return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship Norman Morison. He would have visited several coastal posts.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Beauchamp, Jacques (fl. 1793) (Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

Jacques Beauchamp joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chepewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific. He is mentioned only once in Mackenzie's journals.

PPS: HakSP Mackenzie, p. 257

Beauchamp, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1822 - 1825) (Undetermined origin)

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Saskatchewan (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824).

Jean Baptiste Beauchamp may have been a member of the NWC before he joined the HBC. In outfit 1822-1823 he was found working in the Columbia, possibly as part of the cross-country brigade. When he set out from Flathead post as a freeman trapper on Alexander Ross's Snake expedition in 1824, he was considered a good trapper. In June, Beauchamp and Alexander Carson stumbled into a Peigan camp, but escaped into the bush and drove back the armed Peigans with a show of rifles. They then abandoned their horses, traps, etc., and returned to Ross's camp. Beauchamp returned to Flathead post on November 23, 1824 and the following month, joined Ogden's 1824-1825 journey into the Snake Country.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5a; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2

Beauchamp, Joseph Ovide (c. 1821 - 1873) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Thérèse de Blainville, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - August 1873

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1848); Blacksmith, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1852).

Blacksmith Joseph Beauchamp likely joined the HBC in 1843. After the death of his wife at Fort Vancouver in 1847, he went to Fort Victoria, where he worked until November 1, 1852. He continued working in the Vancouver Island colony as a blacksmith or labourer and in September 1865, he was described as grey haired and working as a labourer in Victoria when he was arrested for being drunk and disorderly. His punishment was six hours in jail. He died in the Victoria area in 1873.

He had two wives and possibly three daughters. While he was at Fort Vancouver on May 12, 1845, he married Margherita/Marguerite (c.1827-1847), Shasta. Marguerite died December 17, 1847 and was buried at Fort Vancouver. Their daughter, Caroline (?-1850), was christened in the Victoria area on August 10, 1850 and buried two weeks later on August 23. Shortly after that Beauchamp must have married Marie Clallams (?-?), and they had a daughter Caroline (?-1853), who was buried on December 29, 1853. Margaret (?-1883) may have been another daughter.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24, 26-32; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1; BCA BCCR StAndC; BCGR-Gaols; Van-PL Colonist, July 13, 1859, p. 3, Sept. 16, 1863, p. 2 PPS: CCR 1b

Beauchemin, Augustin (fl. c. 1830 - c. 1831) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830 - 1831).

Augustin Beauchemin was a comer and goer in the Columbia Department, being a summer man in Montreal.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 26; YFASA 10-11

Beauchemin, Baptiste (? - c. 1859) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: possibly Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - c. 1859

Fur trade employee

HBC Interpreter, Fort Vancouver (1852 - 1853); Interpreter, Fort Umpqua (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Cawee man store [Cowlitz River] (1853 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Vancouver farm (1857 - 1859).

Baptiste Beauchemin was engaged as an interpreter by the HBC on October 1, 1852 at Fort Umpqua and accompanied Johnson George King to that post when the latter resigned. Beauchemin died around the time his contract ended in 1859.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 40; FtVicDS 1; HBCA YFASA 32; FtVanASA 9-15

Beauchemin, Edouard [variation: Edward] (c. 1816 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1816 (probably born to Auguste Beauchemin and Josette Lavelle)

Death: probably Frenchtown [Lowden], Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Umpqua (1838 - 1839); Middleman,

Fort Nez Percés (1839 - 1842); Middleman, Snake Party (1842 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1846 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Vancouver sales shop (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851); Freeman, Columbia Department (1851 - 1852); Interpreter, Fort Nez Percés (1853 - 1855).

Edward Beauchemin entered the service of the HBC in 1837 and worked at a variety of posts in the Columbia district for thirteen years. In late September, 1839, he was in Vancouver where he witnessed a number of baptisms at that time. At Fort Nez Percés he may have tended huge horse herds on the Company farm. After becoming a freeman in 1850, he rejoined and worked for two more years as an interpreter. In 1855, he moved to Frenchtown (near Walla Walla, Washington) with his wife Marianne Walla Walla and their six children. The family name appears on the common marble monument of the Frenchtown Cemetery at the St. Rose Mission, now alone in the centre of a productive agricultural field, accompanied only by a large wooden cross. Just as the origin of Frenchtown was obscured when it was renamed Lowden, so the story of the Beauchemins is obscured with time. According to Brancheau family oral tradition, both Beauchemin and his wife were killed in an Indian uprising and sons Paul and Louis were raised by the Brancheaus (son Charles appeared on the Muster Rolls in 1848 for the Cayuse war as a private in D, 5th, 7th Company). That this occurred appears unlikely as on May 19, 1879, long after the Indian uprisings, an Edouard Beauchemin, "aged about 70 years" married Marie Laroque at the St. Rose Mission.

Beauchemin had one or two wives, one being Marianne Walla Walla, and probably seven children: Charles (?-?), Baptiste (?-?), Justine (?-?), Norris [Louis?], Paul (1850-?), Alix (c.1852-?) and Narcisse (1855-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-11; YFASA 19-20, 24-31; YFDS 21; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1b, 7a, 7b; Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 504

Beauchemin, Joseph [variation: Beauchemain] (c. 1795 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Michel de. Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1795

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824).

Joseph Beauchemin, listed as a "new hand" in 1823-1824, was probably a member of the Express. He paddled Governor George Simpson in 1824-1825 but is not mentioned in Simpson's journals. In 1825-1826, when he was transferred to the York Factory accounts, he returned as part of the Express to Montreal where he received his pay and the following year was a summerman in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 3, 5; FtVanAB 1, 6; FtGeo[Ast]AB 12

Beauchemin, Pierre (fl. 1821 - 1825) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Steersman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824).

Pierre Beauchemin worked for the HBC in New Caledonia in 1821-1824; by 1825 he was back in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2, 4; YFDS 1a

Beaudin, Vincent (fl. 1825 - 1829) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Phillipe, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1828).

Vincent Beaudin joined the HBC from the parish of St. Phillipe as a middleman in 1824. In March 1828 he left Fort Vancouver on the York Factory Express. In the summer he received an advance at York Factory; and thereafter he likely returned to Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-8; YFDS 2a; FtVanAB 10, 15; FtVanASA 1 PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 113

Beaudoin, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Beaudouin, Beaudoins] (fl. c. 1808 - c. 1843) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Snake Party general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Thompson River (1842 - 1843).

François Beaudoin joined the HBC from Montreal in 1841 as a middleman, and returned to Canada east of the Rockies in 1843.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 22

Beaudouin, Caesar [variation: Beaudoin] (c. 1814 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Grand St. Esprit, Lower Canada - c. 1814 (born to Joseph Beaudoin and Cecile Jobin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Middleman, South Party (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1845 - 1846); Tanner, Fort Vancouver (1845 - 1846).

Caesar Beaudoin joined the HBC from Lachine in 1837. After working in the Fort Vancouver area, he appears to have settled in the Willamette valley.

Caesar Beaudoin had one wife and children. He married Sophie Carpentier (daughter of Charles Carpentier and a native Snake woman although she is more likely the daughter of François Charpentier) on May 30, 1844. Their recorded children were Joseph (1845-1847), Francis Xavier (1847-?) and Suzanne (1848-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 24-30; PPS CCR 1b, 2a, 2b

See Also: Charpentier, Francois (Father-in-Law); Carpentier, Charles (Father-in-Law)

Beaulieu (fl. 1807 - 1811) (Undetermined origin)

Freeman

NWC Pacific Slopes (1807 - 1809) (with David Thompson's party); Saleesh country (1809) (with David Thompson); Freeman, Pacific Slopes (1809 - 1811) (probably with Thompson).

Beaulieu's early life, his first name, or his ethnic descent is not known. He first appeared on record in the Columbia on July 2, 1807 when he was ill while crossing the mountains with David Thompson. Four days later, Thompson thought Beaulieu was going to die. In great pain, Beaulieu pointed to a swelling emanating from under his ribs. Detecting a small splinter, Thompson extracted a Porcupine quill which Beaulieu had ingested and which had worked its way to the surface. By August, he was fully recovered and out hunting again. In September, he was engaged in collecting timbers to make a canoe and was sent off hunting on October 3, 1809. He did not appear on record in the Columbia until August 21, 1811 and so was likely functioning as a freeman in the area.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Belyea, p. 49, 50, 65, 115, 170

Beaulieu, Joseph (c. 1802 - c. 1844) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1802 (born to Joseph Beaulieu and Josephte Cree)

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1835); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1836); Fort hunter, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1836); Trapper, South Party (1836 - 1839); Freeman trapper, Columbia Department (1839 - 1840); Freeman boue, Fort George [Astoria] (1840 - 1841); Freeman, Columbia Department (1841 - 1842) (with Lt. Emmons); Hunter, South Party (1842 - 1843); Trapper, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844).

Joseph Beaulieu joined the fur trade in 1818 and worked with the HBC as a trapper, boue and hunter in present day Oregon. Latterly, he spent his time with the South Party, and in outfit 1841-42 travelled with Lt. Emmons of the U.S. exploring party to California, where he rejoined the South Party. He appears to have left at the end of his contract in 1844. When he was baptised on May 28, 1843 in St. Paul, Oregon, he gave his age as 51, rather than the 42 of the HBC records. In outfit 1844-45 he didn't appear to work for the HBC, for his name was entered showing only a debit.

He had one wife and no recorded children. On January 29, 1844 he married Betsy Killimaux [Tillimook] (c.1823-1846), who died two years later.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-16, 19-21, 24; YFDS 4b-7, 12; FtVanASA 3-8; PPS: CCR 1b, 2a

Beaulieux, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1772 - 1872) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Slave River, Rupert's Land - c. 1772

Death: November 1872

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

François Beaulieux, from an old mixed descent family in the Slave River area, joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chipewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific. He is mentioned only once in Mackenzie's journals but apparently went on to live a long life. In 1848, when he was over seventy years old, he was baptized by Mgr. Tache and he died in November, 1872, at almost one-hundred years old.

Beauvais, Pierre (c. 1799? - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1799

Death: possibly Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1841 - 1843).

Pierre Beauvais joined the HBC from Montreal rather late in life, at the age of forty-one. He served two outfits at Fort Nisqually and, in the spring of 1843, returned to Canada at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 22; FtVanASA 6-8

Beaver, Rev. Herbert (1800 - 1858) (British: English)

Birth: Ash, Surrey, England - 1800 (born to Rev. Herbert John Beaver and Mrs. Herbert John Beaver)

Death: Fort Beaufort, Cape Colony, South Africa - May 1858

Fur Trade Employee

HBC Passenger, Nereide (barque) (1836); Chaplain, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1838); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

In spite of a coincidence of names, Protestant missionary Herbert Beaver was a misfit in the predominantly Catholic fur trade. Born into a Church of England environment, Beaver took his B.A. at Oxford in 1821, entered the priesthood in 1823 and between 1825-1833, he served as chaplain at St. Lucia, British West Indies. In late 1835, to counter the presence of American missionaries, the HBC selected Beaver and his wife, Jane, to give educational and religious instruction at Fort Vancouver. Very little went well after their arrival in 1836 and their actions did not garner respect. Not only did they not like their living quarters, but the refined low key Beaver contrasted sharply with the image of his rather fierce wife, Jane. Lacking any understanding of country, Beaver openly railed against the country marriages of John McLoughlin, James Douglas and Peter Skene Ogden. Douglas, however, took the hint and had his marriage solemnized, as did William Glenn Rae to McLoughlin's daughter Marie Eloise. Jane Beaver would not associate with fur trade wives. Although his school instruction may have been adequate, Beaver went far beyond his intended role by commenting on Company policy, suggesting promotions, etc., and more importantly, tried to build a case against McLoughlin. One of Beaver's reports to London, intercepted and censored by McLoughlin, so enraged the doctor that he demanded an explanation from Beaver. When Beaver replied: "Sir, if you wish to know why a cow's tail grows downward, I can only cite the fact" (Johnson, p. 118), McLoughlin struck him with his cane, an act for which he publicly apologized. However, Beaver did not accept the apology and, with his wife, left for England on the HBC barque Columbia on November 1, 1838 to serve the next four years in a quiet English parish. By 1843, he was in Fort Beaufort, Cape Colony, South Africa performing both civic and military duties. After most of the troops moved to Fort Hare, Beaver resigned his position and followed them there. After ten years as chaplain to the troops on the frontier, he died in the Cape Colony.

PS: HMCS SReynolds; HBCA YFASA 15, 17-18; YFDS 7; FtVanASA 3-5; ShMiscPap 14; log of Columbia 3; PPS: Beaver, p. [bio] xii-xvi, 76 SS: R. C. Johnson, p. 116-18; Slater, "New Light on", p. 13-29

Becknal, William [variation: Recknell] (fl. 1857 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1859).

William Becknal made two return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4-5

Beckwourth, James P. [variation: Beckworth, Beckwith] (1798 - c. 1867) (American: Irish and Mulatto)

Birth: Fredericksburg, Virginia - April 1798

Death: probably Denver, Colorado - c. 1867

Free trader

Ash. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825 - 1828).

It is difficult to determine just how much of Beckwourth's autobiography is true. Up to the time he dictated it to T. D. Bonner, he was Jim Beckwith, with a reputation as a teller of tall tales. According to him, at the age of fourteen, he apprenticed to a blacksmith. Disgruntled, he left after five years to work on the Mississippi steamboats, and caught yellow fever in New Orleans. Surviving this, he went to work for William H. Ashley in 1823 and turned up at the first Rendezvous in 1825, as well as several others after that. As a joke, his friend Caleb Greenwood told members of the Crow nation that Beckwourth was actually a Crow returned from the dead. Thus he was able to live freely for six years, and claimed he achieved the status of chief. From 1833, when he left the Crow, he claimed he worked for the American Fur Company in a variety of locations east of the Continental Divide. Later years found him in California and Colorado, where he settled and died.

Beckwourth's family life is hard to trace as he married a series of Blackfoot, Snake and Crow women.

PPS: Larpenteur, p. 88-89; Bonner SS: Chittenden, p. 688-691; DAB Dale

Bee, Henry [variation: Bec] (fl. 1830 - 1831) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831).

Henry Bee joined the HBC in London on December 28, 1829 on a three year contract as a cook. He sailed from London in January 1830 and arrived in the Columbia District August 10, 1830. He served for about a year for and deserted in 1831, probably in Monterey.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a; YFASA 10-12

Begg, John [variation: Biggs] (c. 1833 - c. 1881) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scotland - c. 1833

Death: possibly Fort Victoria (Victoria), British Columbia

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Una (brigantine) (1849 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1854).

John Begg joined the HBC around 1848 as an apprentice seaman and made two runs to Hudson Bay on the Prince Rupert before coming to the coast on the brigantine Una. Begg finished off his apprenticeship by 1854 on the coast, and carried on transactions with the Company for two more years (in the 1860 Victoria Directory, a Jonathan Begg was listed as a gardener and nursery man living on Government Street - it is assumed that they are one in the same person). He appears to have set up a store on Saltspring Island, for in the summer of 1862 a large group of Haida on their way north plundered Jonathan Begg's Island store. The natives were confronted at Cape Mudge but the authorities could not get the culprits to surrender. John Begg seems to have moved back to Victoria by 1881.

John Begg had one wife, Elizabeth (c.1830-?), from Ireland. No children have been traced.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 9-10; PortB 1; YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-3; Van-PL 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 26; 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver District, Victoria sub-district SS: Bate, April 13, 1907, p. 2

Belair, Louis (c. 1803 - 1831) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Leon or Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - July 1831

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831).

Louis Belair joined the HBC in about 1830, at the age of about twenty-seven. He had a very short career for he died of disease, likely malaria, at Fort Vancouver in July 1831.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1; YFDS 3b-4a; YFASA 10-11

Beland, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Thompson River (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Colville (1842 - 1843).

François Beland joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838 and, in the spring of 1843, returned to Canada east of the Rockies at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 22; FtVanASA 8

Beland, Pierre [standard: François] [variation: Francois] (c. 1821 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844).

Pierre Beland (who went by either François or Pierre) joined the HBC in Sorel in 1842. He worked at Fort Vancouver until 1844, at which point he returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFASA 23

Belanger, Edouard [variation: Belange, Bellanger] (c. 1826 - c. 1858) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1826 (born to Ambroise Bellanger and Esther Charboneau)

Death: Fraser River, British Columbia - c. 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849).

Edouard Belanger joined the HBC in 1847 and worked until March 1, 1849, at which point he deserted, lured by the gold of California. Around or before 1852, he reappeared in the Willamette Valley and took up a land claim near Brooks. There, he married a woman whose husband had died in California, and began a family. According to Munnick, he went to the Fraser River gold rush in 1858 and was drowned there when his canoe upset. Belanger's claim was lost by sheriff's sale.

Edouard Belanger had one wife and two recorded children. On October 11, 1852 at St. Louis, Oregon, he married Angelique Marcellai, widow of François Gagnon. Their children were Edouard (1853-?) and Esther (1855-?). His widow married Charles Derome.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-28; YFDS 19 PPS: CCR 3a, 2b

Belay (fl. 1829 - 1842) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: Oahu, Hawaiian Islands - 1806

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1829 - 1831); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1833 - 1834); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Snake Party (1840 - 1842); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1842).

Oahu born Belay joined the HBC in 1829, in his early twenties, and spent the majority of his time in the southern Columbia area. He is on record as having deserted during outfit 1832-1833. He re-enlisted and worked until June 4, 1842, when he departed for Oahu.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-8; YFDS 4a-7, 13; YFASA 10-15, 19-20, 22

Beleveau, François [standard: François] [variation: Bellveau] (fl. 1821 - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Columbia District (1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823).

François Beleveau transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821 and, by 1823, he was back in Montreal.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[As]AB 10; YFASA 2

Belgarde, Joseph [variation: Bellgarde] (fl. c. 1808 - 1837) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Boute, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1832 - 1833); Boute, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Boute, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1835); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1837).

Joseph Belgarde joined the HBC in 1830, the year in which he acted as servant to Mr. Dease, and worked at a variety of coastal posts before returning to Montreal in 1837.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-4; YFASA 11-17; YFDS 4a-7

Belisle, Pierre (? - 1833) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada

Death: Fraser River [British Columbia] - May 1833

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Steersman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1833).

Pierre Belisle joined the HBC from the parish of Maskinongé in 1829 and likely came directly overland to Fort Vancouver. He worked mainly in New Caledonia; however, he had a rather short career. He is on record as having drowned in the Big Rapid [Hell's Gate?] of the Fraser River in 1833.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1; YFASA 9, 11-13; YFDS 3b-5a; FtStJmsRD 5

Bell, Charles (fl. c. 1830 - 1856) (possibly Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - c. 1830Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1853); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1854); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1854 - 1856).

Charles Bell, who may be the same twelve year old orphaned Charles Bell baptized on December 24, 1842 at Fort Vancouver by the Catholic priests, worked for the HBC between 1848 and 1856.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; FtVicASA 1-3 PPS: CCR 1b

Bell, Frederick [variation: William] (fl. 1842 - 1845) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Cook, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1845).

Frederick [aka William] Bell made one round trip to the coast on the HBC vessel Columbia. He would have spent between May 12, 1843 and November 13, 1844 on the coast on runs to various posts, as well as Sitka and Oahu, and would have arrived back in London on May 24, 1845.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 6

Bell, George (fl. 1810 - 1814) (American)

Birth: possibly New York, New YorkFur trade employee

PFC Cooper, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Cooper, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814).

Originally hired on as a cooper for the PFC, New Yorker George Bell was a passenger on the ill-fated Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] which sailed from New York on September 6, 1810. He sailed around the Horn, eventually arriving at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22, 1811 and disembarked at the site of the future Astoria before the ship sailed north. On shore, he helped build Fort Astoria and the shallop Dolly, the maiden voyage of which Bell was a passenger. Thereon-after, his duties became more regular as a cooper making barrels and/or pickling sturgeon or meat at or around the Fort Astoria area. On November 1, 1813, after the PFC was taken over by the NWC, Bell signed on with the new company once again, most likely as a cooper. On December 6, 1813, he was mentioned as a cooper by Alexander Henry, helping Joseph Ashton to rig the Dolly. On January 14, 1814 on a punitive expedition to Strawberry Island, Bell, along with Pierre Deslard and Patrick O'Connor, seized and tied up a local chief as hostage to obtain the return of some stolen kettles, guns and other items taken by his men. Most of the goods were returned by Casino, who appears to have kept some of the goods for himself. Bell's movements have not been traced after 1814.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: HBRS LVX, p. 48; ChSoc LVII, p. 620, 651

Bell, John [b] (c. 1826 - 1857) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - c. 1826 (born to John James Bell and a Chehalis woman)Death: probably Fort Langley - July 1857*Fur trade employee

HBC Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1840); Apprentice cooper, Fort Langley (1840 - 1845); Cooper, Fort Langley (1845 - 1852); Cooper, Fort Langley (1852 - 1853); Cooper, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1856); Cooper, Fort Langley (1856 - 1857).

Born at Fort Vancouver of an English father, John James Bell (who may have been a crew member of the William & Ann [1825] or the Dryad [1826]), and a Chehalis mother, John Bell joined the HBC in 1838 at the age of twelve as an apprentice cooper. He most likely spent the first two years working at the Fort Vancouver cooperage outside the southeast wall of the stockades. For a total of twenty years he worked as a cooper with the Company at four different locations. He died and was buried July 15, 1857 at the early age of thirty-one, possibly at Fort Langley, his last place of work although his burial is recorded on Victoria records.

John Bell had one wife and one recorded son. On July 21, 1856 at Fort Langley, he formalized his marriage to Nathalie, Quyilen (Kwantlan) (?-?). Their son (c.1848-1854) was unnamed in the records.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 24-32; FtVicASA 1-5; BCA

Bell, Peter (c. 1823 - 1839) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Pacific Northwest or Rupert's Land - c. 1823

Death: probably Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - 1839

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839); Apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1839).

Peter Bell joined the HBC in 1838 and spent about one year as a labourer before dying in 1839.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-6; YFASA 19-20

Bell, William (fl. 1825) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

William Bell appeared on the records as acquiring several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. Nothing else is known of Bell who probably attended other Rendezvous as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains.

PS: MHS Ashley 2

Bellaire, Registre (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Freeman

PFC Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1811 - 1813); NWC Freeman, Willamette House (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Registre Bellaire, a freeman hunter working for the PFC, arrived in the Columbia before November 1811 when he was noted as making a canoe at Astoria. He is mentioned by Henry on December 24 as delivering a letter and on December 30, 1813, he was noted as going off with some Hawaiians to hunt beaver in the Willamette where he stayed the winter. On April 4, 1814, Registre and his family as passengers, joined the ten canoe Fort William/Montreal brigade paddling eastward.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: McDougall, p. 59; ChSoc LVII, p. 628, 631; Coues, p. 875
See Also: Rondeau, Charles (Son-in-Law)

Belland, Charles [variation: Beland, Berland] (c. 1809 - c. 1833) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1833).

Charles Belland joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1830. He returned east of the Rockies to Canada in 1833, apparently at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1; YFDS 4a-5a; YFASA 11-12

Bellanger, Alexis [variation: Bélanger] (c. 1817 - 1848) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1817

Death: Fort Alexandria, New Caledonia - October 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1831 - 1835); Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1835 - 1838); Untraced vocation, Stuart's Lake (1838); Boute, New Caledonia (1838 - 1840); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1840 - 1841); Boute, New Caledonia (1841 - 1843); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1843 - 1845).

According to Morice, impetuous, bright Alexis Bellanger was a complex character who rejoiced at the death of his mother as she had chastised him. He had a bad work record and was eventually was shot by a Quesnel or Bear Lake native. Entering the HBC around age thirteen, Bellanger was quick with languages, moved with a rough crowd and married when he was twenty. In 1837 he had his superior removed as he said he had been unduly familiar with his wife. In turn, the superior claimed that Bellanger was an over-jealous wife-beater. From that point he was accused of stealing, evicted from posts and deserted several times. In spite of receiving "sound drubbings" (Morice, p. 263) he was back in the employ of the HBC, often as a freeman. By 1848 he was a guide on one of five boats that travelled from Fort St. James down the Fraser to Fort Alexandria. On September 22, from a cliff overlooking the mouth of the Quesnel and Fraser Rivers, Bellanger was shot through the body by a Quesnel Native, apparently in a revenge killing. He was taken to Alexandria only to die eight days later; he was buried at the post in a ceremony attended by a large number of people. Punitive measures for the killing of Alexis Belanger taken by the Company caused three innocent people to be killed. Only later was the accused murderer killed by his own uncle.

Alexis Bellanger had one wife, an unknown Native woman from Grand Rapids whom he partnered with in 1837.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-15, 19-21, 23-25; YFDS 4b-7, 12, 16; FtVanASA 3-7; FtAlexPJ 8; BCA PJ FtBab 1 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 260-74

Bellanger, Andre [standard: André B  llanger] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Province of Quebec/Lower Canada – Late 1700s

Death: North Saskatchewan River - May 1814

Fur trade employee

PFC Bowsman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1813 - 1814); NWC Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Andr   B  llanger, a member of the PFC when he appeared in the Columbia in 1813, made his way to the coast either overland or on a boat. He joined the NWC in the Columbia in 1813 as a bowsman when the NWC took over the assets of the PFC on the Pacific slopes. As he was to be free in Montreal in the fall of 1814, he left the Pacific Northwest in the spring and somewhere on the North Saskatchewan River the canoe in which he was riding broke up when it hit some rocks; young B  llanger was drowned, along with Olivier Roy Lapensee. B  llanger's body was not recovered.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVX, p. 164

Bellant, Alexis (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinong  , Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Alexis Bellant, who joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] in Montreal on January 13, 1811 on a three year contract, spent the winter of 1813-1814 at the Willamette post. He returned to the interior as a member of the cross-country brigade in the spring of 1814.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII; Coues, p. 875

Belleau, Antoine (fl. 1810 - 1815) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Cap Sante, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Baker, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Crew member, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

Antoine Belleau joined the PFC in the Montreal area on July 12, 1810, signing with PFC partner, Alexander McKay and sailed to the coast on the Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn]. He was in on the construction of Fort Astoria but it appeared not to be to his liking for, on November 10th, 1811, along with two others (one of which was Jean Baptiste Belleau), he deserted. Belleau was eventually located by Gabriel Franchere in an Indian village somewhere near Deer Island and gladly gave up his new-found freedom, not choosing to be a slave of or killed by the local natives. Later, he was engaged by the NWC October 18, 1813 and in 1814 was a member of the interior express; by 1815 he was a crew member of the schooner Columbia.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 48, 93-95
See Also: Belleau, Jean Baptiste (probable Relative)

Belleau, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1810 - 1815) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Cap Sante, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Middleman, French Prairie [Willamette] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Okanagan (October 13, 1813); Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1815).

Jean Baptiste Belleau, probably a close relation to Antoine, sailed to the coast on the Tonquin. On November 10th, 1811, Belleau, along with Antoine Belleau and another person, deserted but soon returned. By the winter of 1813-1814, perhaps still suffering from rheumatism, Belleau had not joined the NWC, but joined the Montreal Brigade instead on April 4, 1814 for its eastward paddling. That same year he came back and became a crew member of the schooner

Columbia, which had arrived at Astoria on June 29th. As a crew member of the schooner he sailed to China under Captain Anthony Robson, and in 1815 sailed to the Northwest Coast and back again to China. On February 29, 1816 while he was in Macao, he was paid off and went to Amsterdam on the ship Isabella. He has not been traced after that, but he likely boarded another ship in Amsterdam for Montreal.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10; NWCAB 1 PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 48, 93-95; Coues, p. 875; McDougall, p. 146
See Also: Belleau, Antoine (probable Relative)

Bellevenalle, Jean Baptiste [variation: Belleveule, Bellevue] (fl. 1821 - 1823) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Ours, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1820 - 1821); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1822).

Jean Baptiste Bellevenalle joined the NWC [Pierre Rocheblave] from St. Ours on January 4, 1820 to work for three years. Even though he likely headed straight for the Pacific slopes, his career with the NWC was short for, in the following years, when the two large fur trading companies merged, he transferred to the HBC. By 1823, he was back in Montreal.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; YFASA 1

Bellique, Pierre [variation: Belleque, Bellicque] (c. 1797 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption (Saint-Pierre du Portage), Quebec - c. January 1797 (born to Louis Belleque and Margarite Baudouin)

Death: at sea [Pacific Ocean south of the Columbia River] - 1849

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Pacific slopes (1820 - 1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Pacific slopes (1821 - 1824); Steersman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Steersman, Fort Alexandria (1824 - 1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1828); Middleman, Chilcotin (1828 - 1829); NWC Boute or steersman, Chilcotin (1830 - 1831); HBC Steersman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1832); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1834+).

A "mild and honest" (CCR 1, A-6) man, Pierre Bellique entered the service of the NWC from L'Achigan on December 29, 1819 and began work on the Pacific slopes a short time after. Following the HBC and NWC merger in 1821, he stayed with the HBC for the next fifteen years. George McDougall, an HBC officer, relied on Bellique to guide him through the Chilcotin, and put him in charge of Alexandria in his absence. Around 1832, while still working with the HBC, he settled on a land claim three miles [4.8 km] north of St. Paul, supplying grain to Fort Vancouver. His claim now has a State Historical Marker on it. He was one of those petitioning priests to come to the Willamette and remained on HBC books until 1842. On May 2, 1843 he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. Like many others caught up with California gold fever, he went south to the gold fields with his son. In 1849, as he was returning by boat from a successful search, he died at sea and was buried in the Pacific Ocean off the mouth of the Columbia River. His young son Pierre lost their gold dust overboard.

Pierre Bellique was married once and had seven recorded children. The children of Bellique and Genevieve St. Martin, the daughter of André St. Martin of Sorel, Quebec and a native woman of unknown origin, were Mary Sophie (1832-1920), Pierre (1835-1913), Geneviève (1838-1890), Esther (1840-1915?), Joseph (1843-1847), Jean Baptiste (1845-1925) and Cyprian (1848-1914?). When Pierre Sr. died, his widow Genevieve married Casimir Gardipied.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtStJmsLS 1; FtAlexPJ 1; YFASA 1-2, 4-9, 11-15; YFDS 1a, 3b-6, 8, 10-11; FtAlexAB 1; FtVanASA 1-6; FtStJmsCB 6; HBCAbio; OHS 1849 Census, Champoege; OHS Belleque, p. 1 PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2c SS: "Quebecois en Oregon", p. 260; H. J. McKay, p. 94-96; Holman, p.115

Belsey, John (fl. c. 1812 - 1837) (British: English)

Birth: probably Deal, England - c. 1812

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1837); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1837).

John Belsey joined the HBC in London on February 13, 1836 on a five-year contract and sailed to the coast on the Nereide. He worked on coastal shipping for less than a year and was on the Lama when it sailed to Oahu in the summer of 1837. He appears to have liked Honolulu for on July 31, 1837, he asked to be discharged there.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 9, 14; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7-8; YFASA 17; FtVanCB 24

Ben [1] (fl. 1812 - 1814) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Beaver (ship) (1812); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1814); Canoeman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Ben [2] came to the Northwest Coast as a hired employee for the PFC probably aboard the Beaver in May 1812. After the Astor Company was taken over by the NWC, Ben joined the Canadian company and became part of the overland expedition to Fort William in 1814. From that point, he may have gone on to London and, possibly, taken a NWC vessel back to the Pacific. Alternatively, he may have returned west overland, then to Hawaii.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria

Ben [2] (fl. 1845 - 1864) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Fort Simpson [Port Simpson], British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Thompson River (1846 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1854); Labourer, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1854 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1858); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1863 - 1864).

Ben [4] joined the HBC from Oahu in 1845. He spent most of his twenty year career as a labourer at coastal posts and appeared to finish his work in 1864 at Fort Simpson after which his accounts showed no further movement, indicating he may have left the area or died.

While Ben was working on San Juan, he raised a family. His wife may have been from the Point Roberts area. A son, who died on June 18, 1854 was taken to Victoria to be buried.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; FtVicASA 1-10, 12-16; FtVicCB 12; BelleVuePJ 1

Ben [3] (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

Ben shipped aboard the Convoy [Wm. H. McNeill] at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast as a labourer, Ben and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2. It is not known whether he continued to sail with the Convoy.

PS: BCA Log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels, p. 163.

Benjy (fl. 1853) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

Benjy shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Bennet, John (fl. 1825 - c. 1827?) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

MW Cook, Convoy (brig) (1824 - 1827?).

John Bennet shipped aboard the Josiah Marshall brig, Convoy [William Henry McNeill] in Boston as a cook before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. He was on the coast from April 1825 for one trading season.

PS: BCA Log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Bennett, George (fl. 1842 - 1843) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Crew member, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843).

George Bennett was a crew member of the barque Columbia in outfit 1842-1843.

Bennett, James (fl. 1837 - 1842) (British: English)Birth: probably London, EnglandMaritime employee*HBC Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838); Carpenter, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839); Carpenter, Beaver (steamer) (1839 - 1841); Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

James Bennett joined the HBC in London in 1837 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. From October 26, 1838 he worked in coastal shipping servicing coastal posts and the Hawaiian Islands. At the end of his contract, he left on the Columbia and arrived back in London September 6, 1842.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; log of Columbia 3, 4; FtVanASA 5-7; YFDS 9; YFASA 19-21

Benoit, Antoine (c. 1802 - 1825) (Canadian: French)Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1802Death: Snake River, Pacific Northwest - April 1825Fur trade employee*NWC Milieu, Columbia Department (1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

Seventeen year old Antoine Benoit, who joined the NWC on February 5, 1819 from Yamaska as a winterer for three years in the Northwest, had a short six year career in the fur trade. He may have headed directly for the Columbia for he is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821. By the fall of 1824, he had joined Ogden's Snake party as a freeman trapper and, on April 8, 1825, was leading some horses in a smaller trapping party who were raising their traps when he was surrounded by Blackfoot and shot and stabbed to death. The party of Blackfoot took his three horses and sixteen beaver skins. His body was recovered on April 10 and found to be "naked, the scalp taken, a ball in the body, one in the head, and three stabs with a knife from the wounds he received, he could not have suffered long" (SnkCoPJ 2, fo. 16). His body was buried on April 10 on the east bank of the Snake River in a beaver dam, now some five miles [8 km] south of the Blackfoot Hill, or Ferry Butte as it is known today.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA YFASA 1-3, 5; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 2, 3a

Benoit, Jean Baptiste (c. 1814 - c. 1836) (Canadian: French)Birth: probably Baie du Febvre, Lower Canada - c. 1814Fur trade employee*HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman?, Fort Simpson (1834 - 1836) (steersman's wages?).

Jean Baptiste Benoit joined the HBC in 1833 in the St. Lawrence area and served one contract before going east over the Rockies in the spring of 1836.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFDS 5b-6; YFASA 13-16; FtVanASA 3

Benson, Dr. Alfred Robson (c. 1815 - c. 1900) (British: English)Birth: Yorkshire, England - c. 1815Death: Yorkshire, England - c. 1900Fur trade officer*HBC Passenger, Harpooner (barque) (1848 - 1849); Surgeon, Fort Victoria (1849 - 1850); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1849 - 1850); Surgeon, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1854); Clerk, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1854); Surgeon, Fort Victoria (1855); Surgeon, Princess Royal (barque) (1855); Surgeon, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857); Surgeon, Nanaimo (1857 - 1862).

Teetotaler and somewhat eccentric Alfred Robson Benson was the first medical officer at Fort Victoria. In London, this sometimes sloppily dressed and none too energetic one time ship's captain and surgeon, had been a friend of Dr. John S. Helmcken, who later was to succeed him at Fort Victoria. In 1848, after returning on a Hudson Bay run on the Prince Rupert, Benson sailed on the Harpooner arriving at Fort Victoria on May 31, 1849. He served at Fort Victoria where he was prone to complaining about the unsuitable conditions brought on by James Douglas and the HBC, taking the side of the first Governor, Richard Blanshard. Likely for this reason, he was sent to Fort Vancouver to replace Dr. Forbes Barclay and, in January 1855, he joined the Princess Royal for its journey back to England, replacing Dr. William Thomas who was sent ashore for breach of discipline. Benson returned from England to Vancouver Island in January 1857 aboard the Princess Royal to the HBC holdings at Nanaimo and was the returning officer for the June, 23 1859

Nanaimo election to the Provincial legislature. In 1861-1862 he was a surgeon at Nanaimo and officially left the HBC on October 31, 1862. On December 8th of that year, he was sent a letter recalling him to Fort Victoria when the HBC Nanaimo coal mines were sold to the Vancouver Coal and Land Company, unless he signed up with the new company. He did sign with the new company and from 1862-1864 served with the new owners. When patients came to his surgery, teetotaler Benson always made sure they brought their own bottles. When his dog Bizzie bit a patient who kicked it in response, Benson made sure that the tooth extraction on the patient was equally painful. He returned to Whitby, Yorkshire and died there around the age of ninety.

Alfred Benson appears to have had two wives. In 1856, he apparently married or co-habited with a Native woman. On December 10, 1860 he was issued a licence to marry another, Ellen Phillips whom he married nine days later. She appears to have died in Nanaimo in 1863 and a stained glass window was placed in St. Paul's Church in memory of her.

Mount Benson (called "Wake-siah" - Chinook for "not far"), near Nanaimo was named after him in 1859 by Captain Richards of the surveying vessel Plumper.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 9; log of Princess Royal 1; PortB 1; YFASA 28-32; FtVanASA 9-11; FtVicASA 1-4; FtVicCB 27; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.; BCA Nanj; BCGR-VICSMarriageL; CCCath PPS: HBRs XXXII, p. 37, 37n, 69, 182n; Helmcken, p. 46n3, 49, 81, 82, 104, 105, 108n1, 109, 115, 118, 119, 120, 125, 279, 280, 281, 283, 285, 287, 329 SS: Bate, p. 1; Walbran, p. 48
See Also: Helmcken, John Sebastian

Bercier, Pierre (c. 1778 - 1833) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Province of Quebec, British North America - c. 1778

Death: McLeod [McCloud] River, California - September 1833

Fur trade employee

NWC Builder, Kootenae House (1807); Milieu, Pacific slopes (1807 - 1810); Milieu, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); Boatman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); Horsekeeper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); HBC Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Saskatchewan (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Middleman, Snake Party (1826 - 1832); Middleman, South Party (1832 - 1833).

Pierre Bercier joined the NWC from the parish of Berthier around 1799 and was probably the "Bercier" who was David Thompson's guide/horsekeeper of 1807-1810 at Kootenae House and the Saleesh area. Prior to being with Thompson, he had arrived at Rocky Mountain House under Nicholas Montour, October 31, 1806, was with Jules Maurice Quesnel on a mountain tour November 13-19, 1806, and was with Finan McDonald in the mountains, February 9, 1807. The last record of him with Thompson was in the fall of 1810, when he was going into the mountains at the headwaters of the Athabasca. He renewed his NWC contract in the Columbia again in 1812 and later joined the HBC in 1821 and appeared to travel over the Rockies more than once after that. Bercier rarely appeared in the Snake Country journals. Fifty-five year old Pierre died of the fever in California in 1833 while on a Southern expedition.

Bercier had one wife and seven recorded children. Around 1817 he took Emilie Finlay for his wife. Their children were Marguerite (c.1818-?), François (c.1821-?), Pierre (c.1823-?), Ce'cile (c.1826-?), Louison (c.1828-?), Elizabeth (c.1830-?) and Basile (c.1833-?). After Bercier's death in 1833, widow Emilie married Simon Plamondon and all his possessions went to his children.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCMA; NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4; YFDS 3b, 5a-5b; FtVanASA 2; SnkCoPJ 9, 10; YFDS Wills; BCA CCCath PPS: Belyea, p. 611; CCR 1a
See Also: Plomondo, Simon (Relative)

Bereau (Boisclair), Joseph [variation: Beveau] (c. 1803 - c. 1832) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Trois Rivières, Lower Quebec - c. 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1832).

Joseph Bereau (Boisclair) joined the HBC from Trois Rivières in 1824. He travelled west of the Rockies and worked in New Caledonia as well as Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 3a-4b; YFASA 5-9, 11

Berentzen, Hans Peter [variation: Brentzen, Berntzen, Peterbrensen, Bene] (fl. c. 1826 - 1870) (Norwegian)

Birth: Christiania, Norway - c. December 1827

Death: probably West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Columbia Department (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Rupert

(1855 - 1860); Labourer, Beaver (steamer) (1857 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1861 - 1867); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1867 - 1870).

Hans Berentzen, from Christiania (Akers?), Norway, was one of forty Norwegians and one Swede hired by the HBC in 1853 for employment as labourers on the Northwest coast of America. The group sailed from Christiania, Norway, to Hull, England and from there to London where they stayed in a sailor's home for three weeks. On August 4, 1853, after the group and some miners boarded their waiting vessel, the chartered barque Colinda [John P. Mills] set sail for Vancouver Island. However, because of the behaviour of the captain, 195 of the 212 passengers deserted at Valparaiso, Chile; but, Berentzen, sixteen other Scandinavians, and a Dr. Henry W. A. Coleman stayed aboard and arrived more than a year later, on April 17, 1854, at Fort Victoria. From that time on, Berentzen spent the majority of his working time at coastal forts, mainly Fort Simpson, where he raised a family. He occasionally worked on vessels, such as the Labouchere (in 1864). At the fort, on April 3, 1866, he was praised in the post journal for his abilities - he was described as "without exception the best man in the fort for any work that is required of him" (FtSimp[N] 9, fo. 118). In September, 1869, Charles Frederic Morison noted that the Company "...had a splendid garden which that prince of gardeners, Hans Berentzen, kept in beautiful order and grew every kind of vegetable to perfection" (Morison, p. 67). Berentzen, who was referred to by his native wife as, "my Hans, my nice pink man" (Boss, p. 90), continued to work at the Fort Simpson post until 1870.

Hans Peter Berentzen, according to census findings, appears to have had one wife, Sophie Catherine Ortesa (c.1841-?), an Alaskan Haida; they had six children together. Their children from both census and anecdotal records were Emma (?-?), Paul (c.1862-?), an unnamed daughter (?-1863), an unnamed son (1865-?), Fritz (1866-?), Henry (c.1869-?), and Mary (c.1874-?).

PS: HBCA Norwegian police exit passport, A.67/14, fo. 5; stay at Hull, Barclay July 7 & 19, 1853 London letter to Wilson & Sons at Hull, A.5/18, p. 153 & 160 and A.15/53, p. 54; arrival at Victoria Douglas' April 19, 1854 Fort Victoria letter to Barclay, HBCA A.11/75, fo. 149; FtVicASA 1-18; FtSimp[N]P] 9; Hans Berentzen search file; VPL 1881 and 1891 Canadian Census; BCA Dia-Rem Boss, p. 90; BCA Morison, p. 67

Bergeron (Langevin), Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1818 - c. 1821) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Faubourg des Recollets, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Columbia Department (1818 - 1821); Cooper, Columbia Department (1818 - 1821).

François Bergeron signed on with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Company] from Faubourg des Recollets on April 27, 1818 as a winterer for three years functioning as a milieu and cooper. His exact location in the Columbia (or New Caledonia) has not been located but Montreal notary J. G. Beek noted in 1818 Bergeron's destination to be "autre cote de la montagne des roches."

PS: ShdeSB Liste

Bergevin, Felix (c. 1820 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, South Party (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842).

Felix Bergevin joined the HBC from Montreal in 1839 and left the area for Canada in 1842. He returned to the area and, by 1850, had settled in Marion Co., Oregon Territory. He was awarded his land claim on May 16, 1853.

Felix Bergevin had a wife Olive (c.1826-?) of unknown origin.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-21; FtVanASA 6-7; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co.; PPS: Genealogical Material...1957

Bergevin (Langevin), Joseph (c. 1823 - c. 1844) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1842 - 1844).

Joseph Bergevin (Langevin) joined the HBC from Montreal in 1841 as a middleman and left the region for Canada (east of the Rockies) at the end of his contract in 1844.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 23

Berland, Edouard [variation: Edward] (c. 1800 - 1853) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1800

Death: Fort Kootenay (U.S.), Oregon Territory - October 1853

Fur trade employee

HBC Indian trader, Columbia Department (1828 - 1835); Trapper, Colville District (1832 - 1839); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1839 - 1841); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1841 - 1843); Deroineur, Fort Kootenay (1843 - 1845); Interpreter, Fort Kootenay (1845 - 1846); Interpreter, Fort Kootenay (1846 - 1849); Indian trader, Fort Kootenay (1849 - 1851); Interpreter, Fort Kootenay (1851 - 1852); Trader, Fort Kootenay (1852 - 1853).

Just when the semi-literate Edouard Berland came to the Pacific slopes has not been established, but in 1827-1828, he was an Indian trader in the Saskatchewan. From 1828-1835, he worked on the Pacific slopes as an independent, occasionally putting in appearances at Fort Colville, but it was not until 1835 that he was actually hired by the HBC. In the fall of 1841, he had been assigned to provide Governor George Simpson with horses at the Continental Divide and sketched a pictograph message with a piece of burnt wood on a tree, signing his name. After some confusion and contact was made, Berland guided the party to three hot springs which he claimed had cured him from a severe illness two winters previously. After the 1846 border was drawn, Berland and his family moved upriver to Tobacco Plains. From that point he worked mainly out of Kootenae Fort until he died in 1853. For the next sixteen or so years his HBC account showed transactions, no doubt carried on by surviving family members.

Edward Berland's family life is not entirely clear and it is not certain how many wives or children he had. On July 20, 1845 he formally married Louisa [Aloysia] Findlay (c.1815-?) daughter of James Finlay. She brought to the marriage Joanna Findley (c.1834-?) and he brought Merrienne Berland (c.1835) and together they had Alexander (1843-1874) and Lucy (1846-?). Another child appears to have been John (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFDS 3a, 5a-7; FtVanASA 2-8, 10; YFASA 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; FtVanCB 41; FtVicASA 1-2, 12-13, 15-16; HBCABio PPS: Simpson, Narrative, p. 117, 121, 125, 128 SS: O. W. Johnson, p. 332-33; family information provided by descendants

Berland, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1816 - 1821) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1816); Middleman, Pacific slopes (1821).

Jean Baptiste Berland joined the NWC in Fort William in 1816 for work in the Columbia. He joined the HBC in 1821 but appears to have worked elsewhere after that.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1; HBCA NWCAB 9

Bernard, Jean Baptiste (c. 1793 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1793

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Guide to Governor Simpson, Columbia Department (1828).

Jean Baptiste Bernard joined the NWC before 1811 and continued on with the HBC after 1821 as a highly respected guide. In 1821, for example, he guided Nicholas Garry from Montreal to Fort William, Red River and Norway House and was spoken of as being "diligent, attentive, sober, good natured & well acquainted with the Route" (Garry's Comments, HBRS X, p. 247). Between 1821-1823 he was in Ile-a-la-Crosse and from 1824 was a steersman in the Athabaskan District. Governor Simpson used him for his 1828 journey to the Columbia and periodically thereon after. In 1831 he set up a tavern and sold liquor near Fort Coulonge and, in 1843, while in Fort Coulonge, he lost a son to smallpox. Simpson was still using him as late as 1847. He continued working in the Northern Department after that.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8; FtVanAB 26; HBCABio PPS: HBRS X, p. xxxi, xxxii, 36, 247; HBRS II

Bernice, Julien (fl. 1822 - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Employee, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823).

Julien Bernice worked in the Columbia for the HBC in outfit 1822-1823. He may have been a member of the cross-country Brigade or Express.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10

Bernier, Julian [variation: Julien] (1794 - c. 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Yamaska, Lower Canada - 1794

Death: probably Cowlitz area, Lewis County, Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Bowsman, Thompson River (winter 1813 - 1814); NWC Untraced vocation, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1819); HBC Steersman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); NWC Steersman, Columbia District (1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1822 - 1823); Member, James Sinclair Party (1841).

A sixteen year old Julian Bernier joined the NWC on December 28, 1810 to work as a wintering steersman for three years at Great Slave Lake. At the end of his contract in 1813, he came to the Pacific slopes working in the Kamloops area. In 1821, at the time of the coalition of the NWC and the HBC, Bernier continued working with the latter. He had two sons, Marcel (1819-89) and Isadore (1827-?) both born in Spokane area indicating that Bernier may have been working as a free trader there. Some time after that, Bernier took his two children to the St. Boniface parish school in the Red River settlement. In 1841, the whole family came west overland as sponsored Red River settlers and in 1849 Julian settled on a claim of 320 acres [129.5 ha] on Lewis County. The Bernier family settled in the Cowlitz area.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10 PPS: CCR 1a; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 36 SS: Jackson, Children of the Fur Trade, p.105, 109, 139, 141, 143; SS: WHQ, vol. IV No.1; vol. VI No.1

Berston, Miles (fl. 1855 - 1856) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Nez Perces (1855 - 1856).

Miles Berston joined the HBC in 1855 but deserted soon after. Nothing else is known of him.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 11-12

Berwick, Frederick William (fl. 1849 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Harpooner (barque) (1848 - 1849); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1849); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1849); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1849); 2nd mate, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1849).

Frederick William Berwick joined the HBC at Fort Victoria on June 11, 1849 from the barque Harpooner, on which he had sailed from England, in exchange for Elias Boys. He worked on several coastal vessels and, on December 1, 1849, was promoted to 2nd officer on the Mary Dare until 1850. At that point he may have joined another vessel for the return voyage to England. His name appeared on company accounts for another three years indicating possible continued affiliation.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia, 10; YFASA 29-32; YFDS 20

Bethune, Angus (1783 - 1858) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Carleton Island, New York - 1783 (born to Rev. John Bethune and Véronique Waddens)

Death: Toronto [York], Upper Canada [Ontario]- November 1858

Fur trade officer

NWC Clerk/Wintering Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Passenger, Isaac Todd (ship) (1814); Supercargo, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816); Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (1816 - 1817); Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (1818 - 1819).

With parents who counted Alexander Henry and Sir Alexander Mackenzie as their friends and a mother who was related to John McLoughlin, it was natural for young Angus to enter the fur trade. The eldest of nine children, Angus Bethune joined the NWC in 1804 as a clerk and worked at several eastern posts prior to coming to the Columbia District in September 1813 with John George McTavish and the NWC to take over the PFC Fort Astoria post that year. The following year he became a NWC partner and in July 1814, sailed with the furs to Canton on the Isaac Todd. While the ship returned to England, Bethune waited in Canton, taking the Columbia back to Astoria the following year. From this second vessel he traded on the coast from Monterey to Sitka until August 1816. In April 1817 he left Fort George, going overland along with Duncan McDougall, Joseph McGillivray, Alexander McTavish and Rox Cox as far as English River. He wintered at Fort George in 1818-19 for the last time and subsequently, along with John McLoughlin, tried to negotiate a new deal with the NWC. Considered rebellious, both went to London, where, along with Colin Robertson, they negotiated with the HBC executives on behalf of several wintering partners. The Deed Poll was eventually signed on March 26, 1821 in their absence but Bethune and McLoughlin quickly sailed back to New York and Fort William for the signing there. Bethune's career was essentially finished even though he was given the position of Chief Factor in 1821, for he was assigned to minor posts, retiring officially in 1841. From 1840, he took an active interest in business and Toronto politics. Toward the end of his life, he lapsed into senility but left a sizable estate.

Angus Bethune had three wives, one native girl around White Earth House in 1810, a Clatsop girl at Fort George in 1814, and finally Louisa Mackenzie (1793-1833) ("Miss Green Blanket"), the mixed descent daughter of Scottish fur trader Roderick Mckenzie (cousin of Sir Alexander McKenzie) and a native woman. She bore him five children.

Angus and Louise's great-grandson was Dr. Norman Bethune, the Chinese revolutionary hero whose exploits are known to every Chinese student. In many ways, he resembled his great-grandfather, fur trader Angus Bethune.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 472, 475, 476, 483, 556, 625, 689, 704, 732, 740, 741; Cox, p. 239, 244, 250-51 SS: M. L. Smith; HBRS II, p. 206; HBRS XXII, p. 426; DCB Russell

See Also: Mackenzie, Sir Alexander; McLoughlin, Dr. John (Relative); McLoughlin, Joseph (Relative)

Bibeau, Jacques (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1830 - 1831); Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1834).

Jacques Bibeau joined the HBC from St. Francis in 1828 as a middleman and spent his career in New Caledonia. He likely returned to Lower Canada.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-3; YFASA 8-9, 11-13; YFDS 3b, 4b-5a; FtAlexAB 1

Bibeau, Pierre (c. 1817 - c. 1864) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Barthelemy (d. of Montreal), Lower Canada - c. 1817

Death: probably Montreal, Quebec

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1845); Stoker, Fort Simpson (1845 - 1847); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1853); Engineer (2nd), Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1860); Leading fireman, Labouche (steamer) (1861 - 1863); Fireman, Fort Victoria depot (1863 - 1864); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1864).

After joining the HBC in 1832 from St. Barthelemy, Pierre Bibeau became a long-time employee in the Columbia District and later, British Columbia, working both at land posts and on coastal shipping. In the fall of 1834 Bibeau had to recover from a broken thighbone and wrist, and in the spring of 1837 from venereal disease. Bibeau did a variety of jobs, including splitting iron to make nails and working at the forge. On April 27, 1842, as one of the "best men" at the post (FtSimp[NP] 6, fo. 43d), he was sent off to Fort Stikine to bring stability to the fort after the murder of John McLoughlin Jr. After saving a considerable sum of money he retired from the service on February 15, 1864. Because of the length of employment, he took free passage from Victoria to London on the Princess Royal, and from there to Montreal on another HBC vessel.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[NP] 3-4, 6; YFASA 12-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5a-7; FtVanASA 3-8; FtVicASA 1-12; FtVicCB

Bichan, James (1820 - c. 1849) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Grimness Head, South Ronaldsay, Orkney - May 1820 (born to William and Helen [Taylor] Bichan)

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Cooper, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Cooper, Willamette (1845 - 1846); Cooper, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Cooper, Willamette Falls (1847 - 1848); Cooper, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Miller, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849).

James Bichan, born into an Orkney farming family in the Grimness area, learned the skills of a cooper. He joined the HBC in 1843 on a five year contract and, from Stromness, made his way to York Factory and overland to the coast, spending the next five years in the Fort Vancouver/Willamette area. In 1848-1849, when activities at the fort were beginning to diminish, he was employed by former Chief Factor John McLoughlin, who at that time was living in Oregon City. On September 1, 1849 James Bichan retired and went to California for the gold so eagerly being sought there.

PS: OrkA OPR; Cen1821-, 1841 U.K. Census; HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; YFASA 24-29; YFDS 19-20; FtVanASA 9

Bigg, Mr. (fl. 1841 - 1843) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Valleyfield (ship) (1841 - 1843).

Mr. Bigg sailed to the coast as an apprentice on the HBC chartered ship Valleyfield. He was to have served out his apprenticeship on the coast after his arrival in July 1842 but, as there were no apprentices to place on board in his stead for its return trip, Bigg had to return to England on the same vessel.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 29

Biggs, William (fl. 1844 - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Apprentice seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1846 - 1847).

William Biggs first appeared in the Columbia in 1844-1845 as an apprentice. He left for the British Isles in October 1846 aboard the Vancouver.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-26; YFDS 17

Bigmore, George [variation: Brigmore] (? - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Burnham, Buckinghamshire, England

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - September 1847

Maritime officer

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1843 - 1845); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846); 2nd mate, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1847).

George Bigmore joined the HBC in 1843 on a five-year contract and sailed twice to the coast on the Cowlitz. During the first voyage, the 2nd mate jumped overboard committing suicide, and on April 8, 1845 in San Francisco, because the crew was rebellious, Bigmore was appointed boatswain. He proved his worth with the crew and officers and was appointed 2nd mate for the second voyage leaving London in October 1846. During this voyage he steadfastly stood with the crew in their complaints against the ship's cook, who was a bully. However, on September 22, 1847, while the ship was anchored at Fort Vancouver, the top gallant mast, which was being lowered by George Gerrard, Robert Brodie and John de L'Hubert, slipped and struck Bigmore on the head and back. He died within fifteen minutes. Bigmore was buried the next day in the Fort Vancouver graveyard and, on November 3, while the ship was still on the Columbia River, his effects were sold to the rest of the crew.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-25, 27; PortB 1; log of Cowlitz, 2, 6; YFDS 18 PPS: HBRS XXXII, p. 12n

Bill (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

N/A Labourer, Convoy (brig) (1825).

Bill shipped aboard the Josiah Marshall brig, Convoy [Wm. H. McNeill], at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast as a labourer, Bill and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels, p. 163

Billy (fl. 1844 - 1849) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849).

Billy appeared in the Columbia in outfit 1844-1845 as a labourer with the HBC. He worked at Fort Vancouver until March 1, 1849, at which point he went to California, most likely for gold.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28; YFDS 19

Bingham (fl. 1837 - 1839) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1839).

Bingham, who was probably named after the Hawaiian missionary, Reverend Hiram Bingham, signed on with the HBC in July 1837 in Oahu. He began work at Fort Vancouver on August 10. He appears to have worked for two years, and was discharged in 1839, when he likely returned to the islands.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 4-6; YFDS 8; YFASA 19-20

Binnie, Robert (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Robert Binnie made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, the Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Binnington, Joseph (fl. 1831 - 1833) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Hull, Yorkshire, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1831); Seaman, Naval Department (1831 - 1833); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

Joseph Binnington, who joined the HBC in London as a seaman on October 6, 1830, sailed to the coast on the Ganymede. During his stay on the coast from August 13, 1831 to October 26, 1832 he wrote letters to his brother and sister in England indicating that he had been ill. Binnington likely suffered from the malarial fever that was annually sweeping the lower Columbia in the early 1830's. Given the residual nature of the disease, he probably suffered symptoms for his life. He arrived back in England in May 1833.

Two articulate but undelivered letters from Binnington's brother and sister, written in 1832-1833, rest in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 4, 7, 14; YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4b-5a; PortB 1; Beattie & Buss, p. 27-29

Birch, Leonard (fl. 1844 - 1846) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Conwitz (barque) (1844 - 1846).

Leonard Birch joined the HBC in London in 1843 and served part of his apprenticeship on the Conwitz.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-25

Bird, Charles J. (c. 1837 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1837

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Nez Perces (1855 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Vancouver farm (1856).

Charles Bird first came to Fort Vancouver in 1843 with his mother, sisters and brother. After residing in Washington Co. [Oregon] until 1844, and near Fort Vancouver until 1846, the family moved to the nearby Fourth Plain, about four miles [6.4 km] from the post. Charles made frequent trips back and forth between Fourth Plain and the post. Like many others he joined the California Gold Rush from 1849-1850, and in 1855 and 1856 he worked briefly for the HBC. After his employment ended with the HBC he continued to farm in the Fourth Plain area.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 11-13 PPS: In the Supreme Court, p. 104-08

See Also: Bird, John (Relative)

Bird, James (fl. 1860 - 1870) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba]

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, New Caledonia (1861 - 1862); Labourer, New Caledonia (1862 - 1863); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1863 - 1865); Labourer, New Caledonia (1865 - 1869).

James Bird spent his HBC career in the New Caledonia area. In the late 1860s, the Bird family was living at Stuart's Lake [Fort St. James area] and by 1870, they were at Connolly Lake. According to family tradition, James' wife, Maria (Boucher), was kidnapped by one Sinket, whom Maria had insulted, and had to be rescued by her father, James (but not before she had become pregnant by Sinket). The baby was left to be raised by its maternal grandmother, Tatnan. Apparently, at an unknown date, James Bird took his young wife home with him to St. Paul, Quebec.

James Bird took as his wife, Maria Boucher (who may have been the same as Emilia) daughter of James Boucher. Their children were John (c.1864-?), Joseph (c.1867-?), Mary (c.1869-?) and Sara (?-bap.1871-?). Maria had a child James (?-?) by Sinket, but the child took on the Bird family name.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 8-16; [1879-80] B.226/g/27, [last entry as James Bird, subsequent entries as James Bird [b], possibly another person] fo. 4d SS: Hubbard, "Granny Seymour Story"; Hubbard, "Mariya's Bold Book"; Hubbard, "Bouchey Orders Hunt"; Hubbard, "Abducted Woman Too Proud"; Hubbard, "Scouts Recount Story"
See Also: Boucher, James (Father-in-Law)

Bird, John (c. 1829 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1829

Death: probably Oregon State, United States

Fur trade employee

HBC House carpenter, Fort Vancouver general charges (1848 - 1849).

John Bird joined the HBC in the 1840s and came west to the Columbia in November, 1848, but he may have come earlier with his younger relative, Charles, above. In November, 1851 he declared his intention to become a U.S. Citizen and settled on a claim of 321 acres [130 ha] in Clark County.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; YFDS 19; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.; FtVanASA 9 PPS: Washington Territory Donation Land Claim, p. 185
See Also: Bird, Charles J. (Relative)

Bird, Nicholas (c. 1824 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1824 (born to James Bird and Elizabeth Montour)

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Maritime employee

HBC Native apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Seaman (native apprentice), Vancouver (barque) (1842 - 1843); Seaman (native apprentice), Cadboro (schooner) (1843 - 1844); Seaman (native apprentice), Cowlitz (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1846 - 1847); U.A. Freeman, Willamette (1847 - 1848).

Nicholas Bird joined the HBC in 1841 as an apprentice. He sailed on coastal vessels up and down the coast until 1847, when he became a freeman and began living in the Willamette. In 1848 he appeared on the Muster Rolls during the Cayuse War as a private in D, 5th and 7th Company.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8, log of Vancouver [3] 1; Cadboro 5; Columbia 9; YFASA 24-27 PPS: Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 504

Birnie, James (c. 1799 - 1864) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Aberdeen, Scotland - c. 1799

Death: Cathlamet, Washington Territory - December 1864

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1818); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1820 - 1821); HBC Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1822); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria]/Spokane House (1822 - 1824); In charge, Fort Okanagan (1824 - 1825); Clerk, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1825 - 1826); Member, Slave Lake Brigade to Edmonton & back (1825 - 1826); Clerk, Fort Colville (1825 - 1826); Clerk, South Party (1826 - 1828); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1829); Clerk who established post, The Dalles post (1829); Clerk, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1829 - 1833); Clerk, Fort Colville (1832 - 1834); Clerk, Fort Simpson (1834 - 1836); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1836 - 1837); Untraced vocation, Fort Umpqua (1837 - 1838); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1838 - 1846); Settler, Cathlamet (1846+).

An educated sixteen year old James Birnie made his way to Canada and, two years later on March 10, 1818, entered the service of the NWC as an apprentice clerk for five years. Later that same year he crossed the Rockies to the Pacific slopes with Angus Bethune and James McMillan. By 1821 he was on the point of discharge from the HBC but George Simpson thought he would be useful in the competition with the Americans because of his knowledge of the west side of the mountains. Birnie was present at the construction of such posts as Fort Colville in 1825, the Dalles post in 1829 and the dramatic removal of Fort Simpson [Nass] to the new site in 1834. Paradoxically, he spent much of his career at one of the oldest sites, Fort George [Astoria] where he raised his large family. Birnie's reputation for hospitality began early. On November 18, 1827, while running messages for the Umpqua Expedition, Birnie met and provided a tasty meal for an appreciative, hungry botanist, David Douglas. Later, in 1841, the officers of the U. S. sloop-of-war Peacock presented Birnie with a silver service in recognition of his service at the time of the sloop's wreck on the Columbia bar. Still later, in the 1850's, at his home in Cathlamet, Washington Territory, he and his wife entertained their guests in grand style in their big house on the hill. He retired in 1846 to Cathlamet, as a settler along with his wife and children and bought an interest in the mill of H. H. Hunt. He later opened a merchandising store and, in 1851, was named postmaster at Cathlamet. He became a U. S. citizen in 1853 and during the 1850's was agent for the HBC. Later he gave part of his land claim for the first Catholic church. He died at Cathlamet in 1864.

James Birnie had one wife and twelve children. On November 8, 1838 at Fort George [Astoria], he formalized his marriage to Charlotte Beaulieu (1805-1878) of Red River. The Birnie children were Suzanne (1828-1854), Robert (?-bap.1837-?), Charlotte (?-bap.1838-?), James (?-bap.1838-?), Amelie (?-bap.1838-?), Victoria (?-bap.1838-?), Lakse [?] (?-bap.1838-?) Mary A. (c.1840-?), Alexandre (1842-1922), Caroline (c.1844-?), Archibald (1847-1850), and Thomas Lowe (1851-1883). A child, Eliza (?-?) (possibly one of the above) became the wife of A. C. Anderson.

Birnie Island, Fort Simpson [B.C.], is named after James Birnie.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA YFASA 1, 4-6, 9, 11-15, 17-20, 24-25; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-11; FtVanASA 1-9; YFDS 3a, 4b-7, 13; SimpsonCB; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.; BCA CCCath PPS: HBRs XXX, p. 202; D. Douglas, Journal, p. 238-39; Labonte, p. 265; CCR 1b; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 229 SS: HBRs III, p. 428-29; Walbran, p. 52; Elliott, Barbara Coit, "News and Comment", OHQ, vol. XXVIII, p. 395; vol. XXVIII, p. 267; XLVII, p. 398

See Also: Anderson, Alexander Caufield (Son-in-Law); Birnie, Robert (Son); Grahame, James Allen (Son-in-Law); Roberts, George Barber (Relative); Wark, John McAdoo (Son-in-Law)

Birnie, P. [variation: Brinn] (fl. 1830 - 1833) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Umpqua Mountains - September 1833

Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1832).

P. Birnie appears to have been a freeman with John Work's Snake party between 1830-1832. Apparently he died on September 28, 1833 in the Umpqua mountains.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 9 PPS: Haines, The Snake Country Expedition, p. 140-41; also "The Journal of John Work", OHQ, 14 (3): 280-314, p. 282

Birnie, Robert (fl. 1842 - 1843) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Pacific Northwest - 1837 (born to James Birnie and Charlotte Beaulieu)

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice post master, California Estate (1841 - 1842); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1842 - 1843).

Robert Birnie apprenticed for a short time with the HBC before travelling to Oahu in outfit 1842-1843.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-7; YFASA 22

See Also: Birnie, James (Father)

Bishop, George (fl. 1857 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1859).

George Bishop sailed to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal. Shortly after his arrival at Victoria, he deserted. However, when it was in Victoria again he rejoined the vessel and sailed back to England.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4-5

Bisset, John [variation: Bassett] (fl. 1841) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1841).

John Bisset signed on with the HBC in Honolulu on July 14, 1841, most likely to work his passage from Oahu to the mainland, for he left the HBC that same year.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-7; YFDS 12; YFASA 22

Bissett, James (fl. 1855 - 1898) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - 1831

Death: possibly Lachine, Quebec

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk in charge, Honolulu (1859 - 1860); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1860 - 1866); Chief Trader, Shuswap (1866 - 1867); Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1866 - 1867); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1867 - 1868); Untraced vocation, Esquimalt (1868 - 1870); Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1870 - 1871).

James Bissett appears to have entered the service of the HBC in 1853 in Montreal and acted as a senior clerk in Lachine for six years before being posted to Honolulu in 1859. He became Chief Trader in 1860 and in 1863 the Bissetts were living at Woodland Cottage. In 1867, he went on an exploring expedition to ascertain the practicability of a route from Kamloops to Quesnel Lake by way of the North River. In March 1871 the popular HBC officer was summoned to return to Montreal and the following year was awarded the rank of Chief Factor and appears to have worked there until 1880, at which time he went on furlough. In 1891 he was on the Lachine voter's list. He returned for a visit in 1898.

Seventeen volumes of Bissett's diaries, 1854-1883 are in the Canadian Archives.

Bissett's wife, a friend of the artist Emily Carr, had a son at their Woodland Cottage c. June 23, 1863.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 8-16; HBCABio; Van-PL Colonist, June 23, 1863, p. 3; Aug. 12, 1867, p. 3; Mar. 30, 1871, p. 3; Apr. 16, 1898, p. 5

Bisson, Baptiste (fl. 1793) (Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

Baptiste Bisson joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chepewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific. He is mentioned only once in the journals by Mackenzie.

PPS: HakSP Mackenzie, p. 257

Black, Arthur (fl. c. 1826 - 1828) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Free trader

SJ & S Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1826 - 1828).

Little is known of Arthur Black who was a trapper on Jedediah Smith's Southwest Expedition of 1826-1828. He first appeared on record at the 1826 Rendezvous and left with Smith in August, heading south, crossing to the Colorado River and west into California. After a great deal of difficulty with Spanish authorities in California, the expedition headed north. In an area just north of the Umpqua River [Oregon], just after Smith and two others set out to scout out a route to travel, the natives killed all the expedition members remaining in camp except one, Arthur Black. Black was grabbed, was cut on the hands, gave up his gun and darted into the woods thus saving himself. After his accounting to the HBC, he probably headed back to the mountains with Smith.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 4 PPS: HBRS X, p. 61 SS: Carter, "Jedediah Smith", p. 97-104

Black, Mr. (fl. 1814) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

NWC 1st mate, Isaac Todd (ship) (1814).

Little is known of Mr. Black, who came to the Columbia in 1814 as an officer on a North West Company vessel.

PPS: Corney, Voyages in the Northern, p. 27

Black, Samuel (1785 - 1841) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Aberdeen, Scotland - 1785 (born to Jon Black and Mary Leith)

Death: Fort Kamloops [Thompson River Post, She-waps Post], Columbia Department - February 1841

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Nez Perces (1825 - 1830); Chief Trader, Thompson River (1830 - 1841).

"Lantern jawed" (HBRS XXX 193) and paranoid, Samuel Black was one of the more unusual characters of the fur trade. A school friend of James Keith, Samuel Black arrived in Canada as a clerk for the XY Company; two years later he joined the NWC. He was extraordinarily hostile toward the HBC, being responsible for the capture of Colin Robertson in 1818. As such, Black's appointment as clerk with the HBC at the time of coalition in 1821 was delayed for two years. However, he proved his worth - in 1824 he was promoted to Chief Trader, and finally to Chief Factor in 1837. A wary and suspicious man, Black always had weapons at arms length in case he needed them. Basically honest and dependable to the point of being tedious because of his thoroughness, he instilled fear in those around him, particularly in the Natives. He also regularly sent money home to his mother. However, he was shot by a Native in 1841 at the Thompson River post in apparent revenge for an unrelated death of a nearby Chief. Half of Black's estate went to his mother, the rest to his children.

Samuel Black appears to have had at least one wife and five children. His two sons were George (in Scotland in 1835, died before 1843) and Kamloops Black (?-?); his three daughters were Jean (?-?), Elenionora Black (?-died before 1843) and Angelique (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFDS 2a, 6-7; FtVanASA 2-6; YFASA 5-9, 11-12, 14, 18; SimpsonCB; YFDS Wills PPS: HBRS I, p. 429; HBRS XXII, p. 426; HBRS XXX, p. 192-93n; DCB vol. VII; Peers, p. 293

See Also: Keith, James

Blackey, James [variation: Blackie] (fl. c. 1797 - 1858) (British)

Birth: possibly East London, England - c. 1797

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Boatswain, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1833); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

James Blackey joined the HBC in London on May 12, 1828 for what was to be a thirty year career with the company. His first run was a return voyage to Hudson Bay on the HBC supply ship, Prince of Wales. In January 1830, he left on the Dryad for the Columbia where he helped service coastal posts for the next three years. In 1832 while at Fort Simpson, he wrote to his sister, a widow of Mr. Mitchison of St. George's in the East, London, comforting her as her friends had drifted away after her husband's death. A caring brother, he also had one sixth of his salary transferred from the HBC to her. According to the letter, his love interest seemed to be a certain "Kitty" (Beattie & Buss, p. 30) in London. It is not known whether or not he finally married Kitty after his arrival back in London on February 23, 1834, but for the following twenty-four years Blackey served as boatswain on the HBC London-Moose Factory runs. James Blackey's undelivered letter to his sister rests in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-5b; YFASA 11-13; log of Dryad 1; log of Ganymede 1; ShMiscPap 14; PortB 1; log of Prince Albert 1-11; HBCABio; Beattie & Buss, p. 29-31

Blackwell, T. J. (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

T. J. Blackwell made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Blair, William [variation: Blaire] (fl. 1846 - 1849) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Montrose, Angus, Scotland - 1829 (born to Francis Blair and Janet Crammond)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1847); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1847 - 1849).

William Blair joined the HBC in London on September 29, 1845 on a five year contract. He sailed to the coast on the barque Columbia and on October 29, 1847, transferred to the brig, Mary Dare. He dutifully wrote home and made certain his mother received money. On August 20, 1849 he deserted at Fort Victoria, and likely made his way to the gold fields of California.

A June 25, 1847 letter from his appreciative mother, Janet Clairmont (Crammond?) in Montrose rests in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 9; YFASA 26-29; YFDS 18, 21; ShMiscPap 8; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 224-25

Blanchard, John (c. 1801 - 1838) (British: English)

Birth: probably Birmingham, England - c. 1801

Death: Todd's Bay, Pacific Northwest - January 1838

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1838).

After joining the HBC on February 13, 1836 on a five-year contract, John Blanchard had a brief but eventful two year career with the Company. He immediately sailed to the coast on the barque Nereide, arriving September 1836 to begin runs along the Coast and to the Hawaiian Islands. Feeling that Captain Home of the Nereide was working him too hard, he along with eight others mutinied in June 1837. As a result, on the orders of John McLoughlin, he was ordered into confinement and put on prisoner rations of bread and water. A change of heart, however, saw him voluntarily returning to duty, thus avoiding the lash. Ironically, he was drowned on a winters day in Tod's Bay while trying to cross the Columbia River on January 26, 1838, along with three fellow crew members and the very same captain against whom he had mutinied.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 9, 14; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 17; FtVanCB 18

Blanyan, Timothy [variation: Timothee Blogan, Bloyan, Blageau] (fl. 1852 - 1858) (Undetermined origin)Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Victoria general charges (1852 - 1853); Middleman, New Caledonia (1853 - 1854); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1854 - 1858).

Timothy Blanyan was hired locally to work for the HBC and worked mainly on the coast on a contract that ended in 1857. He had problems with venereal disease and had to leave Fort Simpson in 1855 to seek medical advice.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-5; FtAlexPJ 9; FtSimp[N]PJ 8

Blenkinsop, George (c. 1823 - 1904) (British: English)

Birth: Penryn, Cornwall, England - c. 1823

Death: Fort Rupert, British Columbia - June 1904

Fur trade employee

HBC Steward, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1843); Post master, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1846); Clerk, Fort Stikine (1846 - 1849); Clerk, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850); Clerk in charge, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1856); Chief Trader, Fort Rupert (1855 - 1857); Chief Trader, Fort Colville (1857 - 1859); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1859 - 1861).

George Blenkinsop joined the HBC on August 24, 1840 in London as a steward and arrived at Fort Vancouver, February 7, 1841. In November of that year the tall, well educated, and slow speaking Blenkinsop sailed to Hawaii on the Cowlitz with George Simpson, then to Sitka and Fort Stikine where he assisted Captain Dodd in running the post after the murder of young John McLoughlin. In 1846 his name was added to the list of claimants for land around Fort Nisqually; although, the claim was unsuccessful. He became second in command to William Henry McNeill at Fort Rupert and was in charge when the three deserters from the barque England were murdered at Nehwitti. In 1855-1857, he purchased acreage in the Victoria and Lake Districts. Around 1857 or 1858 he replaced an ailing Angus Macdonald at Fort Colville and in 1859 returned to Fort Rupert as second in command to Hamilton Moffat. In June, 1860, he may have been in the Fort Langley area for a then pre-empted 160 acres [68.4 ha] on the north side of the Fraser River in the Port Hammond area, but there is no evidence that he took up the claim. He retired on June 1, 1861 and between 1881-1886 became the Indian Agent at Fort Rupert. After he retired from the Indian Department, he made his home at Fort Rupert where he died at home of asphyxiation and was buried June 3, 1904.

George Blenkinsop had two successive wives and eleven recorded children. In July, 1846 at Fort Stikine, he was married to the adopted daughter of Captain McNeill, Helen McNeill (c.1829-69), by a Luthern minister. Their children were Charles Henry (c.1848-64), Robert (c.1850-81), John George (?-bap.1858-?), William Henry (?-bap.1858-?), Mary Denny [Fanny] (?-bap.1860-?), Frederick William (1863-?) and Francis Drummond (1867-?). Helen died on March 26, 1869 and at Fort Rupert, George married Emma Oteokorie/Currie (?-?); together, they had four children: Bertie (1885-?), Emily Bertha (1885?-?), Brenda (1891-?) and Benny/Benjamin (1898-?).

Blenkinsop Bay, Johnstone Strait was named after him in 1860 by Captain Richards of the survey vessel Plumper (Walbran, p. 55).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Cowlitz 2; FtVanASA 6-8, 13-15; YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-5, 7; HBCA; BCA PSACFtNis; AngCAVic MissFtRup; Van-PL Colonist, Mar. 7, 1864, p. 3; Oct. 11, 1881, p. 3 SS: Walbran, p. 55; Laing, p. 87; Louis Oteokorie descendant

Block (Taoukee) (fl. 1843 - 1849) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1843 - 1849).

Block appears to have joined the HBC in Oahu in 1843. He worked until the end of his contract on August 6, 1846, at which point he returned to Oahu. He then re-enlisted and returned to his job in Fort Vancouver. On February 1, 1849 he deserted, possibly lured by the gold of California.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24-26, 28; YFDS 17, 19

Blundell, John Shadrach (c. 1816 - 1851) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Kent, England - c. 1816 (born to Thomas Blundell and Jane Blundell)

Death: probably Kent, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Cowlitz (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850); Labourer, Norman Morison (barque) (1850 - 1851).

John Shadrach Blundell came to Vancouver Island aboard the barque Cowlitz, ostensibly as an HBC sponsored immigrant, with the intention of staying after his arrival in March 1850. As the conditions were not to his liking, he worked for a short time as a farm labourer in Fort Victoria until September 6, 1850 when he was transferred to the Norman Morison as an ordinary seaman for his return voyage. After he was paid off in London in February 1851, and, in spite of warnings from his parents about unemployment, he returned home to Kent where he married and raised a family.

Two 1850 HBCA undelivered letters written from Kent - one from his sweetheart and another from his mother - warned of unemployment in the area. However, the sweetheart was not the same woman he eventually married.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 29-31; YFDS 21; FtVicASA 1; FtVicCB 3; Misc1 7 SS: Nanaimo Retrospective, p. 28 PPS: Beattie & Buss, 361-63

Blyth, Andrew [variation: Bligh] (fl. 1834 - 1841) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Edinburgh, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1836 - 1840); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1840 - 1841).

Andrew Blyth had already sailed to Hudson Bay and back with the HBC when he signed a five year contract on December 13, 1834 in London for service on the Northwest Coast. After arriving, he helped service coastal posts from September 15, 1835 to October 31, 1840, at which time he boarded the barque Vancouver for his return voyage to England. He arrived back in London in the spring of 1841.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 7, 14; YFASA 15, 19-20; YFDS 6-7, 11; FtVanASA 3-8

Boak, William (fl. 1844 - 1845) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1844 - 1845).

William Boak joined the HBC barque Vancouver in London on September 2, 1844 and sailed directly to the coast. He was part of a group that protested treatment on the voyage out and, ten months after arriving on the coast, left the vessel on October 31, 1845. He likely made his way back to England on another ship.

PS: HBCA log of Vancouver [3] 2; ShMiscPap 11

Boase, Henry (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Henry Boase made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Boisclair, Esdros (fl. 1849 - 1856) (Undetermined origin)

Death: possibly Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest - January 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1849 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Hall (1852 - 1855).

Esdros Boisclair joined the HBC in 1849 and spent his career in the Columbia/Snake area. He was dispatched from Fort Hall on January 1, 1856 and, since he had not reached Fort Vancouver by May of that year, it was assumed that he was killed during the Indian Wars.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-11; FtVicDS 1; FtVanCB 41

Boisvert [variation: Boisverd] (fl. 1808 - 1810) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Kootenay's (1808 - 1810).

This is possibly Joseph or Augustin Boisvert as the exact identity of the "Boisverd" of the David Thompson journals is uncertain. He first appeared on record crossing the mountains in June 10, 1807 and was likely in on the building of Kootenae House. He stayed with Thompson through to 1810 when, on April 30, he was severely injured when his foot caught in his stirrup and he was dragged by his horse. He survived and came down out of the mountains down the Saskatchewan in June, 1810.

Boisvert had one wife, Qanqon, whom he left because she was too spirited [bardache] and because of her activities as a conjurer.

PS: SHdeSB Liste PPS: Belyea, p. 43; ChSoc XL, p. 314, 366-67 SS: Coues, p. 871

Boisvert, Augustin (fl. 1810 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption, Quebec

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814).

Augustin Boisvert joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] in Montreal on December 21, 1810 to work as a middleman at Fort William. Probably in 1813 he came to the Columbia area, staying the winter of 1813-1814 in Fort George [Astoria]. On April 4, 1814, Boisvert joined the brigade to the east in a canoe headed by John George McTavish and family.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Coues, p. 873

Boisvert, Francois [variation: François] (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846).

François Boisvert joined the HBC in 1841 and returned east over the Rockies to Canada in 1846.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 25

Boisvert, Louis (c. 1788 - c. 1850) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Anne, Lower Canada - c. 1788

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1830); Trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1834); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1835); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1836); Trapper, South Party (1836 - 1838); Trapper, Columbia Department (1836 - 1837); Middleman, South Party (1838 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842+).

Louis Boisvert joined the HBC in 1825 and helped to construct the original Fort Langley. He served mainly as a trapper and middleman and on November 10, 1839, was discharged before the end of his contract in 1840. He retired to the Willamette Valley in 1841-1842 and, on May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. In 1850 he was living alone as a farmer.

PS: HBCA YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 2a, 3a, 4b-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 2-6; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. SS: Holman, p.115

Boki [variation: Bokee] (fl. 1832 - 1838) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lama (brig) (1832); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1834); Passenger and seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838).

Unlike his more famous namesake, the Governor of Oahu who disappeared into oblivion in 1829, this Boki was engaged in Oahu by the HBC on September 6, 1832, and worked for two years on HBC ships before being discharged at Fort Vancouver and sailing back to Oahu on the Eagle as a passenger. He appears to have been engaged on and off again, mainly on HBC vessels, until he was last found sailing to Fort Langley on the Nereide in 1838. After that he disappears from record and probably returned to the Hawaiian Islands that year.

PS: HBCA ShMPap 14; YFASA 12-15, 17; YFDS 5a-5c; MiscI 4 SS: Bradley, The American Frontier

Bolduc, Francois [variation: François] (c. 1820 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada, Quebec - c. 1820

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1845 - 1848).

François Bolduc joined the HBC in 1844 and worked for them until about 1848. By 1850, he was living in the Willamette without an occupation, probably picking up odd jobs on farms.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-30; OHS 1849 Census, Champoeg Co.; 1850 US Census, Marion Co.

Bole, John [variation: Boli] (fl. 1844 - c. 1857) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Victoria (1844 - 1852).

John Bole joined the HBC from Oahu in 1844 and spent the next eight years at Fort Victoria as a labourer. Although he finished working for the HBC in 1852, he appears to have stayed in the area for another five years.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28, 30-32; FtVicASA 1, 4-7, 9

Bolne, Jean Baptiste [variation: Bone] (fl. 1844 - 1855) (Canadian: French)

Birth: La Prairie, Lower Canada (born to Christophe Bone and Marie Aimable Lariviere)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1845 - 1849).

Jean Baptiste Bolne joined the HBC in 1844 but quit around 1849. He appears, however, to have stayed in the area, perhaps Nanaimo, but was not there in 1881.

Jean Baptiste Bolne had one wife and one adopted child. On May 21, 1855, he married Marie (?-?), in Nanaimo. Their adopted daughter, Catherine (c.1849-?) was baptised on May 20, 1855, one day before the wedding.

PS: HBCA log of Vancouver [3], 2; YFASA 24-28, 30-31; BCA BCCR StAndC

Bonamis (L' Esperance), Alexis (c. 1798 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St. Joseph, Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Bowsman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1825).

Alexis Bonamie (L' Esperance) entered the fur trade in 1816 from Quebec and served at a variety of posts (Fort William, Peace River, Athabasca, Lower Red River) east of the Rockies between 1816-23. On July 17, 1823 he signed a contract as a bowsman for two years in the Columbia before returning to Montreal and the Red River area; and, in 1824-25 transported Governor George Simpson on his cross-continent visit. For the next ten years he served at Lower Red River as a guide and steersman, and in 1834 he commanded the Portage La Loche to the Clearwater River, retiring in 1835. Between 1846-1870, he was employed seasonally as a steersman and guide. A son's name was Baptiste Bruce (?-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 3-4; FtVanAB 1; FtGeo[Ast]AB 12; HBCAbio SS: Turner, John Peter, The Beaver, December 1943, p. 32-36

Bond, Charles (fl. 1850 - c. 1861) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1854); Seaman, Otter (steamer) (1854).

Charles Bond came to Vancouver Island on the chartered immigrant vessel, Tory. He worked for three years, probably paying off his passage and, at one point in February 1854, he appears to have worked his passage from Victoria to San Francisco. He returned to Victoria and stayed in the area, raising a family until at least 1861. By 1871 he had left the area.

Charles Bond had one wife and two recorded children. In the early 1850's, he took as his wife Elizabeth (?-?), Saanich, and together they had Mary Ellen Louisa (c.1854-?) and Elizabeth Teresa (c.1861-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-2; log of Otter 1; BCA BCCR StAndC

Bonenfant, Antoine [variation: Bonnenfant] (c. 1805? - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1805 (born to Antoine Bonenfant and Marie Anne Pepin)

Death: probably Douglas County, Oregon

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1825); Trapper, Flatheads (1825 - 1826).

Antoine Bonenfant may have joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on January 10, 1815 as middleman for three years in the Northwest, although he would have been very young if his 1805 birth date is correct. The Antoine Bonenfant that preceded him between 1812 and 1814 may have been a close relative, or father. If he did join in 1815, he has not been traced between 1815-1821. In 1823, he showed some independence with the HBC, for no sooner had he been outfitted on June 1, 1823 at York Factory, than he deserted. He then made his way to the Columbia where he worked until 1825-1826, when he deserted once again from the Flatheads. He likely stayed in the Columbia area, for in 1842 he was found in the Willamette on an active farm of forty-five enclosed acres [18.2 ha] with a wife and two children. The following year he voted against the establishment of a provisional government. In 1848 his son of the same name appeared on the Muster Rolls for the Cayuse War as a Private in D, 5th and 7th Company. He was recorded in the 1850 Census in Marion County as a forty-five year old farmer and, according to Munnick, the Bonenfant family moved to Douglas County, Oregon where he probably lived out the rest of his life.

Antoine Bonenfant had two or more wives and five children. He and his first wife, Marie Spokane (?-?) or Marguerite, had children Antoine (c.1831-?) and Martin (c. 1829). The fate of Marie or Marguerite is unknown. On January 10, 1842 at St. Paul, Oregon, he married Françoise Depati (c.1827-?), daughter of J. B. Depati and a Kalipouya woman. Their children were Marie Anne/Marianne (1845-1850), Charles (1847-1850) and Angelique Marguerite (1853-?).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 3-5; OHS FtHallAB; 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 2a, 3a; Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 504 SS: Holman, p. 115

Bonin, Joseph (fl. 1856 - 1860) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1856 - 1857); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley sundries account (1857 - 1858); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1858 - 1859).

Joseph Bonin worked off and on for the HBC records in 1857. His contract ended in 1859. In outfit 1859-1860 he was listed as being at Fort Langley, but did not receive wages.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 4-7

Bonna, Alexander (c. 1820 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851).

Although actually attached to the Saskatchewan Department, Alexander Bonna appeared briefly in the Columbia Department. He signed on with the HBC on April 26, 1850 as a labourer for three years.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 30
See Also: Bonna, Xavier (probable Brother)

Bonna, Xavier (fl. c. 1822 - 1853) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1822

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851).

Xavier Bonna signed on with the HBC on April 11, 1850 as a labourer for three years in the Saskatchewan Department; he appeared briefly in the Columbia Department.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 30
See Also: Bonna, Alexander (probable Brother)

Bonnely, James (fl. 1834 - 1839) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Edinburgh, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1837); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

James Bonnely joined the HBC in London on December 7, 1833, sailed to the coast on the Eagle and, on November 10, 1834, was transferred to Columbia services. He left for England on the barque Columbia on November 1, 1838.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; YFDS 5c-7, 9; FtVanASA 3-5

Bonneville, Captain Benjamin Louis Eulalie de (1796 - 1878) (French and American)

Birth: France – April 14, 1796

Death: Arkansas, United States – June 12, 1878

Fur trade officer

AFC Fur trader, Pacific slopes (1832 - 1835).

West Point graduate Benjamin Bonneville was an imaginative United States Army Captain who might have been a blip in fur trade history had not his journals fallen into the hands of writer Washington Irving. Fired with the lure of the opening west, he led a largely unsuccessful three year expedition into territory already controlled by other fur traders. On August 3, 1831, he was granted leave to carry out an exploration expedition, (Irving, p. 357) and secured financial backing from New York sources, his main motive was to make a profit from the fur trade (Chittenden, p. 408). On May 1, 1832 he set out from Independence, Missouri with an expedition of 110 men through the South Pass to the Green River [Wyoming] Rendezvous of fur traders. In July he built two blockhouses enclosed in a stockade near the Green River Rendezvous location, then went into the Snake country (where his party split into three), but he became involved in disputes with the already organized American Fur Company. He spent the winter of 1833 on the Portneuf River, a southern tributary of the Snake River, and the following May was unable to secure supplies at Fort Nez Percés from P. C. Pambrun (Irving, p. 254-55). Further attempts to secure supplies met with equally polite dismissal (Irving, p. 330). He spent the winter of 1834 on the Bear River and returned home in 1835. Bonneville later fought in the Mexican War and eventually retired from the U.S. Army as a Brigadier-General in 1866.

One town each in Washington and Oregon and a dam on the Columbia River were named after Bonneville.

SS: Irving, The Adventures of Captain, p. 254-55, 330, 357; Chittenden, p. 397 –408; Wyoming State Historical Society, Sublette County historical marker

Boots, George (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

George Boots made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4

Borabora, George [variation: Budabud] (fl. 1835 - 1855) (probably Tahitian)

Birth: probably Tahiti

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1836 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Langley (1841 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Langley (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1855).

George Borabora signed on with the HBC in Oahu in 1835 and began work in the Columbia on November 1, 1835. In the 1850 US Census of Lewis Co. he appeared as George Budabud, living in the same household as Napic (Alick Napahay), and Jo Lapou. In the fall of 1850, an ill Borabora went to Nisqually from Fort Victoria for treatment under Chief Trader Dr. William F. Tolmie. While recovering he worked in the garden, mended fences, etc. By January 1851, he was sufficiently recovered that he returned to work at Langley. There is no evidence that he stayed in the area and may have returned to Oahu or the Society Islands.

George had one daughter, Catherine (1848-1849), who was baptised a Catholic on June 17, 1849. The name of his wife is unknown. By process of elimination, he was likely the father of Louis Bin (bap.1852-?), who was baptized Catholic at Fort Langley on February 8, 1852.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15, 19-20, 24-31; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-8; FtVicASA 1-5; BCA BCCR StAndC PPS: Dickey; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co.

Borgne, Joseph (fl. c. 1805 - 1834) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Barthelemy (d. of Montreal), Lower Canada - c. 1805

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1834).

Joseph Borgne joined the HBC in 1831 and left for points unknown east of the Rockies on October 1, 1834.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-14; YFDS 4b-5c

Borlind, Alexander (fl. 1840) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1840).

Alexander Borlind joined the HBC on September 17, 1839 as a seaman for five years and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. He deserted at California on September 29, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20; log of Columbia, 4; FtVanASA 6

Bostonnais (Page), A. [variation: Bastony] (fl. 1813 - 1824) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Freeman

NWC Hunter, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (winter 1813 - 1814); Hunter, Snake River (1824).

Freeman hunter A. Bostonnais [Page] was in the Columbia for the winter of 1813-1814, and stayed at Fort Flatheads. Speculatively, he was probably of mixed descent, having an English ancestor by the name of Page with origins in the New England states. This may also be the hunter in the 1820s in Peigan [Blackfoot] territory described by Ross as wrinkled and “a superannuated hunter on the wrong side of seventy” (Ross, p. 241). At that point he was given the job of lighting a bush to flush some Peigans into the open.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 241

Bostonnais, Jean Baptiste [1] (fl. 1822 - 1827) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Finlay River, British Columbia - September 1827

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823); Guide, New Caledonia (1826).

Like his more famous brother, Pierre, Tête Jaune, Baptiste Bostonnais was also a free Iroquois in the New Caledonia area. Previous to this, he worked for the NWC in the Athabaska district and appears to have run on the brigade between Athabaska and Rainy Lake. He became a freeman in 1822 and, in 1826, he was possibly used by the HBC as a guide to take members of the HBC to his brother's cache. During this period he travelled with his family but their names have not been traced. On September, 1827, Baptiste, his family and children, as well as his brother and his family, were all killed by a party of natives while at the mouth of the Finlay River (FtStJmsPJ 14, April 27, 1828).

PPS: HBCA YFASA 2; FtStJmsCB 5, 6
See Also: Bostonnais, Pierre (Brother)

Bostonnais, Jean Baptiste [2] [variation: Bastonnois] (fl. 1826 - 1827) (Undetermined origin)

Freeman

HBC Freeman, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827).

Jean Baptiste Bostonnais worked in the Umpqua area in 1826-1827, the same time during which his namesake worked in New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2; FtVanCB 2; FtVanPJ 4

Bostonnais (Tete Jaune), Pierre [standard: Tête Jaune] (fl. 1816 - 1827) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Finlay River, British Columbia - September 1827

Freeman

HBC Freeman guide, Rocky Mountains (1819); Freeman guide, New Caledonia (1826).

Pierre Bostonnais, a mixed descent Iroquois known for his yellow hair (Tête Jaune), was active in the fur trade in 1816. He acted as a guide in the Rocky Mountains for Jose Gaubin in 1819 and Ignace Giasson in 1820 in an attempt to prepare the natives for the possible arrival of the HBC as a rival trader to the NWC. Although he was in the New Caledonia area for some time after that, and probably wintered over at Fort Alexandria in 1825-26, he did not appear in the records as frequently as his brother. In September 1827, Tête Jaune, his family and children, as well as his brother and his family, were all killed by a party of natives near the mouth of the Finlay River (FtStJmsPJ 14, April 27, 1828).

Tête Jaune had a wife and family but their names have not been traced.

The Yellowhead Pass (Tête Jaune Cache) was named after him.

PS: HBCA FtStJmsCB 6; FtStJmsPJ 15 PPS: HBRS II, p. 261 SS: Smyth, David, "Tête Jaune"; Yvonne Klan interview
See Also: Bostonnais, Jean Baptiste (Brother)

Boswell, Edward [variation: Bosswell] (fl. 1814 - 1815) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1815).

On March 26th, 1815, Edward Boswell, was re-engaged as crew member of the Columbia, but was later pressed into service on the Royal Navy ship Horatio.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Bottineau, Basil [variation: Brazil Battineau] (c. 1819 - ?) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1819

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and bouté on Athabasca River, Fort Simpson general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1840 - 1841); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1844 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1851); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852).

Basil Bottineau, from the Red River settlement, joined the HBC as a woodcutter in 1839. He spent the next thirteen years at various coastal forts and on the steamship Beaver. In May 1844, Bottineau (along with Louis Fallerdeau, Louis Trudelle and André Balthazard) made a deposition to the effect that the men of Fort Stikine had been engaged in a plot to take the lives of the HBC officers of the fort. Apparently, in the previous year they had conspired against Donald Manson, Charles Dodd and George Blenkinsop. Simpson subsequently dismissed the charges as simply revenge by Bottineau arising from a previous quarrel. In September 1845, Bottineau was sent up the Stikine River and reported on a potential site for a post. In 1850, while he was at Fort Rupert, Bottineau was made constable to Dr. John Sebastian Helmcken when the latter went to the Newitti village to demand the surrender of the natives who had killed three English seamen. The natives agreed to compensate in blankets, furs and other goods, according to custom. However, they refused to surrender and Bottineau, Linecous (an interpreter) and Helmcken returned to Fort Rupert empty handed. Later that year, in December, Bottineau was in charge of the canoe which took Helmcken to Victoria. He appeared to work at Fort Victoria until 1852 and his account showed movement until 1854. In May 1855, he appears to have struck out with two Canadians and nine Stikine natives to find gold in the Stikine area.

Bottineau had a family but the names of his Stikine native wife and children are not recorded. In July 1850, he fetched them from Stikine and brought them to Fort Rupert.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 10; FtVanASA 6-8; log of Beaver 2; FtVicASA 1-2; Simpson's June 16, 1845 Red River letter to McLoughlin, Ogden and Douglas, D.4/67, fos. 57-57d; FtVicCB 3; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; PPS: Helmcken, p. 320, 330

Bouchard, Elie (fl. 1820 - 1825) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Roch, Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1822 - 1823).

Elie Bouchard joined the HBC on May 8, 1820. He was in the Columbia District in 1821-1823 and may have been a member of the cross-country brigade. In outfit 1822-1823 he left for Canada and may have stopped at Norway House; he picked up his pay in Montreal. He continued employment in Athabasca until at least 1825, when he became a freeman.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; HBCCont

Bouchard, Olivier (fl. c. 1795 - 1850) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Lower Canada - c. 1795

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Steersman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1835); Steersman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Bouté, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1841); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1841); Untraced vocation, Cowlitz Farm (1841 - 1842).

Olivier (Jean Baptiste) Bouchard joined the HBC around 1817. For two years before coming to the Columbia, he was at Fort Chipewyan in Athabasca. In 1843 he retired and settled on Cowlitz Prairie but, around 1850, sold his claim to an American settler.

Bouchard was married twice and had two recorded children. His first marriage to Louise Tchelis [Chehalis] (?-1840), with whom he had a child, Jean Baptiste (c.1830-?), was formalized on February 4, 1839. Louise died on October 5, 1840. On January 18, 1841 he united with his second wife, Ange'lique Okanaya, the daughter of a Hawaiian father and Chinook mother. On June 7, 1842, he formalized the marriage. Their child was Cyprien (1844-?). Another child, Olivier (?-?) was born at an unknown date.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 19-20, 22; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-7; FtVanCB 9; BCA BCCR CCCath PPS: CCR 1a; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 18-19; Huggins, "Reminiscences of Puget", p. 243

Bouche, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Boucher] (fl. c. 1817 - 1852) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably New Caledonia [British Columbia] - c. 1817 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougal)

Fur trade employee

HBC Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1834 - 1838); Boule, New Caledonia (1838 - 1839); Boule, New Caledonia (1839 - 1840); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1839 - 1840); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1840 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843); Middleman and labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1851 - 1852).

François Bouche likely spent his early life in New Caledonia and joined the HBC in 1834, probably at one of the local posts. He spent the next nine years working at a variety of jobs at local posts. In 1843 he moved south and became a settler in the Willamette Valley, Oregon, where he raised a family. In 1851, he returned to work for the HBC at Fort Vancouver, likely doing odd jobs, and returned to Canada sometime in 1852.

François Bouche's family life is not entirely clear. He had three, possibly four, successive wives and at least three recorded children. His first wife, Costahna [?]/Contantina [?], was recorded in 1843, when, in the Fort Vancouver area, their child, Joseph (1843-43), was born and died on the same day. Wife Costahna, however, was likely the same as Thérèse, Porteuse (?-before 1851). With Thérèse (Costahna?), François had François Jr. (1844-47?) and Isabelle (1847-?). Wife Thérèse, however, died before 1851 as, on January 20, 1851, he married Henriette, Calapooya (?-c.1852); however, Henriette died shortly after. On April 19, 1852, François married his third or fourth wife, Marianne (?-?), of the Fort Vancouver area.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-15, 19-20, 31-32; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-7, 9; FtVicDS 1 PPS: CCR 1b, 2a; Boucher descendants
See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); McDougall, James (Relative);
Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother);
Boucher, Pierre (Brother)

Bouche, George Waccan [variation: Bereche] (fl. c. 1823 - 1864) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort St. James, New Caledonia - c. 1823 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougal)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Farmer, San Juan Island (1858); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1858 - 1861); Untraced vocation, San Juan Island (1858 - 1861); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1861 - 1862); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1862 - 1864); Untraced vocation, San Juan Island (1862 - 1864).

George Waccan Bouche worked off and on for the HBC. He moved south after 1854; by 1864 the Bouche family was living on San Juan Island. They were not living there by 1871.

George Waccan Bouche had one wife and four recorded children. On February 15, 1855, he married Cecile Aronhiowan (?-?) daughter of Ignace Aronhiowan and a Nass woman. Their children were William (1857-1858), William (1859-?), Elisabeth (c.1861-?) and Mary (c.1864-?).

PS: BCA FtAlex 1; FtVicASA 1-4, 8-10; BCA BCCR StAndC
See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); McDougall, James (Relative); Bouche, Francois (Brother); Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother)

Bouche (La Malice), Jean Baptiste [variation: Lamallice] (fl. c. 1789 - c. 1826) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Mackinac [Michigan] - c. 1789

Death: possibly Red River Settlement [Manitoba]

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826).

Jean Baptiste Bouche (Lamallice), brother to Paul Bouche, worked in New Caledonia in 1825-1826. As this Bouche entered the fur trade in 1808, he cannot be the Paul Bouche (La Malice) who is spoken of in Simon Fraser's Journals. The coincidental birth date may be just that, although below him in the York Factory records 1825-1826, p. 31, J.B. Boucher fils [c] is listed as being the younger. A mystery. Perhaps an error in entering. Jean Baptiste Bouche (Lamallice) eventually settled at Red River.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5

See Also: Bouche (La Malice), Paul (Brother)

Bouche, Joseph (c. 1833 - ?) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort St. James, New Caledonia - c. 1833 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougal)

Death: probably West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1857 - 1858); Middleman, New Caledonia (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, Thompson River (1861 - 1862); Labourer, Thompson River (1862 - 1865).

Joseph Bouche joined the HBC in 1857 and appears to have worked until 1865. By 1879, he was a farmer in the North Forks of the Thompson River area and by 1881 was listed as a labourer in the Lytton-Cache Creek area.

Joseph Bouche appears to have had two successive wives and one recorded child. His first wife was Mary (c.1849-?) of French descent. Their child was William (c.1872-?). On June 12, 1879, he married Marguerite Joyal-Lapratte (1839-?). No subsequent children have been traced.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5-13; BCA BCVS RBDM; VPL 1881 Canada Census, Yale District, Lytton, Cache Creek sub district

See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); Bouche, Francois (Brother); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother); McDougall, James (Relative)

Bouche, Louison [variation: Boucher] (c. 1822 - 1842) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: c. 1822

Death: Okanagan Dalles [Okanagan Falls, British Columbia] - May 1842

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, New Caledonia (1837 - 1842).

Louison Bouche joined the Hudson's Bay Company in 1837 but drowned (along with Canote Umphreville, Pierre Martineau, David Flett and André Areuhonianté) in 1842 at Okanagan Falls.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-7; YFASA 19-20, 22; FtVanCB 29

Bouche, William (c. 1842 - 1924) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort Alexandria, New Caledonia - c. 1845 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougal)

Death: Quesnel, British Columbia - July 1924

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1861 - 1862); Untraced vocation, Fort Alexandria (1864 - 1867).

William Bouche (a.k.a. Billy Bouchie), was a capable linguist who learned seven native languages. Upon the death of his father in 1850, he took over family responsibilities; and, from 1858 to 1862 worked for the HBC, sometimes carrying mail between Fort Alexandria and Fort St. James. In 1861 he worked temporarily for a C. Kenal but on March 1, 1862, he was fired from the HBC. As early as 1865 he was in the Quesnel area, for around that time he witnessed the hanging of the five natives deemed responsible for the Chilcotin uprising. In 1868 or 1869, he pre-empted land opposite the town of Quesnel, and ran a canoe ferry service across the river. There he continued to raise a family and died in 1924 of pneumonia.

William Bouche had one wife and thirteen or more children. In 1864 he married Lizette Allard (1842-1938), the daughter of Joseph Allard [2]. Their recorded children were Elizabeth (1866-?), Edward (1868-?), Casimir (1869-?), William Jr. (1870-?), Cecilia (1871-?), Charles (c.1873-1918), Louise (?-?), Morris (?-?), Amelia (c.1880-?), Sophie (c.1883-?), James (1872/1891?-?), Peter (1881-?) and Joseph (1888-1966).

Bouchie Lake and Bouchie Creek, near Quesnel, are named after William Bouche.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 6-13; FtAlexPJ 10; VPL Canada Census of 1901, Quesnel, B. C. SS: Laing, p. 329; G. R. Elliot, p. 50, 174; A Tribute to the Past, p. 10

See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); Allard, Joseph (Father-in-Law); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother); McDougall, James (Relative); Bouche, Francois (Brother)

Bouche (La Malice), Paul (fl. c. 1805 - 1806) (Mixed descent)

Death: possibly Red River Settlement [Manitoba]

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Trout Lake Post (1805).

By the time Paul Bouche (La Malice), brother to Jean Baptiste Bouche (La Malice) travelled with Simon Fraser into New Caledonia, he was not only an experienced canoeist but he regularly demonstrated why he had acquired the name La Malice. During the winter of 1805-1806 he was left at Trout Lake Post where friction developed between him and the other men. He appears to have had sex with Blais' woman. The men left him and made their way to Rocky Mountain Portage. That spring and summer he became quite ill and held up the Simon Fraser party. Even when he got better, he continued to quarrel with the party and beat his woman, living up to his name. He eventually settled in Red River.

PPS: SHdeSB Liste; Fraser, p. 16-18, 31, 177, 182-90, 199, 202-03, 205-16, 222, 232, 235-36, 239, 246, 249

See Also: Bouche , Jean Baptiste (Brother)

Boucher, Baptiste [variation: Baptiste Buche] (fl. 1807 - 1810) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Pacific Slopes (1807 - 1810) (with David Thompson).

Boucher (spelled Buche in the Thompson journals) was recorded on June 11, 1807 in David Thompson's journals as Thompson was about to cross the Rocky Mountains. He was probably the same Boucher who was at Rocky Mountain House, under Jules Maurice Quesnel, when Thompson arrived there on October 11, 1806. He was likely one of the three contemporary Jean Baptiste Boucher entries; but his exact identity is uncertain. While his fellow voyageurs were building Kootenae House in the summer of 1807, Boucher began work on an eighteen foot [5.5 m] wooden canoe. He stayed with Thompson until 1810, doing a variety of jobs including hunting, procuring fish, etc. His last entry was on March 30, 1810, in Saleesh country, when he was sent with Finan McDonald and Michel Bourdeaux with tobacco and ammunition to persuade the Saleesh Indians to hunt and make dried provisions.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Belyea, p. 106; ChSoc XL, p. 306; Coues, p. 219

Boucher, Charles (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Milieu, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); NWC Milieu, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Charles Boucher may have been in Montreal when he signed on with the PFC on June 5, 1810 to work as a middleman for five years in the Indian country; he first appeared in Company journals at Mackinac on August 1, 1810. He made his way overland as part of the Wilson Price Hunt expedition to Astoria where he arrived on February 19, 1812. At Astoria after the takeover, he joined the NWC on October 23, 1813, staying that winter at Spokane House.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 SS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105

Boucher, James [variation: Jem Bouché] (c. 1820 - 1910) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly New Caledonia - c. 1820 (born to Jean Baptiste "Waccan" Boucher and Nancy McDougal)

Death: probably Fort St. James, New Caledonia - April 1910

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, New Caledonia (1841 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1844 - 1850); Labourer, Fort St. James (1850); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1850 - 1878); Labourer, New Caledonia (1850 - 1878).

James Boucher is said to have inherited some of his father Waccan's leadership qualities. Raised in New Caledonia, young James joined the HBC in 1841 and, in 1844, following his brother François south, he became a settler in St. Paul in the Willamette River Valley, Oregon. There, in 1848, he married with the intention of raising a family. However, family tradition holds that on June 8, 1849 he shot and killed Joseph Plouffe, his wife's uncle and guardian, and fled north to familiar territory to begin his life again. Once again in New Caledonia, from 1851-1853, he appeared to work casually for the HBC and then steadily until his retirement. In 1851 at Fort St. James, James was instrumental in diffusing a potentially dangerous situation. When local Carrier Chief Kwah's successor, "the Prince", got in an altercation with Donald Manson and his son, John D. Manson over an alleged affair between Jean Marie Boucher and the Prince's first wife - the Prince was knocked unconscious. Seeking revenge against all whites for his humiliation, the Prince rallied the neighbouring native villages to fight for his honour. The members of Fort St. James prepared for a siege but James Boucher, acting as an intermediary, used his influence and repeated gifts of tobacco to diffuse the situation. So effective were his efforts that from that day forth there were no further problems. James Boucher raised a family and retired in June 1893, and lived in his own house at Fort St. James. It was recommended that he receive a pension but he probably didn't and spent his final years hunting and doing occasional jobs for the Company.

James Boucher had three successive wives and ten children. On July 24, 1848 in St. Paul, Oregon, he married Rosalie Plouffe, daughter of Antoine Plouffe. They had no recorded children in the short time they were together. In June 1868, in New Caledonia, he formalized his marriage to Maria Titnan (?-?), from Stella [British Columbia], and together they had Mariya/Maria (?-?), Ellen (1852-?), Nancy (?-?), Philomena (c.1856-?), Sophie (1857-?), Margaret (c.1855-?), Jane (c.1865-?), Jenny/Jennie (1865-?), Angela (c.1869-?) and William (c.1871-?). Maria Titnan died sometime before 1890; by 1896 he was living with his third wife, a Carrier woman.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 31-32; FtVicASA 1-16; FtAlexPJ 8; HBCABio; BCA BCCR StPetStLk; RCDioPG MarBap; VPL 1881 Canada Census, Ominica, HBC posts; BCA BCVS RBDM PPS: CCR 2b; information from family relations SS: Morice, The History of, p. 285; Homick, p. 40-41

See Also: Bird, James (Son-in-Law); Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); Plouffe, Antoine (Father-in-Law); Bouche, Francois (Brother); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother); McDougall, James (Relative)

Boucher, Jean Baptiste [1] (c. 1759 - 1824) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: c. 1759

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - October 1824

Fur trade employee

NWC Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Interpreter, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Trapper, Snake Party (1824).

Jean Baptiste Boucher appears to have been more than fifty years of age when he came to Fort George [Astoria] as interpreter for the NWC. Very little is known of his work but when he struck out from Flathead Post on February 10, 1824 on Alexander Ross' Expedition, the sixty-five year old was one of four of thirty-four trappers deemed to be "not worth equipping" (SnkCoPJ 1, fo. 1d). Seven months later in September, on the expedition, Boucher became sick and had to be carried on poles. As the men were not happy carrying him around in the sometimes rough Snake Country, Boucher tried riding a horse, and soon after, on October 12, 1824, he died. Alexander Ross' entry that day reflected some of Boucher's character.

This morning, after an illness of 20 days, died Jean Baptiste Boucher, aged 65 years, an honest and upright man (SnkCoPJ 1, fo. 53d).

According to Munnick, Jean Baptiste Boucher took Josephthe Kanhopitsa (des Chaudières) for his wife after her abandonment by John Clarke. After Jean Baptiste died, Josephthe married Joachim Hubert. (Josephthe's daughter Josephthe, who married John McKay, went by the name of her step-father, Boucher CCR, A-10).

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2 PPS: CCR 2a

See Also: Clarke, John (Relative); Hubert, Joachim (Relative); McKay, John (Son-in-Law)

Boucher (Waccan), Jean Baptiste [c] [variation: Bouche (Wakan)] (c. 1789 - 1849) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1789 (to a French Canadian father and Cree mother)

Death: Fort St. James, New Caledonia - August 1849

Fur trade employee

NWC Interpreter, New Caledonia (1806 - 1808); Interpreter, Simon Fraser (1808 - 1824); Interpreter, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1825 - 1849).

Jean Baptiste Boucher, a.k.a. the terrible Waccan, was feared as he was the enforcer of discipline and justice for the HBC. Boucher appears to have signed on with the NWC around 1803 and was with Simon Fraser in 1806 - marking the beginning of his time in New Caledonia. Although mainly an interpreter, he was a man of all trades; whatever he did, he excelled at, whether he was acting as an interpreter, guiding a canoe, running a dog train or making snow shoes. Although his status was neither that of a servant nor an officer, he had a house of his own, a most unusual arrangement at that time in New Caledonia. He was put in positions of trust, exacted punitive measures on those who murdered HBC employees, and roused the natives to exert themselves on behalf of the NWC and HBC, respectively. For example, in 1828 he avenged the murder of his half-brother David Livingston; in 1843 he was a member of the party that avenged the death of William Morwick, the postmaster of Fort Kilmaurs; and, in 1847, arrested deserter Joseph Jacques, who had hidden himself with the natives of Fraser Lake. If trouble arose at a particular post, he was sent off to create an air of stability and occasionally took charge of a post in the absence of an officer. Boucher could always be relied upon to obtain food for the Company and its employees even when food was scarce. Waccan, the enforcer, died on August 26, 1849 at Fort St. James, from a "relapse" (FtAlexPJ 8, fo. 37), probably complications of the measles.

Jean Baptiste Boucher had two successive wives and apparently had seventeen children. He first married an unnamed Carrier woman in 1811 but the relationship was short-lived. If they had children, their names have not been traced. He next married Nancy McDougal (?-?), the mixed descent daughter of clerk James McDougal. Thirteen of their seventeen children were François (1817-?), James Baptiste (c.1820-1910), Jane (c.1821-?), Jean Baptiste Jr. (c.1822-52),

George (c.1823-?), Felix (?-?), Sophie (c.1825-?), William (c.1828-1924), Ellen (1831-?), Jean Marie (c.1830-?), Joseph (c.1833-?), Charles (c.1844-?) and Emilia (c.1853-?).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA YFASA 1-2, 4-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-29; FtStJmsLS; McLlkRD 1; FtVanASA 1-8; FtAlexPJ 8; YFDS 21; FtVicASA 1-3, 10-11; HBCABio; BCA BCCR StPetStLk; OlofGH; BCGR-Marriage; PPS: Fraser; CCR 2b; HBRIS I, p. 430; Harmon, A Journal of Voyages, p. 165 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 253, 255; Family information from Boucher relatives

See Also: McDougall, James (Father-in-Law); Bouche, Francois (Son); Bouche, George Waccan (Son); Bouche, Joseph (Son); Bouche, William (Son); Boucher, James (Son); Boucher, Jean Marie (Son); Boucher, Pierre (Son); Crete, Edouard (probable Son-in-Law); Desmarais, Charles (Son-in-Law); Livingston, Duncan (probable Half-Brother); Boucher, Jean Baptiste (e) (possible Son); McBean, William (probable Son-in-Law)

Boucher, Jean Baptiste [d] [variation: Bouche] (fl. c. 1804 - 1844) (probably Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1822 - 1823); Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1827 - 1834); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1834 - 1837); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1838 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843+).

Jean Baptiste Bouche (d), a native apprentice and son of Jean Baptiste Bouche (c), joined the HBC around 1818 at the age of fourteen and appears to have spent his working career in New Caledonia as an interpreter. On December 1, 1842, he deserted and in 1843-1844, settled in the Willamette.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2, 7-9, 12-15, 19-20, 22, 24; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 2-8; YFDS 5a-7

Boucher, Jean Baptiste [e] [variation: Bouché] (c. 1841 - 1842) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1826 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougall)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Colville (1841 - 1844).

Native Baptiste Boucher (e) joined the HBC in 1841. He didn't last long, for he deserted on December 1, 1842 and thus forfeited his wages for that outfit. He appears to have re-enlisted. (This is possibly Jean Boucher, b. 1826 to Waccan and Nancy McDougall).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 13; YFASA 22

Boucher, Jean Marie [variation: Bouche] (c. 1826 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Fort St. James, New Caledonia - c. 1826 (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougall)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1844 - 1851); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1844 - 1851); Interpreter, Fort Alexandria (1851 - 1853); Labourer, New Caledonia (1853 - 1878); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1853 - 1878); Boute, New Caledonia (1853 - 1878).

Jean Marie Boucher, from Rupert's Land, was hired locally in 1844 and worked for many years for the HBC. At one point he was implicated in a relationship with one of the wives of "The Prince" (Kwah), successor as head chief of the Stuart Lake Indians which resulted in an altercation at the fort with Manson (see Morice pp 284-285). He worked until he was discharged in 1878.

The family life of Jean Marie Boucher is unclear. On June 11, 1850, he formally married Caroline Tatatz. In 1870 he married Julie Hinnatchu (c.1845-?), daughter of Castay, at St. Joseph's Church, Fort George. Still, on February 17, 1874, a Jean Marie Boucher married Sophie Natai (c.1854-?) at Fort St. James. To complicate matters further, on June 16, 1876, a Jean Boucher (?-?) married, claiming his father was Jean Marie and mother, Nana, a native woman of Stella, B. C.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-16; FtVanASA 9; FtAlex 8-9; HBCABio; BCA BCGR Marriage; FtAlex 1; BCCR OlofGH SS: Morice, The History of, p. 284-85

See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (Father); Bouche, Francois (Brother); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother); McDougall, James (Relative)

Boucher, Pierre [1] (c. 1793 - 1828) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1793

Death: Fort Nez Percés, Washington - January 1828

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828).

Pierre Boucher joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray, et al] on May 7, 1810 from Berthier to work at Fort William as a middleman, and re-engaged October 29, 1814 for three years of service in the Northwest. Quite likely he was the same Pierre Boucher who became involved in the fierce NWC/HBC rivalry resulting in the NWC occupation of its neighbouring HBC post on a peninsula on the south-west shore of Lac Ile-a-la-Crosse. There, he was cited for robbery and burglary, and in the fall of 1818 an HBC bench warrant was obtained from Montreal for his arrest. On June 18, 1819, HBC personnel lay in wait at a portage and took Boucher and three others, who were on their way from Cumberland House, as prisoners. A subsequent group of eight prisoners were taken to York Factory by canoe where they were dealt with. Another, possibly the same Pierre Boucher, from La Prairie de la Madeleine, joined the NWC [Joseph Lacroix and Matthew Nelson] on March 14, 1820 to work in Ile Drummond and Michillimackinac for two years; and, later, worked as a steersman and guide for the HBC in the English River area [Isle a la Crosse [1822-23] and English River [1824-26]]. Boucher went west to the Columbia with the York Factory Express in the fall of 1827. The next year, at Fort Nez Percés, two weeks before the Express was to return to York Factory, he died of unstated causes. His effects were sold, possibly to pay for his debt to the Company.

No record of Pierre Boucher's family has been traced.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA FtVanASA 1; YFASA 2, 4-5, 7; FtVanAB 10; YFDS 2b PPS: HBRS II, p. 284; E. Ermatinger, p. 114-15

Boucher, Pierre [2] [variation: Perish Bouche] (fl. 1849 - 1860) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Fort St. James, New Caledonia (born to Jean Baptiste Boucher)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort St. James (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1849 - 1850); Middleman, New Caledonia (1850 - 1852); Middleman, New Caledonia (1853 - 1854); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1854); Middleman, New Caledonia (1854 - 1860).

Pierre Bouche worked for the HBC for about eleven years in New Caledonia. Little is known of his character but, in September 1850, because Mr. Donald Manson did not pay attention to him, he deserted to an Indian camp. A. C. Anderson gave him a beating with his fists rather than whipping him.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-31; FtVicASA 1-7, 9; FtAlexPJ 8-9

See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father); Bouche, Francois (Brother); Bouche, George Waccan (Brother); Bouche, Joseph (Brother); Bouche, William (Brother); Boucher, James (Brother); Boucher, Jean Marie (Brother); Boucher, Pierre (Brother)

Bouchez, Vital (fl. 1848 - 1850) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Quebec

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Colville (1849 - 1850).

Vital Bouchez joined the HBC from La Prairie in 1848 and returned to Canada in 1850.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-31; FtVanASA 9

Bouisseau, Jean Baptiste [variation: Bovisseau] (c. 1793 - 1828) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Roch, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1793

Death: Hood Canal [Washington] - January 1828

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828).

Jean Baptiste Bouisseau joined the HBC in 1820 as a middleman, and came west with the returning York Factory Express in the fall of 1827. On December 2nd he was a member of a party that left Fort Vancouver for Fort Langley carrying dispatches. He and the party arrived at Fort Langley on December 24th and began the return journey on January 3, 1828. A short time later, while passing through the Hood Canal area, he and four other members of the party were killed by the Clallam Indians for their clothes and arms. When the news got back to his base, his effects were sold. Later that summer, an unauthorized punitive expedition sent out from Fort Vancouver to avenge the death of the five Company employees resulted in the deaths of twenty-two Clallam natives, the burning of their village, and the return of a captured native woman, who had been part of the original HBC party.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1; FtVanAB 10; YFASA 7-8; YFDS 2b PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 105 SS: HBRS III, p. 447

Boulanger, Charles [variation: Bellanger, Bolanger, Bulanger] (c. 1814 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Quebec City, Quebec - c. 1814 (born to Godefroy Bellanger)

Death: Fort Victoria - January 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Simpson (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1842); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1840); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1840); Freeman, Columbia Department (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1845 - 1848);

Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1849).

Charles Boulanger applied for a job in Quebec at les Cedres with F.N Blanchet in the fall of 1837 to work as a valet, no doubt because had some reading ability even though he could not write. However, because he had the temerity to ask for eight piastres a month he was rejected for the position. Nevertheless, a determined Boulanger joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838 travelling west with the priests that year. During the voyage he served as a route before crossing the Rockies. Once across, he almost drowned at the Dalles des Morts on the Columbia River in an accident which took the lives of twelve others. Soon after arriving at Fort Vancouver, near the end of 1838, he went north to Fort Simpson where he worked at the fort and on the steamer Beaver. At Fort Stikine he worked as a miller, laboured in the saw pits and made whale bone brooms. In the spring of 1842 Boulanger may have had knowledge of the plot to kill John McLoughlin Jr., and even though John McLoughlin Sr. had deemed Boulanger "a Bad character" (FtVanCB 29, fo. 6), it appears the twenty-eight year old French Canadian had little to do with the killing. In fact, during the evening he hid along with his family in the carpenter's shop. During the investigation, he swore out a deposition saying that he "saw the deceased much Intoxicated on Christmas Eve and on several Occasions tipsy" (FtVanCB 31, fo. 162d). Boulanger, and all the others suspected of complicity were kept in semi-confinement in various forts along the coast until 1844, when they were sent back from Fort Vancouver to York Factory to be dealt with there. No further punitive action took place for, in the following year, 1845, Boulanger returned to service from St. Thomas [Ontario] and even went back to Fort Stikine, much to the objection of John McLoughlin Sr. He stayed at the fort until 1848 and sailed to Victoria, where an ill Boulanger succumbed. As transactions continued on his account, he may have left a wife.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFDS 9; YFASA 19-20, 23, 25-32; FtVicASA 1-3; FtStikPJ 1; FtVanCB 29-31, 33; FtVanCB 29, B.223/b/29, fo. 6; FtVanCB 31, B.223/b/31, fo. 162d; FtVicCB 2 SS: Québécois in Orégon, p. 260

Boulard, Michel [variation: Boullard] (fl. 1813 - 1823) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Province of Quebec/Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Builder, Kootenae House (1807); Winterer with David Thompson, Rocky Mountains (1807 - 1811); PFC Employee, Pacific slopes (1811 - 1813); NWC Milieu, Thompson River (winter 1813 - 1814); Milieu, New Caledonia (1821); HBC Milieu, New Caledonia (1822 - 1823); NWC Summerman, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

Michel Boulard joined the NWC prior to April 1800, when he was found at in the upper Saskatchewan area with David Thompson. In the late Spring of 1807, he crossed the Continental Divide with Thompson and that summer helped to build Kootenae House. Thompson's opinions about Boulard were less than complimentary for, on July 22, 1807 when he failed to bring back meat to a hungry fort building crew, Thompson called him lazy and "a complete Scoundrel" (UBC-Koer, Thompson). Also, on September 11, 1807, when he was re-engaged for four-hundred Livres and no equipment, Thompson found Boulard "useful as an Interpreter in these troublesome Times, but good for nothing else, as no reliance can be placed in him" (UBC-Koer, Thompson). He was re-engaged on February 10, 1810, possibly in Montreal, and, on July 21 or 31, 1811 on Thompson's final run to Astoria, left Thompson's crew, in exchange for a Hawaiian, John Coxe. Boulard, by default, was then a member of Duncan McDougall's Astorian PFC crew. According to Thompson, who initiated the switch, Boulard by that time was well versed in Indian affairs, but weak for the hard labour of ascending the River. Matters did not go well for Boulard - he wanted Alexander Ross to purchase a native wife, whom he had befriended; instead, Ross horsewhipped him and they carried on. Boulard nonetheless stayed on in the area and when the NWC overtook the PFC, returned to his former employer but thereonafter his movements cannot be traced. He is on record as having transferred to the HBC in 1821. He headed north to Fort George but shortly after he appears to have left the Pacific slopes.

Michel Boullard's family have not been traced.

PS: HBCA NWCMA; NWCAB 9; UBC-Koer Thompson; HBCA YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10 PPS: Belyea, p. 55, 65; ChSoc XL, p. 365; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 113-14, 200-01

Boulton, Henry Edward (c. 1812 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Devon, England - c. 1812

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1836); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); 2nd mate, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837); Captain, Valleyfield (ship) (1842).

Henry E. Boulton worked for ten years with the East India Company before he signed a five year contract with the HBC's naval department in 1834 as 2nd mate on the barque Ganymede. After he sailed to the Northwest coast he transferred to Fort Vancouver and, until the barque Columbia arrived, was unattached to any ship. On June 18, 1836, two months after the arrival of the Columbia, he became 2nd mate and returned to England on it. However, in 1837 he refused to do certain duties and was almost not paid. Boulton did not return to the Pacific Northwest for another four years, making Hudson Bay runs on the Prince of Wales, Prince Rupert, and Prince Albert. In December 1841 he was in charge of the chartered vessel Valleyfield, and in 1842 brought out boilers for the Beaver and supplies for the Russians at Sitka.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 7; YFASA 15-16; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3; HBCA Henry E. Boulton search file PPS: HBRS IV, p. 160n

Bourdeaux, Michel (fl. 1811) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: possibly Snake Country, Pacific Northwest – Fall of 1811

Fur trade employee

NWC Interpreter for David Thompson, Pacific Slopes (1810 - 1811).

Michel Bourdeaux is a mystery and may be the same as Michel Bourdon. He first appeared on record on March 30, 1811 as a member of a small party trying to encourage the "Saleesh" Indians with ammunition and tobacco to provide food for Thompson's party. On July 3, 1811 he set out as an interpreter on Thompson's voyage to the mouth of the Columbia. In the late fall or early winter of that year, according to Thompson's latterly written narrative, Bourdeaux and Michel Kinville got caught up in a Saleesh-Peigan altercation and both were shot dead. Although Thompson mourned the loss of his "brave faithful and intelligent" (ChSoc XL p. 393) companions, a Michel Bourdon/Bourdeaux turned up at nearby Flathead post in July 1813 but was eventually killed by the Blackfoot (Peigan?) in Snake Country. The confusion of names may be attributed to a lapse in Thompson's memory in his narrative.

PPS: Belyea, p. 142; ChSoc XL, p. 305-06, 343, 393

Bourdignon, Antoine (c. 1780 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Province of Quebec - c. 1780

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Okanagan (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [New Caledonia]/Thompson River (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Middleman, Thompson River (1826 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Colville (1829 - 1830); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831).

Antoine Bourdignon entered the fur trade around 1804 and was first recorded on the Pacific slopes in 1818 when he came across the Rockies in a NWC party headed by Angus Bethune and James McMillan. In 1821, he transferred to the HBC in the Columbia area. Archibald McDonald described him in his Thompson River District Report as being "a careful man, but weak" (HBRS X, p. 229).

Little is known of Bourdignon's family life but in 1827 he was noted at Thompson River as having one unnamed wife and one daughter.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 2, 9; BCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4; YFASA 1-10; FtKampJ 2; YFDS 2a, 3a-4a; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1; PPS: HBRS X, p. 229

Bourdon, Michael [variation: Bourdeau, Bordoe] (? - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Salmon River [Idaho] - 1823

Freeman

NWC Freeman interpreter, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1813 - 1814); Freeman, Utah area (1819);

HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Trapper, Snake Party (1823).

Michael Bourdon had been in the fur trade for some time before July 27, 1813 when, as a freeman, he was hired on by the NWC as an interpreter in the Columbia. He spent that winter at Flathead Post, and although records of him do not exist, he likely continued working on the Pacific slopes for the next several years. Considered a valuable man in the fur trade, he explored and named Bear River [Utah] in 1819 after the number of bears that were there. In the summer of 1822, he was engaged by Alexander Kennedy to act as a trapper, and left for the Snake Country; on September 13, 1822, he returned to Spokane House from the Snake Country with two of his party killed and two wounded by the Blackfoot. Undeterred, a week later, he was off in a south-easterly direction to hunt beaver until the fall. In 1823, he accompanied Finan McDonald into the Snake Country and, along with five others, was killed by Blackfeet while trapping in the upper Salmon River [eastern Idaho].

Michel Bourdon's family have not been traced.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; YFASA 1; FtSpokPJ 1; Finan McDonald's April 5, 1824 Spokane House letter to J. G. McTavish, B.239/c/1, [killed on 1823 expedition] fo. 124d; SnkCoPJ 2, 3 PPS: HBRS III, p. 24

Bourdon, Pierre (fl. 1821 - 1825) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lavaltrie, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825).

Pierre Bourdon worked for the HBC on the Pacific slopes and, in 1825, he joined the Express and returned to Montreal.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10, 12; YFASA 1-5

Bourgeau, Joseph (c. 1807 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption/St. Paul District of Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1807 (born to Joseph Bourgeau and Angelique Henry)

Death: California, United States - July 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1829 - 1835); Personal servant to P. S. Ogden, New Caledonia (1835 - 1836); Middleman, New Caledonia (1836 - 1839); Boute, New Caledonia (1839 - 1842); Boatbuilder, New Caledonia (1839 - 1842); Boatbuilder, Fort Alexandria (1842); Boute, New Caledonia (1843); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1849+); Boatbuilder, New Caledonia (1843).

Joseph Bourgeau (brother to Silvan Bourgeau) joined the HBC from L'Assomption in 1829. He appears to have served out his contracts in both the Columbia and New Caledonia districts. In 1833, Bourgeau accompanied William F. Tolmie, who thought him unreliable, and George Heron, who thought he was lazy (CCR 1, A10). He settled in the Willamette Valley and went to the gold fields of California where he died. He was buried on July 31, 1849.

Joseph Bourgeau married Angele Lafantasie, daughter of Jacques Lafantasie and Susan Okanogan; together they had four children: Rose (?-?), Joseph (1844-?) and Marie Anne (1848-1849). Upon his death, his widow, Angele, married Theodore Gervais.

PS: HBCA YFDS 3b, 4b-7, 11-13; FtVanASA 2-7; YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-20, 23; FtAlexPJ 5; PPS: CCR 1b, 2a, 2b, 3a
See Also: Bourgeau, Silvan (Brother); Lafantasie, Jacques (Father-in-Law)

Bourgeau, Silvan [variation: Cyfois Bargeau] (c. 1811 - 1871) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption or the St. Paul District of Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1811 (born to Joseph Bourgeau and Angelique Henry)

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - June 1871

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1834 - 1835); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1842); Settler, Willamette (1842+).

Silvan Bourgeau (brother of Joseph) joined the HBC in 1829 as a middleman. He served thirteen years at Fort Vancouver and elsewhere before settling in the Willamette on June 30, 1842. The following year, on May 2, 1843 (and appearing as Cyfois Bargeau), he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. His land claim was a few miles above St. Louis, Oregon. He died in 1871 and was buried in the St. Paul, Oregon, cemetery.

Silvan Bourgeau had two recorded wives and seven children. On February 11, 1839, he married a Chinook native woman, Josephthe/Josette Sok (c.1815-57) who died on May 8, 1857 and was buried in the St. Paul cemetery. Their children were Betsy/Elizabeth (1833-?), Helene (?-[m.1856]-?), Jean Baptiste (c.1838-?), Marie (?-?), Madelaine (c.1845-?) an unnamed son (?-1849), and Louis (1850-?). After Josephthe's death and on December 28, 1857, Silvan married Angele Chehalis (first wife of J. B. Perrault until c. 1857) and appeared to have no more children.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-21; YFDS 3b, 4b-7, 12; FtVanASA 2-8; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co.; PPS: CCR 1a, 2b, 2c SS: Holman, p.115
See Also: Bourgeau, Joseph (Brother); Perrault, Jean Baptiste (Relative)

Bourke, Joseph (fl. 1849 - 1862) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Middleman, Thompson River (1852 - 1857); Middleman, Thompson River (1858 - 1859); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1859 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1861 - 1862).

Joseph Bourke joined the HBC around 1849 and, for part of the time, was a member of the cross-country Brigade.

Joseph Bourke had a wife for he had one son (1850-?) and a daughter (1857-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-7, 9-11; HBCABio; BCA FtAlex 1

Bouvet, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1798 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1799

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1829).

François Bouvet's career in the fur trade as a clerk and blacksmith was cut short by rheumatism. The twenty-one year old joined the NWC on January 3, 1820 and the following year transferred to the HBC. In 1823 he was working as a blacksmith at York Factory, where he worked until 1826. Bouvet then travelled to the Columbia where he was supposed to work for the HBC as a blacksmith. During his first year at Fort Vancouver he likely worked within the pickets at its initial location on the bluff above the present plains location. However, during 1827-1828 he suffered from severe rheumatic pains which he aggravated by drinking and so was considered an invalid. In 1828, he was given six months wages out of York Factory, as he was considered "an object of charity". The following years, in 1829, he was not able to go out with the Express and so, on July 1, 1829 went out with the slower cross-country Brigade so as to cross the mountains in the fall. Finally, in 1830, he was awarded £45. Bouvet has not been traced after that.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 5a; HBCA YFDS 2a, 3a; FtVanASA 1; YFASA 7-9; FtVanAB 10, 15; HBCCont; FtVanCB 18; HBCABio

Bowen, William (fl. 1853 - 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd officer, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1853 - 1854).

William Bowen, who worked for the HBC on the Mary Dare, suffered from the brutalities of Captain William Mouat. On April 22, 1854, during the return voyage to London, Bowen was beaten on the face by Mouat. The 1st mate was so concerned that he wrote a deposition about the event in the back of the log.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-2; log of Mary Dare 4

Bowers, John (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1826); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

John Bowers sailed twice to the Northwest Coast as an HBC seaman.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann 1; log of Eagle 1

Bowithick, Joseph (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Bowsman, Willamette Post/Wallace House (1813 - 1814); Hunter, Willamette Post/Wallace House (1813 - 1814).

Joseph Bouwithick appears to have re-engaged with the NWC on August 1, 1813 and wintered that year at Willamette House. He was to be free at Fort des Prairies on August 1, 1814 and may have returned there.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10

Bowling, Thomas [variation: Bowline] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Thomas Bowling made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of the Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Boyer (Laderoute), Andre [standard: André] (fl. 1821 - 1823) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1823).

André Boyer (Laderoute) worked for the HBC in New Caledonia for two years, and, in 1823, picked up his pay in Montreal, indicating his return to that city.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2

Boyer, Joseph (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1844).

Joseph Boyer joined the HBC in Montreal in 1841 and returned to Canada in 1844.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 23

Boys, Elias (fl. 1846 - 1850) (British: English)

Birth: probably Dorset, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1849); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1849); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1849); Seaman, Harpooner (barque) (1849 - 1850).

Elias Boys shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and sailed to the coast on the barque Cowlitz. Little is mentioned of him, but on January 2, 1846 on the voyage out, he was thrown from the wheel in a storm and badly lacerated his hand. On April 16, 1849 at Fort Langley, he was loading on the Cadboro in the rain when he ordered the two apprentices, Robert Allud and James Weyland, to cease working under such conditions. They went back to work after they were told by the captain that what they were doing was wrong. He was temporarily transferred back to Fort Vancouver, but on June 11, 1849 he exchanged with William Berwick of the barque Harpooner, and returned to Europe.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-30; YFDS 19-20; log of Cadboro 6; FtVicASA 1-2

Boys, William (fl. 1846 - 1847) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1848); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1848).

William Boys was a competent carpenter with the HBC but his employment was troublesome. On October 15, 1847, after coming out from England on the brig Mary Dare [James Cooper], Boys was ordered ashore, probably in the Vancouver Island area, to work at rough spars for top gallant masts. He went ashore but refused to work; he then attacked Cooper, who had gone to question him. Consequently, Boys was put in irons aboard ship but, after attacking both Cooper and William Mouat with the irons, was taken ashore and put in the blockhouse. He was discharged and sent back to England as a passenger on the barque Columbia, however, at his own request, and with the consent of the British Consul, was discharged in Honolulu.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27; FtVanCB 36; log of Columbia, 9 PPS: HBRS vol. XXXII, p. 15

Braguiere, Narcisse (fl. 1821 - 1822) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822).

Narcisse Braguiere was probably a member of the HBC cross-country Brigade in 1821-1822 for he returned to Montreal in that outfit.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1

Brancheau, Thomas [variation: Branchaud] (c. 1818 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup or Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1818

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Hall (1845 - 1850).

Thomas Brancheau joined the HBC in 1839 and worked with the Snake Party as a comer and goer and possibly at Fort Hall until 1850, at which point he returned to Canada. Shortly after that he returned to the Columbia where he settled.

At Walla Walla, Brancheau met and married a Whitman Mission pupil, Nez Perces native Angelique Koatsteps, and together they had Angelique (c.1845-?), Sophie (1852-1854), Louise (1855-?), and Genevieve (1865-?). They appeared to have moved to Frenchtown in 1855. According to oral tradition they also raised Paul and Louis Beauchemin after probably one parent (unlikely two) was killed. (According to the CCR, the 1860 census has Thomas being married to an Indian, Rosalie, with children Thomas, Rosalie, Francis, Joseph and Antoine; but, this may be another family unless Thomas had two simultaneous families).

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-32; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6-9 PPS: CCR 1b, 7a, 7b

Brands, Abraham [variation: Alexander] (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849).

Abraham or Alexander Brands shipped with the HBC on September 6, 1848 as a seaman and sailed to the coast on the barque Columbia. On May 6, 1849 at Fort Vancouver, he along with eight others from the vessel deserted for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 10; P. S. Ogden's May 16, 1849 Fort Vancouver letter to Archibald Barclay, Correspondence, A.11/70, [deserted to join American parties] fos. 368-69; YFASA 30-32

Brannan, James [variation: Brennan] (fl. 1847 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849).

James Brannan joined the HBC barque Vancouver in London on September 27, 1847 and sailed to the coast. After the vessel was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia on May 7, 1848, Brannan and others had to be assigned elsewhere. Consequently, on November 1, 1848, he began work at Fort Vancouver. Three months later, on February 1, 1849 he deserted, probably for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 28; FtVanASA 9; YFDS 19

Brasby, William (fl. 1847 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1848); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1848 - 1849); Cook, Cadboro (schooner) (1848 - 1849); Cook, Columbia (barque) (1849 - 1850).

William Brasby joined the HBC in London on September 22, 1847 and sailed to the coast on the Vancouver. As the Vancouver was wrecked on May 7, 1848 at the mouth of the Columbia, Brasby had to be assigned to other vessels. On December 12, 1848, as the cook William Kingston was continuously ill, Brasby took on the role of cook, a job which he held until he arrived back in London on April 18, 1850.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 28-30; YFDS 19-20; FtVicASA 1-2; log of Cadboro 6; log of Columbia 10

Brasconnier, Jean Baptiste (c. 1803 - c. 1862) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Death: probably British Columbia - c. 1862

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort St. James (1828 - 1830); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861).

Jean Baptiste Brasconnier, who joined the HBC from Berthier in 1828, worked in New Caledonia for his entire career. His exact posting is difficult to follow but, in 1842, he was stationed at Fort Connolly. After his death, around 1862, it would appear that surviving members of his family carried on transactions with the HBC for a number of years.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; FtVanASA 2-8; FtVicASA 1-15; FtAlexAB 1; YFDS 3a-7, 16; SS: Morice, The History of, p. 262-63

Brassard, Pierre (c. 1810 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lanoraie, Lower Canada - c. 1810

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1829 - 1830); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1835).

Pierre Brassard joined the HBC in 1828 or 1829 and worked in present day British Columbia until 1835.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-14; YFDS 3b, 4b-5c; FtVanASA 2

Brazeau, Joseph E. (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver sundries accounts (1853 - 1854).

Joseph E. Brazeau appeared on the Fort Vancouver 1853-1854 sundries account with an undesignated position and may have been a member of the cross-country Brigade. He was assigned to the Northern Department.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 9

Breck, William (fl. 1832 - 1835) (probably American)

Birth: probably Boston, MassachusettsFur trade employee

Wyeth Gunsmith, Wyeth's 1st Expedition (1832 - 1833); HBC Employee, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (1833).

William Breck, from the Boston area, came to the Pacific slopes as part of the 1st expedition of Nathaniel J. Wyeth. He had left Boston on March 11, 1832 and arrived at Fort Vancouver on October 29th of that year. As the expedition was a singular failure, Breck worked for the HBC at Fort Vancouver over the winter and into 1833. In late September or early October 1833 he shipped on the Dryad as passenger to the Hawaiian Islands; but, while he was at Golden Gate harbour [California], reshipped, along with Phineas Whittier and John Sinclair, on the whaler Helvetius (which was loading hides), as the vessel would arrive sooner in Boston.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-14; YFDS 5b; ShMiscPap 14 PPS: Overmeyer, p. 99

Brenique, Henrie (c. 1805 - 1830) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1805Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - October 1830*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830).

Henrie Brenique was hired on by the HBC in 1830 on a three year contract but drowned in the Columbia River October 25, 1830. A short career.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a; YFASA 19; FtVanAB 28

Bridger, James (1804 - 1881) (American)

Birth: Richmond, Virginia - March 1804 (born to William Bridger and Chloe Bridger)Death: Little Santa Fe, Missouri - July 1881*Fur trade employee

Ash. Employee, William Henry Ashley's Trading Expedition (1822 - 1826); SJ & S Employee, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1827 - 1830); RMFC Partner, Rocky Mountain Fur Company (1830 - 1834); Partner, Snake Country (1831); FSB Partner, Fort Bonneville (1836); Ash. Employee, American Fur Company (1838 - 1843).

Although James Bridger's fur trade career took place largely east of the Rockies, he nonetheless had a significant presence west of the Continental Divide. As a youth he apprenticed to a local blacksmith in St. Louis [Missouri] and in 1822, joined William H. Ashley and the fur trade ascending the Missouri River. In the autumn of 1824, after crossing the Continental Divide, he encountered Great Salt Lake and is credited with realizing the potential of the South Pass. Around 1827, he joined Smith, Jackson and Sublette and on August 4, 1830, he, Thomas Fitzpatrick, Milton G. Sublette, Henry Fraeb and Jean Baptiste Gervais purchased the company, becoming partners in the new Rocky Mountain Fur Company. On December 22, 1831, Bridger was part of a RMFC party of seventy, led by Fraeb, Gervais and Sublette, which camped near the junction of the Salmon and Lemhi rivers not far from a HBC camp led by John Work and an AFC camp led by Lucien Fontenelle. In 1832 he received an iron Blackfoot arrow in the back and it was not extracted until 1835 at the Rendezvous at Green River by the missionary Dr. Marcus Whitman, who happened to be passing through. In 1834, when the RMFC partnership dissolved, he formed a new partnership with Fitzpatrick and Sublette and in 1837, guided Fontenelle in the Green River area. In 1838 he formed an affiliation with the AFC. In 1843 he and Louis Vasquez founded Fort Bridger, an emigrant supply fort, but he was forced to abandon it to the Mormons in 1853, having fled because he was accused of having supplied the natives with guns and ammunition. In his later years he drifted into government service and was a guide for many official and unofficial expeditions. Late in his life he took up farming near Westport, Missouri (now part of Kansas City). He died on his farm in 1881 and was buried next to his sons. On December 11, 1904, his remains were removed to Independence, Missouri and a seven foot [2.1 m] monument erected at the head of his grave.

James Bridger had three successive wives and seven children. In 1835 he married Cora, daughter of Flathead chief Insala. Their children were Mary Ann (1836-1847?), Felix (1841-?) and Josephine (1846-?). Cora died in 1846. In 1848 he married an unnamed Ute native who died in 1849 shortly after giving birth to their only child, Virginia Rosalie (1849-?). In 1850 he married an unnamed Shoshone, daughter of Chief Washaskie. Their two children were Mary Ann (1853-?) and William (1857-?).

Fort Bridger State Park, Bridger Creek, Bridger Ferry, Bridger Lake, Bridger Mountain, Bridger National Forest, Bridger Pass, Bridger Trail and Bridger Wilderness, all in Wyoming as well as the city of Bridger and the Bridger Mountains of Montana are named after James Bridger. Fort Bridger has been reconstructed on the original site as a tourist attraction.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 11 SS: Dodge, p. 5-6; Alter; Insert, p. 252-271; Chittenden, p. 257

Brieson, Charles A. [variation: Samuel Breazen, Brisson] (fl. 1835) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1835); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836); Steward, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836).

Charles Brieson came to the Northwest Coast as a steward on the HBC vessel Ganymede. However, in September 1835, a month after his arrival at Fort Vancouver and for unexplained reasons, he left Fort Vancouver to return to England as a passenger and steward on the Dryad. He would have arrived back in London April, 1836.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 7, 14; log of Ganymede 3; YFASA 15, 17; log of Dryad 2

Briggs, John (fl. 1855 - 1861) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856); Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1860 - 1861).

John Briggs made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal as a ship's boy or apprentice and returned again as a seaman.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Princess Royal 7

Briggs, Joseph (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

Joseph Briggs joined the HBC naval department as a carpenter on September 8, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. He arrived back at the London docks on February 13, 1829 and Briggs was discharged the following day.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1
See Also: Briggs, William (possible Relative)

Briggs, William (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829); Apprentice, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

William Briggs, who is quite possibly related to above Joseph Briggs, joined the HBC as a ship's boy on September 8, 1827, and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. He was discharged in London, one week after Joseph.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1
See Also: Briggs, Joseph (possible Relative)

Brisbois, Augustin (c. 1769 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Province of Quebec - c. 1769

Death: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825).

Augustine Brisbois was a long time employee of the fur trade, joining it in 1794. He was likely with Alexander Henry the Younger between 1803-1808. In 1816 he was a guide and was at the capture of Fort William, and in 1821 was working at an inland post. Some time later he became an employee of the HBC, and in 1825, at the end of his contract with the HBC, he returned on the Express to Montreal where he was paid. He returned to Red River where, between 1830-1836 he was employed on the experimental farm. He appears to have retired in 1836 at the age of sixty-seven.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1; HBCCont; YFASA 3-5; FtVanAB 1; HBCABio

Brisbois, Charles (? - 1847) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Prairie du Chien [Wisconsin] - 1798 (born to Michel Brisbois and Domitelle Gaultier de Verville)

Death: Fort Crawford [Prairie du Chien], Wisconsin - August 1847

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Fort Alexandria (1820 - 1821).

Charles Brisbois left the place of his birth on the Mississippi, the old fur trading centre of Prairie du Chien, with his uncle Henry M. Fisher Senior to avoid the conflict of the War of 1812 while the rest of his family stayed, remaining neutral. In British territory he joined the NWC as a clerk in 1816 and by 1820-1821 he was on the Pacific slopes. At the time of coalition, he joined the HBC and from that point served east of the Rockies from 1821-1842 in the Athabasca, Mackenzie, and Cumberland Districts. Throughout his tenure, he never sufficiently mastered the English language and wrote his journals in French. After retiring in 1842 back to Prairie du Chien, he tried unsuccessfully to re-enter the service of the HBC. He later became a soldier at Fort Crawford, Wisconsin Territory and died there in 1847.

Charles Brisbois had one wife Ann (?-?), three sons and four daughters. Their children were Edmond (?-?), Michel (?-?), Edward (?-?), Ann (?-?), Charlott (?-?), Adelaide (?-?) and Thérèse (?-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; Wills; SimpsonCB PPS: HBRS III, p. 429-30; HBRS XXX, p. 201n

Brisbois, Olivier (c. 1822 - 1883) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1822

Death: Frenchtown [Lowden], Washington Territory - September 1883

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Snake Party (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843+); Middleman, Fort Hall (1843 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Hall (1848 - August 6, 1849).

Olivier Brisbois joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838 and is known as being a particularly tough individual. In mid winter, December 1839, he journeyed alone and on foot carrying a message five hundred miles [804.7 km] from Fort Vancouver to Fort Hall. He deserted some months after on November 1, 1840. Brisbois eventually became a Willamette settler and, on May 2, 1843, voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. In 1849 he worked briefly with the HBC but he became free at Fort Hall on August 6, 1849 and in 1850 he was back being a farmer in Marion Co., Oregon. He eventually settled in Frenchtown and was a Corporal in the Indian War. He died in 1883 and was buried at the St. Rose Cemetery September 6, 1883.

He was married twice and had nine children. His first wife was native Catherine Cayuse (?-c.1850) with whom he had a daughter, Catherine (1847-?) and son, Olivier Jr. (?-?). His second marriage, on February 23, 1852 at St. Louis (Oregon), was to Jane Clementia Flett (?-1902) (daughter of Thomas Flett and Nancy Coutennay). Their recorded children were Jean Thomas (1853-?), François (1860-?), Catherine Jane (c.1863-?), Nazaire Benoni (1867-?), Martha Emily (1870-?) and two more unnamed children.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFDS 11, 20; YFASA 19-20, 24-29; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co.; Scrapbook of newspaper clippings PPS: CCR 1b, 3a, 7b, 7c SS: Holman, p.115

Brissotte, Hypolite [variation: Brissete, Brissette] (c. 1792 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1792

Death: probably Canada East [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Miller, Fort Colville (1832 - 1835); Carpenter, Fort Colville (1832 - 1835).

Hypolite Brissote joined the fur trade in 1816 or 1817. From 1818-1831 he worked at a variety of posts east of the Rockies and in 1831-1832 he was likely working the Brigade route for the Hudson's Bay Company - in late 1831 he was found in the Columbia and early 1832, in Canada. He spent the next three years in the Columbia as a middleman working largely around the grain mill. From 1836-1838, he was a carpenter in Red River and in 1838 was found in Canada. He likely retired at that point for he has not been traced after that.

Hypolite Brissotte's wife was Archange L'Hirondelle (?-?). Their children have not been traced.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c; HBCABio

Brodie, Robert (fl. 1846 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1849).

Robert Brodie shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and made one return voyage to the coast. Little is known of Brodie other than an incident which happened on September 22, 1847. On that date, he and two others were lowering the top gallant mast which accidentally slipped and killed George Bigmore. Brodie would have arrived back in London on May 24, 1849.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28; log of Cowlitz 6

Brooks, Alfred (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Alfred Brooks joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Brooks, James (fl. 1850 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1849).

James Brooks shipped on with the HBC in London around September, 1848 as a steward aboard the barque Columbia. On the voyage out he received a nasty wound on the head in a fight with cook John Phillips - a few days later he admitted to stealing liquor and was replaced by Andrew Walker. On May 6, 1849, while the Columbia was at Fort Vancouver, Brooks and eight others all demanded a discharge, but couldn't wait and deserted for the gold fields of California anyway.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 3; P. S. Ogden's May 16, 1849 Fort Vancouver letter to Archibald Barclay, Correspondence, A.11/70, [deserted to join American parties] fos. 368-69; YFASA 30-31

Brooks, Richard [variation: Brookes] (fl. 1832 - 1835) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834 - 1835).

Richard Brooks joined the HBC in London in 1832 as a seaman and came to the coast where he worked on coastal shipping. He arrived back in England on June 4, 1835.

PS: HBCA log of Ganymede 1; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 14

Broquino, Miguel (fl. 1851 - 1852) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Miguel Broquino made one return voyage to the coast as an ordinary seaman on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Brotchie, William (1799 - 1859) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Caithness, Scotland - 1799

Death: Fort Victoria (Victoria), British Columbia - February 1859

Maritime officer

HBC Seaman, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1826); Cook, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1826); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Cook, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); 2nd mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); 2nd mate, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834); 1st mate, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1835); Master, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1836); Master, Lama (brig) (1836 - 1837); Master, Cadboro (schooner) (1837 - 1838); Master, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1840); Master, Cowlitz (barque) (1841 - 1842); Master, Beaver (steamer) (1842 - 1843); Master, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844); Captain, Albion (barque) (1849).

William Brotchie, described as a "good-natured, even-tempered man," (Helmcken, p. 327) joined the HBC in 1824 on the William & Ann and became cook when the ship's cook deserted in Rio de Janeiro. Brotchie began his work in the Columbia on August 18, 1830 and, on September 15, 1835, assumed the role of ship's captain, sailing the Nereide and Vancouver to the British Isles. At an unknown date he ran ashore off Dallas Road, Victoria giving the name Brotchie Ledge to the reef. He lost his vessel Albion, however, when he became involved in the lumbering business and, under licence from the HBC and the Admiralty, cut timber for spars illegally at New Dungeness, Washington. American authorities seized and sold the ship, creating something of an international incident. The portly captain then went to Fort Rupert to cut spars but couldn't ship the products to Europe for lack of ships. He tried to dispose of them in San Francisco in 1855 and 1856 without luck. Unable to sell his well-made spars to the British Navy and not being able to raise enough money to charter his own ship to Europe, he faced ruin. In 1858 he was appointed Harbour-Master and became a member of Victoria's Pioneer Cricket Club; as well, he purchased one hundred acres [40.5 ha] in the Cowichan District. He was credited with introducing from England the "Brotchie" potato (Walbran, 64-65), an early kidney variety. Brotchie died in Victoria at sixty years of age and was buried there on March 2, 1859.

William Brotchie's family life is difficult to trace. A Charles Brotchie (c.1846-?), likely a son, later lived in the Fort Rupert/Alert Bay area.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann 1; FtVanASA 2-9; YFDS 4a-5b, 6-7, 10; YFASA 12-13, 15-19, 23; log of Nereide 1; log of Dryad 1; ShMiscPap 7; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVicASA 2-3; BCA BCGR AbstLnd; BCCR CCCath; Van-PL Colonist, March 5, 1859, p. 3 SS: Huggins, "Reminiscences of Puget", p. 266-286; Labonte, p. 265; Smith, Reminiscences, p. 327; Lamb, "Early Lumbering on", p. 31-53; Pethick, Victoria, The Fort, p. 206; Walbran, p. 64-65; Helmcken, p. 327

Brouillet, Hypolite (c. 1812 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Barthelemy (d. of Montreal), Lower Canada - c. 1812

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Blacksmith, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1833); Blacksmith, Fort Colville (1833 - 1834); Blacksmith, Fort Colville (1834 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Colville (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Colville (1837 - 1839); Coureur de rouine, Fort Colville (1839 - 1842).

Hypolite Brouillet joined the HBC in 1830 and for the first four years, worked as a blacksmith. By 1842 he left the Columbia and crossed the Rockies for Canada but returned to live at Champoege, Oregon.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-7; YFDS 4a-7; YFASA 11—15, 19-21; OHS 1849 Census, Oregon Territory, Champoege

Brousseau, Bazile [variation: Brazeau, Brusseau, Brosseau, Brasseau] (fl. 1810 - 1816) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Province of Quebec/Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Milieu, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); NWC Milieu, Fort Okanagan (1812 - 1813); Milieu, Willamette House (1813 - 1814); Milieu, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Bazile Brousseau likely first joined the PFC in Lachine, Quebec, for he appeared there on Company records on July 6, 1810. He came overland with the Wilson Price Hunt expedition arriving in Astoria February 18, 1812. When the NWC took over the PFC, Brousseau had not received his wages by the spring. Much against the wishes of the NWC, he announced on March 27, 1814 that he was going to go to Montreal to sue the now defunct Astor company for his wages. As a result, he left April 4, 1814, with the Brigade for Montreal and two years later, on May 1, 1816, signed a NWC contract to work for three years at Fort William as a middleman. He may have returned to the Pacific slopes as Brousseau, dit Aland but this cannot be verified.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; SHdeSB Liste SS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105 PPS: Coues, p. 874

Brousseau (LaFleur), Bazile [variation: Brazil, Bazil Brusseau, Brasseau] (c. 1810 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Pontigny, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1810

Death: possibly Fraser Valley, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, Fort Langley (1833 - 1834); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Langley (1836 - 1845); Dairyman, Fort Langley (1845 - 1859).

Bazile Brousseau (LaFleur) signed on with the HBC in 1833 from the parish of St. Anne/Varenes. He spent considerable time at Fort Langley and was in charge of the dairy where he milked cows, made butter and looked after the herd. In 1846, along with several others, he tried unsuccessfully to claim land around Fort Nisqually. His contract in Fort Langley ended in 1859 at which point he appears to have retired. By 1881, he was living with the James Ritchie family in the Fraser Valley. The date and place of his death has not been traced.

Bazil Brousseau had two, possibly three wives and possibly four children. His first wife was a Cowichan woman with whom he had Basil Jr. (1841-?). Around 1841 he married a Kwakwaka'wakw woman by the name of Rose (?-?) and together they had possibly Marie (c.1844-?) and Rose (?-bap.1856-?). After the death of wife, Rose, he married Marianne, Nanaimo, ("Nanaiook") on July 21, 1856 at Fort Langley. Marie (c.1844-?) may have been brought into the marriage as a daughter of Marianne. They may have had more children but they have not been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5b-7; FtVanASA 3-8; HBCCont; FtVicASA 1-7; HBCABio; BCA PSACFtNis; BCCR Marriage SS: Cullen, The History of Fort, p. 89

Brown, John (fl. 1834 - 1837) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Borrowstenness, Linlithgow, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1837).

John Brown joined the HBC in London on December 13, 1834 and made a round trip to the coast on the Ganymede. While he was on the coast he was sent to the hospital at Fort Vancouver and made a return trip to Oahu but otherwise did not visit any posts other than those on the lower Columbia River. On the return trip, his name did not appear on the crew list beyond Iquique, Chile, so the date of his arrival back in London is uncertain.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 7, 14; log of Ganymede 4; YFASA 15-16; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 4

Brown, John [a] (fl. 1847 - 1849) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1849).

Possibly the same as John Brown [1], John Brown [a], is noted as working as a seaman for the HBC aboard the barque Cowlitz. In outfit 1848-1849 he returned to England.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-28

Brown, John [b] (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Stowaway, Columbia (barque) (1847); Seaman, *Cowlitz (barque) (1848 - 1849).

In all likelihood, John Brown [b] stowed away on the HBC vessel Columbia in Honolulu to get to Fort Victoria. After he was taken out of irons he worked on the barque Cowlitz on coastal shipping before he returned to England on the same vessel.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 9; YFASA 28

Brown, John [a? b?] (fl. 1850 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Una (brigantine) (1850 - 1852).

John Brown [a? b?] came to the coast on the brig Una which he joined in London on December 31, 1849. On February 14, 1852, he was discharged and may be any of the above.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 10; YFASA 30-31; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-2

Brown, Joseph (fl. 1842 - 1843) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Crew member, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843).

Joseph Brown was a crew member of the HBC barque Columbia in outfit 1842-1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 22

Brown, Louis (c. 1817 - ?) (Canadian)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1817

Death: probably Washington Territory, United States

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1837 - 1841).

Louis Brown joined the HBC in 1837 and worked his contract at Fort Colville. He deserted in outfit 1841-1842 and set himself up in a cabin about twenty-nine km (eighteen miles) from the Kettle Falls fort. He was still living there seven years later as on Saturday, April 8, 1849, John Charles, who was passing through with his Columbia Express Party, stayed with the former employee.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-6; YFASA 19-21; Journal of the Columbia Express Party, 1849, BCA A/B.20.4/c38;

Brown, Paul Valle (fl. 1821 - 1824) (probably Canadian)

Birth: possibly St. Anne, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822); Bowsman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824).

Paul Valle Brown worked for the HBC in New Caledonia in 1821-1824.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1; YFDS 1a

Brown, Peter [variation: Baudky, Budbay] (fl. 1841) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Cowlitz (barque) (1841); Cook, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

Peter Brown went through more than one name change. He shipped out with the Cowlitz while it was on a side trip to Honolulu on July 15, 1841 as Peter Baudky; when he was discharged on November 24 at Fort Vancouver to join the Columbia, his name had become Peter Budbay. Possibly to simplify the record, he joined the Columbia the following day as Peter Brown, cook. He would have arrived back in London in July 1842.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; log of Columbia 4

Brown, Thomas [b] (c. 1814 - ?) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Fort Coulonge, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1843).

Thomas Brown [b] joined the HBC in 1840 and returned overland to Canada in the spring 1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 22; FtVanASA 6-8

Brown, William [1] (fl. 1815) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

William Brown [1], engaged his services with the NWC schooner Columbia on April 29, 1815 and was paid off on February 10, 1816, when he was impressed into service with H.M.S. Horatio.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Brown, William [2] (c. 1790 - 1827) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Kilmaurs, Ayrshire, Scotland - c. 1790

Death: Europe - March 1827

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort St. James (1821 - 1822); Chief Trader, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1822 - 1826).

After entering the HBC in 1811, William Brown served in both the Churchill district and Deer Lake before returning to Europe for two years in 1815. In 1817, he returned to North America, working his way up through the ranks while serving at Halkett House, Williams House, Big Point House, Fort Dauphine, Fort Resolution and Fort Wedderburn and became actively involved in the HBC-NWC dispute. In 1821 at the amalgamation of the HBC and NWC, Brown was appointed to the New Caledonia district and in October 1822, built Fort Kilmaurs, later called Fort Babine. He stayed in the area generally keeping the journals until 1826 and, from 1824, jointly ran the New Caledonia district with William Connolly. He was to explore the country in 1825, but illness and the unsettled nature of the natives prevented him from doing so. That year, he was on crutches and the rheumatism in his right arm was so bad that he could barely write. In 1826 because of his deteriorating state, he was granted leave of absence in Europe and died the following year.

William Brown had a wife, and quite likely children, but they have not been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 3-6; FtBabPJ 1-3; FtBabCB 1 SS: HBRS I, p. 431

Brown, William [a] (c. 1810 - late 1870s) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Sandwick, Orkney - c. 1810

Death: probably Pierce County, Washington - 1878

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1830); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Personal servant, Fort Langley (1832 - 1833); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1833 - 1834); Personal servant, Fort Langley (1833); Labourer, Fort Langley (1835 - 1839).

William Brown [a] who signed on with the HBC on May 4, 1830, had a string of bad luck in the fur trade. After sailing to Hudson Bay, he made his way overland to Fort Vancouver. In the early 1830s at Fort Vancouver, he caught “intermittant fever”, probably malaria, which kept recurring from time to time. As well, on May 11, 1834, while unloading cows at Nisqually from the Lama, he was gored in the testicles. Brown then took a wife at Fort Langley but when he tried to leave the service he ran into difficulty. He gave the appropriate year’s notice and had hoped to leave in the spring of 1837, but was held back at Fort Vancouver as his wife had died at Langley, leaving a child under twelve months supposedly to be cared for by the HBC. When he refused to return and look after the child, McLoughlin hit him three times with a rod until he agreed to stay to care for the infant; he returned to Langley where a nurse was provided and boarded at Company expense for the next year. By August, 1838, he was told that he had to leave the service with his child. He made his way across the Continent to York Factory and, and even though he wished to remain, returned home to England via the Prince Rupert in 1839. The fate of the child has not been traced but he or she may have returned with Brown when he came back and settled in the Willamette at an unknown date. In the late 1860s William Brown sold out and moved to Pierce County, Washington where he died in the late 1870s.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 4; YFASA 11-15, 18-19; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-5; FtVanCB 19, 22, 24 PPS: Dickey; TacP-FtNis Huggins, June 4, 1904

Brown, William [3] (fl. 1838 - 1840) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1839); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840).

William Brown sailed from London in late 1838 on the HBC barque Vancouver and arrived at Fort Vancouver around June 1839. On October 5, 1839, after only a few months on the coast, he left on the Nereide and was discharged in London on April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA log of Nereide 2; ShMiscPap 14

Brown, William [b] (fl. 1853 - 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably Pacific Northwest

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1853 - 1854).

William Brown [b] worked for the HBC on the brigantine Mary Dare. In May 1853, he requested that his wife be brought out so they could settle.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-3; FtVicCB 6

Brown, William [f] (fl. 1850 - 1853) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Stromness, Orkney

Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1849); Boatbuilder, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1850 - 1851); Carpenter, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1851 - 1852); Carpenter, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1852 - 1853).

William Brown sailed from Stromness to York Factory in 1849 and worked for the HBC as a boat builder and carpenter for one three-year contract.

Bruce, Antoine (fl. 1833 - 1838) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Boute, Snake Party (1835 - 1838).

Antoine Bruce joined the HBC in 1830 and began work in the Columbia in 1834. He went east over the Rockies in March 1838 when he retired.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 18; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-5

Bruce, William [a] (c. 1802 - 1849) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Dornoch, Sutherland, Scotland - c. 1802

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - August 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1825); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1838); Storeman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1838); Gardener, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1838); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1838); Gardener, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1849).

William Bruce was a true gardener. First contracted as a labourer for three years by the HBC on June 20, 1825, he sailed three days later from Stromness on the Prince of Wales and arrived at York Factory in August. The following year, after crossing overland, he began work at Fort Vancouver as a gardener. During this time he also acted as a storesman and in 1828 was given extra wages on order of George Simpson. At the end of his contract there, in March 1838, he left the Columbia for the east side and sailed back to England on the Prince Rupert, arriving there in October 1838; after a chance meeting on a crowded street with furloughing Dr. John McLoughlin, he begged to be taken back to Fort Vancouver, a place with which he had fallen in love. Dr. McLoughlin agreed to send him back on the first available ship, but first he would have to go to Chiswick, the seat of the Duke of Devonshire, to get more knowledge of his duties. Bruce sailed back on the barque Vancouver and began to work once again in the Columbia on October 1, 1839. He reportedly brought plants back with him. One of his additional jobs was ringing the wake-up bell at 4:00am in the summer and 8:00am in the winter. William Bruce died a bachelor at Fort Vancouver in 1849.

William Bruce's garden has been recreated at the reconstructed Fort Vancouver site.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 4; YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 17-20, 24-29; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 5b-7, 10, 20; FtVanASA 1-8; FtVanAB 10, 19; ShMiscPap 11; OHS Oregonian, April 12, 1888 PPS: HBRS vol. VII, p. 309

Bruffee, James (fl. 1827) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

Ash. Co-leader of Ashley's expedition, Rendezvous (1827).

James Bruffee left St. Louis on April 12, 1827, co-leading with Hiram Scott a group of forty-six men to the summer Sweetlake Rendezvous [Utah]. It appeared that his employer, William Ashley left with the group but turned back because of illness. Along with the group was a four pounder cannon on wheels which the group took to the Rendezvous and back. On October 1, 1827, Bruffee arrived with $60,000 worth of furs at Lexington, Missouri, where he met Ashley.

SS: Gowans, p. 33, 36, 37

Brugier, Pierre [variation: Brugiere, Brugere] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

PFC Steersman?, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); NWC Steersman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Steersman or guide, Brigade to Fort William (1814); PFC Steersman?, Fort George [Astoria] and Spokane House (October 13, 1813).

Pierre Brugier likely joined the PFC at Mackinac for he was found there on Company journals on August 3, 1810. He then travelled overland with Wilson Price Hunt arriving at Astoria February 19, 1812. After the takeover of the PFC, Brugier joined the NWC October 22, 1813 on a contract to expire in Montreal the following year. He left Fort George with the brigade for Fort William/Montreal on April 4, 1814.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10 SS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105; Coues, p. 874

Bruguier, Regis [variation: Breguiet] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption [Lower Canada]

Freeman

PFC Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1811 - 1814).

Brought up in the service of the NWC and known to Gabriel Franchère, Regis Bruguier had a career as a freeman, trapper and trader. In Canada he had been a respectable country merchant; however, after losing his outfit as a trader on the Saskatchewan, he became a free trader and trapper, seeking out beaver. On December 5, 1811, two months after arriving as a freeman in Astoria on October 5th with Benjamin Pillet and Donald McLellan, he went up the Willamette with the same pair as a hunter. On April 4, 1814, Bruguier left Astoria for Canada with returning former Astoria employees in a brigade of ten canoes carrying seventy-eight people. He last appeared on Franchère's record on the journey back on May 11, 1814 at Canoe River, off the Columbia River.

PPS: SHdeSB Liste PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 92, 96, 157-58; Franchère, p. 58n

Brule, Louis [standard: Brulé] [variation: Brusle] (? - 1811) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Rivière du Loup, Province of Quebec/Lower Canada

Death: Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island - June 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

On May 23, 1810, Louis Brulé signed on with the PFC partner Alexander McKay, to work for five years as a wintering middleman. After making his way to New York in a canoe brigade, he sailed on the Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] from New York in September 1810, arriving at the mouth of the Columbia in March, 1811. However, since fellow passenger Ovide de Montigny was prone to seasickness and William Mumford had chosen to stay on shore, McKay chose as his servant young Brulé to continue on the fated voyage. Brulé met his end at Clayoquot Sound along with twenty-six or twenty-eight others from the ship when the ship was attacked and blown up.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; RosL-Ph Astoria PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 85

Brulez, Jean Baptiste [standard: Bruléz] [variation: Brulé, Baulez, Bruley, Brewley, Brouillet, Brulin, Broutin, Broulier, Brulais, Broulin, Bruluis] (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Barthelemy (d. of Montreal), Lower Canada - c. 1809

Death: probably Sooke, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Langley (1839 - 1842); Middleman, Snake Party (1842 - 1844); Settler, Willamette (1844 - 1845).

Jean Baptiste Brulez lived a long life, and had the distinction of being responsible for having set the fire that burned down an entire fort. A twenty-two year old Brulez joined the HBC in 1831 from Lac La Pluie (although he claimed on his Donation Land Claim he had arrived in the territory as early as 1826). At Fort Langley he was in the habit of cooking and taking his meals in the blacksmith's shop before retiring to the bastion to sleep. On April 11, 1840, he cooked his meal as usual and went to the bastion to sleep but failed to entirely quench the fire. Some time later the fire was noticed and within two minutes in the presence of a strong spring wind, flames had engulfed the entire fort. Only the goods from the big house were saved. Brulez stayed around to help rebuild the fort before being assigned to the distant Snake River area. At the end of his contract in 1844 he settled in the St. Paul area of the Willamette valley of Oregon. In 1849 he was living in Yamhill Co., Oregon with a wife and an adopted son. He soon moved north, however, for in 1850, he settled on a land claim of 640 acres [259 ha] in Lewis County and in 1853, declared his intention to become a U.S. Citizen. Some time around 1859, the Brulez family, no doubt preferring to live in territory familiar to wife Marguerite, travelled in a "large cavalcade with freight wagons and a pack train" to Vancouver Island. There they settled at the mouth of the Sooke River, built several log cabins on the eastern bank and grew feed for their cattle on the Sooke River Flats, land (Section 4) which Brulez finally pre-empted on September 18, 1884.

Jean Baptiste Brulez had one recorded wife and a step-son. On February 11, 1838 at Fort Vancouver, he married the widow of Jacques Iroquois, Marguerite, Sook [T'Sou-ke], a person skilled at the native bone game. Jean Baptiste inherited a step-son Joseph Thomas (c.1831-60), who acquired the Brulez name. Stepson Joseph married Mary Ann Maranda (c.1832-?) (daughter of Iroquois Louis Shaegoskatsta/Maranda, dit Le Frise [c.1796-?]) and a Kalapooya woman) in Oregon in 1848, had three daughters but, according to one account, was shot dead at the age of twenty-nine in Oregon (1858 in Victoria Catholic Records? according to Sooke Story). After Joseph's death Mary Ann Maranda Brule married Jean Baptiste Vautrin.

Mount Brule is named after Jean Baptiste Brulez.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]P] 3; YFASA 10-15, 19-20, 24; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-8; FtVanCB 28; OHS 1849 Census, Oregon Territory, Yamhill Co.; Van-PL 1881 census of British Columbia, Vancouver, Sooke, 1991 census of British Columbia, District 3, Vancouver, Goldstream and Sooke PPS: CCR 1a, 2b; Mallandaine, p. 5; Washington Territory Donation Land Claim, p. 82 SS: Peers, "A grandmother of"; Peers, The Sooke Story, p. 59, 65
See Also: Poirier, Joseph (Relative)

Bruneau, Pierre [variation: Brunneau] (fl. 1816 - 1821) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada (born to Pierre Bruneau)

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1817); Middleman, Pacific slopes (1821).

Pierre Bruneau joined the NWC on December 9, 1816 to work as a wintering middleman for three years. He entered the Pacific slopes in 1817 crossing the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque. He was likely still in the Columbia area in 1821 at the time of the coalition with the HBC for, at that time, he was noted as going to Montreal, perhaps as a redundant employee.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 7; FtGeo[Ast]AB 1

Brunel, Joseph [variation: Brunelle] (c. 1798 - 1870) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1798 (born to Louis Brunel and Françoise Bellerose)

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - November 1870

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute or steersman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1831); Steersman, Fort Nez Percés (1831 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1834 - 1836); Middleman, New Caledonia (1836 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844); Settler, Willamette (1843+); Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845).

Joseph Brunel joined the HBC in 1827 as a bouté or middleman for he did both throughout his career. He was to go on Work's Snake Party but was taken ill and replaced by Iroquois Thomas Tawakon. In the meantime, he also appeared as a settler in the Willamette who, on May 2, 1843, voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. Later, he retired to a claim on French Prairie which he later sold. By the end of his contract in 1846 he was listed as an invalid. He died on November 10, 1870 and was buried in the St. Louis, Oregon, cemetery.

He had one wife and a child. In 1834 he had a son, Louis, by Susanne Cayuse (c.1817-?) whom he officially married on June 26, 1843 at Vancouver.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-28, 30; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-8, 10-14; FtVanASA 2-8; OHS 1849 Census, Oregon Territory, Champoege PPS: CCR 1a, 3b SS: Holman, p. 115

Brunelle, Louis (fl. 1814 - 1821) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Columbia Department (1821).

Louis Brunelle probably was working in the fur trade as early as 1814 at Fort William and throughout the Canadian West as a middleman. It is not known when he came onto or left the Pacific slopes but he is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821 within the Columbia area.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1

Brusseau (dit Aland) (1817 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort Kamloops [Thompson's River Post, She-waps Post] (1817).

Brusseau, dit Aland, could possibly be Bazile Brousseau who had been in the area since 1810; however many Brousseaus signed on with the North West Company and so the entry is separate. Brusseau appeared only once in the Alexander Ross memoirs as being very sick near the She-Whaps post [the Pacific Fur Company name for the then abandoned Shuswaps post in the Thompson River area]. He was left behind with another man, along with a shovel to bury him when he died. However, his caregiver was spooked when some natives appeared, so he abandoned Brusseau. When he met Ross, he explained that Brusseau had died and his shovel had been stolen. In the meantime, the Shuswap natives nursed Brusseau back to health and returned him to a very surprised Ross.

PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Traders, p. 97

Bruyere, Narcisse [variation: Bruyeres, Bruyuiere] (fl. 1821) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Chateaugay (Pres Eglise), Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Blacksmith, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); Milieu, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); HBC Blacksmith, Columbia Department (1821).

Narcisse Bruyere joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on March 26, 1818 as a wintering middleman and blacksmith for three years in the Northwest. Shortly afterwards, he crossed the Rockies with Angus Bethune and James McMillan. Just where he worked on the Pacific slopes has not been traced, but at the time of amalgamation, he joined the HBC but appears to have left the area soon after.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 9

Bryan, James (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

James Bryan made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Buck, James Dowden (c. 1816 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Tynemouth, England - c. 1816 (born to Richard Buck and Elizabeth Buck)

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1831); Apprentice, Naval Department (1831 - 1832); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1835); Apprentice, Vanconver (schooner) (1834); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1834 - 1835); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Apprentice, Lama (brig) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1837); Seaman, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838); 2nd mate, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

James Dowden Buck joined the HBC as a Greenwich Hospital apprentice seaman on November 10, 1830 sailing to the coast on the HBC barque Ganymede. His apprenticeship was not a happy one for he lost all his clothes when the Vanconver was shipwrecked in 1834, the value of which was deducted from his wages. This put him in considerable debt and when he applied to go back to England on the Sumatra, John McLoughlin, who was intolerant of insolence, shoved him down the staircase. Consequently, Buck threatened to sail to Oahu and apply to the British Consul to send him back. For all his trials and tribulations, James Dowden Buck arrived back in England on May 20, 1839 a junior officer.

An undelivered 1838 letter from a very concerned mother, who resided at Hope Quay, Weymouth, Dorset, rests in the HBCA. Several letters from his concerned parents to the HBC also rest at the HBCA.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 11-15, 18-19; YFDS 4b-5c, 7, 9; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Sumatra 1; log of Columbia 3; MI 5; PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 142-45

Buck, Jonathan (c. 1829 - c. 1850?) (British)

Birth: Ireland - c. 1829 (born to Frederick and Harriet Buck)

Death: California, United States - c. 1850

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1846); Acting 1st mate, Beaver (steamer) (1846); 2nd mate, Columbia (barque) (1846 - 1847); Settler, Willamette (1848 - 1849).

Jonathan Buck, son of a successful miniaturist in Ireland, joined the HBC in London on August 22, 1842, two years after the death of his father. He came twice to the coast on the Columbia, arriving May 6, 1843 and again at Fort Victoria on April 22, 1846. In 1847 he deserted or was released on the Hawaiian Islands. He made his way back to the Columbia for, in outfit 1848-1849, he was noted as being a settler in the Willamette and in 1850 was a single lumberman in Clatsop Co., Oregon. According to family tradition, he died in the California gold fields around 1850.

Resting in the HBCA are seventeen undelivered letters addressed to "Johnty" from family and friends written between 1844-1848, all of which reveal a considerable amount about family activities. Either from a lack of understanding of geography or no knowledge of where he was, letters were variously addressed to "Columbia river or Elsewhere", "Hudson bay, North America", "Arctic Regions" and even the "Backside of the World."

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 6; FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24, 26-28; ShMiscPap 4a; HBCABio; MI 5; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clatsop Co. PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 191-208

Budge, Henry (fl. c. 1817 - 1852) (probably British)

Birth: probably England - c. 1817

Maritime employee

Henry Budge came to the coast on the HBC chartered ship Sumatra. In August, 1837 when he arrived in Oahu he overstayed his shore leave by two days. He spent about a month at Fort Vancouver, arriving back in London in April 1838. Budge worked intermittently from 1843-1852 on Hudson Bay runs on the Prince Albert.

PS: HBCA log of Sumatra 1; PortB 1; log of Prince Albert 2, 4-7, 9, 11

Bule, Tom (fl. 1834 - 1835) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, CRFTC Brigade (1834); HBC Member, Snake Party (1835).

Tom Bule (probably Pule) was one of twenty Hawaiians who joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company in Hawaii in 1834. He and the others arrived in the Columbia River in September and under Captain Joseph Thing set out in a brigade for Fort Hall. Starting out, conditions were very difficult with as little as two hours sleep a night and very little to eat. In November, twelve Hawaiians, including Tom Bule and Harry Parker, deserted. Both Tom and Harry went on to join Thomas McKay's HBC Snake Party and were spotted on the Snake River February 12, 1835.

PPS: N. J. Wyeth, p. 250

Bull (fl. 1834) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, CRFTC Brigade (1834).

Bull was one of twenty Hawaiians who joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's CRFTC in Hawaii in 1834 and reached Fort Hall just before Christmas.

PPS: Beidleman, p. 238

Bull, John (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

John Bull shipped onto the brig Convoy [Wm. H. McNeill] after it landed in Honolulu in 1825, discharged cargo, and loaded supplies for the Northwest Coast. Bull sailed with the brig on April 1, traded that season, and returned November 2, 1825.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Bullock, Thomas [variation: J. W.] (fl. 1845) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice seaman, Valleyfield (ship) (1841 - 1843); Apprentice seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1844 - 1845); Apprentice seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1845); Apprentice seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1845).

Young Thomas Bullock (who also appears as J. W. Bullock) first sailed to the coast on the HBC chartered ship Valleyfield, and was to have served out his apprenticeship on the coast but had to return to England with the vessel as no one could replace him for the return voyage. He signed up again with the HBC on September 8, 1843 and returned to the coast on the barque Vancouver and left it in May 1845. On June 29, 1845 he committed an indiscretion by not turning out for his watch and on November 14-15th 1845, was transferred to the barque Cowlitz. He may have returned to England on that vessel.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 29; ShMiscPap 11; log of Cadboro 5

Burdett, Stephen Edmunds [variation: Stephan Edmands Burdet] (1806 - ?) (American)

Birth: Charlestown, Suffolk, Massachusetts - March 1806

Maritime employee

Wyeth Member, Wyeth's 1st Expedition (1832); Cook, Lama (brig) (1832); HBC Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service

(1832 - 1834); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834); Untraced vocation, Oahu (1836 - 1837).

Stephen Edmunds Burdett came to the Pacific slopes as part of the 1st expedition of Nathaniel J. Wyeth. He had left Boston on March 11, 1832 and arrived at Fort Vancouver on October 29th of that year. As the expedition was a singular failure, Burdett hired on with the HBC at Fort Vancouver on December 1, 1832 to work in the company's naval service. While fellow expedition members William Breck, Phineas Whittier and John Sinclair shipped out on the brig Dryad on September 1833, Burdett appears to have stayed and worked on several ships on coastal shipping and eventually was sent from Port Simpson aboard the brig Eagle to Vancouver, thence to Oahu on November 15, 1834. He may have disembarked and continued work there.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 12-14 16; YFDS 5a-5c; log of Dryad 1; IGI file [birthplace and date, as Stephan Edmands Burdet] SS: Overmeyer, p. 99

Burdod [variation: Burdois] (fl. 1831 - 1832) (Undetermined origin)Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1831 - 1832).

Burdod was a freeman trapper living in the Snake Country when he worked with John Work's Snake Party in 1831-1832. On June 13, 1832, while crossing the Snake River in canoes, Burdod's family was swamped. The family was saved but many of the goods were lost.

PS: HBCA SnkCoP] 11

Burge, Thomas (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Thomas Burge made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Burger, George [variation: Burgar] (c. 1807 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)Birth: Westray, Orkney - c. 1807 (born to Robert Burger and Elizabeth [Harcus] Burger)*Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales IV (ship) (1830); Sailor, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Sailor, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1837); Labourer, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1837).

George Burger signed on with the HBC in 1830 as a seaman through John Rae of Wyre. As his father had been ill a number of years, George and his elder brother no doubt had some responsibility to keep the family together and so found themselves at sea. George sailed to Hudson Bay and made his way overland to the Coast. There he spent five years on coastal trade, although he sailed to England in 1834. In March 1837 he left the Columbia returning overland east over the Rockies and took the Prince Rupert back to the British Isles. He returned to Orkney and, on December 14, 1838 in Kirkwall, likely married Margaret Taylor of Nisbister, Orphir. From that point, he may have left Orkney.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV, 4; YFASA 11-17; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-4 SS: Burgher, p. 203

Burgess, Andrew (c. 1823 - ?) (British: English)Birth: possibly Liverpool, England - c. 1823*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1849).

Andrew Burgess shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and made one return voyage to the coast on the barque Cowlitz. After supplying coastal posts and Oahu, he arrived back in London on May 24, 1849.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6; YFASA 27-28

Burgess, Frank [variation: Francis Barges] (fl. 1840 - 1843) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841); Seaman or 2nd officer?, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

Frank Burgess shipped on with the HBC in London in 1840 and sailed to the coast on the barque Cowlitz. On May 10, 1841 at Fort Vancouver, he transferred to the Columbia for the voyage home. He was listed as a 2nd officer on December 20, 1841 on the Columbia River upon departure for the return voyage but this is likely in error as George W. Barton held that post. He arrived back in London on May 12, 1843.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; log of Columbia 4

Burke, David (c. 1801 - ?) (British or Jamaican)

Birth: probably Jamaica - c. 1806

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1849).

David Burke, who appears to have been born in Jamaica, shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 as a carpenter and made one return voyage to the coast on the Cowlitz. He arrived back in London on May 24, 1849.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28

Burnam, Richard (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Richard Burnam made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Burr, John (fl. 1832 - 1835) (British: English)

Birth: probably Kent, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Lama (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834 - 1835).

John Burr joined the HBC in London on September 15, 1832 on a three-year contract. He worked from July 19, 1833 on the coastal brig Lama until November 10, 1834, when he was transferred to the brig Eagle which transported him back to England where he arrived on June 4, 1835.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 5b-5c; ShMiscPap 14

Burris, William (fl. 1837 - 1844) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Cheltenham, St. Philips, Gloucester, England

Death: Portland, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Cook, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1839); Cook, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Steward, Vancouver (barque) (1840 - 1842); Steward, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1844).

William Burris joined the HBC in London on August 29, 1835 as a cook for five years. In January 1838 he participated in a mutiny in the Beaver but did not appear to suffer any consequences. Finding the Pacific Northwest to his liking, he returned to England on the Vancouver on October 15, 1840 and brought back his British wife, a rare occurrence which George Simpson found to be too extravagant for the HBC (HBRs XXIX, p. 134). Burris then worked as a steward and lived at Fort Vancouver until December 31, 1844, at which point he settled on the Twallatine [Tualatin, Oregon] Plains. The move was a bad one for, lacking the Company discipline, he soon lost control of his life. Although he at the time appeared to be religious and civic minded, by 1857 he had lost so much of his reason that he killed his wife and children so that they could go to heaven in their relative youth. He spent the rest of his life insane in a Portland prison.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 7, 11-12; FtSimp[N]PJ 3; FtVanASA 4-8; YFASA 19-20, 24; ShMiscPap 5; OHS Oregonian, April 4, 1857, p. 2 PPS: HBRs XXIX, p. 134 SS: G. B. Roberts, p. 225

Burrows, William (fl. 1833 - 1835) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835).

William Burrows was a seaman with the HBC when he joined the Nereide in Valparaiso, Chile on December 18, 1833 on its voyage to the Northwest Coast. After his arrival at Fort Vancouver on April 21, 1834 and a quick turnaround, Burrows left the Columbia River post on May 28, 1834 for the return voyage and arrived back in London May 28, 1835.

Burstall, Nathaniel (fl. 1823 - 1824) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

Nathaniel Burstall was a seaman aboard the Lively, a brig chartered by the HBC. On January 3, 1823, he sailed from Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope and rounded the Horn in March. In July he witnessed an altercation between the ship's owner and captain, Robert Ritchie and the boy William Forbes; as a result he swore out a deposition on July 2, 1823. Later, to discuss the alcoholic habits of the first mate, he appeared at a court of enquiry held at Fort George August 3, 1823. He sailed from Fort George three days later and arrived in England on March 25, 1824.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1; HBCA ship extract

Butt, William Edward (fl. 1830 - 1835) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1833); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1833); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1834 - 1835).

William Edward Butt joined the crew of the HBC brig Dryad on January 1, 1830 in London and sailed to the Northwest Coast. After arriving at Fort Vancouver on August 16, 1830, he worked out of Fort Simpson, sailing to coastal ports as far south as Monterey [California] until May, 1834, when he left for England on the barque Nereide.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-14; YFDS 4a-5c; ShMiscPap 14; log of Nereide 1

Cabana, Francois Xavier [standard: François] (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1825 (born to Charles Cabana and Marguerite Belair)Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1847 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1850 - 1852).

François Xavier Cabana joined the HBC from Montreal in 1845 and left it around 1852 at the age of twenty-seven. He used his savings to purchase a town lot in Victoria where he settled and continued to raise a family and by 1860, he was living on Park Street in Victoria. François Xavier and family appear to have left the area by 1871 and have not been subsequently traced.

François Xavier Cabana had one wife and nine recorded children. On August 30, 1853, he formalized his marriage to Catherine, (?-?) variously described as Tlaganets/Nass/Haida. Their children were Marguerite (c.1849-?), Maria (c.1851-?), Edouard (c.1854-72), Charles (?-bap.1856-?), Angele (?-bap.1859-?), Joseph (?-bap.1861-?), Catherine (?-bap.1863-?), possibly Moise (1864-?) and Francis Xavier (c.1867-69).

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; FtVicASA 1-2; BCA BCGR Land; BCCR StAndC; 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 27

Cadotte, Laurent (c. 1786 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption, Quebec - c. 1786Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains*Fur trade employee

HBC Bowsman, York Factory (1822 - 1823); Bowsman, Columbia Department (1822 - 1826); Bowsman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823).

Laurent Cadotte joined the NWC from L'Assomption on December 27, 1810 and worked at Cumberland House and Ile a La Crosse, English River (1811-1819) before coming to the Columbia. In 1824-1825 Cadotte transported Governor Simpson when he visited the Columbia but we know nothing of his character. After leaving the Columbia, he spent the rest of his career east of the Rockies before retiring in 1839 at the age of approximately fifty-three. Several of his contracts survive in the HBC Archives.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10, 12; YFASA 2-5; HBCCont; HBCABio
See Also: Cadotte, Pierre (Son)

Cadotte, Pierre (c. 1821 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1821 (born to Laurent Cadotte and Susanne, Cree)Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains*Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Snake Party (1842 - 1844); Middleman and Boute, New Caledonia (1844 - 1845); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846).

Pierre Cadotte joined the HBC from Rupert's Land in 1840 and was mainly involved in transporting people around the Columbia. In 1846, the death of his wife the year before may have caused him to desert. He probably moved east of the Rockies for, during the early 1850s, a Pierre Cadotte, and a son by the same name, worked as a hunter in the upper Missouri area out of Forts Benton and Union.

Pierre Cadotte had one wife and no recorded children but the Pierre Jr. found at Fort Benton in 1853-1855 was likely a son by an unknown marriage. On January 29, 1844 he married Louise Nisqually (c.1825-1845) at Fort Vancouver. Louise died on December 14, 1845.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-27; YFDS 11, 14; FtVanASA 6-8; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1b; McDonnell, p. 254-55
See Also: Cadotte, Laurent (Father)

Cadrant, Michel [variation: Cadran] (c. 1794 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Steersman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822); HBC Middleman, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1822); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1822 - 1824); Steersman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Steersman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826).

Michel Cadrant joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] from Yamaska on January 13, 1820 as a middleman and gouvernail to work in the Northwest. In the late fall of 1822, now working for the HBC, Cadrant helped build Fort Babline [Kilmaurs]. For the next two years he worked with the cross-country brigade between New Caledonia and the Hudson Bay. From 1826 he continued to work east of the Rockies in the Mackenzie area until 1844 and after that, Athabasca.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 1-2, 4-5; FtBabPJ 1; YFDS 1a; FtStJmsLs

Cadrette (fl. 1826 - 1827) (Canadian: French or Mixed descent)

Freeman

HBC Freeman hunter, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827).

Cadrette appears to have been a true freeman who somehow managed to avoid contracts with either the NWC or HBC and did not appear on any HBC Columbia ledgers. By September, 1826 his wanderings had taken him to Fort Vancouver where he joined the Alexander R. McLeod Umpqua expedition probably as a hunter. He went off record in March, 1827 when the group reached McKay's Old Fort.

PS: HBCA FtVanPJ 4

Caesar [variation: Casar, Cesar] (fl. 1845 - 1849) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1849); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1849).

Caesar joined the HBC from Oahu in 1845. He worked mainly at Fort Vancouver as a labourer until October 31, 1849, at which point he returned to Oahu aboard the barque Columbia and received his last HBC wages in Honolulu.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-29; YFDS 21; SandIsAB 10

Cagsha, Michel [variation: Cashga, Casgha] (fl. 1846 - 1849) (possibly British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1848); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1849).

Michel Casgha joined the HBC in London on October 31, 1846 as a steward and sailed to the coast on the brig Mary Dare. According to some records, in outfit 1847-1848, he returned to England. According to others, he worked at Vancouver until February 24, 1849 at which point he deserted, likely for California.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28; YFDS 19

Caille, Andre [standard: André Caillé] (c. 1787 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie or Blairfindie, Province of Quebec - c. 1787

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Columbia Department (1826 - 1827); Montreal Pay List, New Caledonia (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fraser Lake (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1829 - 1830).

The mechanically talented André Caillé spent his Pacific Slopes career in New Caledonia. Around 1827, back in Lower Canada, he appears to have changed his mind about retiring and returned to New Caledonia, this time, shaving thirteen years off his age. His new birth date was 1800, perhaps a strategic move to secure the job (or this may be a younger relative with the same name).

PS: HBCA YFDS 1a; FtStJmsLS 1; YFASA 4-7; FtStJmsCB 5; FtAlexAB 1

Caille (Biscornet), Paschal [standard: Caillé] [variation: Pascal Bisconet] (c. 1794 - 1854) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Pierre, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - December 1854

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829); Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1829 - 1830); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1833 - 1834); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1843); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Willamette (1844 - 1845).

Paschal Caillé (Bisconet) likely joined the HBC in 1828 as a native apprentice. An otherwise apparently competent employee, he came close to losing his life in October 1833, while he was helping to construct Fort McLoughlin. Because they believed that the local natives had taken a deserting employee hostage, HBC officers seized a local chief as a bargaining tool. In retaliation, the natives attacked the servants including Caillé, who went out for water. Already weakened by the previous loss of a finger, he received two stab wounds in the head in the ensuing battle and was taken hostage. He and two others (see Fabien Malois and Joseph Richard) were eventually exchanged for the local chief. Caillé retired quietly in 1846 to the Willamette valley in Oregon to farm and raised a family.

The family records of Paschal Caillé are somewhat confusing as he had one or two wives and eight children. According to the Catholic Records, he and Louise Cowichan, also called Clallam (c.1809-1875) of the Fraser River had children Françoise (c.1832-?), Henriette (c.1835-?), Rose (1838-?), Sophie (c.1840-?), Moyse (1841-1844), Adelaide (c.1843-1852), Joseph (1848-1883). Their marriage was legitimized on February 11, 1839 and Louise died on December 24, 1875 at St. Louis, Oregon. However, on the Herbert Beaver records, Paschal Jr (?-bap.1837-?) and Henriette (?-?) were the children of Paschal and wife Henriette (?-?), Aliscuant. There may be an error in the Beaver records. As well, at his death, on December 22, 1854 at St. Paul, apparently age sixty-three by the Catholic records, rather than fifty-four by the HBC records, the name Biscornet was used rather than Caillé.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-16, 19-20, 24-25, 27-30; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtMcLouPJ 1; FtVanASA 2-8; BCA BCCR CCCath; Anderson; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 2a, 2b, 3a, 3d

Caille (Bisconet), Isaac (c. 1812 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Lower Canada - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1837).

Isaac Caille (Bisconet) joined the HBC in 1834 as a blacksmith and served one contract, probably in a variety of places within the lower Columbia area. In March 1837 he headed east of the Rockies and was paid in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-17; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4

Cain, William (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

William Cain joined the HBC naval department as a seaman on September 3, 1827 and made the outfit supply trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again. His vessel sailed from London on September 14, 1827 and arrived at Fort Vancouver on May 28, 1828. After unloading supplies, picking up furs and taking on ballast at Fort George, it crossed the bar on August 20, 1828 and arrived at the London docks on February 13, 1829 and Cain was discharged the following day. William Cain has not been traced on any other fur trade records.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1

Caine, William (fl. 1822 - 1829) (British: English)

Birth: Either Terrebonne or Whitechapel, Middlesex, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Tailor, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1825); Member, York Factory Express (HBC) (1825).

William Caine received cash advances in both Montreal and Boston before coming to the Pacific Northwest to work for three years as a tailor. In 1825, he returned to Montreal with the Express. In 1829 he signed an additional contract for three years in the Columbia but did not appear to honour it.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-12; YFASA 2-5; HBCCont; FtVanAB 1

Cairnes, Robert (fl. 1834 - 1835) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Employee, Fort Hall (1834 - 1835).

Robert Cairnes joined the Nathaniel J. Wyeth expedition of 1834, possibly en route, as part of a group to establish the Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company on the Pacific slopes to function in opposition to the HBC. He left the expedition near the mouth of the Portneuf River, to build Fort Hall and was one of twelve to winter there. Cairnes may have gone out on hunting parties and appears to have departed for an unknown location in the summer of 1835.

PS: OHS FtHallAB SS: O. Russell, p. 157

Caisse, Michel (fl. 1819 - 1822) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lanoraie, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, New Caledonia (1820); HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822).

Michel Caisse joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on December 27, 1819 as a middleman for three years and the following year was in New Caledonia. At the time of coalition, he continued working for the HBC in New Caledonia and departed by 1822.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 7; YFASA 1

Cakaeo (fl. 1844 - 1851) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Willamette (1844 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Langley (1849 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Langley (1851 - 1852).

Cakaeo joined the HBC in 1844 and worked as a labourer at coastal trading posts until 1851. He likely returned to the Hawaiian Islands after that.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-2

Calder, John [variation: Jack] (c. 1819 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1819

Maritime employee

HBC Native apprentice, Naval Department (1829 - 1830); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1830); Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1835); Native apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1836); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1838 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1846).

John Calder joined the HBC in 1829 as an apprentice and served mainly as a coastal seaman. He went to the Red River in 1842 but returned the following outfit. Some time after the end of his contract in 1846 he settled in the Cowlitz area where he raised a family.

John Calder had one recorded wife, Mary (c.1815-?) of unknown origin, and two children, Edward (c.1846-?) and Mary (c.1848).

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-21, 24; YFDS 3b, 4b, 5b-7; FtVanASA 2-8; ShMiscPap 14; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Calder, Peter (c. 1799 - 1852) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1799

Death: probably York Factory [Manitoba] - 1852

Maritime employee

HBC Native apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Apprentice, Naval Department/Coastal Trade (1827 - 1830); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1830); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1831 - 1833); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1835); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835).

Peter Calder was hired on by the HBC in about 1826 and worked on coastal shipping for nine years. In the spring of 1836, he went east over the Rockies and from 1836-1852, served at both York Factory (1836-1838, 1849-1852) and Edmonton House (1838-1849) as a middleman, bowsman, steersman and guide. He died in 1852, likely at York Factory.

Peter had a wife and one child. He and native Marguerite Chinook (daughter of Chief Kaiseno [Cassino]) had a boy Pierre (c.1835-?); shortly after, in 1836, Peter left the Columbia Department without his family for east of the Rockies. Marguerite later married Olivier Couturier.

PS: HBCA YFASA 6-9, 11-15; YFDS 2a, 3a, 5a-6; FtVanASA 1-3; ShMiscPap 14; HBCABio; HBCCont PPS: CCR 1a
See Also: Couturier, Olivier (Relative)

Callahan, Thomas (fl. 1834 - 1835) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Employee, Fort Hall (1834 - 1835).

Thomas Callahan, who possibly joined the Nathaniel J. Wyeth (Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company) expedition of 1834 en route, was one of the builders of Fort Hall. He wintered there with eleven others and departed for an unknown location in the summer of 1835.

PS: OHS FtHallAB SS: O. Russell, p. 157

Camden, Thomas (? - 1839) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Pacific Ocean - February 1839

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1839).

Thomas Camden likely joined the HBC in the fall of 1837 in London before sailing to the coast. He cooked for the crew as the Columbia serviced two northern posts, and stopped at Oahu from December 8-25, 1838 on its return journey. However, just one month later on January 27, 1839, Camden took ill and by February 1, was dead. His body was committed to the deep the following day.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia, 3; FtVanASA 5; ShMiscPap 14

Cameron, Duncan E. (fl. 1840 - 1846) (possibly Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Post master, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Post master, Thompson River (1841 - 1844); Post master in charge, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1844 - 1845); Settler, Willamette (1845 - 1846).

Hired in the Rupert's Land area in 1840, Duncan Cameron joined the HBC as a post master disposable. He was to retire east of the Rockies in the spring of 1846 but instead chose to settle in the Willamette.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-25; FtVanASA 6-8

Cameron, John Dugald (1777 - 1857) (Canadian: Scottish)

Birth: possibly Sorel, Lower Canada - 1777

Death: Grafton, Upper Canada - March 1857

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Factor in charge of Columbia Department, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1824).

John Dugald Cameron, a self educated man who rose to Chief Factor in the HBC, spent two years on the Pacific slopes.

Of Loyalist [Tory] stock which had moved to Canada, Cameron began his career with the NWC [David and Peter Grant partnership] on January 10, 1794 and was made a partner in 1813. After he was made a HBC Chief Factor in the 1821 amalgamation, he was placed in charge of the Columbia Department until 1824, when he was replaced by John McLoughlin. Prior to his departure he was given instructions to build a fort on the north side of the Columbia River; this eventually became Fort Vancouver. He then served at several posts east of the Rockies and retired in 1846 with his family to Grafton, near Cobourg, Upper Canada. For many years he was a secretary and registrar of Upper Canada. A man who “thirsted for knowledge”, he read widely. Cameron was “admired by colleagues and Indians alike for his integrity, affability, and generosity” (DCB, p. 122).

John Dugald Cameron was one of the few officers who married and retained a native wife (Van Kirk, p. 139). He married Mary, an Ojibwa and together they had at least four sons and three daughters.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 11 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 620; HBRS II, p. 207; HBRS XXX, p. 173, 173n; HBRS XXII, p. 430 SS: DCB Van Kirk; Van Kirk, "Many Tender Ties", p. 139-40

Campbell, Archibald (fl. 1830 - 1833) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Renfrew, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1830); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Steward, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

Archibald Campbell joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 as a seaman for three years, sailing immediately from Blackwall on the Isabella [William Ryan]. In May of the following year, the Isabella entered the Columbia River but struck land, lost its rudder and foundered for a day before the crew abandoned it, allowing it to come to grief on a spit. Campbell and others tried unsuccessfully to get it off the spit but managed, with the assistance of the local Clatsop Indians, to save a greater part of the cargo. Campbell was awarded for his efforts, being promoted to steward, returned to England three years later on the brig Eagle. An undelivered letter written by his sister Margaret Glen and held at the HBCA and carried the news of several family tragedies. It revealed that his siblings were also mariners or married to merchants.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella [2] 1; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-12; FtVanCB 6; YFDS 4b-5a; log of Dryad 1; PortB HBCA C.3/13, 14; MI 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 31-34

Campbell, Duncan [1] (fl. 1826 - 1831) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America

Maritime employee

HBC Native apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Native apprentice, Coastal Trade (1827 - 1830); Native apprentice, Vancouver (schooner) (1830); Native apprentice, Naval Department (1830 - 1831).

Duncan Campbell joined the HBC in 1826 as a native apprentice and worked on coastal shipping until 1831.

PS: HBCA YFASA 6-9; YFDS 2a; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; ShMiscPap 14

Campbell, Duncan [2] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Duncan Campbell made one return voyage from London to the Northwest Coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of the Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Campbell, Hugh (fl. c. 1840 - 1843) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

Hugh Campbell joined the HBC on August 24, 1840 in London and sailed to the coast on the Cowlitz. After several months of coastal trading and runs to Oahu, he joined the Columbia around December 1841 and arrived back in London on May 8, 1843.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; log of Columbia 4

Campbell, Kenneth (1805 - 1871) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Stornoway, Scotland - 1805 (born to Angus Campbell and Ann MacKenzie)

Death: Stornoway, Scotland - 1871

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1843); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1845); Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1845).

Kenneth Campbell joined the HBC on June 15, 1840 for five years as a blacksmith. Leaving a family behind in Stornoway, Campbell sailed to North America and reached Fort Vancouver in 1841. He served out his time, along with several other blacksmiths, at the blacksmith's shop inside the stockades of Fort Vancouver pounding out nails and other items. At the end of his contract he returned across the continent and sailed to the British Isles and his family. In Stornoway, in his absence, the family had been living on Francis Street but, by 1851, they established a permanent home on Keith Street.

Kenneth Campbell had one wife and seven children. He married Catherine MacKenzie (?-1875) in Stornoway in 1826 and together they had Angus (1827-?), Murdo (1829-?), Catherine (1831-?) Alex (1833-?), Barbara (1839-?), Mary (1839-?) and John (1847-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-25; log of Prince Rupert V 6; family information: 1841 & 1851 U.K. Census; genealogical researcher, Northton, Harris

Campbell, Robert [1] (1804 - 1879) (Irish and American)

Birth: Aughlane, County Tyrone, Ireland - 1804

Death: St. Louis, Missouri - October 1879

Fur trade employee

Ash. Clerk, William Henry Ashley's Trading Expedition (1825); SJ & S Clerk, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1828); S & C Brigade leader, Sublette & Campbell partnership (1830s).

American fur trader and executor to Jedediah Smith, Robert Campbell attended several Rendezvous' west of the Divide between 1826 and 1834, including the raucous 1832 Pierre's Hole gathering, and eventually became one of the most wealthy and respected St. Louis merchants. Coming to America around 1824, Campbell settled in St. Louis but tuberculosis forced him into an outdoor life. Consequently, he joined Ashley's fur trading expedition of 1825 as clerk and his health was completely restored. In association with Thomas Fitzpatrick, Jedediah Smith and James Bridger, as well as the Sublette brothers, Campbell worked until 1832 when he and William Sublette formed a partnership to compete with the American Fur Company. Campbell did not operate in the field after 1835, the partnership did not do well and was dissolved around 1842. In St. Louis, however, Campbell amassed a fortune, becoming president of the State Bank as well as the Merchants' National Bank; additionally, he was owner of the Southern Hotel and had other real estate holdings. In both 1851 and 1869 he served as Indian Commissioner. In his later years he suffered from bronchial infection. Campbell's St. Louis house has been set up as a museum.

In Philadelphia, Campbell married Virginia Kyle of Raleigh, N.C. and had three children.

PS: MHS Campbell SS: D. L. Morgan, p. 179; DAB Ghent; Chittenden, p. 260-61; Gowans

Campbell, Robert [2] (fl. 1847 - 1848) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1848).

Robert Campbell's career with the HBC was short but eventful. He left London on the Vancouver on September 22, 1847 for the coast but, as his vessel was wrecked on the bar of the Columbia on its arrival the following May, Campbell and others were assigned elsewhere. In October 1848 at Fort Langley, after refusing to load the Cadboro on a Saturday afternoon, he and two others were sent to the fort by James Douglas to be confined to a house; their bedding followed. They were replaced by five Sandwich Islanders. Not liking his new situation, Campbell, who was cited as the ringleader, and friends returned to the ship and were once again taken back to the fort. The following month, at Fort Victoria, Robert Campbell was discharged from the service and shipped out on board the American brig Belfast.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; log of Cadboro 6

Campbell , Wastayap [variation: Wastiap, Wastiape] (c. 1811 - 1835) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1811

Death: Fraser River [British Columbia] - November 1835

Fur trade employee

HBC Native apprentice, New Caledonia (1827 - 1833); Apprentice, New Caledonia (1833 - 1835); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1833 - 1835).

Westayap Campbell, who began working for the HBC in 1827, spent most of his career in New Caledonia. Officially he drowned on November 8, 1835 in the Fraser River. Later evidence revealed, however, that drowning was not the cause of death. Early in November, Westayap Campbell and clerk George Linton and their respective families set out for the Alexandria post in their canoes. When both families disappeared it was felt that they had drowned, given the flow of the Fraser. However, a different story emerged on March 14, 1838, when Toul's Whate's widow, who had fled her own village in fear for her life after the death of her husband, revealed a different version. It appears that a deal over the purchase of a dog had gone bad. When the Campbells and Lintons camped near a village, Westayap purchased a dog, the payment for which was deemed insufficient. Perhaps in an act of defiance, Westayap killed the dog and put it in his canoe. The seller, Kow na yelle, insulted, shot Westayap and then Linton as he was going for his gun. Six others systematically butchered Westayap's wife and the rest of the Linton family with bullets, daggers and rifle butts. The bodies were thrown into the river and the canoes broken to make it look like a drowning.

The name of Westayap Campbell's wife has not been traced.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-3; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-6; FtAlexPJ 4

Campbell, William [1] (fl. 1836 - 1839) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Westray, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839).

William Campbell who joined the HBC from Westray in 1835, spent much of his time transporting the parties to and from Fort Vancouver and the Snake River. He returned to the British Isles via the Prince Rupert at the end of his contract in 1839.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7, 9; YFASA 18-19

Campbell, William [2] (fl. 1842 - 1845) (British)

Birth: British Isles

Death: possibly Campbelltown, United Kingdom

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1843 - 1844); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1844 - 1845).

William Campbell shipped on with the HBC in London around September 6, 1842, coming to the coast on the Columbia. Campbell had a nasty streak, for on March 26, 1844 while on the Cadboro, Campbell quarrelled with the ship's carpenter, Robert Webster, kicking him in the eye so severely that the carpenter was unable to report to work (log of Cadboro, 5, fo. 52d). Shortly after this, on May 15, 1844 and well before the end of his contract, he was transferred to the barque Columbia to be sent back to England. Throughout the rest of the journey back to the British Isles the logs are filled with Campbell's rebellions and violence to the extent that he was asked on March 26, 1845 "to get his hammock from the forecabin and all his clothes and live in the twist decks by himself" (log of Columbia, 6, fo. 38). Five days later, the isolation had its effect - Campbell asked for forgiveness (ibid, fo. 40) and returned to duty for the remaining two months of the voyage.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 6; FtVanASA 8; YFDS 14; YFASA 24; log of Cadboro 5

Campbell, William [3] (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Sailmaker, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

William Campbell made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Campo, Charles [variation: Compo] (fl. 1835 - 1849) (Undetermined origin)

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

Ash. Trapper, Upper Missouri (1820s - 1820s); U.A. Interpreter and guide for Rev. Samuel Parker, Columbia Department (1835); HBC Labourer, Fort Nez Percés (1835 - 1838); Settler, Willamette (1840s+).

In the 1820s Charles Campo worked in the Upper Missouri area for American fur trading companies. In 1834, he was in Spokane country and, at the 1835 Green River Rendezvous (being fluent in the Nez Perces and Flathead languages), he signed on with the travelling Rev. Samuel Parker as guide and interpreter. Later that year he signed on with the HBC at Fort Nez Perces. He was discharged there June 1, 1838 and probably took on a wife around that time, settling on a farm near Waiilatpu where he converted from Roman Catholicism to the Protestant First Church of Oregon. Some time after that he settled in the Willamette and, by 1842, had several farm animals and crops on thirty-five enclosed acres [14.1 ha]. At Champoege he reverted to Roman Catholicism, voted in favour of the organization of the Provisional Government on May 2, 1843, and was still living there in 1849.

Charles Campo had one wife, Helene, Walla Walla (?-?) aka Louise. Their traced children were Henri (?-?), Joseph (c.1841-53), Paul (c. 1845-?) and Helene (1848-?).

PS: MHS Chouteau; HBCA FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 16, 18; OHS 1842 Census; 1849 Census, Champoege PPS: Holman, p.114; CCR 3a; Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 23

Canasawarette, Ignace [variation: Canasawaratte, Canasawarrette] (c. 1818 - ?) (Native)

Birth: (possibly born to Thomas Canasawarrette)

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, South Party (1838 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842).

Ignace Canasawarette worked as a trapper and eventually became a Willamette settler. Ignace may have been mixed descent (Iroquois and local native); the following entry, Thomas Canasawarrette, is possibly his father.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-6

See Also: Canasawarrette, Thomas (possible Father)

Canasawarrette, Thomas [variation: Ocanasawaret] (c. 1793 - 1832) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1793

Death: Tillamook Region, Oregon - March 1832

Freeman

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); Middleman, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814); HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Freeman middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Freeman middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1827); Freeman middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, York Factory Express (HBC) (1828); Freeman trapper, South Party (1828 - 1830); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1832).

Iroquois Canasawarrette was a member of the Northwest Company in 1813 when it took over Fort Astoria and was one of the members sent to the Willamette post to gather meat for the large numbers of people at Fort George [Astoria]. He left for Fort William/Montreal in a large brigade of ten canoes in April 1814 and may have entered the service of the HBC in 1816. Canasawarrette was back on the Pacific slopes by 1821 and was killed, along with Pierre Kakaraquiron, by the Tillamooks in March 1832.

Thomas Canasawarrette and a native woman from the Dalles had a daughter Marie (who married Charlot Tsete [Charles Tchigtel]). The above Ignace may also have been a son.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; YFASA 1-2, 4-9, 11-12; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtVanAB 10; YFDS 3a-3b; FtVanASA 1; FtVanCB 8, fo. 1d PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 113; CCR 1a, 1b

See Also: Canasawarrette, Ignace (possible Son); Tchigt, Charles (Son-in-Law)

Cancre (fl. 1793) (Native)

Birth: probably Athabasca [Alberta]

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

Cancre, the less than flattering nickname of a presumably local Athabaskan native boy, joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chepewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific. He is mentioned several times in Mackenzie's journals and appeared to be quite helpful, quite unlike the French connotation of "dunce" or "duffer" that his name implies.

PPS: HakSP Mackenzie, p. 257, 275, 283, 303, 343

Canning, William [variation: Cannon] (1763 - 1854) (American)

Birth: Virginia, United States - 1763

Death: Near Mission St. Paul, French Prairie, Oregon - August 1854

Freeman

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813);

Millwright, Willamette (winter 1813 - 1814); HBC Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Freeman trapper, South Party (1826 - 1827); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1826 - 1827); Freeman hunter, South Party (1826 - 1827); Millwright, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1836); PFC Settler, Willamette (1835 - 1836).

William Canning's life went much beyond the fur trade. Having fought in the American Revolution, Canning was still a soldier when he was engaged at Mackinac in July 1810 by Wilson Price Hunt for the overland Astoria party, arriving in Astoria on January 18, 1812. He joined the NWC, using his millwright skills as well as his hunting ability. Throughout his employment with the HBC, during which he remained an American citizen, he made the overshot waterwheel at John McLoughlin's sawmill, and built the first oxen-powered flour mill at the fort, replete with wheels, cogs and quarried granite. He hardened the oak by boiling it in seal oil and he cut the granite with a cold chisel. After 1843 he worked at Thomas McKay's grist mill built at Champoege and was one of the fifty-two voting for local civil government at Champoege that year. He appeared in a variety of journals throughout his service, and died at the residence of Casimir Gariepie in 1854 at the ripe old age of ninety.

William Cannon had one wife, Polly (?-?), Clackamas, and one recorded child, John (?-bap.1837-?), baptised by Rev. Beaver on September 17, 1839.

PS: RosL-Ph, Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 4-9, 11-15; FtVanASA 1-3; YFDS 4a-7, 11; BCA BCCR CCCath PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 719; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105; HBRS XXIII, p.18n; anonymous newspaper article, OHS SB #9, [description of work in mill] p. 148, OHS Statesman, Sept. 5 1854, p. 3 SS: Dobbs, p. 14; Clarke, Samuel A, Pioneer Days in the Oregon Country, II, p. 184; OHQ v. XXXIV:105; Holman, p.114
See Also: Carson, Alexander (Friend)

Canot [variation: Canoe, Canots] (fl. 1821 - 1834) (Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands - 1802

Death: Fort Alexandria, New Caledonia - May 1834

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1828); Middleman, Fort St. James (1828 - 1829); Middleman and bouté, Chilcotin (1829 - 1830); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1834).

Canot, whose unusual non-Polynesian name may have come about because of his ability with small boats, appears to have joined the HBC in 1821 at the age of nineteen. His otherwise competent career was not without danger. In April 1828, he was travelling with HBC interpreter Duncan Livingston from Fort Babine when, in an attempt to get some food to replace that stolen from their cache, they happened upon a native village. Livingston, suspecting that something was amiss, sent Canot off; Canot was pursued but managed to avoid being caught. As he was running, the Sandwich Islander heard two shots that killed Livingston so Canot made his way to Babine to report the news there. On May 7, 1834, while he was working at Fort Alexandria, he took sick. He did not recover and died seven days later and was buried the following evening.

Canot left a family, but their names have not been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2, 4-9, 11-14; YFDS 1a, 3a-4a, 5a-5c; FtStJmsLS 1; FtStJmsRD 3; FtStJmsCB 6; FtVanASA 1-2; FtAlexPJ 3; FtAlexAB 1

Cantara, Antoine (? - 1830) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Yamaska, Lower Canada

Death: The Dalles, Columbia River - July 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1825 - 1830); Trapper, Snake Party (1825 - 1830).

Antoine Cantara, who signed on with the HBC from Yamaska in 1825, spent his entire fur trade career working on Snake Expeditions under Peter Skene Ogden. In 1830 he was drowned with eleven others in the Dalles when the boat on which he was riding was sucked into a whirlpool. The accident also took Ogden's account of the expedition, as well as many furs.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-10; FtVanASA 1-2; death in William Kittson's August 12, 1830 letter to John Rowland, B.4/125, fo. 50

Cantard, Modeste (fl. 1821) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1821).

Modeste Cantard may have been a member of the cross-country brigade when he appeared at Fort George in 1821. He appears to have transferred to Lesser Slave Lake.

Cantin, Jean Baptiste (c. 1816 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Pointe aux Trembles, Lower Canada - c. 1816

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1838).

Jean Baptiste Cantin, who joined the HBC from Pointe aux Trembles as a middleman and winterer in 1835, signed his contract with an "X". At the end of his three year contract, he went east in March of 1838 and was paid in Montreal. He signed a further three year contract in 1839 receiving ten Spanish piastras in advance but did not return to the Pacific slopes.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15, 17-18; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-5; HBCCont

Canton, James (fl. 1823 - 1825) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1823 - 1825).

James Canton worked two outfits at Fort George.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 11-12
See Also: Coah, James

Cardin, Jean Baptiste (c. 1801 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Misquikee, Sorel or Grand Maska, Lower Canada - c. 1801

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1820); Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, New Caledonia (1823); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825).

Jean Baptiste Cardin joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on January 12, 1820 from Grand Maska. He likely came directly to the Pacific slopes, probably Fort George [Astoria] and is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821. He helped build Fort Babine [Kilmaurs] in the late Fall of 1822 and while there in 1823, he signed a contract which indicated that he was to travel between Babine and Hudson's Bay and spend the summers at Babine. In 1825, he returned to Montreal.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; FtGeo[Ast]AB 7; YFASA 1-2, 4-5; FtBabPJ 1; HBCCont; FtStjmsLS

Cardinal, Guillaume [variation: George Le Roux Cardinale] (fl. 1810 - 1822) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); PFC Steersman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Employee, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

Guillaume Le Roux Cardinal joined Wilson Price Hunt's Pacific Fur Company Overland Expedition on August 3, 1810 at Mackinac. He travelled with this expedition for a year before it crossed the Continental Divide in late summer, 1811, reaching Fort Astoria on January 18, 1812. In June, 1812, he may have accompanied David Stuart to help construct Fort Okanagan, for he was found working there in 1813. After the PFC was bought out by the NWC, he signed on with the latter company, and eventually the HBC, returning east over the Rockies around 1822.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; HBCA YFASA 1 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 109

Cardinal, Jacques [variation: Jaco, Jacoo] (fl. 1809 - 1833) (Undetermined origin)

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Columbia District (1812 - 1821); HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822).

Jacques Cardinal was a member of the Northwest Company as early as 1809 when he appeared, along with part of his family, as a member of Alexander Henry the Younger's party east of the Rockies. On the expedition Cardinal acted as a trusted courier, a chaser of horse thieves, an arbitrator, a hunter, etc., in other words, a handy jack-of-all-trades. He appeared to stay west of the Continental Divide until 1822. At that time, he left the Columbia for Lesser Slave Lake as a horsekeeper, worked in the Saskatchewan and later, the Red River Settlement. He was free from 1831 and for the next two years appeared on the censuses with wife and children.

The records are unclear as to how many wives and children Jacques Cardinal had. He had a wife and son as early as 1809 and a wife, son and daughter in the early 1830s. (If the Jacques Cardinale from St. Laurent, Lower Canada who wrote his will on June 26, 1829 at Norway House is the same as the above, then his children were Jacques (?-?), Joseph (?-?) and Angélique (?-?).)

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1, 9; FtGeo[Asst]AB 19; YFASA 1; HBCABio PPS: ChSoc LII, p. 403, 405, 426, 427, 429, 423, 433, 443, 444, 446, 447, 455, 464, 466, 468, 499, 590, 603, 604, 606; YFDS Wills

Carless, Joseph [variation: Careless] (fl. 1840 - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably Staffordshire, England

Death: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer, Forager (ship) (1840); Engineer, Coastal Trade (1840 - 1846); Engineer, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1846); Engineer, Vancouver (barque) (1846).

The HBC considered themselves lucky when they secured Joseph Carless, from #4, Strung (Spring?) Row, Handsworth, Staffordshire, England, as engineer to the steamer Beaver in December 5, 1839 to replace the outgoing chief engineer, Peter Arthur. Carless, who was to bring his wife with him, was from the engine supply company of Messrs. Bolton, Watt & Company which had supplied the engine for the Beaver. In January 1840, Joseph and his wife, Maria, left the London docks on the Forager, sailed around the Horn and arrived in Fort Vancouver on October 8, 1840. They then went to Nisqually where the Beaver was based and sailed the steam vessel assisted by a blacksmith in place of an assistant engineer. For the next four years, Carless sailed the coast, and at one point, much to the consternation of CF John McLoughlin, condemned the boilers, which his predecessor had said were in sound condition. He tried to retire in 1844 but because of a series of events, didn't until 1846 when, on December 12 of that year, along with his wife and two children (since born in the country) sailed back to England on the barque Vancouver. They arrived back at the London docks in July, 1847.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 19-20, 24-26; Outward Correspondence, A.6/25, Oovernor & Committee's Dec. 31, 1839 letter to John McLoughlin, [Joseph Carless and his wife as passengers aboard the Forager] fo. 54d; FtVanCB 28- 30; log of Vancouver [3], 2; PPS: HBRS VI, p. 387-88

Carpenter, Joseph [variation: Jacob] (fl. 1814) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Fur trade employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1814); Blacksmith, Fort George [Astoria] (1814 - 1817); Blacksmith, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

Joseph (Jacob) Carpenter was a cantankerous blacksmith who found himself in considerable trouble throughout his career in the fur trade. It started when the schooner Columbia was rounding Cape Horn on June 14, 1814 and a conspiracy plan of Carpenter, with fellow seamen John Happy, John Peterson and John Decruz to kill the first mate captain and officers, was exposed by fellow crew member Thomas Smoke. As the officers had been warned, the mutiny didn't materialize and the four were put in irons. As Carpenter confessed, he was put in irons separate from the rest who had threatened to murder him for his confession. He disembarked at Fort Astoria where his behaviour changed for the better. By 1817, however, Carpenter's behaviour became unruly and he deserted to the Clatsop tribe who protected him. Messengers were sent to him but to no avail, and his protectors did not visit the fort, instilling fears of a potential attack. A nervous James Keith decided to banish Carpenter from the River, and therefore asked that he be brought back dead or alive. Columbia crew members went to the village, and after ascertaining from the chief that Carpenter was asleep in his lodge, jumped him and tied his hands behind him. His female companion roused the village, who threatened the whites as they had promised to protect Carpenter. In turn, the well-armed 156 Indians were threatened by the whites, who managed to get Carpenter back to the fort. Back at the fort, according to Corney, "Carpenter was well secured over the gate over the fort, his handcuffs were made with a nut to screw tight on, and then clinched." His legs were similarly bound "and a large hoop made to go tight round his body, with a chain to each side of it, which was stretched tight out, and locked to the post of the gate. He was kept until the Columbia was ready for sea" (Barry, p. 365-367).

PPS: Barry, "Peter Corney's", p. 356-57, 365-67; A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 61-64

Carpenter, Peter (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

Peter Carpenter made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts.

PS: HBCA Port B 1

Carpentier, Charles (c. 1794 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Cuthbert, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: possibly West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Langley (1828 - 1830); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1830 - 1834); Middleman, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Trapper, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Snake Party (1835 - 1844); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1835 - 1844).

Charles Carpentier, who signed his contact with an "X", had worked in the fur trade from 1810 or 1811. In the 1830s he appeared to work as a trapper dealing in the Indian trade, and was probably a freeman by 1845.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 24; YFDS 3a-7; FtVanASA 2-8
See Also: Beaudouin, Caesar (Son-in-Law)

Carriere, Michel (? - c. 1812?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Death: probably Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812).

Michel Carriere, who barely made it into the history books of the Pacific Northwest, appears to have first joined the NWC [McTavish, Frobisher & Co.] on March 20, 1802 to work at Lac la Pluie [Rainy Lake]. He has not been traced for the next eight years but, around September 10, 1810 at St. Louis, Missouri, he joined the Wilson Price Hunt overland expedition, for he first appeared on Astorian records there. Carrier was last seen on January 8, 1812, sitting on a horseback near some Snake lodges, (Hunt, 53-54; Ross, p. 181) in a state of exhaustion. He may have died shortly after that for he disappeared from records at that point.

PPS: ShdeSB Liste; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 181; Hunt, p. 53-54 SS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105

Carriere, Onizime (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1823

Death: possibly Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1847 - 1849); Carpenter, Cowlitz Farm (1847 - 1849); Carpenter, Cowlitz Farm (1849).

Onizime Carriere, who joined the HBC from Quebec in 1844, may not have gone back. Free from August 1, 1849, he began farming in the Cowlitz area and in 1850 showed up as "Tezim Carriers".

He had one wife, Mary (c.1833-?) of unknown origin.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-30; YFDS 20; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co.

Carriveau, Joseph (fl. 1818) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1818).

Joseph Carriveau crossed over the Rockies onto the Pacific slopes in 1818 with Angus Bethune and James McMillan. He may have been part of the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 2

Carson, Alexander (c. 1782 - 1836) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: possibly Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest - 1836

Fur trade employee

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); NWC Gunsmith, Willamette or Wallace House (winter 1813 - 1814); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821); HBC Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Snake Country (1822 - 1823); Trapper, Snake Party (1823 - 1825); Trapper, Snake Party (1828 - 1830); Gunsmith, Snake Party (1830 - 1831); Trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1835); PFC Gunsmith, Fort George [Astoria] (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

Alexander Carson was a free spirit whose considerable luck eventually ran out. Carson moved west at an early age, becoming a soldier with the U.S. Army. He joined the Lewis and Clark expedition as a private, going as far as the Mandan area with them before he was discharged, wintering 1804-1805 outside the protective walls of the expedition's Mandan fort along with François Rivet, Baptiste Deschamps, Étienne Malbeouf. On May 24, 1811, while he was trapping in the upper Missouri, he joined the Wilson Price Hunt's Overland Expedition with Benjamin Jones and was left to winter with Pierre Delauney, Pierre Detaye and Louis St. Michel at Mad River to trap beaver. He was robbed by the Crows and picked up by John Reed and taken to Astoria by Donald McKenzie. After the sale of Astoria to the NWC in April 1814, he boarded one of ten canoes bound for Montreal but, being a freeman, disembarked at the Willamette. For the next sixteen years he hunted and trapped, selling his furs to the NWC and the HBC although, in 1822 he deserted from the HBC with his supplies. In 1824, he joined the Snake Party of Alexander Ross who found him to be a good trapper. The following outfit, he deserted Ogden's Snake Party for the more lucrative American party after paying off his debt. He likely worked with the American parties until 1828-1829 when he rejoined Ogden. In 1830 while on Ogden's Snake Party, luck was on his side for, to traverse the dangerous Dalles, Carson was replaced by an American Bache Godriche who lived just below the rapids. Bache and eleven others drowned that day while shooting the rapids. Carson went on to live in the Yamhill country where he may have been killed by Tualatin Indians in April or May 1836. Popular myth has it that he was trying to conceal himself along a large oak limb when he sneezed, fatally revealing himself to vengeful natives. He was dispatched and his remains were left to the wolves. Later passing travellers buried his remains. In the 1860s his supposed jawbone was picked up and eventually handed over to the Oregon Historical Society. Carson never married; the beneficiary of his will was his friend William Canning.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; SnkCoP] 1, 2, 3, 9; YFASA 8-9, 11-16; YFDS 3b, 4b, 5b-6; FtVanASA 2-3; FtVanCB 20; HBCA Alexander Carson search file; OHS Hubbard PPS: Labonte, p. 175; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105 SS: Maloney, "Alexander Carson", p. 16-21; Stoller, p. 43-52; McArthur, Oregon Geographic Names, p. 8
See Also: Canning, William

Carson, Christopher Houston (1809 - 1868) (American)

Birth: Richmond, Kentucky - December 1809 (born to Lindsay Carson and Rebecca Robinson)

Death: Fort Lyon, Colorado - May 1868

Free trader

U.A. Trader, Oregon District (1826 - 1842); Hunter, Oregon District (1826 - 1842); Trapper, Oregon District (1826 - 1842); U.S. Gov't Guide, Lt. John C. Fremont Expedition (1842).

Kit Carson, a relative footnote in Pacific Slopes-Northwest Coast fur trade history, became legendary for his exploits to the south and east of the Oregon territory. In 1812, a two-year old Kit was taken by his family to Howard County, Missouri. When Kit was only nine, his father was killed by a falling tree, and so at age fourteen Kit was apprenticed to a saddle maker for a year before the dissatisfied youth ran away. What followed was a lifetime of legendary (somewhat exaggerated) exploits that have been written up and popularized by many writers over the years and so are not covered here. At the 1835 Rendezvous he was involved in a duel with a "Shunar" (probably Choinard) and killed him; and, in 1836 trapped with Thomas McKay of the HBC. He explored eastern Oregon and much of the southwest, and worked with most of the names associated with American mountain men. Carson had a home in Taos and tried farming there. In his later years he was employed by the U. S. Government and travelled extensively around the southwest on various campaigns. He died in Colorado and was buried in Taos, New Mexico where his and his wife's grave can still be seen.

Kit Carson's family life is unclear but he appears to have had several successive wives. Two of the more lasting were Waanibe (?-c.1841) with whom he had two children, and Josefa Jaramillo (?-?) with whom he had Charles (1849-51), William (Julian) (1852-?), Teresina (1855-?), Christopher (1858-?), Charles (1861-?), Rebecca (1864-?), Estanfanita (1866-?) and Josefita (1868-?).

PPS: Carson SS: Vestal, p. 28; Estergren; DAB Ghent; Carter, "Kit Carson", p. 166-92; McClung

Carter, Joseph L. (fl. 1851 - 1854) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver sundries accounts (1853 - 1854).

Joseph L. Carter joined the HBC around 1851 as an apprentice clerk. In May of that year he left Montreal and travelled west via Sault Ste. Marie. In July he was in Norway House and Red River and, finally, Fort Vancouver. He spent two outfits working, most likely at Fort Vancouver, before he retired in the Columbia in 1853.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9; HBCA Joseph L. Carter search file

Carter, Joseph Oliver (1802 - 1850) (American)

Birth: Charlestown, Suffolk, Massachusetts - September 1802

Death: Honolulu, Oahu, Hawaiian Islands - July 1850

Maritime officer

MW Mate, Convoy (brig) (1825); Captain, Convoy (brig) (1833 - 1836); Captain, Rasselas (ship) (1836 - 1838).

Joseph O. Carter shipped aboard the Josiah Marshall brig, Convoy [William Henry McNeill] in Boston as second mate before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. After arriving at Honolulu in 1825, he spent the next thirteen years on a variety of vessels servicing the Northwest Coast, Spanish America, Hawaii and Russian America as well as Kamchatska. In Honolulu, he became a trader and a hotel keeper (the "Mansion House") and raised a family.

Joseph O. Carter had one wife, Hannah T. Lord (1809-1898), of Hallowell, Maine. They were married in Oahu on November 24, 1833 and had six children: Joseph Oliver Jr. (1835-?), Henry Alpheus Pierce (1837-?), Samuel Morrill (1839-?), Alfred Wellington (1841-?), Frederick William (1842-?) and Catherine Rebecca (1844-?). Hannah died on January 29, 1898 in Honolulu.

PS: BCA log of Convoy; HMCS SReynoldsJ; HBCA FtVanCB 12; USNA DespHon; HU-Wid ColCent, May 31, 1834; HHS Friend, August 1, 1850, p. 64 SS: HSA Cartwright 1; Howay, A List of Trading Vessels; Malloy, p. 96

Cartier, Ignace (c. 1768 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Province of Quebec - c. 1768

Death: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, New Caledonia (1827 - 1829); Middleman, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830).

Ignace Cartier, who joined the HBC from Sorel in 1824, signed his contract with an "X". He spent five years on the Pacific slopes as a middleman and, by the summer of 1830, was back in Montreal.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 5-10; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1; YFDS 2b-3a; FtVanAB 26

Cartier, Joseph (c. 1753 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably New France - c. 1753

Death: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Guide, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Interpreter, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1818); Interpreter, Columbia Department (1821); HBC Interpreter, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1825); Interpreter, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1827 - 1828).

Joseph Cartier was seventy-five years old when he ended his sixty year career with the fur trade, indicating that he began his career with the fur trade around 1768. According to NWC records, he was employed by the NWC out of Fort William in 1813. On December 24, 1813 at Fort George, his house was finished and Gabriel Franchere and John C. Halsey took up lodging with him. Aside from being an interpreter, he did everyday jobs such as repairing canoes and culling potatoes. He most likely returned to Montreal in 1827-1828 at the end of his long career.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 2, 9, 10; YFASA 1-5, 8; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-12 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 628, 685, 721, 723, 730

Cartreah (fl. 1826 - 1827) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Other

HBC Slave, South Party (1826 - 1827).

Cartreah was a member of Jean Baptiste Depaty's [dit McKay] household, which may mean he was a slave. He appeared once in the journals in the Umpqua region.

PS: HBCA FtVanPJ 4 PPS: HBRS XXIII, p. 142

Cass, Martin H. (? - c. 1812) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

PFC Trapper, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811); Trapper, Andrew Henry's Fort (October, 1811 - October, 1811).

Martin H. Cass appears to have joined Wilson Price Hunt's Pacific Fur Company Overland Expedition at the Aricara village on June 5, 1811. On October 9-10, 1811, after the expedition made its way across the great divide, Cass, and four other men, Joseph Miller, partner, John Hoback, Edward Robinson, and Jacob Rezner detached from the expedition at Henry's Fort to trap beaver. From there they went south to the Bear River/Great Salt Lake region and then east several hundred miles into Arapahoe territory where they were robbed. In the winter of 1811-1812 Martin Cass disappeared into obscurity. According to Miller, Hoback, Robinson and Rezner, he deserted, taking their last remaining horse. Robinson then changed his story when relating it to John Reed, stating that Cass had been killed by the Arapahoes. Because of these inconsistencies, rumour spread that Cass's four companions had killed and eaten him during the lean winter.

PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 105 SS: Chittenden, p. 191, 208

Cassin, Baptiste (fl. 1821 - 1822) (Undetermined ethnicity)Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822).

Baptiste Cassin worked for the HBC for one outfit in New Caledonia. He may have worked on the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1

Cately, Edouard (fl. 1842 - 1843) (probably British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843).

Edouard Cately was a crew member of the HBC vessel Columbia in outfit 1842-1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 22

Cathie, James (fl. 1848 - 1856) (British: Scottish)Birth: probably Edinburgh, Scotland*Death: possibly Vancouver Island*Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Harpooner (barque) (1848 - 1849); Baker, Fort Victoria (1849 - 1856).

James Cathie came to Vancouver Island as an HBC baker. After his arrival, he spent the next seven years baking at the fort, and appears to have retired around 1856. Occasionally he would bend the rules, for on December 13, 1851, he was charged with being drunk and riotous; however, his marriage the following year might have calmed him down.

On September 8, 1852 in Victoria, James Cathie married, but the presiding minister failed to enter the name of the wife.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; FtVicASA 1-4; BCA BCCR CCCath; CrtR-PoliceRE; Norcross, Nanaimo Retrospective

Cathrick, Zechariah (fl. 1849 - 1852) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1852); Seaman, Recovery (brig) (1852).

Zechariah Cathrick came twice to the coast as an apprentice seaman on the HBC barque Norman Morison and returned for the third time on the Recovery. He was on the Recovery on the coast when, on November 1, 1852, he, along with fellow crew members Edward James, William Hudson and Thomas Morrow, deserted.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 32; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-2

Cawanaia [variation: Cowannie, Okanaya] (fl. 1817 - 1839) (probably Hawaiian)Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - 1798*Death: probably Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - November 1839*Fur trade employee

NWC Sawyer, Fort George [Astoria] (1817 - 1825); HBC Sawyer, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Sawyer, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1830); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1830 - 1831); Sawyer, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1835); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1839).

Cawanaia began his employment with the fur trade in 1817 and spent most of his career as a sawyer at Fort Vancouver. In outfit 1834-1835, he was disabled and received only partial wages, but worked on until 1839.

Cawanaia had one wife, an unnamed Native woman, and one daughter, Angelique (c.1825-?), baptised by Anglican Reverend Herbert Beaver on July 22, 1838 at Fort Vancouver. She was re-baptised June 7, 1842 at Fort Vancouver by Catholic Priest Modeste Demers with the more Catholic name of Marie Angelique. Angelique wed a French Canadian boatman, Jean Baptiste Bouchard, who arrived the same time as her father.

PS: HBCA FtGeor[Ast]AB 10-12; YFASA 2-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 2a, 3b-4a, 5a-7; FtVannASA 1-5; BCA CCCath baptisms PPS: CCR 1a

Cawnarde, Pierre (fl. 1813 - 1814) (possibly Native or Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Bas de la Riviere [Manitoba]

Fur trade employee

NWC Bowsman and middleman, Columbia Department (winter 1813 - 1814).

Pierre Cawnarde joined the NWC in Bas de la Riviere [on Winnipeg River, near Lake Winnipeg, Manitoba] in 1812 and was a member of a large group of NWC employees who descended on the Astoria area when the NWC took over the Pacific Fur Company. He stationed at Bas de la Riviere and set out again from Fort George on May 1, 1814 in a fourteen-man canoe headed by Duncan McDougall and Alexander McTavish.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 714

Cayalle, Antoine (fl. 1813 - 1815) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Province of Quebec/Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Bowsman and middleman, Willamette Post/Wallace House (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Antoine Cayalle joined the NWC at Fort William in 1812 on a three year contract. He was part of a large group of NWC employees who came to the Columbia when the Company took over the New York based Pacific Fur Company's interests in the Columbia. Cayalle spent the winter of 1813-1814 at Willamette House and on April 4, 1814 left for the east in an eight man canoe headed by Alexander Ross and Donald McGillis. By the fall of 1815, he was likely back in Montreal.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Coues, New Light...p. 875

Cedrass, Joseph [variation: Cedras] (? - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Vaudreuil, Lower Canada

Death: Fort Rupert, Colony of Vancouver Island - September 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Woodcutter, Fort Stikine (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1846 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849).

Joseph Cedrass joined the HBC in 1844 on a three year contract. He spent four outfits at Fort Stikine before going south to Fort Rupert where he helped to construct the post. On August 31, 1849, however, he unwittingly ate toxic mussels and although fellow workers tried to get him to vomit, he died and quickly turned black. He was the first to be buried in the new Fort Rupert graveyard.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-29; FtRupPJ 1

Cerre, Michael Sylvestre [standard: Cerré] [variation: Cerry, Cerrie] (1803 - 1860) (American)

Birth: St. Louis, Missouri - April 1803

Death: probably St. Louis, Missouri - January 1860

Free trader

AFC Fur trader, Rendezvous (1833 - 1834).

Michael S. Cerré, chief assistant to Captain B. L. E. Bonneville, put in two appearances on the Pacific Slopes. Coming from a family that had been involved in the fur trade for a number of years, Cerré had gained considerable experience in the trade with Santa Fe. Prior to 1830 he was a member of P. D. Papin and Company which operated on the Missouri and from 1830, when PDP&C sold out its interests to the American Fur Company, Cerré continued with that company. In 1832, he joined Bonneville's expedition, crossed the Continental Divide in early 1833 and attended the 1833 Rendezvous at Green River. He returned to St. Louis with furs in the fall of 1833, bringing back a load of supplies for the 1834 Rendezvous. That appears to have been his last Rendezvous and he returned to St. Louis. In later years, he entered politics in the St. Louis area, becoming a member of the state legislature, a clerk of the St. Louis Circuit Court and then sheriff of St. Louis County. Michael Cerré appears to have died in St. Louis.

PPS: Leonard, Adventures of, p. 64n; Ferris, Life in the Rocky Mountains, p. 183; SS: Irving, The Adventures of Captain Bonneville, p. 30, 133; Chittenden, p. 359, 399, 405, 425; DAB Drumm

Chabotte, Jean Baptiste (c. 1828 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1828

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1848 - 1850); Middleman, New Caledonia (1850 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Colville (1853).

Jean Baptiste Chabotte joined the HBC from Lachine in 1847. His contract was to end in 1854, but he retired one year early, probably with the blessing of the HBC as they were downsizing at the time.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-31; FtVanASA 9-10

Chalifoux, Andre [standard: André] (c. 1789 - 1851) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Sorel, Quebec - c. 1789 (born to Charles Chalifoux and Louise Dumas)

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - April 1851

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1819); Steersman, Columbia Department (1821); HBC Steersman, Columbia Department (1822 - 1824); Trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Steersman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Steersman, Fort Colville (1826 - 1829); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Guide, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Guide, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1836); Guide, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Settler, Willamette (1840 - 1841).

André Chalifoux joined the NWC from Sorel around 1813 and came to the Pacific Coast with Angus Bethune and Peter Skene Ogden in the spring of 1819. He continued with the HBC at the time of coalition in 1821 and likely became part of the cross-country brigade as, for example, in outfit 1822-1823 he drew on account at Fort George [Astoria], Spokane and York Factory. André is on record as returning to Canada in October, 1835. On October 22, 1838 while bringing Father's Demer and Blanchet west, his two children, Charles and Michel, drowned when running one of the rapids below the Dalles des Morts. Charles' body was recovered and he was buried close to a cross planted at Fort of the Lakes. Michel was not found. André Chalifoux retired to French Prairie as a farmer in 1840 and in two years had enclosed fifty acres [20.2 ha] and was running a productive farm. He was listed in May 2, 1843 as voting against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. He died April 24, 1851 at St. Paul, Oregon.

André Chalifoux had two or more successive wives and an unknown number of children. An unnamed wife died in October 1830, probably at Fort Vancouver, and their children have not been traced. His recorded wife was Catherine Russie (c.1818-?). Their children were Rose (1834-1846), Charles (1835-1838), Michael (1838-1838), Lucie (1838-1849), André (1842-1880), Catherine (1844-?), Louis (1846), Marie Philomene (1848-?) and Sophie (1851-1876).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 3, 9; YFASA 1-9, 11-13, 15-16; 18-20; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 2; YFDS 2a, 3b-6; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-3; FtVanCB 6, 20; OHS 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 2c, 3b SS: Québécois in Orégon, p. 264; Holman, p.115

Chalifoux, Jean Baptiste [variation: Chaulifoux] (c. 1812 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1846); PSAC Carpenter, Cowlitz Farm (1846); Settler, Cowlitz (1846); Carpenter, Cowlitz (1846); Carpenter, Fort Nisqually (1850 - 1859); Mechanic, Fort Nisqually (1850 - 1859).

At Fort Nisqually, on Puget Sound, there wasn't a building, wall, water trough, wagon, or wool press that didn't bear the handiwork of carpenter J. B. Chalifoux. The twenty-nine year old Chalifoux entered the service of the HBC in 1841 from a turbulent Lower Canada and served as a route in the Athabasca while coming to the Columbia. His first appointment was to Fort Stikine, a post which was trying to re-adjust and replace servants after the murder of the post's officer, John McLoughlin Junior. During his four years in the northern coastal fort he may have learned or honed carpentry skills for, when he went to Cowlitz Farm with a family in 1846, it was as a carpenter. By the end of the year he settled there but by 1850 he was warned he was squatting on PSAC Land, on Round Prairie, north of the Cowlitz area. Consequently, on June 29, 1850, Chalifoux offered his carpentry services at Fort Nisqually for £30 a year. For the next nine years Chalifoux appeared almost daily in the journals doing almost every task associated with carpentry. Occasionally he would take time off as, for example, on August 12, 1850 to bring in his own harvest, on June 16, 1851 to repair his own house, or, on May 17, 1852 to build an enclosure around his wife's newly dug grave. The few occasions that he missed work for being intoxicated were easily forgiven considering his value to the fort. On July 12, 1858 he went to the nearby Steilacoom army post to give his note, possibly to be naturalized and, in the following year, on August 2, 1859, left the service of the PSAC.

The family records of Jean Baptiste Chalifoux are unclear but it appears that he had one or more successive wives, one being, Faland (c.1825-?), a Native. One wife, possibly Faland, died on May 15, 1852. Children, possibly from Faland, were Josette (c.1843-?) and Isabella (c.1844-?).

Chalifoux, Maurice (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1821

Death: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman and bouté, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Bouté, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1843); Bouté, Fort Colvile general charges (1843 - 1845).

Maurice Chalifoux, who joined the HBC from Canada in 1839, signed his contract with an "X". In 1845 he returned east of the Rockies to Canada into retirement.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 22, 24; FtVanASA 6-8; HBCCont; YFDS 11-12

Chalifoux, Pierre (fl. 1831 - 1860) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1831 - 1832).

Pierre Chalifoux joined the HBC in 1831 and appears to have suffered some bad luck. His 1832-1833 wages were forfeited for deserting the second time although he was "allowed wages in consideration of his suffering" (YFDS 5a, p. 51b) for the first desertion. In 1835 he appears to have signed a three-year contract at Edmonton House, and was still signing contracts up to 1860 in spite of his spotty record.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-12; YFDS 5a; HBCCont

Chalifoux, Vincent (c. 1812 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Pointe aux Trembles, Lower Canada - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1837); Middleman on Montreal Pay List, New Caledonia (1837 - 1838).

Vincent Chalifoux joined the HBC from Point Aux Trembles around 1835. He went east over the Rockies in 1837 and the following year picked up his pay in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15-17; YFDS 6-8; FtVanASA 3-4

Chamberlain, Adolphe [variation: Francis Adolphus, Adolph Chamberland] (c. 1819 - 1888) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - March 1888

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Church clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Tinsmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1841); Settler, Willamette (1840s+).

Adolph Chamberlain joined the HBC in 1836 from Lachine as a middleman but appears to have doubled as a tinsmith. During his service he became the clerk of the French services of the Protestant Rev. Herbert Beaver. Chamberlain, who left the company on March 22, 1841, returned east over the Rockies that spring, but was soon back, settling on a farm on French Prairie. By 1842 he had the beginnings of a farm with thirty enclosed acres [12.1 ha], no food production and only a couple of farm animals; over time, of course, it grew with the need to raise his large family. In 1843 he voted against the establishment of a provisional government; however, in the fall of 1846 and 1847, he was appointed to the Legislature of Oregon. He died in 1888 and was buried at the old cemetery at St. Paul, Oregon.

Adolph Chamberlain was married twice, maybe three times, and had nineteen children. On May 28, 1838 at John McLoughlin's house inside Fort Vancouver, Reverend Beaver married Adolphe and Laquiesse George, possibly the same as Julienne Watiece whose marriage was formalized in the Catholic Church, some months later. On December 27, 1838, he married Julienne Watiece, the daughter of George Watiece, and together they had six children: Zoe (1839-?), Joseph (1840-?), Virginia (1843-1844), Marie Rose (1845-1845), Marie (1846-?) and Paul (1847-?). Julienne died most likely between 1847 and 1851. With his second wife, Louise Humperville (c.1829-?), the daughter of Canote Humperville, he had thirteen more children: Calixte (1851-1851), Fabien (1852-?), Euphemie (1854-?), Barthelmy (1855-?), Jeremie Clement (1858-?), Adolphe (1860-?), Narcisse (1861-1878), François (1864-?), Pauline (1866-?), Elie (1867-?), Alfred Jerome (1869-?), an unnamed son (1871-1871), and John Baptist (1873-1874). Louise died April 17, 1876 at St. Paul, Oregon.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-6; YFDS 9-11; YFASA 19-20; OHS 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co.; BCA BCCR CCCath PPS: CCR 1a, 2a; 2b, 2c; Beaver, p. 149; In the Supreme Court, p. 189-216 SS: Holman, p.115

Champagne, Francois Xavier [a] [standard: François] (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lanoraie, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Thompson River (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1826); Trapper, Snake Party (1826 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1836); Trapper, South Party (1836 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1841+).

François Champagne joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] from the parish of Lanoraie on January 5, 1820 as a wintering middleman for three years. It is uncertain when he entered the Pacific slopes, but it was before the NWC and HBC merged in 1821. He then served on various expeditions and is noted as having returned east over the Rockies in the Spring of 1836; however, he returned to the Columbia and became a settler in the Willamette in 1841.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; YFASA 1-2, 4-6, 8-9, 11-15; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtVanASA 1-6; YFDS 3b, 4b, 5c-7 PPS: HBRS XXVIII, p. 2, 96

Champagne, Francois Xavier [b] [standard : François] (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Verennes, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1835); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836).

François Xavier Champagne [b] joined the HBC from Verennes in 1833 and returned to Canada in the spring of 1836.

PS: HBCA YFDS 5b-6; YFASA 13-16; FtVanASA 3

Champagne, Joseph (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1821 (born to Joseph Champagne and Marguerite Sauguinette)

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1841 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1846); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1846 - 1849).

After entering the service of the HBC in 1838, Joseph Champagne worked at various coastal forts in the Columbia Department. Contrary to William Glen Rae's unkindly 1840 comment that Champagne was "a half fool, or in other words very stupid" (FtStikPJ, fo. 1d), Champagne appeared to work competently and was a family man. In July 1845, he deserted his Victoria post temporarily for Langley as John Ross was making advances on his wife. On August 20, 1849, after working on steamer Beaver, he deserted again, possibly for the gold fields of California and in 1850 was listed as being a farmer in Marion Co., Oregon. He stayed there until the death of his first wife and then appears to have moved south to the French Settlement west of Roseburg, Oregon where he became a farmer and raised a family.

Joseph Champagne had at least two wives and seven recorded children. On November 19, 1850 at St. Paul, Oregon, he married Catherine Sauve (c.1838-1852), daughter of Laurent Sauve and Josette (Fraser). On May 16, 1852, two years after an apparently childless marriage, Catherine died at St Paul. Subsequently, Champagne moved south to the Roseburg/Umpqua area where he married Liza/Eliza Redmond/Ridnawr (?-?). Their children were Mary Ann (1857-?), Victory Isodora (1859-?), Henri Adolphe (1861-?), Sarah Malvina (1869-?), Joseph (1871-?), Nancy Bell (1874-?) and Philomena (1876-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFASA 19-20, 24-29; YFDS 21; FtStikPJ 1; FtVicCB 1; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 2b, 5a, 5b

See Also: Sauve, Laurent (Father-in-Law)

Champenois, Mr. (fl. 1811 - 1812) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime officer

PFC 2nd mate, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1812).

Mr. Champenois sailed with John Jacob Astor's Beaver from New York Harbour on October 17, 1811 for the North West Coast. Alfred Seton, who kept a journal of the voyage, mentioned him only once, on March 27 [28], 1812, when the vessel was in Hawaii. After arriving at Astoria on May 9, 1812, Champenois likely continued the voyage north in the fall and later to Canton, where Captain Cornelius Sowle had the ship interned to avoid capture during the War of 1812. He has not been traced after that.

Chance, Bouascut [variation: Chances] (fl. 1821 - 1822) (Undetermined ethnicity)Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822).

Bouascut Chance may have been part of the HBC cross-country brigade in 1821.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1

Chapman, Henry (fl. 1853 - 1855) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancover (brigantine) (1852 - 1853).

Henry Chapman joined the HBC in London on June 26, 1852 and sailed to the coast on the Vancover. He was likely with the vessel when it came to grief on Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Islands in August 1853. He may have remained in the area for as long as 1855 before returning to London on an untraced vessel.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1-2

Chapman, Isaac N. (fl. 1843) (American)Birth: probably United States of America*Maritime officer

U.A. Captain, Nereus (tramp freighter) (1842 - 1843).

Captain Isaac N. Chapman was not really a fur trader but worked in opposition to the HBC on the Columbia River. Chapman sailed the tramp freighter Nereus from New England to carry goods to the settlers at Oahu and arrived at the Columbia River in 1842 with barrels for packing salmon. He engaged a native guide at Fort George and went up the Columbia to the junction of the Willamette where he and Captain John Couch of the Chenamus worked in opposition to the nearby HBC. Chapman packed six-hundred barrels of salmon in five months, some of which spoiled, and left for the Hawaiian Islands on September 26, 1842 vowing not to return. From Oahu, Chapman sailed south to Australia and New Zealand and finally arrived in Salem on September 1, 1843. Little is known of the character of Chapman, but possibly because Chapman was a brother-in-law of Josiah Spaulding, who had attacked the HBC, Governor George Simpson in his usual overstatement thought Chapman “a very sly, cunning deceitful fellow, not to be depended upon” (Simpson, fo. 30).

PS: HBCA Simpson's Correspondence D.4/27, George Simpson's April 20, 1842 Sitka letter to John McLoughlin fo. 30;
FtVanCB 29, 33 SS: Malloy, p. 135

Chapman, John (c. 1821 - 1866) (British: English)Birth: probably Kent, England - c. 1821*Death: Victoria, British Columbia - September 1866*Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Cowlitz (barque) (1849 - 1850); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1852); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1853 - 1854); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1855 - 1856).

John Chapman came to Vancouver Island on the Cowlitz as a HBC emigrant labourer. He worked until the mid 1850s and may have gone to the Nisqually area and married but this is uncertain. By 1866, now a disconsolate alcoholic, he was working in Victoria as a bar-keeper for George Balls at the White Horse Hotel. On the morning of September 19, 1866 he came to work intoxicated and was told to sleep it off. After sleeping for six hours, he returned to his cottage, locked himself in and took a large dose of strychnine which he mixed with milk and sugar. Someone who was suspicious of his activity had to crawl in the window but could not rescue him in time. The inquest determined that he had taken his own life in a fit of temporary insanity.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-4; Van-PL Colonist, January 23, p. 3, September 19, 1866, p. 3,
September 19, 1866, p. 2

Charbonneau, Abraham (c. 1815 - ?) (Canadian: French)Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1815*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Thompson River (1841 - 1842); Middleman, New Caledonia (1842 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1849).

Abraham Charbonneau joined the HBC from Montreal in 1840 as a middleman and at first, was a comer and goer to the Snake Country. He then shifted to New Caledonia, probably Kamloops area, where, after the international border was drawn in 1846, he became part of the 1846 expedition to establish an overland route to the coast. He then went south at the end of his contract, when his superiors advised that he not be rehired at Fort Colville because of his attitude and work habits. In spite of that, he was rehired at Fort Vancouver where, on March 1, 1849, he deserted, most likely lured to the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-28; YFDS 11, 16, 19; FtVanASA 6-8; FtKamPJ 3; FtAlexPJ 7

Charbonneau, Antoine (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Contrecoeur, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1835).

Antoine Charbonneau joined the HBC from Contrecoeur in 1832 on a three-year contract as a middleman. He worked for three years on coastal forts before disappearing from Columbia records.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c

Charbonneau, Edouard (fl. 1847 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849).

Edouard Charbonneau likely joined the HBC on a three year contract late in outfit 1847-1848, but on February 1, 1849, presumably lured to the gold fields of California, he deserted.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-28; YFDS 21

Charbonneau, Joseph (c. 1820 - 1856) (Saulteaux or Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1820 (born to Joseph and Susanna)

Death: Victoria area, Colony of Vancouver Island - October 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Nisqually general charges (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1844 - 1848); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1848 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1854).

Joseph Charbonneau, who joined the HBC in 1841, spent the next fourteen years either on the steamer Beaver or at coastal forts. He may not have been a well person for on December 2, 1849, Joseph was dangerously ill and was hastily considered married to Genevieve in the eyes of the church; however, the marriage was rescinded for some unstated reason. He recovered from his illness and was formally married three years later. He retired around 1854 and carried on transactions with the Company until his death. When he died in 1856 his age was listed as twenty-eight, although he was probably closer to thirty-six.

Joseph Charbonneau had one recorded wife and three or four recorded children. On December 4, 1852, he married Genevieve (?-1868), Tongass. Three of their short-lived children were Pierre (1852-1857), Joseph Jr. (?-1869), and Julie (1856-1858). The Catherine baptised on the day of the wedding may have been wife Catherine, Tongass or a daughter, a 4th child. Genevieve died on May 28, 1868 in the Royal Hospital in Victoria.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24-31; FtVicASA 1-2; BCA BCCR StAndC

Charbonneau, Toussaint (c. 1759 - c. 1843) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, New France - c. 1759

Death: Montana - c. 1843

Fur trade employee

U.S. Gov't Interpreter, Lewis and Clark Expedition (1804); Cook, Lewis and Clark Expedition (1804); U.A. Untraced vocation, Fort Clatsop (1805 - 1806).

Toussaint Charbonneau, who had gained a nasty reputation working with the NWC in the 1790s, is best known as the husband of Sacagawea, his Shoshone wife who he won in a gambling game with Indians (whose Hidatsa language was spoken by Charbonneau). Both were taken on by Lewis and Clark on March 18, 1805, he also as an interpreter, but his value as an interpreter is in question as he admittedly spoke only French and Hidatsa, the latter somewhat badly. However, Sacagawea could interpret her native Shoshone to Hidatsa which Charbonneau could interpret to French which some of the members of the expedition understood. They had three children, Toussaint, Baptiste and Lizette who were later taken to St. Louis to be educated through the good offices of William Clarke. (In 1823, when Baptiste was eighteen, he was taken from St. Louis to Europe by a travelling Prince Paul of Württemberg to be educated for six years. Upon Baptiste's return, he fit into neither society and retired to the Wind River Indian reservation, Wyoming in 1852 where he remained until his death in 1885). Toussaint served as an interpreter from 1811-1838 for the U.S. Government Indian Bureau and at various times worked for Manuel Lisa and the Missouri Fur Company as well as Astor's American Fur Company. He had at least five young native wives, and his last marriage was in 1840 to a fourteen year old Assiniboine girl.

PS: ArCan Macdonell PPS: DeVoto; ChSoc LVII, p. 743, p. 743; Chardon SS: Emmons, Sacajawea of the Shoshones; C. G. Clarke, The Men of the Lewis, p. 147-48; Hebard, p. 86, 96; Clark & Edmonds; Ferris, p. 56; M. R. Porter & Davenport, p. 215; Lavendure, The Fist, p. 154, 348; www.nps.gov/jeff/history/culture/toussaint-charbonneau.htm

Charette (fl. 1815) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Between Thompson River and Fraser River [British Columbia] - July 1815

Fur trade employee

NWC In charge, Fort Kamloops [Thompson's River Post, She-waps Post] (1815).

This Charette has never been fully identified. He was working for the NWC in 1815 under Alexander Ross when Ross put Charette in charge of She-waps post, an early name for the Thompson River/Kamloops post. Charette and a Native who had been brought up at (and was living at the fort) struck out on a six day trip north to the Fraser River. On the way, they quarrelled and the Native killed Charette with Charette's own gun. Ross discovered this after he returned from Fort Okanagan.

PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 48

Charette, Antoine (c. 1826 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1826

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Thompson River (1848 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Colville (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Colville (1854 - 1855).

Antoine Charette joined the HBC from Riviere du Loup in 1847. He split his time between Thompson River and Fort Colville and retired in 1855.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-32; FtVanASA 9-11

Charlebois, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Pt. Claire, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1829 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Colville (1831 - 1832).

François Charlebois joined the HBC in 1829 as a middleman and worked one three year contract on the Pacific slopes before returning to Montreal.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-4b YFASA 9, 11-12

Charlebois, Paul (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St. Polycarpe, Lower Canada - c. 1825

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1844 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1850); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851).

Paul Charlebois joined the HBC in 1844 and spent the next seven years at two posts. He retired in 1851 and appeared to carry on transactions with the company until 1852-1853.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-31; FtVanASA 9

Charles [variation: Charlo] (fl. 1811) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Columbia River journey with David Thompson (1811).

Charles was trained to read and write in the Iroquois language and he may have been with Alexander Henry at Pembina Post as early as March 3, 1806, when a "Charlo" ran away with the blacksmith's woman. Certainly, Charles was one of two Iroquois (the other being Ignace) who appeared frequently in David Thompson's Journals. On May 4, 1811, Thompson prepared for his run down the Columbia and "engaged Charles a fine, steady Iroquois to accompany us as Bowsman, being an excellent Canoe Man." On July 3, he began his role as bowsman on the final voyage from Ilthkoyape [Kettle] Falls to the mouth of the Columbia. Charles and group reached the mouth and, on July 22, they began their return voyage upstream where Charles did a variety of tasks, including hunting. On September 18, when they were at Thompson's old hut at the mouth of the Canoe River, a message written in the Iroquois language was left in the hopes that someone from Henry's party passing through from the Athabasca would be able to read it. He was last noted on September 22, 1811, up the Canoe River, as he was about to turn back.

Charles' family has not been traced.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 274; ChSoc XL, p. 328; Belyea, p. 142, 157, 176

Charles, John Jr. (? - 1849) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Athabasca, Alberta (born to John Charles and Jane Auld)

Death: Moose Encampment in the Rocky Mountain Portage [British Columbia] - October 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice post master, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1849).

Being the son of an HBC officer, John Charles joined the HBC in 1846 on a five year apprenticeship contract. He started at Norway House and made his way overland to Fort Vancouver where he worked for two outfits before being accidentally shot on October 21, 1849 at Moose Encampment while in charge of the Express.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-29; YFDS 21; FtVanCB 39; HBCA John Charles search file PPS: HBRS vol. II, p 207-09

Charles, Marc (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Jean, Lower Canada - c. 1825

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1845 - 1849).

Marc Charles joined the HBC from St. Jean in 1844 and worked until March 1, 1849 at which point he went to California, presumably lured by the gold fields there.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28; YFDS 19; FtVanASA 9

Charles, Thomas (c. 1825 - 1885) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Split Lake, Rupert's Land - c. 1825

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - April 1885

Fur trade officer

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Alexandria (1844); Apprentice clerk, Fort Tluz Kuz (1845 - 1847); Apprentice clerk, Fort Tluz Kuz (1847 - 1848); Clerk, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1848 - 1849); Clerk, New Caledonia (1849 - 1850); Clerk, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1850 - 1855); Clerk, Fort Alexandria (1850); Clerk, New Caledonia (1855 - 1858); Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1859 - 1860); Chief Trader, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1860 - 1866); Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1866 - 1872); Apprentice clerk temporarily in charge, Fort Alexandria (summer 1847).

"Careful and thrifty" (Morice, p. 244) apprentice clerk Thomas Charles, who joined the HBC in 1843 arrived at Fort Alexandria from England, where he likely received an education, was in charge of the Brigade on November 12, 1844. He replaced William Todd at Fort Fluzkuz. He spent his career in New Caledonia and became Chief Trader in outfit 1859-1860. After he retired around 1872, he moved to the James Bay area of Victoria where he lived with his two daughters. He died at around sixty years of age and was buried in the Ross Bay Cemetery.

Thomas Charles had one recorded wife and at least three children. In July, 1870 at Fort St. James, he married Anastasia, Carrier (?-?) from Fort Babine. Three children were Christine (c.1853-?), William (c.1858-?) and Jennie (c.1865-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; YFDS 16; FtVicASA 1-16, 20; FtAlexPJ 6; B.239/k/2 p. 362, 391, 413; FtVicCB 18, 23, 27; HBCA Thomas Charles search file; BCA FtAlex 1; BCCR-StPetSLk; Van-PL Colonist, April 7, 1885, p. 3; 1881 Canada Census SS: Morice, The History of, p. 190, 244

Charles (Langlois), Pierre (1799 - 1862) (Abenaki or Mixed descent)

Birth: St. Francois, Lower Canada - 1799

Death: Lewis County, Washington Territory - September 1862

Fur trade employee

NWC Hunter, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); Boatman, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); Middleman, Columbia District (1821);

HBC Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1823); “Free with natives”, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Snake and South Parties (1826 - 1827); Hunter, Fort Langley (1827 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Langley (1834 - 1839); Hunter, Fort Langley (1834 - 1839); Hunter, Fort Langley (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Langley (1839 - 1840); Settler, Cowlitz (1840+).

A middle-sized, broad-chested Pierre Charles signed on with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on June 22, 1818 from the Abanaki entry point of St. François and can be tracked in the Columbia as a middleman from 1821. At the time of the coalition in 1821 he chose to be a freeman and lived with the Indians, although he continued to do work for the HBC. For example, in 1824 the experienced Charles was a guide used by James McMillan to scout out the Fort Langley site and, in 1826, while on Ogden’s Snake expedition, Charles was mistakenly thought to have deserted. He is mentioned many times in the Snake and South expeditions of 1826-1827. In 1829 he was sent to Fort Nez Percés/Walla Walla with George Barnston and, later, to Fort Langley with Archibald McDonald. In 1833 Pierre Charles, now known as the best deer hunter “of the Rocky Mountains”, (Tolmie, p. 203) cut his foot open to the bone with an axe. Tolmie rushed to Nisqually to tend to him and from June 11-28 wrote a detailed medical description of the injury to Charles’s foot and the prognosis of the healing - a good read for any student of medicine (Tolmie, p. 202-211). In outfit 1839-1840, he was discharged and became a farmer in the Cowlitz. In May 1841, while farming at the Cowlitz River, he was summoned to act as a guide for the Wilkes Exploring Expedition. He continued to farm in Lewis County as well as raise a family and died around September 1862.

Pierre Charles had at least three wives and five children. On February 3, 1840, the Cowlitz farmer Pierre Charles dit Langlois formally married Louise Clallam (c.1815-1841), their children being Antoine (c.1832-?), Joseph (c.1835-?), Charles (1839-?) and speculatively, Pierre? (c.1828-?). After the death of his wife Louise on July 23, 1841, he married Marguerite Sassette (c.1828-?) on January 24, 1842. By 1857, he was married to Sophia (c.1815-?). Their child appears to have been Dauphine Baptiste (c.1847-?).

Pe Ell, a small town in Lewis Co., Washington, is named after Pierre Charles. It is a mispronunciation of Pierre’s first name.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; SnkCoP] 3; YFASA 5-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 2b, 5b-7; FtVanASA 1-7; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co. PPS: W. F. Tolmie, p. 202-211; Wilkes, Narrative of the United, p. 418-19; CCR 1a SS: Crooks, Past Reflections, p. 1-11

Charles, William (1831 - 1903) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America - March 1831 (born to John Charles and Jane Auld)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - May 1903

Fur trade officer

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Hall (1853 - 1856); Apprentice clerk, Fort Boise (1853 - 1856); Apprentice clerk in charge, Fort Boise (1855); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1855 - 1858); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1858 - 1860); Clerk, Fort Langley (1858 - 1860); Clerk, Fort Hope (1860 - 1863); Chief Trader, Fort Yale (1863 - 1864); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1865 - 1866); Chief Trader, Fort Yale (1865 - 1866); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1865 - 1868); Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1866 - 1867); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1867 - 1868); Chief Trader, Fort Kamloops [Thompson's River Post, She-waps Post] (1868 - 1869); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1869 - 1874); Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1874 - 1879); Inspecting Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1879 - 1885).

William Charles, who was born into the fur trade, was sent by his father to be educated at Hill Street School in Edinburgh and, subsequently, Edinburgh University. In 1852, at the age of twenty-two he came to the Pacific coast via Panama and for a short time was employed by Breck and Ogden of Portland, Oregon before joining the HBC on June 14, 1853 as an apprentice clerk. A man known for his integrity, he spent the rest of his career in the Oregon/Western Department and British Columbia from 1858. Beginning in 1869, while he was in the North Thompson/Campbell Creek area, about ten miles [16.1 km] east of Kamloops, Charles pre-empted several hundred acres of land which was eventually to become Harper’s Ranch, named after the purchaser, Thaddeus Harper, who eventually took out the Crown Grant. William Charles was allowed furlough in 1870-1871, was appointed inspecting Chief Factor around 1874 and spent many years touring HBC forts in B.C. He sent two of his boys to England to be educated in 1875 and retired in 1885. During his later years, he contributed considerably to Hubert Howe Bancroft’s voluminous studies of the Pacific slopes. In 1887 he was stricken with a paralysis from which he never fully recovered and died at his residence in Victoria.

The names of William Charles’ family members have not been traced. One daughter (1860-?) and a son (1864-?) were born at Fort Hope. In 1875, two sons were sent to England to be educated.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVicASA 1-3, 6-16; FtVanASA 9-13; FtVicCB 23; Van-PL Colonist, Aug. 11, 1860, p. 3, March 29, 1864, p. 3, Mar. 14, 1875, p. 3, June 3, 1885, p. 3, May 22, 1903, p. 3; HBCABio SS: Laing, p. 397

Charleson, John (fl. 1837 - 1838) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838).

John Charleson came to the coast on the HBC chartered ship Sumatra. He left England in February, 1837 but had to go ashore at Oahu in August to recuperate from scurvy. Charleston appears to have recovered, sailed on, spent about a month at Fort Vancouver and arrived back in London in April 1838.

PS: HBCA log of Sumatra 1

Charley [1] [variation: Paul Cali, Charles, Kanack] (fl. 1843 - 1847) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - 1822

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - December 1847

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort McLoughlin (1843 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1847).

Twenty-one year old Charley joined the HBC from Oahu in 1843 as a labourer. He split his time between two posts and, in August 1845, he transferred some of his salary to his father. At Fort Vancouver, in December 1847, he caught the measles and on December 18, in danger of death, was baptised by the Catholic priests under the name Paul Cali to ensure entry into a Catholic heaven. He died on December 19, 1847, the same day as Jem Mamuka, and was buried on December 21.

Charley may have had one wife, Nancy (?-?) presumably Native, and one recorded child. The child (son of "Charles Kanack") was André (?-bap.1843-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24-27; SandIsAB 5; YFDS 18; BCA Lowe 1 PPS: CCR 1b, p. 86

Charley [2] (fl. 1853) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

This Charley shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Charlton, Richard (fl. 1824 - 1843) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly British Isles

Fur trade officer

HBC British Consul, Hawaii (1824 - 1842); Agent, Hawaii (1824 - 1842).

Richard Charlton, a former sea captain who had traded widely in the Pacific, was the first British Consul in Hawaii, arriving in April 1825. He was appointed by the HBC as agent and was, according to McLoughlin, overpaid for his services. As Consul, he was bent on getting the British Government involved in Hawaiian affairs, and had numerous complaints against the Hawaiian government, including that of a lease of land from them. As a diplomat, he was popular with the ordinary people but lacked the subtler skills of diplomacy. As a HBC representative, he was succeeded by George Pelly in 1832 because he became involved in the fur trade in the Northwest Coast, putting him in a conflict of interest with the London company. With the accusation that the Hawaiian government was interfering in his affairs, he angrily quit, sailed from his Hawaiian post in 1842, and arrived in London in 1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-15, 17; SandIsLonIC 2 SS: Kuykendall & Day

Charpentier, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Francis Carpentier, dit Sans Façon, dit Quinze Sous] (c. 1796 - 1834) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Hyacinthe or Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1796

Death: Fort Hall, Oregon Territory - July 1834

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); HBC Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Freeman trapper, American Party (1825 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1826 - 1827); Interpreter, Fort Nez Percés (1827 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1827 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1829 - 1834); Interpreter, Fort Nez Percés (1829 - 1834); Member, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834).

(There is some confusion as to whether this is the François dit Sans Façon who was with David Thompson in 1810 or the François dit Quinze Sous found at Fort Nez Percés in 1831. Nonetheless, a François Charpentier dit Sans Façon signed up with the NWC in 1818 and came over the Rockies that year. In the 1824 Snake journals, both François Sans Façon and François Charpentier sans Façon are listed as having received guns, horses and traps. This may be an accounting ruse to show two separate people when it may be one individual who may have somehow "lost" his original issue. To further complicate matters, in the 1831 Fort Nez Percés journals, Charpentier is also listed as François Charpentier alias Quinze Sous. In this entry, the latter two are treated as one.) In 1818 François Charpentier came west across the Rockies with Angus Bethune and James McMillan. He likely worked freely in the Columbia Department until 1821 and spent the rest of his career between Fort Nez Percés and the Snake Country. He participated in Snake Parties and trapped until May 25, 1825 when, probably tempted by higher American prices at Weber River, he and a large group of people deserted to the American camp, headed by Johnson Gardner. He returned to work for the HBC at Fort Nez Percés where he became the post's interpreter while he carried on a variety of jobs, including woodworking. François Charpentier, then a member of Thomas McKay's party, was mortally wounded when he was trampled in a horse race at Fort Hall on July 27, 1834. He died the following day.

Nothing has been traced of François Charpentier's family but one daughter, Sophia (c.1830-?) was taken in by the Gervais family in the Willamette. She later married Caesar Beaudoin.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 9; HBCA YFASA 1-9, 11-14; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3; YFDS 2a-3b, 4b-5c; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1, 2; FtNPPJ 1 PPS: Coues, p. 674; Shephard, p. 47, 82
See Also: Beaudouin, Caesar (probable Son-in-Law)

Charpentier, Joseph (c. 1820 - 1847) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Death: Fort Victoria, Vancouver Island - November 1847

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1847).

When nineteen year old Montrealer Joseph Charpentier joined the HBC on April 26, 1839 for three years as a middleman and winterer, he signed his contract with an "X". For the next several years he worked out of coastal forts and died at Fort Victoria at the young age of twenty-seven.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 19-20, 24-27; FtVanASA 6-8

Charron, Narcisse [variation: Charon dit Ducharmé] (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1835); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836).

Narcisse Charron (Ducharmé) joined the HBC from Berthier in 1831, worked five years on the Pacific slopes, and returned east over the Rocky mountains in the spring of 1836.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-16; YFDS 4b-6; FtVanASA 3

Chartier, Antoine (c. 1816 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Jacques, Lower Canada - c. 1816

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1836 - 1841); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1843).

Antoine Chartier joined the HBC from St. Jacques in 1835. He left the Columbia for Canada east of the Rockies at the end of his contract in the spring of 1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15, 19-20, 22; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-8

Chartier, Charles (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption, Quebec - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Middleman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1840); Carpenter, Fort Alexandria (1840 - 1841); Middleman, New Caledonia (1841 - 1842).

Charles Chartier joined the HBC from L'Assomption in 1834 and worked as a boute in Athabasca River on his way out to the Columbia. He spent his career in the New Caledonia area, likely at Forts Alexandria and Chilcotin and in 1840-1841 was given a gratuity for erecting a grist mill at Fort Alexandria. He left at the end of his contract for east of the Rockies and Canada in 1842.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 19-21; YFDS 5c-7, 12; FtVanASA 3-7 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 182, 183

Chartier, Pierre (c. 1794 - 1828) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: Hood Canal, Washington - January 1828

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1822 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828).

Pierre Chartier joined the fur trade in 1816 from the parish of L'Assomption and from 1822-1828 was likely part of the express to Montreal. In 1824, the year he transported Governor Simpson on his trip to the Columbia, he signed his contract with an "X". On December 2, 1827, Chartier was part of a group that left Fort Vancouver with dispatches for Fort Langley. On the return journey in January, while passing through the Hood Canal area, Chartier and four other members of the group were killed for their clothes and arms by the formerly friendly Clallam Indians. That summer, an unauthorized punitive expedition from Fort Vancouver to avenge the deaths of the five resulted in the death of twenty-two Clallam natives, the burning of their village, and the recapture of a native woman, who had been part of the original HBC party.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2-7; HBCCont; YFDS 2a-2b; FtVanAB 1; FtVanASA 1; FtGeo[Ast]AB 12 PPS: HBRS III, p. 447, 448

Chase, Charles (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1829 - 1832).

Charles Chase joined the HBC from the parish of Lanovai or Lachine in 1829. In outfit 1831-1832, he worked as Peter Warren Dease's servant before returning to Montreal, where he was paid.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-12; YFDS 3b-4b; FtVanASA 2

Chastellain, Louis [a] (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Storeman, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833).

Louis Chastellain joined the HBC from the parish of Lachine in 1830 and worked in the Columbia until 1833. In the 1840s he was an interpreter and trader east of the Rockies in the Saskatchewan District at Fort Pitt, St. Albert, and Edmonton House. Eventually in 1878, after his retirement, he received a pension of £25 per annum.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-5a; YFASA 11-12; HBCCont; HBCABio

Chausee, Bonaventure [variation: Chossee] (fl. 1821) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1822).

Bonaventure Chausee was engaged in 1814 by the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] to work in the Northwest or Red River as a middleman for three years. In 1818, during the turbulent years of NWC/HBC conflict, he joined the HBC to work for three years at an unspecified location. In 1821, he was found at Fort George and, at the time of amalgamation, he was probably re-assigned for he was found at Montreal in outfit 1821-1822.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; ShdeSB Liste; FtGeo[Ast]AB 7

Check, Charles (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Charles Check made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Cheenook, Philip [variation: Cheen-o-ok] (fl. c. 1824 - c. 1825) (possibly Chinook (Tchinouk) or Mixed descent)

Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

As Philip Cheenook first appeared on fur trade records on February 10, 1824 as a freeman trapper camped on Prairie de Cheveaux (outside Flathead post), he had likely been in the area for some time. Deemed a good trapper, he joined Alexander Ross' nine month expedition and Ogden's subsequent Snake Country trapping expeditions. The fact that his name did not appear in the journals, other than on the roster, indicates that he was likely a competent trapper.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 1, 2

Chester (fl. 1812 - 1814) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

PFC Labourer, Beaver (ship) (1812); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1814).

Chester was brought to Astoria, probably in May 1812 on the Beaver, as an employee of the Pacific Fur Company. By April 4, 1814 he was prepared to stay on with the NWC through the summer. He has not been traced further and likely returned to Hawaii.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 771

Chevrette, Charles (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Thompson River (winter 1813 - 1814).

Charles Chevrette, who joined the NWC in 1812 at Bas de la Riviere [a post on the Winnipeg River near Lake Winnipeg] on a two year contract, was one of a large contingent of NWC employees who descended into the Columbia slopes when the NWC took over the interests of the New York-based Pacific Fur Company. It is not known how long he stayed or when he returned to the east but he was to be free in Montreal in the fall of 1814.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10

Chiffmanaplin, George [variation: Chiffman Aplin] (c. 1825 - 1889) (British: English)

Birth: probably Dorchester, England - c. 1825

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - December 1889

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1848).

George Chiffmanaplin joined the HBC in 1845 in England on a three year contract. He didn't stay long with the HBC, however, for he worked until March 1, 1849 at which point he went to California, presumably lured there by the gold fields. On September 17, 1848, at Fort Vancouver, he converted from the Presbyterian Church of Scotland to Catholicism and thereon after in the Catholic Church Records appeared as George Chiffman Aplin. After returning from California he retired to the St. Paul area of French Prairie in the Willamette Valley, where he raised a family. He died in 1889 and was buried in the St. Paul cemetery.

George Chiffmanaplin had one wife and fourteen children. On December 26, 1850, he married Marie Wagner (daughter of Fort Vancouver butcher Peter Wagner and wife Louise). Eleven of their fourteen children were Genevieve (1853-?), George Edward (1854-?), Elizabeth (?-?), Genevieve (1856-?), an unnamed child (?-1859), Marie Josephine (1860-?), James Stephen (1867-?), Theodore (1869-1869), Gilbert Joseph (1871-?), Wilfred (1876-1888) and Alphonse Remy (1878-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-28; YFDS 19 PPS: CCR 1b, 2b, 2c
See Also: Wagner, Peter (Father-in-Law)

Chitty, Charles (c. 1804 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Deal, Kent, England - c. 1804

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Prince of Wales (ship) (1835); Mate, Nereide (barque) (1836); Mate, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Charles Chitty originally sailed for the HBC on the Hudson Bay run in 1835. He re-contracted with the HBC on February 13, 1836 in England for five years for a coastal run. He arrived on the coast in the fall of 1836 and worked on the barque Nereide for a short time before shipping out on the Columbia. According to the logs he left, he had some difficulty spelling people's names.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales I 11; HBCCont; FtVanASA 3-4; YFDS 7; YFASA 16; ShMiscPap 9

Choput, Charles [variation: Chaput, Chapert] (fl. 1813 - 1815) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Carpenter, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Carpenter, Willamette Post (1813 - 1814 winter); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Willamette Post (1813 - 1814 winter).

Charles Choput, who joined or renewed his contract with the NWC (J.L.Co.) at Lac La Pluie [Rainy Lake] in 1813 for two years, was one of a large contingent of NWC fur traders who came into the Columbia area in 1813 when the Company took over the interests of the New York based Pacific Fur Company. That winter he was at Fort George [Astoria] and that spring, on May 1, 1814, left Fort George for the east as steersman in a ten man light express canoe. He was to be in Montreal in the fall of 1815.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 714

Chotoriorikon, Jean Baptiste [variation: Chotonochequon] (fl. 1818 - 1822) (Native: probably Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

NWC Hunter, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); U.A. Freeman trapper with Miaquin Martin, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822).

Jean Baptiste Chotoriorikon joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on December 15, 1818 to work for four years as a hunter in Indian Country. He probably went directly to the Pacific slopes and, likely with the amalgamation of the NWC and HBC, joined Miaquin Martin's independent band of Iroquois trappers working as freemen. In 1822, he was sent home as a voyageur.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10

Christiansian, Carl M. (fl. 1857 - 1858) (Norwegian)

Birth: Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1857 - 1858).

Carl M. Christiansian appeared to work briefly for the HBC in New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5-6

Christianson , Christian [variation: Christiansian] (fl. 1853 - 1855) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably Nordereng, Norway

Death: possibly Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1855).

Christian Christiansian came to the coast on the mutinous voyage of the HBC chartered vessel, Colinda, and was one of the few to actually arrive at Fort Victoria on April 17, 1854. He stayed for one year and left for Norway in May 1855, even though he was contracted to stay longer.

PS: HBCA log of Colinda 1; FtVicASA 1-3

Christie, Alexander Jr. (c. 1818 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Eastmain, Lower Canada - c. 1818 (born to Alexander Christie)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Frances (1843 - 1844); Untraced vocation, Rivier aux Liards (1843 - 1844); Untraced vocation, Fort Halkett (1843 - 1844).

The records are unclear on Alexander Christie. One such person signed a contract on August 14, 1834 in Moose Factory to work in Montreal as an apprentice clerk for five years. Another Mr. Christie [Edmund Christy?], a member of the Rocky Mountain Company, passed through Fort Vancouver in 1834 to purchase goods. In 1836-1837, another Alexander Christie was in Hawaii drawing on the HBC account there.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanCB 11; SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 8; HBCABio

Christie, James (c. 1809 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Castle Townsend, England - c. 1809Maritime employee*HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1844); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1849).

James Christie had sailed with the HBC in 1837 to Hudson Bay before he renewed his contract with the Company in London on September 17, 1839 for five years. He sailed twice to the coast on the barque Columbia and on November 6, 1844 transferred to coastal shipping where he serviced several coastal posts. A year later, on December 16, 1845 at Fort Victoria, he transferred to the barque Cowlitz on which he returned twice to the British Isles. Little is known of Christie, other than he was ill several times shortly after leaving London with delirium tremors, indicating that he drank heavily in ports. He also just missed death on September 22, 1847, when a falling top gallant mast, which killed boatswain George Bigmore, struck Christie on the back. He has not been traced after his return to London in 1849.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV 10; HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20-21, 24-25, 27-28; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6-8; log of Cadboro 5; PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6

Christopher, Isaac R. (fl. 1841 - 1844) (British: English)

Birth: probably EnglandDeath: possibly England*Maritime employee*HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1841 - 1842); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844).

A quarrelsome Isaac R. Christopher joined the HBC in London on August 30, 1841 on a five year contract, sailing to the coast on the HBC barque Vancouver. After his arrival at Fort Vancouver, when Captain Alexander Duncan tried to send an ill Christopher to the Fort Vancouver hospital to be bled, Christopher refused and threw a stone at him. When Duncan grabbed him, Christopher pulled a knife and threatened to stab him. At the hospital, Dr. Forbes Barclay could find nothing wrong with him, only a headache. The following month, when he struck the 2nd mate in an argument, he had a special place built in steerage for him to be placed in irons. Nonetheless, after talking with Dr. John McLoughlin he returned to duty and was confined only once more before arriving back in London on June 11, 1844. He has not been traced further and likely did not get a further contract with the London company.

Two letters written in May 1843 by his concerned mother, then in Jerusalem, England, failed to reach Isaac.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; log of Vancouver [3] 1; FtVanASA 7-8; YFASA 23; MI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 165-68

Christy, Edmund (fl. 1833) (American)

Birth: probably United States of AmericaFree trader*U.A. Fur trader, Rendezvous (1833).

Edmund Christy left Lexington, Missouri, with a group of forty to fifty men, including Robert Campbell, for the 1833 Rendezvous at Green River. As he was a businessman, at the Rendezvous he invested a considerable amount of money into the Rocky Mountain Fur Company partnership. (He may have been related to William Ashley as Ashley married a Christy).

SS: Gowans, p. 80, 96

See Also: Ashley, William Henry (possible Relative)

Cire, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1853 - 1854) (possibly Mixed descent)

Fur trade employeeHBC Labourer, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

François Cire, who joined the HBC either locally in 1852-1853 or was of mixed descent, appeared on the 1853-1854 Fort

Victoria abstracts without any further information.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1; YFASA 33

Cire, Joseph [variation: Cieri] (fl. c. 1810 - 1823) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Ile Jesus or Nicolet, Province of Quebec/Lower CanadaFur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814); Employee, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1821); Middleman, Columbia Department (1821); HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Thompson River (1822 - 1823).

Joseph Cire, who worked in La Riviere, St. Maurice in 1810, signed a one year contract in 1812 at Fort William and appeared on the Pacific coast in 1813 with a large contingent of NWC employees who descended on the area when the NWC took over the interests of the Pacific Fur Company in the area. On April 4, 1814 he left the area in the Montreal brigade in a large canoe headed by B. Pillette and Registe Bellaire and family. Cire crossed the Rockies again with Joseph LaRocque in 1817 and returned to Montreal in 1823.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 9, 10; YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; Coues, p. 875

Clairmont, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Francis] (c. 1803 - 1829) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1803Death: Columbia Express, Columbia Department - 1829*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and boue, New Caledonia (1826 - 1828); Middleman and boue, New Caledonia (1828 - 1829).

Francis Clairmont worked for some years in the fur trade before coming to the Pacific slopes. In the spring of 1829, while coming out with the Express with a package destined for George Simpson in Fort Colville, Clairmont, along with Ignace McDonnell, drowned.

PS: HBCA YFASA 6-9; FtVanASA 1; FtVanAB 19; YFDS 3a

Clairmont, Joseph (c. 1811 - 1837) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1811Death: Pacific Northwest - May 1837*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Thompson River (1829 - 1837).

Joseph Clairmont, who joined the HBC in 1828, spent most of his time at Thompson River and in 1831-1832 acted as Samuel Black's servant. He was killed in a skirmish with the Indians in May, 1837.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 17; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-5b, 6-7; FtVanASA 2-4

Clapp, Benjamin (? - c. 1852) (American)

Birth: probably United States of AmericaDeath: probably St. Louis, Missouri - c. 1852*Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1812); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); Passenger, Albatross (brig) (1813).

Benjamin Clapp sailed to Astoria on the Beaver [Cornelius Sowle] arriving on May 9, 1812. There he took a Chinook wife and shared quarters with Gabriel Franchere with whom he was able to discuss in French their mutual interests in music and literature. On August 20, 1813, in the height of the War of 1812, he left his native wife and the Pacific Northwest with William Price Hunt on the Albatross [William Smith] for the Marquesas where he was released from Pacific Fur Company duty by Hunt so that he could become a midshipman under Commodore Porter of the U.S.S. Essex. After a complicated mix of drownings, desertions, mutinies, killings and a native attack, Clapp sailed to Honolulu on the captured British whaler Sir Andrew Hammond which in turn was recaptured by the English vessel H.M.S. Cherub. Clapp was held prisoner and taken to Rio de Janeiro where he was released. For a short period after the War of 1812, he handled Astor's business in Canton, China and in 1819 was Astor's agent in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. In 1822 in New York, he was in business with Astor's nephew, George Ehninger, but was probably not successful as an independent fur trader and so returned to the American Fur Company which sent him to Detroit in 1827 to wind up its business there. In 1828 he tried unsuccessfully once again to become an independent trader in St. Louis, Missouri and by 1832 his former employer, John Jacob Astor, was suing him. In the spring of 1834, he lost his second wife and in 1835, he was back in New York again with a reorganized American Fur Company. Around 1838 he returned to St. Louis to work for Pratte, Chouteau & Co. He spent the rest of his life there and in this last phase of his restless life, appeared to marry a third wife, Jane F. (Clapp). He died around 1852 most likely at St. Louis.

Benjamin had a native wife, name unknown, at Fort Astoria. They did not appear to have children.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; MHS Clapp; MHS Chouteau PPS: Franchère; ChSoc XLV, p. 114, 116-17, 120, 123, 193; ChSoc LVII, p. 742 SS: Barry, "What Became of", p. 13-17; K.W. Porter, Benjamin Clapp

Clappin, Antoine [variation: Clappine] (? - 1811) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Snake River, Pacific Northwest - October 1811

Fur trade employee

PFC Steersman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1811); Steersman, Pacific slopes (1811).

Antoine Clappin joined Wilson Price Hunt's Pacific Fur Company Overland Expedition at or near Mackinac around July 29, 1810. He travelled with the expedition across the Great Divide and on October 28, 1811, while steering a canoe down the Snake River with Ramsay Crooks as passenger, was drowned. Because of Clappin's death, the place was named "Caldrin Linn" and the "Devil's Scuttle Hole" by the remaining party.

PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 182 SS: Chittenden, p. 191

Clark, Francis [variation: Clarke] (? - c. 1849) (probably British)

Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - c. June 1849

Maritime officer

HBC Boatswain, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Boatswain, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Captain, Prince of Wales (schooner) (1849).

Francis Clark joined the HBC vessel Vancouver in London on September 22, 1847 and sailed to the coast. As the vessel was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia on May 7, 1848, Clark was assigned to Fort Vancouver where he began work on November 1. He was possibly an alcoholic for, on June 23, 1849, when he was master of the Columbia River schooner Prince of Wales, he "...leaped overboard, in the night, during an attack of Delirium Tremens..."; no deposition has survived concerning his suicide. He did, however, have time to begin a family (Fort Victoria, p. 69).

Francis Clark had one wife, Marie, Chinook (?-?). His only son Jean (1849-?) was baptised on January 25, 1850 at Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 28-29; YFDS 19-20 PPS: HBRS XXXII, A.11/72 fo. 185d, p. 69; CCR 1b

Clark, John [2] (fl. 1833 - 1834) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

John Clark joined the HBC's Ganymede in Oahu on April 7, 1833 on its voyage to the Columbia. After sailing up the coast as far as the Nass to deliver supplies and collect the returns from HBC posts, he left for London in the fall. John Clark arrived back in London on February 24, 1834.

PS: HBCA log of Ganymede 1; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 13

Clark, William (fl. 1826 - 1829) (British: English)

Birth: probably Black Friars, Christchurch, Surrey, England

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Cadboro (schooner) (1826 - 1828); Boy, Eagle (brig) (1828 - 1829).

William signed on with the HBC on September 18, 1826 for five years and sailed to the coast on the Cadboro. He arrived on the coast in the spring of 1827 and probably left for England on the brig Eagle in the fall of 1828. If so, he would have arrived in London on February 12, 1829. (William Clark may also be Thomas William Clarke, below).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 4; log of Cadboro 1; FtVanAB 10

Clarke, James (fl. 1847 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1848); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1849); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850).

James Clarke joined the HBC vessel Vancouver in London on September 22, 1847 and sailed to the coast. As the Vancouver was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia, Clarke was transferred to other vessels. On October 21, 1848, between Forts Nisqually and Langley, he transferred from the steamer Beaver to the schooner Cadboro as "part crew". According to the Vancouver records, he "settled at Columbia" and appeared to carry on transactions with the company for three more years.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 5; YFASA 29-32; log of Cadboro 6

Clarke, John [1] (1781 - 1858) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Westmount/Montreal, Province of Quebec - 1781 (born to Simon Clarke and Ann Waldorf)Death: Montreal, Canada East - July 1858Fur trade officer

PFC Passenger, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1812); Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Partner, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1812); Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Passenger, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

John Clarke spent only two years on the Pacific slopes. After spending 1804-1810 with the NWC, he joined John Jacob Astor's New York based PFC. Clarke then led the second PFC expedition on Astor's ship, Beaver, around the Horn to Fort Astoria where he arrived on May 9, 1812. That year he founded Spokane House in opposition to James McMillan, who had already established a nearby NWC post. In 1813 Clark opposed the idea of abandoning Fort Astoria and, not wishing to rejoin his old company, began his journey eastward with his family in April 1814 with Gabriel Franchère and others. That was the last that he saw of the Pacific Northwest. That same year he joined the HBC where, during the heady days of NWC/HBC fighting, he was arrested twice by the NWC for fighting. George Simpson, who clearly did not like Clarke, objected to him becoming Chief Factor in 1821. As well, he found it difficult to adjust to peacetime conditions as, for example, he tried to profit financially by using company assets for private cattle sales. This didn't serve him well for he retired in 1835 after two years of furlough and the Company granted him an allowance of £50 per annum in 1848 because of extreme poverty. He died in poverty at the age of fifty-one in Montreal.

During his lifetime, John Clarke had three wives. He appears to have had a daughter to Josephine Kankopitsa. In 1815 he became the husband of Sapphira Spense, the mixed descent daughter of Joseph Spense and a native woman, for a settlement of £200. They had no children, probably due to her illness, and she was taken to live at Clarke's father's house where she died. After she died, Clarke married a Swiss woman Mary Ann Trutter (?) [Traclar] (c.1803-1906+), in Montreal in 1820. Their first four children, Simon (1824-?), William (1826-?), Caroline (1827-?) and Priscilla (1830-?) all died as infants or as youths. Subsequent children were Adele Priscilla Cecilia (c.1830s-?), William Tidy (c.1830s-1906), John (1837-1899) and Louise Waldorf (?-?).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Franchère; ChSoc, LVII, p. 629, 698, 699, 707; ChSoc XLV, p. 24-25, 112, 115, 119, 145, 154-55, 162, 169, 172, 174, 183; HBRS I, p. 433-5; vol XXII, p. 432-3; HBRS XXX, p. 172, 172n SS: A. P. C. Clarke; Kingston, "Spokane House State", p. 181-199

See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste [1] (Relative)

Clarke, John [2] (fl. 1833 - 1834) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

John Clarke worked for the HBC as a sailor, returning to England on the Ganymede in 1833.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12; YFDS 5b

Clarke, Richard (fl. 1838 - 1840) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1840).

Richard Clarke, who joined the HBC in 1838 on the Hawaiian Islands, became a crew member of the barque Nereide on May 2, 1838. He returned to England on the barque Nereide in 1839 and was discharged in London on April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5; YFDS 9-10; YFASA 19; log of Nereide 2

Clarke, Thomas William [variation: Clerk] (fl. 1830 - 1834) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Apprentice, Vancouver (schooner) (1830 - 1831); Apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1831 - 1834).

Thomas William Clarke (who may be the same as William Clark, above) likely joined the HBC in 1829, leaving Blackwall on October 30th on the Isabella. The following May, the Isabella was wrecked on the bar of the Columbia and so Clarke was placed on other ships. He made one return voyage to England on the Ganymede in 1831-1832 and eventually returned to England in 1834 on the same vessel.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 7, 14; log of Isabella 1; log of Ganymede 1; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11, 13; YFDS 5b

Clement (fl. 1799 - 1806) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Hunter, Pacific slopes (1807 - 1808).

The exact identity of the many Clements of the David Thompson and Alexander Henry journals has not been determined, but they may be one and the same person and will be treated as such for this entry. The many Clements could also be Antoine Clement who appeared in the Columbia later as a freeman. In April, 1799 one Clement was with Thompson on the Athabasca River, another at Rocky Mountain House a year later in April, 1800. One Clement summered with Thomson at Kootenae House in 1807 acting as a hunter, etc. while the post was being constructed. In the spring of 1808 he was back at Kootenae House but, by the fall of that year, on his way west to the Rockies, Clement turned back to Fort Augustus [Fort des Prairies] as he did not want to cross the mountains. A Clement was found at Fort Vermillion with Alexander Henry in 1809-1810 with a wife and a small family. In the fall of that year, he went from White Earth [Terre Blanche] to Rocky Mountain House where he stayed into the next year. He was last traced in the Henry journals on February 1, 1811, when Henry was about to embark on a journey up the Saskatchewan, and has not subsequently been traced.

If Clement of Fort Vermillion was the same Clement who travelled with Thompson, he had one wife and two children.

PPS: Coues, p. 553-54, 675; Belyea, p. 35; 76, 99

Clement, Antoine [1] [variation: Clemente] (fl. 1822 - 1825) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Death: possibly Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest - August 1848

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

An Antoine Clement appeared working in the fur trade at Fort des Prairies as early as 1804. Clement next appeared in the Columbia in outfit 1822-1823 working in both Saskatchewan and Fort Spokane. On February 10, 1824, Alexander Ross listed him as a good trapper in his Snake Expedition of February 10 to November 23, 1824. In December, 1825, Clement joined Ogden's Snake Expedition after he was outfitted with traps, horses and guns, and was not mentioned in the journals until May 25, 1825 when he deserted Ogden in the Weber River area. It is assumed that he carried on trapping with the Americans and he is probably the father of the following Antoine. (The Antoine Clement who died on August 8, 1848 at the Bluffs may be this Clement).

PS: ShdeSB Liste (2 possible contracts); HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3; MHS Chouteau PPS: Coues, p. 553

See Also: Clement, Antoine (probable Son)

Clement, Antoine [2] (fl. 1833 - 1844) (Mixed descent)

Birth: (born to Antoine Clement and an untraced Cree mother)

RMFC Hunter and travel companion, Pacific slopes (1833 - 1839).

Antoine Clement [2] had one of the more extraordinary careers because of the fur trade. In 1833, while attached to the Rocky Mountain Fur Company Group, he caught the eye and affection of Captain William Drummond Stewart, with whom he travelled for the next several years, taking in numerous Rendezvous'. A daring man, Clement was a crack shot, killing 120 buffalo for meat and other purposes, but he had an uncontrollable temper when aroused. He travelled with Stewart to Scotland in 1839 and not only stayed on his castle estate for three years, but also travelled to London and Constantinople with him. He returned to the United States in 1842 but failed to return to Scotland with Stewart in 1844 because Clement recklessly spent the money given him for travelling clothes in the taverns of New Orleans and was left behind. His fate from that point has not been traced. Clement's portrait was painted by Alfred Jacob Miller, Stewart's artist of 1837.

PS: OHS FtHallAB SS: M. R. Porter & Davenport, p. 53-247; M. C. Ross, plate 37

See Also: Clement, Antoine (probable Father)

Clerk, William (fl. 1827 - 1831) (British: English)

Birth: probably Christ Church, England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Columbia Department (1827 - 1830); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Columbia Department (1830).

William Clerk was first traced with the HBC around 1826 and began to receive wages from September 22, 1826. After he served out his remaining apprenticeship in the Columbia, he returned to the British Isles on the brig Eagle.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1-2; YFASA 7-10; YFDS 2b-4a

Clipson, Joseph (fl. 1841 - 1845) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Boston, Lincoln, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1841 - 1842); Sailor, Vancouver (barque) (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1844).

Joseph Clipson joined the HBC on August 24, 1840 and returned to the British Isles at the end of his five-year contract in 1845 aboard the barque Columbia. From 1845 he continued runs to Hudson Bay.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12; log of Vancouver [3] 1; YFASA 24; log of Columbia 6; PortB 1; log of Prince Albert 4

Clouston, John [b] (? - 1854) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Rousay, Orkney -

Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - August 1854

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1853 - 1854).

John Clouston joined the HBC in 1850 from Orkney on a four year contract, sailed to Hudson Bay and made his way overland to Fort Vancouver. He died at the end of his contract but, before he died, he asked that his earnings, £43.16.7, be sent to his mother in the Orkney.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9-10; FtVanCB 41

Clouston, Robert (? - 1858) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Stromness, Orkney (born to Edward Clouston and Anne Rose Stewart)

Death: during a voyage on board the Fanny Major between the Hawaiian Islands and San Francisco - August 1858

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1850 - 1851); Chief Trader in charge, Honolulu (1851 - 1858).

Robert Clouston was well placed for a life with the HBC. Son of a Stromness merchant and HBC agent, Robert joined the HBC on June 13, 1838 as an apprentice clerk and, for the next twelve years, served in Edmonton, Oxford House, Upper and Lower Fort Garry and York Factory. Tall and active, Clouston, who usually wore a capote and red sash, caught tuberculosis from his wife, Jessie Ross. Upon her death in 1849, he went to Scotland for a cure. In March 1850, he sailed from Liverpool, England to New York to purchase supplies after which he was stationed in the Columbia district for one season before being sent to Honolulu. There he carried out HBC business on Hawaiian Islands but by 1857 his health was deteriorating (ever the optimist, in 1852 he purchased 114 acres [46.1 ha] in Victoria). By March 1857 his sight was so bad that he had to employ another clerk at his own expense. On August 14, 1858 during a voyage on board the Fanny Major [John Paty] from the Hawaiian Islands to San Francisco, he died in a state of delirium brought on by his lingering tuberculosis.

Robert Clouston had three wives and two daughters. His first wife was Adelaide Lapierre (?-1849) of Red River with whom he had Eliza (?-?). His second wife was Jessie Ross (?-1849) daughter of Donald Ross of Norway House. His third wife was Maria (?-?), a Hawaiian native. Their daughter was Annie (?-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 30; FtVicASA 1-5; FtVanASA 12; SandIsLonIC 3; HBCABio; Wills; HSA List PPS: Helmcken, p. 89-90
See Also: Ross, Donald (Father-in-Law)

Cloutier, Jerome (? - 1831) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Cuthbert, Lower Canada

Death: Flathead District, Columbia Department - October 1831

Freeman

HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1825 - 1826); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1826 - 1831).

Jerome Cloutier joined the HBC from St. Cuthbert in 1825. From that point he participated in several Snake Expeditions, though, on December, 12, 1827, Ogden felt that Cloutier was too green for Snake Country travel because of the presence of the Blackfoot. In 1831, at Fort Vancouver, he caught the prevailing illness which he left with when he struck out for Snake Country for the last time. Two months later, on October 31, 1831, while Cloutier was out to set traps in the Flathead area, he and Antoine Letendre were set upon by a party of ten to fourteen Blackfoot. Cloutier was shot through the breast at point blank range and died instantly. He was stripped of his clothes and both his arms were broken but he was not scalped or otherwise mangled. When his fellow trappers from the Snake Party came to retrieve the body the same day, one of his thighs had been consumed either by wolves or hungry Blackfoot dogs. The bodies of Cloutier and Letendre were taken back to the camp and buried the next day.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5- 9, 11; FtVanASA 1; YFDS 3b, 4b; SnkCoPJ 7, 11

Cluet, Charles (fl. 1832 - 1836) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Poole, Dorset, England

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1835); Steward, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Cook, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Cook, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836).

Charles Cluet joined the HBC in London on September 15, 1832 as a steward for three years but only three days after sailing on the Ganymede, “got mudled headed” and had to be bled by an on-board doctor (log of Ganymede, 1, fo. 8). He was taken off steward’s duty, but five months later, on the journey out, his replacement, James Taylor, was found to be so dirty that Cluet was reinstated. On July 19, 1833 Cluet transferred to the first of several coastal ships which took him to various coastal posts. He left the Columbia for England on October 1, 1835 at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA log of Ganymede, 1; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 13-15; YFDS 5b-6; FtVanASA 3; HBCCont; log of Dryad

Clyman, James (1792 - 1881) (American)

Birth: Virginia, United States - 1792

Death: California, United States - 1881

Free trader

Ash. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

James Clyman, who joined William Ashley in 1823, acquired several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry’s Fork [Wyoming] from Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. He was involved in the Black Hawk War of 1832. Clyman came to Oregon on the wagon train in 1844 and went on to California where he settled.

PS: MHS Ashley 1 PPS: Camp

Coah, James [variation: John Canton] (fl. 1796 - 1828) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: 1796

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - April 1828

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Beaver (ship) (1812); NWC Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1814); HBC Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1825); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); PFC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1828).

A sixteen year old James Coah was brought to Astoria as a Pacific Fur Company labourer, probably on the Beaver in 1812, although later records appear to exclude his PFC service. Two years later he joined the NWC and in 1821, at the time of coalition, transferred to the HBC. He spent most of his fur trade career at the Fort George store. On October 9, 1825, he, together with Harry Bell Noah, Kaharrow, and Marrouna, confessed to having stolen blankets from the trade goods of the William & Ann. After his death at Fort Vancouver in 1828, his name was carried on the books for three years indicating that a surviving family may have been drawing on his account.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA FtGeoAB 4, 10-12; YFASA 1-11, 17; YFDS 2a, 3a; FtVanASA 1, 3-4; FtVanAB 19 PSS: ChSoc LVII, p. 711; A. McDonald, p. 29

Coayyvay [variation: Coayeeray] (fl. 1830 - 1833) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1833).

Coayyvay joined the HBC in 1830. He worked at two posts and departed the Columbia for Oahu on November 1, 1833.

Coffin, Charles (fl. 1836 - 1838) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Hawaii (1836 - 1838).

Charles Coffin first appeared in Hawaii as an HBC servant with George Pelly, the HBC agent in Honolulu. As a Charles Coffen also appeared in the 1834-1839 Fort Hall Accounts, he may have been a member of Wyeth's Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company, and may have come through the area in 1834 and made his way to Hawaii.

PS: HBCA SandIsAAB 1; FtVanASA 3-4; YFDS 7; YFASA 16-17; OHS FtHallAB; HMCS SReynoldsJ

Coghlan, Cornelius (fl. 1850 - 1851) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851).

Although attached to the Saskatchewan Department, Cornelius Coghlan picked up £20 of his wages in the Columbia in outfit 1850-1851 indicating that he was probably attached to the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30

Colbath, Nathan [variation: Coldbath] (fl. 1834 - 1835) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834 - 1835).

When Nathan Colbath came to the Northwest Coast on the brig Eagle, he had to be hospitalized for unknown reasons when the vessel arrived at Fort Vancouver, October 4, 1834. He appears to have departed with the vessel in November and arrived back in London in June 1835.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; log of Eagle 2

Coldicott, John W. [variation: Caldicott] (c. 1815 - ?) (British)

Birth: Coventry, Warwickshire, England - c. 1815 (born to John Caldicott and Ann Caldicott)Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1835); Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1837).

John W. Caldicott made two return trips to the Northwest Coast as an apprentice. By 1844 he was a ship's officer on runs to York Factory.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 4a, 14; FtVanASA 3; YFASA 16; PortB 1; log of Prince Rupert V 1-8

Cole, Captain (fl. 1840 - 1850) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian IslandsDeath: Fort Rupert, Colony of Vancouver Island - March 1850*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1847 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850).

Captain Cole may have come from the Oahu Charity School of which Captain George W. Cole was an officer in the 1830s. Cole joined the HBC in 1840 and was witness to the murder of John McLoughlin, Jr., the son of Chief Factor Dr. John McLoughlin in April 1842 at Fort Stikine. According to McLoughlin, Cole witnessed the accused murderer (Urbain Heroux) stand with his foot on McLoughlin's neck until he stopped breathing (FtVanCB 30, fo. 135d). Consequently, Cole was among the witnesses sent to York Factory to testify. He worked until November 23, 1844, at which point he returned to Oahu and received his final wages at the end of that year in Honolulu. He re-enlisted and began work on August 19, 1847 and worked for three more years at coastal forts until his death from tuberculosis on March 12, 1850 (FtRupPJ 1, fo. 46d). He was buried the same day in the Fort Rupert graveyard.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24, 27-32; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVanCB 30, fo. 135d; YFDS 15; SandIsAB 3; FtRupPJ 1 SS: Bradley, The American Frontier, p. 382n

Cole, William (? - 1838) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Death: Todd's Bay, Pacific Northwest - January 1838

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1837); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1838).

William Cole joined the HBC in late 1833 and sailed to the Columbia aboard the brig Eagle. On November 10, 1834, he transferred to the Columbia; however, he had a short life with the HBC, as he met an untimely end when he drowned at Tod's Bay January 26, 1838. He was with Captain David Home and three other crew members of the Nereide when a small boat that the five were sailing caught a gust of wind and overturned in the middle of the Columbia in the middle of a cold snowy January day.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 14-15, 17; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-5

Coleman, William (fl. 1832 - 1836) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near St. Nicholas, Devon, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1833 - 1836).

William Coleman signed on with the HBC on September 24, 1831 for three years. On October 26, 1832, upon his arrival in the Columbia, he was drafted from the brig Eagle to serve on coastal shipping. He left the Columbia for England on the Dryad on October 1, 1835.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 12-15; YFDS 4b, 5b-6; log of Dryad 1; ShMisPap 14; FtVanASA 3

Coles, John (? - 1811) (Undetermined origin)

Death: mouth of the Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - March 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Sailmaker, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

John Coles appears to have replaced sail maker Aaron Slight on John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] at the last minute as there is no mention of John Coles in the Port of New York ship's manifest of September 3, 1810. This was his tragic mistake. On September 8, 1810, Coles sailed on the Tonquin beginning a miserable voyage around the Horn. The Tonquin arrived the following February at the Hawaiian Islands and on March 22 found itself at the dangerous mouth of the Columbia River. That day, in an attempt to sound the bar for safe passage, a longboat carried five men to their deaths. Two days later, on March 24, still unable to negotiate the bar, the captain ordered John Coles, Job Aiken, Stephen Weeks, and Peter and Harry, two Sandwich Islanders, in a small pinnace to take soundings while the Tonquin followed under easy sail. However, the small craft was caught in the rip and pulled away from the Tonquin out to sea where it capsized. Coles and Aiken were quickly lost, while Weeks and the two Sandwich Islanders managed to save themselves by righting the boat. Coles' body was not recovered. On May 26, while the Tonquin was still at Astoria, John Coles' effects were "disposed of" on board the ship (Annals, p. 18).

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 48, 73-74; McDougall, p. 18

Colin, Antoine [variation: Collin] (c. 1824 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1824

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Labourer, Fort Nez Perces (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1846 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1852 - 1853).

Antoine Colin joined the HBC in 1844 leaving in 1849 but probably stayed in the area. He rejoined the HBC in 1851 in the Snake Country where he worked for two outfits.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28, 30-32; FtVanASA 9

Colin (Laliberte), Joseph (c. 1813 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lavaltrie, Lower Canada - c. 1813

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1834).

Joseph Colin (Laliberte) worked for the HBC for one three year contract.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-13; YFDS 4b-5b

Colins, Tom [variation: Collins] (fl. 1831 - 1833) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1831); Seaman, Naval Department (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1833).

Tom Collins was engaged by the HBC on June 16, 1831 in Oahu. He worked in coastal shipping servicing the various posts until November 1, 1833, when he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFDS 4b-5b; YFASA 11-13

Colle, John (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

John Colle first joined the HBC in Honolulu on August 16, 1842 and after making a short trip to Fort Vancouver, returned to England. Thirteen years later, Colle made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; PortB 1

Collette, Octave (c. 1824 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1824

Death: possibly Oregon Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1845 - 1846).

Octave Collette began work with the HBC in 1841. In 1844 at Stikine, he and Joseph Savard were sent south as they were both considered troublemakers. After two years at Fort Nisqually, he took up farming on French Prairie and St. Louis. He was still alive in 1851.

Octave Collette had two wives and no recorded children. While he working at Fort Nisqually, he took Marguerite, Nisqually (c.1827-1848) as his wife. Marguerite died February 21, 1848 at the age of twenty. On October 13, 1851, he married, Marie, Indian (?-?) who had been raised by Jean Toupin.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24; FtVanCB 31, 33; OHS 1849 Census, Oregon Territory, Champoeg PPS: S. A. Anderson, The Physical Structure, p. 167-68; CCR 3a

See Also: Toupin, Jean (probable Relative)

Collie, Henry (c. 1824 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Moose Factory [Ontario] - c. 1824

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Indian trader, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Apprentice, Fort George [Astoria] (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1846); Cooper, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1846); Cooper, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1850).

Henry Collie joined the HBC around 1833 at the age of nine and worked mainly at Fort Vancouver. His contract was to have ended in 1850 but he left for California on September 1, 1849, likely lured by gold prospects.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-29; YFDS 20

Collin, Antoine (fl. 1852) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Hall (1852).

Antoine Collin worked briefly at either Fort Hall or Boise and deserted from there September 1, 1852.

PS: HBCA FtVicDS 1

Collings, Edward (fl. 1837 - 1838) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838).

Edward Collins came to the coast on the HBC chartered ship Sumatra. He left England in February 1837, spent about a month at Fort Vancouver, and arrived back in London in April 1838.

PS: HBCA log of Sumatra, 1

Collins, George (fl. 1840 - 1845) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1845).

George Collins served out his seaman's apprenticeship with the HBC on runs from London to the Columbia and back again. He returned to the British Isles on the barque Columbia.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 4; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20-21, 24; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6, 8

Collins, John (fl. 1851 - 1852) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Hall or Fort Boise(1851 - 1852).

John Collins worked for the HBC in the Snake Country beginning on October 18, 1851 and was discharged the following year on November 1, 1852.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9

Collyer, Charles (fl. 1830 - 1831) (British)

Birth: possibly London, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Steward, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Steward, Vancouver (schooner) (1831).

Charles Collyer who, signed on with the HBC in London on January 9, 1830 as a steward, sailed out on the Dryad, arriving August 16, 1830. However his career was short lived for, on a voyage to Oahu on the Vancouver in November, he was discharged from his duties at the Hawaiian Islands after only a few months of duty. He was not rehired by the HBC.

PS: HBAC HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a; YFASA 10; ShMiscPap 14

Colville, Eden (1819 - 1893) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles - 1819

Death: Devonshire, England - April 1893

Fur trade officer

HBC Visitor, Columbia Department (1849).

Son of the Deputy Governor of the HBC, Eden Colville maintained strong HBC connections throughout his life. He was educated at Cambridge and, in 1844, sent to Canada East by the London Land Company to manage the seignury of Beauharnois. Between 1844-1847, he represented Beauharnois in the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Canada. He was made associate governor of Rupert's Land in January 1849 and that year toured the Columbia keeping full record of his tour. He left this post in 1852, and continued his association with the London Committee. He eventually became governor of the HBC between 1880-1889.

PS: HBCA FtAlex 8 PPS: HBRS XIX

Com (fl. 1840 - 1848) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1843); Middleman and labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844); Labourer, Snake Party (1844 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1848).

Com joined the HBC from Oahu in 1840. He went back to Oahu on November 15, 1843, but he returned to the coast, again alternating between Fort Vancouver and the Snake River country. He died in 1848 at Fort Vancouver, and the salary owed him was paid to his relatives in Hawaii.

PS: HBAC YFASA 20, 23-29; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 14; SandIsAB 7

Como [variation: Henry Comeau] (fl. 1818 - 1850) (Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands - 1794

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - September 1850

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1849); Cook, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850).

Como, who joined the fur trade as a middleman in 1818 when entering his mid-twenties, became one of the longest serving Hawaiian Islanders in the fur trade. His thirty-two years on the Pacific slopes were spent working in New Caledonia, Fort Langley and Fort Vancouver. No explanation was given when Como and a Mr. Johnstone, while trading fish at the Cascades on July 26, 1846, were tied up and left on the beach by the Natives. Both had to be rescued by personnel from Fort Vancouver. Como, also known as Henry Comeau, died of unstated causes at Fort Vancouver on September 18, 1850. He was likely buried in the fort's graveyard, even though his children were associated with the Vancouver Catholic church [Vancouver, Washington] and the St. Paul Catholic Church on French Prairie [Willamette Valley, Oregon]. (See also Learhenard).

Como had one wife, Nancy (?-?), a Native woman. Their three recorded children were Marguerite (c.1829-?) who married John Collis, 1853, Marie (1833-?) and Thomas (c.1835-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-9, 11-12, 14-15, 20, 24-31; YFDS 1a, 2a, 3a-3b, 5a-7; 21; FtStjmsLS 1; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-9; BCA Lowe 1 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 2a
See Also: Como, Thomas (Son)

Como, Thomas (fl. 1835 - 1856) (Hawaiian and Native)

Birth: probably Fort Langley - 1835 (born to Como and Nancy)

Death: probably West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1851); Apprentice cooper, Fort Vancouver (1851 - 1852).

Thomas Como, the son of Como [preceding entry] and a Native woman, Nancy, followed the typical career path of someone born into the fur trade. Likely born at Fort Langley, he was probably taken to Fort Vancouver at the age of four and raised there. At the age of fourteen, he became an apprentice cooper on a contract that ended in 1854. He did not fulfil his contract, for in outfit 1849-1850 he left for California. He did not strike gold and returned shortly after, for in the following outfit he was back at work. However, his employment did not last long, and he was discharged in 1852. In 1856 he volunteered for the US Army and in July was "dangerously wounded" in an expedition against Indians in the Grand Ronde area of Oregon (Evans, p. 589). Whether he survived and, if so, what he did after the volunteered were disbanded in October 1856 is unknown.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVanASA 9 SS: Evans, p. 589
See Also: Como (Father)

Compton, Pym Nevins (1838 - 1879) (British: English)

Birth: Essex, England - 1838

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - August 1879

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, Fort Simpson (1859 - 1862); Clerk, Labouchere (steamer) (1862 - 1863); Clerk, Fort Simpson (1862 - 1863); Clerk in charge, Fort Rupert (1863 - 1867).

Pym Nevins Compton was from a Quaker family whose origin appears variously as being from Tottenham, Middlesex (HBC records), Hampshire (Walbran, p. 105), or Enfield, Essex (Ross Bay Cemetery grave), entered the service of the HBC on September 1, 1858 and worked through his contracts at coastal forts in British Columbia. While he was stationed at Fort Simpson he painted for relaxation and there took a Scottish/Tongass (?) mixed descent wife. He was a trading clerk on the Labouchere in Alaska August 1862 when it was seized by the natives (Colonist, August 23, 1862). In 1866 he returned to England with his mixed-descent wife and children on the barque Prince of Wales and the following year tried unsuccessfully to re-enlist. He later went to California but returned to Victoria where he died in 1879.

Pym Nevins Compton had one wife and several children. On March 10, 1863, a marriage licence was issued for Compton to marry the daughter of Donald MacAulay and Margaret Snaach, Catherine McAuley (c.1848-1880) whom he married on the same day. The names of their children have not been traced. Catherine died in May 1880 and was buried on May 29, 1880 at the Ross Bay Cemetery, Victoria, B. C.

Compton Island, Blackfish sound; Compton Point, Drury Inlet, Queen Charlotte Sound; and Compton Island, Wark channel were named after P. N. Compton by Captain Pender of the Beaver between 1866-1868.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVicASA 6-15; HBACBio; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; BCA BCGR-VICSMarriageL; BCCR CCCath; RossBayCem; Diar-Rem Compton; Van-PL Colonist, August 23, 1862 SS: Walbran, p. 105; Meilleur, p. 187, 203
See Also: McAulay, Donald (Father-in-Law)

Condon, Francois Xavier [standard: François] (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Vaudreuil, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1826 - 1827).

François Xavier Condon joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] from Vaudreuil on January 4, 1816 to work at Fort William as a wintering middleman. He probably came to the Pacific slopes in 1822, one year after the amalgamation, and worked for the HBC in the Columbia District for the next five years. In 1827 he returned to Montreal.

PS: service with NWC: ShdeSB Liste; service with HBC: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 2-6

Cone, George [variation: Cine] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (possibly Canada: French or Canadian: English)

Fur trade employee

PFC Steersman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Steersman, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Steersman, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813); Steersman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Steersman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Canadian George Cone was engaged by the Wilson Price Hunt Overland Expedition by at least February 5, 1811. He arrived at Fort Astoria on February 19, 1812. Like several loyal PFC employees, Cone did not join the NWC; instead he joined the brigade for Fort William and Montreal in April, 1814 setting off in a six-man canoe headed by Alexander Ross and Donald McGillis.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; Coues, p. 875

Conner, James (fl. 1839 - 1843) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

U.A. Interpreter and labourer, Lapwai Mission (1839 - 1840).

James Conner was a trapper at the 1838 Rendezvous from where he and his native wife accompanied the Henry H. Spalding party to Fort Hall. There, his services were acquired by the missionary to assist in building a mission further west at Lapwai [Idaho]. On November 17, 1839, he joined the First Church of Oregon, but, two years later, expressed differences with Spalding and was excommunicated on February 4, 1843.

James Conner had a Nez Perces wife and at least two children, William (?-?) and Jane (?-?).

PS: Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 23, 79, 84, 280

Conner, Michel (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Michel Conner made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Connolly, William (c. 1786 - 1849) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Lachine, Province of Quebec - c. 1787

Death: Montreal, Canada East - 1849

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1824 - 1825); Chief Factor, New Caledonia (1826 - 1831).

William Connolly, who Simpson considered “incapable of doing anything that is mean or dishonourable” (HBRS XXX, p. 182), joined the NWC in 1801 and worked his way up the ranks at various posts east of the Rockies. At the time of the 1821 coalition, he became Chief Trader in the HBC and, in 1824, crossed the Rockies to jointly run New Caledonia with William Brown to re-establish Company discipline in the area. He worked at Forts Fraser and St. James and became Chief Factor in 1825 when he was put in charge of New Caledonia. In 1827, he worked out a possible transportation route up the Chilcotin River and to the coast but the following year, was instructed to take the furs to Fort Vancouver via the Fraser-overland-Columbia brigade route. Doing so, he lost three men on the way in the Columbia River. In 1829 he was at Fort Vancouver when goods from the sunken William & Ann were discovered in a Clatsop village and his punitive expedition to the village to retrieve the goods cost three native lives. In 1831, when Connolly turned over New Caledonia operations to Peter Warren Dease, the district was in much better condition. This drew the rare tempered praise (above) from George Simpson. In 1832, Connolly took his wife and six children to Montreal, but disavowed his country marriage and married a cousin (Van Kirk, p. 188-89). The next eight years were not good ones, for neither Connolly nor his new wife liked their postings and because his interest in the fur trade had diminished, in 1843, after a year's furlough, he retired.

In 1841 his first wife had moved to a convent in St. Boniface, Manitoba and Connolly provided for her until her death. Although Connolly willed his estate to his second wife, Susanne's oldest son, John (?-?) challenged the will resulting in the courts supporting his claim of the validity of the first marriage. The extension of legal rights to country wives was precedent setting in Canada (HBRS II, p. 209).

William Connolly had two wives and six children. In 1803 he married the Cree, Suzanne, Pas-de-Nom (?-1862) and together they had six children. One daughter, Amelia (c.1812) married James Douglas. Another son, William James Connolly, worked for the HBC on the Pacific slopes. In 1832 William Sr. married his cousin, Julia Woolrich (?-?), in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 4, 6, 8-11; YFDS 3a, 4a; FtVanASA 2 PPS: HBRS II, p. 209; HBRS XXII:433-4; vol. XXX, p. 182; CCR 1a, 1b SS: Van Kirk, "Many Tender Ties", p. 188-89; DCB Peel

See Also: Douglas, Sir James (Son-in-Law); Douglas (Lady Douglas), Amelie (Daughter); Connolly, William James (Son)

Connolly, William James (c. 1807 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1807 (born to William Connolly and Suzanne Pas-de-Nom, Cree)
Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1829); Middleman, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia District (1831 - 1832).

William James Connolly was hired on in 1825 as a middleman and was in Montreal by 1832.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-9; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 3a-3b

See Also: Connolly, William (Father)

Connor, Patrick [variation: Conners, O'Conner, O'Connor] (fl. 1813 - 1824) (Undetermined origin, possibly Irish)

Birth: possibly Quebec City, Province of Quebec

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - 1824

Freeman

NWC Tailor, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814); HBC Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Country (? - 1824).

Patrick Connor first joined the NWC [McTavish, Frobisher] on April 26, 1802 to work in the Northwest fur trade. In 1813, while he was probably working in Athabasca, he became part of a large contingent of NWC employees who descended into the Pacific slopes to take over the assets of the New York-based, Pacific Fur Company. There, he was a member of a punitive expedition on January 17, 1814, near Strawberry Island in the Columbia River. Connor, Pierre Deslard and George Bell were sent out to retrieve some stolen kettles, guns and other items; and, to effect this, seized and tied up a Chief who had been brought into a temporary camp. Most of the stolen goods were returned by Casino, who appears to have kept some of the goods for himself. (Such seizures to obtain stolen goods were not uncommon.) A few months later, in April, Connor joined the Montreal brigade and came back to work in the area, for he transferred to the HBC in 1821 at the time of coalition. Around this time he became a freeman and began working in the Snake Country for, in 1822-1823, Alexander Kennedy noted at Fort Spokane that Connor and thirteen other freemen had not come out of the Snake Country in the fall of 1821. Connor eventually contributed to his own demise; according to P. S. Ogden, in the fall of 1824, Connor was a member of a small group which set out to steal horses from the generally friendly Snake Indians. Just why this group was stealing horses from the friendly Snakes has not been determined but it may have been reciprocal for it is known that the Snakes occasionally helped themselves to freemen and other's horses when they felt the need. Patrick Connor was caught in the act of stealing and, along with seven unidentified Americans, was killed (SnkCoPJ 2, fo. 23d, 27d).

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB, 9, 10; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; FtSpokRD 1; SnkCoPJ 2 PPS: ChSoc LVII p. 651

Cook, James [1] (fl. 1821) (American: English)

Birth: possibly Duanesburgh, New York State, United States

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821); Middleman or Clerk, Columbia Department (1821).

James Cook joined the NWC [William Wallace Mathews] on March 20, 1818 to work in the Northwest for five years as a clerk. He may have come directly to the Pacific slopes at that time and then transferred to the HBC at the time of coalition in 1821. He probably returned east around 1821, being made redundant by the amalgamation of the HBC and NWC.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7

Cook, James [2] [variation: Cooke] (fl. 1850 - 1866) (British: English)

Birth: possibly England

Death: possibly Victoria, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1851 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1854 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Colville (1856 - 1861); Labourer, Fort Langley (1861 - 1863); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1863 - 1867); Watchman, Fort Simpson (1863 - 1867).

James Cook joined the HBC from England around 1850. He retired December 29, 1866 and headed south to Victoria by the steamer Otter.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9-17; FtVicASA 9-15; FtSimp[N]PJ 9

Cook, John (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

John Cook made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Cook, Peter Joseph (c. 1827 - ?) (Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1827

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Steward, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1848).

Peter Joseph Cook joined the HBC in 1845 from Montreal. After working through his three year contract, he returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-27; YFDS 16, 18

Cook, Richard (c. 1806 - 1839) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1806

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - April 1839

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, South Party (1828 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Snake Party (1831 - 1832); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1839); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1836 - 1837).

Richard Cook joined the HBC in 1828 and worked at a variety of posts in the Columbia area. However, between 1834-1836 he was too ill to fulfill his work obligation and received only partial wages. This illness probably led to his death but, before he died, he did manage to raise a family.

Richard had one wife, a native, Margaret (?-?) of unspecified origin and two children, Mary (c.1832-38) and Jane (1836-37); both children were baptised and buried by Reverend Beaver at Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-5; FtVanCB 9; BCA BCCR CCCath

Cook, William [b] (c. 1829 - ?) (British or Canadian)

Birth: East of the Rocky Mountains - c. 1829 (born to Patrick Cook and Mrs. Cook)Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1849 - 1850); Engineer's Servant, Beaver (steamer) (1850); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1850 - 1852); Cook, Fort Simpson (1864).

William Cook [b] joined the HBC from Lachine in 1847, on a three-year contract coming west over the Rockies into the Columbia in 1848. After spending the majority of his short Company career at Fort Simpson, he retired around 1852 and stayed in the area doing occasional jobs for the HBC.

William Cook, who converted from Presbyterianism to Roman Catholicism, had one wife and eleven recorded children. On March 14, 1853, the same day that Nicholas Auger and his large family were baptised, Cook married Catherine Auger (c.1835-?), daughter of Nicholas and Cecile Auger. Their children were William (c.1853-1888), Alex Nicholas (c.1855-1855), Catherine (c.1856-?), Cecile (c.1859-?), John (c.1861-?), Frederick (c.1864-1886), Catherine (c.1867/8-?), Margaret (c.1871-?), James (c.1874-?), Peter (c.1875-?) and Blanche (c.1879-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-31; YFDS 19; log of Beaver 1; FtVicASA 1-2; FtSimp[N]PJ 9; BCA BCCR StAndC
See Also: Auger, Nicholas or Joseph (probable Father-in-Law)

Coon, John (c. 1790 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Limehouse, Middlesex, England - c. 1790Death: possibly British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834 - 1835); Mate, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1839).

John Coon joined the HBC in London on September 6, 1832, sailed to the coast aboard the Ganymede and transferred to coastal shipping July 19, 1833. He initially spent his time servicing coastal posts but then latterly went back to London on the Eagle arriving June 1835, then back and forth on the Columbia for more two voyages, eventually returning May 21, 1839. Coon was unwell after he arrived in London, so William Green collected his wages.

An 1838 letter from his lover, Ellenor Smith, then living at No. 4, Wallburg St., St. George's in the East [London], reveals that she was recovering from a miscarriage and was pining for his return. Whether they reunited is unknown.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Ganymede 1; YFASA 13-14, 16; YFDS 5b-5c; ShMisPap 4a, 14; log of Columbia 1, 3; FtVanASA 3, 5-6 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 121-22

Cooper, James [1] [variation: Couper] (c. 1815 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Edinburgh, Scotland - c. 1815Maritime employee*HBC Apprentice, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Apprentice, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1836); Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

James Cooper was apprenticed to the HBC in London in 1834 and sailed to the Northwest coast on the Eagle. Upon his arrival on November 10, 1834, he worked on the Lama supplying coastal posts until November 21, 1836. At that point he left for London on the Columbia, arriving on May 10, 1837.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 14-16; YFDS 5c, 7; FtVanASA 3-4

Cooper, James [2] (1821 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Bilston, Wolverhampton, Staffordshire, England - 1821Maritime officer*HBC 1st mate, Vancouver (schooner) (1844 - 1846); Commander, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1847); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1848); Commander, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1850); Supercargo, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851).

James Cooper joined the HBC on August 31, 1844 coming out on the Vancouver. While on the Columbia in 1848, he took goods under his own name to trade on the Hawaiian Islands, clearly a violation of Company rules. Seeing the potential for trade in the new colony he returned to England to emigrate as a free settler. In England, he got himself appointed as Lloyd's agent on Vancouver Island, gathered up his wife, four children, as well as the dismantled sections of a forty-five ton iron schooner called Alice, and returned on the Tory. On the island, however, investments in a farm, land and a tavern used up most of his money. He was named to the island's ruling council by the governor Richard Blanchard but when Blanchard resigned, and was replaced by Cooper's nemesis James Douglas, Cooper protested. His use of the Alice to trade freely along the mainland coast, still HBC monopoly territory, prompted Douglas in 1853 to ram through council in Cooper's absence an act putting restrictions on Cooper's selling of liquor. From this point,

Cooper actively petitioned to have the Company's charter for British Columbia revoked but, being debt ridden, returned to England in 1856. In England in 1857 his testimony before the House of Commons Select Committee enquiring into the HBC charter, contributed to the cancellation of the monopoly. In 1858 a triumphant Cooper returned to Vancouver Island with the secured post of harbour master at Esquimalt. He held the post for the next eleven years and resigned in 1869 becoming a hotel keeper, wine merchant and part of a salmon fishing venture. In October, 1872, the year after British Columbia had entered Confederation, Cooper was appointed dominion agent for the Department of Marine and Fisheries, inspector of lights, and inspector of steamboats. By 1876 he was being investigated for obtaining money under false pretences and charged in 1879. He failed to appear at the end of the year and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Cooper and family disappeared; they likely drifted to California and were not heard from again.

James Cooper had one wife and four children.

Cooper Inlet on Hunter Island, British Columbia was named after Captain James Cooper.

PS: HBCA log of Vancouver [3], 2; PortB 1; log of Columbia, 9; ShMiscPap 8; YFASA 27; FtVicASA 2; Douglas and Work November 6, 1847 Fort Victoria letter to Governor & Committee, A.11/72, fo. 26, 26d; HBCA Captain James Cooper search file; BCA BCGR-AbsLnd; Mallandain, First Victoria Directory, Victoria, 1960, p. 67; PPS: HBRS XXXII, 12, 59, 60, 194, 194n, 200, 213; Helmcken, Reminiscences of, p. 145-46; SS: DCB Ormsby

Cooper, Thomas (c. 1811 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England - c. 1811

Death: possibly West of the Rockies

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839); Untraced vocation, Vancouver (barque) (1839 - 1841); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1841); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1841 - 1842); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1842 - 1844); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1846); Cook, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1846); Cook, Beaver (steamer) (1846 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1849); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1853 - 1854); Sastuc, Tlithlow Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Colwood Farm (1855 - 1856); Sastuc Farm manager, Fort Nisqually (1856 - 1857); Sastuc Shepherd, Fort Nisqually (1857 - 1859).

Thomas Cooper joined the HBC in 1837 and sailed on the Columbia to the coast where he worked on coastal shipping and then briefly on land. On December 1, 1849, he deserted, possibly for the gold fields of California although the following year he was still in the area. He returned to HBC employment in 1853 and in 1855 worked for six months for E. E. Langford at the Colwood Farm [Esquimalt, Vancouver Island]. In outfit 1858-1859 he was transferred to the Puget Sound Agriculture Company and in August of 1859, was severely beaten by J. Riley. He appears to have continued his employment at Fort Alexandria in 1866. However, by that time, this Thomas Cooper was a hopeless alcoholic who stole alcohol and even took bottles to bed with him. He was shortly dismissed and sent back south on the mule train.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia, 3; ShMisPap 14; FtVanASA 5-14; YFDS 9-11, 16, 20; YFASA 19-20, 24-29; FtAlexCB 2; FtVicCB 30; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co.; BCA employment in Colwood in E. E. Langford's Sept. 24, 1855 note to Kenneth McKenzie, BCA A.E/M19/126; FtVicCB 30

Coppel, John [variation: Coppel] (c. 1815 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Sheerness, Kent, England - c. 1815

Maritime employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1835); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Apprentice, Lama (brig) (1835 - 1836); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1836 - 1837).

John Coppel joined the HBC in the British Isles around 1830 as an apprentice seaman. He arrived on the coast shortly after and began work on various ships for the next seven years. On November 1, 1836 he departed on the barque Columbia for England.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-4; ShMiscPap 4a, 14; YFDS 2 4a-7; YFASA 11-16

Corbeil, Jean Baptiste (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Chateauguay (Pres Eglise), Lower Canada - c. 1808

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman (steersman's wages), Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1836); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1836 - 1839); Middleman, South Party (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842).

John Baptiste Corbeil signed on with the HBC from Chateaugay in 1832. He returned east in 1842.

He and Lalaksiop, Kagoid, had a son, Joseph (1838-?).

Corbin, Israel (c. 1819 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: possibly Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1844).

Israel Corbin joined the HBC from Riviere du Loup in 1839. He left the Columbia for east of the Rockies and Canada in 1844.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19, 23; FtVanASA 6-8

Corbin, Pierre (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and route in Athabasca River, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Snake Party (1839 - 1840).

Pierre Corbin joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838. He did not complete his contract, which was to end in 1841, for he deserted in June 1839 while accompanying the Snake Party.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-6; YFDS 9; YFASA 18-19

Cormack, Hugh (fl. 1836 - 1842) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - (born to Henry Cormack and Isabella [Lennie] Cormack)

Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1835); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Labourer, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1839); Labourer and Engineer's Steward, Beaver (steamer) (1839 - 1840); Steward, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Labourer, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1842); Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1842).

Hugh Cormack joined the HBC from Orkney on April 25, 1835 and sailed two months later to Hudson Bay. After making his way overland, he worked on the Beaver and left the area for east of the Rockies and the British Isles sailing back in 1842.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV, 8; FtVanASA 3-7; YFDS 7; YFASA 19-22; log of Prince Rupert V 1 SS: Cormack, p. G-3

Cormack, John (fl. 1855 - 1859) (probably British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1855); Carpenter, Fort Shepherd/Fort Colville (1856 - 1859).

John Cormack came to the coast from the British Isles on the barque Princess Royal. After his arrival in December 1855 he became part of the group that built Fort Shepherd, the replacement for Fort Colville. From 1859, his movements are unclear although a John Cormack of Metchosin (a native of Caithness, Scotland) died on April 19, 1881, aged fifty-six. He is possibly the same.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal, 2; FtVicASA 3-7, 9; FtVanASA 12-14; FtVicCB 12; Van-PL Colonist, April 22, 1881, p. 3

Corney, Peter (c. 1789 - 1835) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Stepney, St. Dunstan, Middlesex, England - c. 1789

Death: Onboard Columbia near British Isles - August 1835

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Columbia (schooner) (1813 - 1815); Captain, Columbia (schooner) (1816 - 1818); Mate, HBC Naval Department (1829 - 1832); 1st mate, Eagle (brig) (1834); 1st mate, Columbia (barque) (1835).

In 1813 Peter Corney, employed by the English company of Inglis, Ellice and Company, sailed in the west Indies under a Captain Stoddard. When he arrived back in London in August that year he found that his employer plus the partnership of McTavish, Fraser & Company were outfitting their newly acquired vessel, Columbia, for the Northwest Coast and China. He joined as an officer and, between 1814-1818, made eight visits to the Columbia River as well as wrote about his exploits. After the Columbia was sold to King Kamehameha I of Hawaii in 1817, and with time on his hands, he was recruited by the Argentinian patriot, Hypolite Bouchard, (on the Santa Rosa) for some outright piracy in Spanish

California. In a complex mixture of politics and greed, and as the Spanish had been reluctant to allow the British to build a trading post at Monterey, the 360 men of the Santa Rosa and Argentina burned Monterey in November 1818. Corney returned to England in February 1820 and in May of that year, married Frances Loder in Cork, Ireland and had his book published in 1821. Throughout the 1820s he raised a family in London and on October 31, 1829 he signed on with the HBC as first mate. In 1834, Corney applied to have his European wife live with him at Fort Vancouver. John McLoughlin agreed only if Corney fully supported both his wife and children. McLoughlin suggested that his wife could teach the natives and, while on the Columbia could eat at the captain's table; the children would eat in steerage. In March, 1835, McLoughlin expressed considerable annoyance at Corney for tapping into stores (a cask of brandy and a keg of bright varnish) which belonged to the Fort. Corney died August 31, 1835, two days after weighing anchor in Britain, and on September 1, 1835, at seven p.m. he was committed to the deep (log of Columbia, fo. 3d-4). On February 4, 1836, his widow, three daughters and one son arrived in Honolulu. Peter's widow that September opened a boarding house. Corney's effects were delivered to his widow Frances in Honolulu on January 3, 1837. Frances moved in with her daughter, who was married to the French Consul, a Mr. Dudoit, but was turned out in December 1839 and had to find quarters in a straw house.

Peter and Frances Corney (?-1874) had four children: Anne (1821-?), Peter Minors (1824-1876), Sarah Frances (1826-c.1901) and Emily Handley Foster (1834-c.1870).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1; HBCA HBCCont; FtVanCB 10; Correspondence Inward, A.11/50; ShMiscPap 4a, 14; log of Columbia, 1; HMCS SReynoldsJ; HSA List of British Subjects PPS: Corney, Voyages in the North Pacific
See Also: Corney, Peter Minors (Son)

Corney, Peter Minors (1824 - 1876) (British: English)

Birth: London, England - July 1824 (born to Peter Corney and Frances Loder)

Death: Honolulu, Oahu, Hawaiian Islands - November 1876

Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Apprentice, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1839); Apprentice, Vancouver (barque) (1839 - 1840).

Peter Corney joined the HBC in 1836 out of necessity when his father died on the voyage out from England. Even though he was only twelve years old when he reached the Columbia, he was made an apprentice and worked until 1840 when he was discharged. On the voyage out in the Columbia, he ate in steerage with his siblings while his parents dined at the Captain's table. At some point, he returned to Hawaii where his older sister had married the French Consul in 1837. Young Peter died in Honolulu.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 19-20
See Also: Corney, Peter (Father)

Cornoyer, Emanuel [variation: Cournoyer] (c. 1801 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1801

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825).

Emanuel Cornoyer may have been working in the fur trade as early as 1821. When he joined the HBC from Sorel on July 14, 1823 as a middleman for two years, he signed his contract with an "X". He worked west of the Rockies, at Fort St. James, for a very short time between 1824-1825. By 1827 he was in York Factory. After that he continued to work east of the Rockies at Fort Dunvegan and Fort Chipewyan in the Athabasca until at least 1837.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1; HBCCont; YFASA 4; FtStJmsLS 1; YFDS 1a

Cornoyer, Joseph [variation: Cournoillè] (c. 1803 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1830); Member, South Party (1828); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Snake Party (1831 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1836); Boule, South Party (1836 - 1837); Trapper, South Party (1837 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842+); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (? - 1826).

Joseph Cornoyer joined the fur trade around 1819 from Sorel at the age of sixteen, and worked at Fort Chipewyan, Athabasca, between 1824-1826. He transferred to the Columbia Department in 1826 from New Caledonia and was in on the construction of Fort Langley in 1827-1828. Chief Trader Samuel Black thought particularly highly of him. He was part of the group sent to the Umpqua to retrieve Jedediah Smith's goods and became a free trapper after 1832, eventually becoming a Willamette settler around 1842. He soon had fifty acres [20.2 ha] cultivated and was producing a rather large nine hundred bushels [327.3 hl] of wheat and appeared to have a very productive farm. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. He largely worked as a free trapper with Laframboise. In March 1849, he was noted as still living in the Champoege area.

On July 11, 1839, he married Thérèse Spokane, widow of Joseph Grenier who had been drowned at the Dalles in 1830. The recorded Cornoyer children were Victoire (c.1831-?) and Joseph (1838-?). She had other children: Martial Lavalee (c.1818-?), Pierre Lavalee (c.1821-1844) and Marie Anne Grenier (1830-1850).

PS: HBCA YFASA 4, 6-8, 11-16; YFDS 2a, 3b-7, 11; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-6; HBCA Joseph Cornoyer search file; OHS 1842 Census; 1849 Census, Oregon Territory, Champoege PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 3a SS: Holman, p.115
See Also: Grenier (Massa), Joseph (Relative)

Corriacca (fl. c. 1830? - 1835) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands

Death: Flathead District, Columbia Department - August 1835

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman or labourer, Fort Colville (1831 - 1835).

Corriacca joined the HBC from Hawaii some time in 1830. He was killed by the Blackfeet Indians, probably in the Flathead area in August 1835.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-3; YFDS 4a-6; YFASA 11, 13-15

Corzey, William [variation: Corsey] (? - c. 1863) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably in or near St. Ola, Orkney, United Kingdom

Death: possibly Vancouver Island, Colony of Vancouver Island - c. 1863

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1852 - 1853); Blacksmith, Fort Simpson (1853 - 1855); Blacksmith, Fort Victoria (1855 - 1860).

William Corzey first came to North America in 1843 as a blacksmith for the HBC working east of the Rockies. After returning to Orkney, he came to the coast as a HBC sponsored settler and for the next nine years worked at a variety of locations as an HBC blacksmith, past the end of his contract in 1856. At one point in 1853, he used his power as a blacksmith to join his fellow Orcadians in a work stoppage to get more flour and pork. He left Fort Simpson in November 1855 and soon took up employment at Fort Victoria. In 1856 he applied to bring out his wife, at his expense, on the return voyage of the Princess Royal. He was employed steadily until 1859 when he appeared to work casually at Fort Victoria until at least 1860. He probably died in or before 1863.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; FtVicASA 1-8, 11; FtSimp[N]PJ 7-8

Cosler, John (fl. 1825 - 1826) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

John Cosler shipped aboard the Josiah Marshall brig, Convoy [William Henry McNeill] at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast, Cosler and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2.

PS: BCA log of the Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Cote, Francois Xavier [standard: François Xavier Côté] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: Acadian)

Birth: probably Acadia [New Brunswick], Lower Canada - c. 1821

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia (barque) (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1850).

François Xavier Côté, who joined the HBC in 1840, began his career with coastal shipping. In 1842, he left Fort Vancouver for Stikine no doubt to replace those who had become implicated in John McLoughlin Jr.'s murder. In 1850 he settled in Fort Victoria and raised a family but never purchased land there. In October 1861, Côté was sent by the HBC on a survey expedition, led by Robert Homfray, to Bute Inlet to survey a route across the Chilcotin Plains and into the gold fields of the Caribou. The group experienced considerable hardship and had to be rescued by local natives. In 1863 he was noted as getting into fights in Victoria and may have left the area by 1871.

François Xavier Coté had one wife and three recorded children. At an unknown place and time, he married Catherine (?-?), possibly a Clallam native. Together they had Catherine (?-bap. Nov 4, 1849-?), Jean Baptiste (c.1853-1876) and Marguerite (1859-1860).

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 4; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20, 24-32; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVicASA 1; BCA BCCR StAndC; RossBCR; Van-PL Colonist, 28 Mar. 1863, p. 3 SS: Van-PL Province, Dec. 22, 1894

Cotsford, Thomas Jonathan (c. 1808 - 1865) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England - c. 1808

Death: Fort Victoria (Victoria), British Columbia - May 1865

Fur trade employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1846); Assistant trader, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1846); Assistant trader, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Pensioner, Fort Victoria (1861 - 1862).

Thomas Cotsford joined the HBC from London in 1844 and spent most of his eighteen year career on the steamer Beaver. He purchased a town lot in Victoria in March 1854 and appears to have retired around 1862 receiving pension gratuities. He had about three years of retirement before he died of epilepsy at his residence at Chatham St., Victoria, B.C.

Thomas Jonathan Cotsford had one recorded wife and four recorded children. Cotsford married Elizabeth [Betsy] Dunn (c.1833-?), daughter of John Thompson Dunn and a mixed descent or Russian woman, in Victoria on August 11, 1859. The children with the Cotsford name were Harriet (1854-?), Thomas Jonathan Jr. (1856-?), William Thomas (1861-?) and Catherine Elizabeth (1863-1864). After the death of Thomas Cotsford, Betsy married Thomas Pamphlet.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; YFDS 17-19; FtVicASA 1-12; log of Beaver 1; BCA BCGR-Land; BCCR CCCath; StJohVic; Van-PL Colonist, May 3, 1865, p. 3; Van-A Pamphlet
See Also: Dunn, John Thompson (Father-in-Law)

Cotte, Charles (fl. 1813 - 1816) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Pierre, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Thompson River (winter 1813 - 1814).

Charles Cotte joined the NWC in Montreal in 1812 on a three year contract. Being one of a large number of NWC employees who came to the Pacific slopes when the NWC took over the interests of the New York based Pacific Fur Company in the Columbia area, he was in the Columbia in the winter of 1813-1814. He probably continued on in the area and, on January 17, 1816, may have signed a further contract (with McTavish, McGillivray & Co.) in Montreal to work for three years as a middleman in Ile-a-la-Crosse or Great Slave Lake.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; ShdeSB Liste

Cotte, Joseph [1] [standard: Cotté] [variation: Coté] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1810 - 1812) (with David Thompson); Hunter, Pacific slopes (1810 - 1812) (with David Thompson); Middleman, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813); Bowsman and middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

The early career of Joseph Cotté is somewhat unclear. A Joseph Coté, possibly the same, was found working for the NWC at Fond du Lac in 1804. On January 10, 1809, a Joseph Coté, from Berthier, Lower Canada [Quebec], also possibly the same, joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] in Montreal and was with David Thompson that year. Late that winter, he was in charge of two dogs pulling a sled of supplies over Athabasca Pass for Thompson and for the next two years, through 1810-1811, stayed with Thompson on his Pacific slopes venture. He wintered in 1810-1811 at Canoe Camp (later, Boat Encampment, near the junction of Canoe and Flat Heart [Wood] Rivers with the Columbia) until April 17, 1811, when Cotté, along with Pierre Pariel, and Rene Vallade, started out in a newly clinker built canoe, twenty-five feet [7.6 m] in length, with David Thompson down the Columbia toward the Pacific. After spending a week at the newly-built Pacific Fur Company's Fort Astoria in July, the group began their return journey to Montreal one week later. On May 3, 1813 he renewed his contract in Montreal with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] and, being assigned to the "montagnes des roches nord-ouest" (ShdeSB Liste), made his way to the now familiar Columbia spending October of that year at Fort Okanagan and the winter at Fort George [Astoria]. He, or Joseph Cotte [2], may have left Fort George for Montreal on April 4, 1814 in a brigade of ten canoes carrying seventy-six people for Montreal, where he was to become a freeman.

The relationship of Joseph Cotte [1] to Joseph [2] and Charles Cotte is unknown.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 578, 870; Belyea, p. 327, 339

Cotte, Joseph [2] [standard: Cotté] [variation: Coté] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Axeman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Sawyer, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

Joseph Cotté joined Wilson Price Hunt's Overland Expedition possibly in St. Louis [Missouri] around September 18, 1810, for that is when he first appeared on Company records. Shortly after his arrival at Fort Astoria around February 1812, and while cutting and clearing trees around the post, the axeman cut his wrist very badly. Aside from a bad bought of venereal disease that summer, he continued to cut trees without incident. He appears to have temporarily signed on with the NWC October 20, 1813 after the takeover by that Montreal company and spent the winter of 1813-1814 in Spokane House. Just how he returned to Montreal has not been ascertained for the roster of the April 4, 1814 brigade to Fort William/Montreal contained the name of one Joseph Cotté, who may be the above.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc XLV, p.145; Coues, p. 871 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; McDougall, p. 84, 108, 156, 166

Cottenoire, Michel Jr. [b] (c. 1820 - 1854) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Clatsop County, Oregon - c. 1820 (born to Michel Sr. Cottenoire and a Chehalis woman)

Death: probably Cowlitz, Pacific Northwest - January 1854

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1837); Settler, Cowlitz (1837).

Michel Cottenoire joined the fur trade in 1834 and worked one contract to 1837 before joining his father as a settler in the Cowlitz, Lewis County. There he raised a family of six children. In 1850, he settled on his own claim of 461 acres [186.6 ha] in Lewis County. He appears to have farmed there until his death in 1854.

Michel Cottenoire Jr. had one wife and six children. On March 3, 1841, he united with Sophie Plamondon, daughter of Simon Plamondon by an earlier marriage to a Cowlitz woman. They formalized their marriage on June 7, 1842. Their children were Cecilia (c.1843-?), Isabella (c.1843-?), Simon (c.1847-?), Elizabeth (c.1850-?), Victoria (c.1852-?) and Francis (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-5; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co. PPS: CCR 1a; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 120

See Also: Cottenoire, Michel Sr. (Father); Plomondo, Simon (Father-in-Law)

Cottenoire, Michel Sr. [a] [variation: Coutenoir, Cotonair, Cottonaire, Cottinaire, Cottinear] (c. 1791 - 1851) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1791

Death: probably Lewis County, Oregon Territory [Washington] - August 1851

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Willamette (winter 1813 - 1814); HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1837); Settler, Cowlitz (1837 - 1842+).

Michel Cottenoire may have first joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] from York on December 28, 1811 to work at Fort William as a boue on the Lake. He certainly signed or renewed his contract in Montreal on March 16, 1813, and that year began work on the Pacific slopes where he was part of a large contingent of NWC men who arrived when the Company took over the Columbia interest of the New York based Pacific Fur Company. Cottenoire possibly stayed in the area until he transferred to the HBC in 1821. He eventually ended up settling in the Cowlitz, Lewis County area in, he claimed, 1834 while he was apparently working at Fort Vancouver. Roberts mentioned receiving "20 head of cattle from the Cottenoirs" in 1847.

Cottenoire had two wives and five children. He appears to have married a Chehalis native woman, by whom he had Michel (1820) and Lisette (1821-?) and, after her death, he united with Marie Ketse' (c.1818-?) on September 13, 1835 which was formalized on April 8, 1839. Together they had three children, Edouard (c.1831), David (c.1836-?) and Marie (1840-?).

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10-12; YFASA 1-9, 11-15; YFDS 2a, 3b, 4b-7, 10-11; FtVanASA 1-6; FtVanCB 9; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co. PPS: CCR 1a; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 83; G. B. Roberts
See Also: Cottenoire, Michel Jr. (Son)

Couch, John Heard (1811 - 1870) (American)

Birth: Newburyport, Massachusetts, United States - February 1811 (born to John and Sally Couch)

Death: probably Portland, Oregon - January 1870

Maritime officer

U.A. Captain, Maryland (brig) (1840); Captain, Chenamus (brig) (1842 - 1843).

Captain John H. Couch was not really a fur trader but is entered here as he worked in opposition to the HBC on the Columbia River. He first entered the Columbia on June 15, 1840, salted one hundred barrels of salmon at Willamette Falls and left on September 23 for New England, leaving George W. LeBreton to oppose the HBC at the Falls. According to Bancroft, he sold the Maryland in Hawaii and returned to Newburyport by other means. He returned to Willamette Falls in 1842 and, not having sold all the salmon from his previous journey, packed an additional one hundred barrels before he departed in September. Compatriot Captain Isaac N. Chapman of the Nereus was overzealous and packed six hundred barrels, some of which rotted. Before he left, Couch left a stock of goods at Oregon City in the care of Albert E. Wilson. He returned in 1843 with passengers which included missionaries, settlers and entrepreneurs and continued to manage the business of Cushing & Co. until 1847 when he returned to Newburyport by way of China. He next came out on the barque Madonna with a Captain Flanders with whom he went into business. Couch took out a land claim in the area of Portland, was treasurer of the Provisional Government, director of the Oregon Printing Association and even entered into the banking business. In later years he was county commissioner and the federal inspector of hulls at Portland. John H. Couch probably died in Portland.

John H. Couch married Caroline Flanders, daughter of John Flanders, in Newburyport on December 9, 1832. Caroline and their three daughters came out from Massachusetts by sea in 1852 to join Captain Couch.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 28, 29, 33; HU-Wid ColCent, December 12, 1832 SS: Bancroft, History of Oregon, vol. 1, p. 245; Himes, p. 342-343; Malloy, p. 135; Vital Records of Essex, p. 112

Cournoyer, Edouard (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1844).

Edouard Cournoyer joined the HBC from Sorel in 1841. He returned east of the Rockies to Canada at the end of his contract in 1844.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 23

Courtemanche, Joseph (c. 1812 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Chambly, Lower Canada - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1835).

Joseph Courtemanche joined the HBC from Chambly in 1832 as a middleman and probably returned there at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c

Courter, Mr. [variation: Charles Courtin] (? - 1810) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: Flathead District, Pacific Northwest - February 1810

Fur trade employee

U.A. Trader, Saleesh country (1810); Trader, Flathead District (1810).

The identity of "Mr. Courter" of David Thompson's journals is a mystery. According to Thompson, around February, 1810, Courter, "a trader and Hunter from the U States", (ChSoc XL, p. 302) did not seek permission from the Peigans to hunt bison or trap beaver in their territory and, as a result of his action, Courter, along with one Indian was killed for encroachment. Thompson, when reaching the area and upon hearing the story from the Saleesh Indians, settled the affairs by compensating the people who had gone to the expense of rescuing the furs, recovering and burying the body, etc. For some years, Courter's name was associated with John Coulter, who stayed in the Missouri country area with Manuel Lisa after having made his epic journey with Lewis and Clark; however, Colter died in 1813. A more likely candidate is Charles Courtin, a French Canadian naturalized American who was known to have been trapped with other free-hunters in the upper Missouri around that time (Nisbet, 153).

PS: UBC-Koer, Thompson PPS: ChSoc XL, p. 302; Coues, p. 674 SS: Chittenden, p. 723; Nisbet, Sources of the, p. 152-53

Courtoie, Augustin (fl. 1850 - 1852) (Undetermined origin)Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Hall or Boise (1850 - 1852).

Augustin Courtoie worked for the HBC, first appearing on record in the Columbia either at Fort Hall or Fort Boise in 1850. He was discharged and left the service on March 31, 1852. He has not been traced after that.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9

Courtois, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1793) (Undetermined origin)Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

François Courtois joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chepewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific. He is mentioned only once in the journals by Mackenzie and once in a letter from Fort Forks at the beginning of the journey on May 8, 1793, indicating that financial settlement had not been made with him.

PPS: HakSP Mackenzie, p. 257, 452

Courville, Basil (c. 1822 - ?) (Canadian: French or Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Pointe Claire, Lower Canada or New York State - c. 1822

Death: possibly Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1844).

The background of Basil Courville is somewhat confusing for, according to the HBC records, he appears to be a French Canadian from the parish of Pointe Claire (Montreal) but according to a Harriet Duncan Munnick annotation, Courville was "born in New York State near the Canadian border apparently a mixed blood" (CCR 5, A-19). Perhaps both are correct. He joined the HBC in 1839, but in 1844-1845 he deserted, and moved to the Willamette possibly because he had become "deranged" (YFDS 16, p. 64). In the early 1850s, Courville and family went to the South Umpqua River of Douglas Co, Oregon (about eight miles from Canyonville) to settle.

Basil Courville had one wife and three recorded children. On June 16, 1851 when he was living in St. Louis, he married Marianne King, Klickitat in St. Paul, the widow of Honore King. Their recorded children were Louis (1853-?), Edward (1857-?) and Gilbert (1861-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 16 PPS: CCR 2b, 5a, 5c

Coutie, Alexis (c. 1791 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1791

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1826 - 1827).

Alexis Coutie worked for the HBC for five years largely in New Caledonia before returning to Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2, 4-6; YFDS 1a; FtStJmsLS 1; FtStJmsRD 3

Couture, Joseph [1] (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1825 (born to Louis Couture and Marie Dagenas)

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1845 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849).

Joseph Couture [1] joined the HBC in 1844 from La Prairie, but, on March 1, 1849, he deserted, presumably for the gold fields of California. Within two years he was likely back in the Willamette Valley in 1851 when his third child was baptised.

Joseph Couture had a wife and children. On April 13, 1846, he married Marie Josephine, Cayuse (c.1831-?). Their children were Marie (1847-1847), Joseph (1848-?) and Pierre (1851-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28; YFDS 19 PPS: CCR 1b, 3a

Couture, Joseph [2] (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Nez Perces (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Nez Perces (1854).

Joseph Couture [2] from Canada is very likely Joseph Couture [1] having returned from the gold fields of California. Shortly after re-enlisting, he deserted in 1854.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 9-11

Couturier, Jacques (c. 1819 - c. 1845) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1819

Death: probably New Caledonia [British Columbia] - c. 1845

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1840 - 1845).

Montrealer Jacques Courturier joined the HBC in 1840 and served in New Caledonia where he appears to have died.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-25; FtVanASA 6-8

Couturier, Olivier (fl. 1841 - 1843) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Bytown [Ottawa], Upper Canada [Ontario]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Middleman, South Party (1841 - 1843).

Olivier Courturier joined the HBC in Lachine in 1837 and worked at farms, posts and outward expeditions. In the spring of 1843 he returned east of the Rockies, presumably to Canada.

On April 8, 1839 he married Marguerite (c.1820-1844), daughter of Chief Cassino. At that time she had a four-year-old son, Pierre Calder (c.1835-?), the son of Peter Calder who had gone to Fort Edmonton in 1836. Marguerite died on June 30, 1844 a year after Olivier had gone east of the Rockies.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; YFASA 17, 19, 22 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b
See Also: Calder, Peter (Relative)

Couturier, Pierre [variation: Cuturier] (c. 1831 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1831 (born to Pierre Couturier and Lucie Fortier)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1856); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1858 - 1860).

Pierre Couturier joined the HBC from Maska and came west over the Rockies into the Columbia in 1848. He first worked at Fort Rupert and came south with the rest of the workers when it was decided that the coal deposits were not up to expectations. He appeared to work casually as a labourer until 1860 in the Victoria area and from 1860-1862, was probably living on Humboldt St., Victoria.

Pierre Couturier had one wife, Louise (?-?), Cowichan, whom he married on April 18, 1853 in Victoria.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-30, 32; FtVicASA 1-6, 8-9; YFDS 19; BCA BCCR StAndC; 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 28

Cowelitz (fl. 1845 - 1846) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846).

Cowelitz, from Oahu, joined the HBC in 1845 on a three-year contract and for unstated reasons was given the name of a Native nation [Cowlitz]. However, he worked only until August 6, 1846, at which point he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-26; YFDS 17

Cowie [variation: Kauī] (fl. 1841 - 1863) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

PSAC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1842 - 1863); Shepherd, Fort Nisqually (1842 - 1863).

Cowie joined the HBC from Oahu in 1841 and began receiving wages on July 1 of that year. In August 1845 he transferred part of his salary to his father. Cowie spent much of his twenty year career at Fort Nisqually working for the HBC affiliated Puget Sound Agriculture Company as a labourer, carpenter, and shepherd both at Fort Nisqually and the outstations of Tlithlow and Muck. Repeatedly, Cowie had charge of an Indian crew or held other supervisory positions, which explains his 1854 wage of $120 a year whereas the other Hawaiians received ninety-six dollars. Cowie took several impromptu breaks from employment. On one of these, March 17, 1850, Cowie, Keave'haccow, and Kalama suddenly announced they were "leaving the service." Whatever Cowie did in the interim, he was welcomed back "into the employ of the Company" at Fort Nisqually six months later (Dickey, Nisqually).

Cowie had a wife by November 1849 when he, Kalama, and Keave'haccow went with "their women" for a three-day spontaneous holiday abroad a departing vessel. In October 1853 he built himself a separate "dwelling house for himself" at Fort Nisqually, which may indicate he had a family by that time. He certainly did so by 1856. Cowie has not been traced after 1863.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-14; YFDS 12; YFASA 24-32; SandIsAB 5; PSACAB 22a, 23, 28, 30, 37, 38 PPS: TacP-FtNis
Huggins, April 28, 1904; Dickey
See Also: Keave-haccow; Kalama

Cowie, Robert (c. 1795 - 1859) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Scotland - c. 1795

Death: June 1859

Fur trade officer

NWC Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1836); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1836).

Robert Cowie joined the NWC around 1811, and was a clerk and accountant at Fort William in 1816 when it was captured by Lord Selkirk. He joined the HBC at the time of coalition and worked in Lachine from 1822-1829. He became Chief Trader in 1829 largely through his education and his ability to write although he was not particularly adept at hard duty. After working east of the Rockies, he worked at Fort Vancouver and, on his way out, in 1836-1837 he was at the Honolulu office where George Pelly and the Company paid for a subscription to the Island Gazette. Some time in the fall of 1837, Cowie, in indifferent health, possibly from drinking, sailed on the Griffon for Mazatlan where he arrived in December, on his way to England via the Canadas. After returning to Moose Factory, he went on furlough for two years and retired in 1846.

PS: ShdeSB Liste; HBCA YFDS 5a-7; FtVanASA 3-5; YFASA 11, 12, 17; SandIsAB 1; SandIsLonIC 1; SimpsonCB; HMCS
SReynoldsJ SS: HBRs XXII, p. 434; HBRs XXX, p. 197-98

Cox, Francis G. (fl. 1846 - 1847) (probably British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1846); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1846 - 1847).

Francis Cox joined the HBC vessel Vancouver when it was at Oahu on April 25, 1846 and sailed to San Francisco and Fort Vancouver. On November 30, 1846 he joined the Columbia at Fort Victoria and stayed with the vessel until August 12, 1847 when, on a trip to Honolulu, he was discharged at his own request.

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-27; YFDS 18; log of Columbia 9; log of Vancouver [3] 2

Cox, John [variation: Edward Coxe] (fl. c. 1809? - 1850) (Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands - c. 1779

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - February 1850

Fur trade employee

PFC Labourer, Tonquin (ship) (1811); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1811); NWC Labourer, David Thompson (1811); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1814); HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1835); Pigherd, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1835);

Untraced vocation (low wage), Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1842); Pigherd, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1843); PFC Freeman, Columbia Department (1843 - 1850).

John Cox joined the crew of the Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as a labourer around February 21, 1811 when the vessel being operated by the Pacific Fur Company stopped at Oahu and took on a complement of twelve Hawaiian Islanders. One month later, on March 22, the Tonquin arrived at the mouth of the Columbia and, on April 12, Cox was noted as helping to unload the vessel. A few months later Cox went east with explorer David Thompson, travelling via London on his way back to the north coast. At the time of the coalition in 1821, John Cox transferred to the HBC; his entire career appears to have been spent in the Fort George [Astoria] and Fort Vancouver area, leaving almost nothing in the form of a paper trail. In 1824-1825, he was attached to the Fort George store. In October 1825 he was part of a group of Hawaiians accused of having stolen blankets from the trade goods of the William & Ann, but denied any involvement. He appears to have retired in 1843-1844 and likely continued to live in Kanaka village, a cluster of Hawaiian labourers attached to Fort Vancouver. There, on a warm sunny day, February 2, 1850, he succumbed either at the age of seventy-one or eighty-four.

John Cox had a wife in 1825. He also appears to have had a Native slave, Marie (1831-1845) whom he likely inherited through a previous Native wife.

A painting of John Cox by traveller Paul Kane hangs in the National Gallery in Ottawa, Canada.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 9; YFASA 1-9, 11-15, 19-20; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10-12; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFDS 3a; FtVanCB 9; BCA Lowe 1 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 711; CCR 1b; A. McDonald, p. 29 SS: information from Naukana descendant

Cox, Ross (1793 - 1853) (Irish)

Birth: Dublin, Ireland - 1793 (born to Samuel Cox and Margaret Thorpe)

Death: Dublin, Ireland - 1853

Fur trade employee

PFC Clerk, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1812); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); NWC Clerk, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1812); PFC Clerk, River Explorations (1812 - 1813); NWC Clerk, River Explorations (1813 - 1816); Clerk in charge, Fort Okanagan (1816).

Ross Cox, also known at the "Little Irishman", became another source of information on the fur trade. In 1811 he came to America as a clerk for the American Fur Company, and on October 17, 1811, sailed from New York harbour on Astor's ship, the Beaver. During the voyage, Cox's playing the fifes, intended to help pass the time, became a source of irritation to others, including the first mate, who put a stop to it. Cox arrived at the mouth of the Columbia on May 9, 1812, and left for the interior on June 29. He did not return for almost a year during the time of which he was part of the expedition exploring the Upper Columbia, Walla Walla and Spokane and Coeur d'Alene Rivers. In 1812 he set himself up alongside the NWC post at Salish House. After Fort Astoria was sold/surrendered in 1813, he continued his service with the NWC. From that point as clerk he made eight expeditions again to the Upper Columbia, Nez Perces and Flathead country. By 1816 he rebuilt and was in charge of Fort Okanagan and it was around that time that he applied to Colin Robertson for a job as bookkeeper in the Southern or Northern Departments. Although Robertson recommended Cox to Andrew Colville, the following year, in April 1817, Cox went overland - arriving in Montreal in the fall and thence to Dublin. Later in his life, he used his literary skills by becoming correspondent for the London Morning Herald and as a clerk in a Dublin police office. He went on to write Adventures on the Columbia River (1831) and The Columbia River (1832) but as both were written from memory, they are considered less reliable than the Gabriel Franchère or to the Alexander Ross journals. However, a diary on a trip from Montreal to Liverpool rests in the HBCA.

In 1819 Ross Cox married Hannah Cumming, with whom he had several children.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Franchère, p. 32, 67; HBRS II, p. 252; XLV, p. 112, 114, 120; Cox SS: Chittenden, p. 905; HBRS XXII, p. 251, 434

Craig, William [1] [variation: Cragg, Cragge] (1800 - 1869) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America - 1800

Death: possibly Idaho Territory, United States - 1869

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Clearwater Valley (1829); Settler, Clearwater Valley (1840).

When William Craig [1] first came to the Clearwater Valley [Idaho] trapping in 1829 with Joe Meek and Robert Newell, he took a Nez Perces wife. In the fall of 1840, after a decade of trapping east of the Rockies, he returned to the Clearwater Valley and settled on Lapwai Creek, eight miles [12.9 km] from the Henry H. Spalding mission. Although from a Presbyterian background himself, while working for Spalding, Craig could not abide by the missionary ways - a source of considerable trouble. In spite of this, in November 1847 at the time of the Whitman massacre, Mrs. Spalding and her children took refuge with the Craigs. The Spaldings were escorted to Fort Walla Walla by friendly Nez Percés.

SS: Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 23, 303, 343; Bailey

Craig, William [2] (fl. 1856 - 1861) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857); Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1860 - 1861).

William Craig made two return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Princess Royal 2

Craigie, George (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

George Craigie made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts. As he disobeyed the captain he spent part of the return voyage as a prisoner.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicCB 4

Craigie, James [1] [variation: Cragie] (1813 - 1895) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Rousay, Orkney - August 1813

Death: Yaquina Bay, Oregon State, United States - September 1895

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1835); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1839); Labourer, Snake Party (1839 - 1840); Trader, Fort Boise (1840 - 1846); Indian trader, Snake Party (1846 - 1847); Labourer in charge, Fort Boise (1847 - 1849); Interpreter in charge, Fort Boise (1849 - 1850); Interpreter, Snake Country (1850 - 1851); In charge, Snake Country (1851 - 1852).

James Craigie originally joined the HBC on April 2, 1835 as a labourer for five years and sailed to Hudson Bay. After making his way overland, he spent most of his career in the Snake Country around Fort Boise (Idaho) and was noted as building that Fort in 1837. While at Fort Boise, he cultivated vegetables in the two-acre [0.8 ha] vegetable garden and helped to look after the many sheep, horses and cattle. Afterwards he became a manager along with Thomas McKay and François Payette and became known as being a helpful supplier to the overlanders heading for Oregon. Around 1849 he went to California, presumably in search of gold, but appears to have re-enlisted for his named appeared on account again. He retired in 1852 and around that time joined the overlanders and took up a claim among the Waldo Hills, seven miles [11.3 km] south of Salem, Oregon. Five years later in 1857 and in need of a better climate, he moved to the Walla Walla area where he stayed until 1866. That year, under advice from a physician, he chose the oceanside at Yaquina Bay, Oregon, where he lived until his death in 1895.

James Craigie's family life is unclear. In 1839, while at Fort Boise, he married a "Bannock" native and had one daughter. On July 12, 1853 James Craigie married Mary Ann Desjarlais who may be the same as his first wife. No other children have been traced.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV, 8; FtVanASA 3-9; YFDS 7, 11, 18, 20; YFASA 19-20, 24-28, 30-32 PPS: OHS Statesman, Jul. 12, 1853, p. 2; OHS SB#59, p. 67; SB#21, p. 15 SS: Wells, "James Craigie", p. 133-137; correspondence, John C. Jackson

Craigie, James [2] [variation: Crogan] (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

James Craigie sailed to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts and he may have been on the coast when he was discharged.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Craigie, William [a] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Storeman, Fort Vancouver (1856 - 1857).

William Craigie [a] is on record as joining the HBC in 1856 and quit the following year. He may be the William Craigie who appeared on the March 1849 Census in Clatsop Co.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 12-14; OHS 1849 Census, Clatsop Co.

Craigie, William [b] (fl. 1844 - 1860) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Rousay, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1844 - 1845); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1847); Post master, Fort George [Astoria] (1847 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Colville general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Colville (1854 - 1855); Farmer, Fort Colville (1855 - 1859); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1859).

William Craigie joined the HBC Orkney in 1843, sailed to York Factory and made his way overland to the Coast. On September 1, 1849 after several years of employment, he left for the gold fields of California but he was back by 1851. He may have left for the British Isles on March 27, 1859, on the Princess Royal for destined for the British Isles, arriving July 7, 1859. He may have returned in 1862.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; YFASA 24-30; YFDS 18, 20, 22; FtVanASA 9-15; FtVicASA 11; log of Princess Royal 5

Craigie, William [c] (fl. 1851 - 1853) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly in or near Deerness, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Colville (1852 - 1853).

William Craigie [c], the third from Orkney, appears to have joined the HBC in 1850 and arrived on the Pacific slopes, for he worked for the HBC.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31, 32

Crate, William Frederick (c. 1812 - c. 1871) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England - c. 1812

Death: probably Vancouver, Washington Territory - c. 1871

Fur trade employee

HBC Millwright, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1843); Millwright, Columbia Department general charges (1850 - 1851); Millwright, Fort Vancouver depot (1853 - 1860); Millwright, Columbia Department (1860 - 1861).

A small man from the city of London, William Frederick Crate joined the HBC on April 9, 1834 from Lachine but his contract was cancelled at York Factory in the following July. He spent 1834-1835 at the Red River Settlement and was re-engaged as a millwright essentially to construct water mills and to mill flour at Fort Vancouver. There, beginning June 20, 1835, his work was competent and relatively uneventful but in 1839, he was bullied and beaten by a mill worker, the six foot [1.8 m] tall Jean Heroux, who in turn was pulled off Crate and pummelled by Charles Forrest. There appears to have been no permanent damage. His contract appears to have ended in 1842 and, in the spring of 1843 he went east of the Rockies and returned to England in 1843 on the Prince Rupert. He rejoined in 1849 and reappeared again in the Columbia in 1850, working until June 1860 before settling in the Vancouver, Washington area.

Family-wise, William Frederick Crate had two successive wives and four recorded children. In January 1843 he fathered a child, Elizabeth Crate by an unnamed native woman. He returned from England, possibly with an English wife, Sarah Glazebrook, with whom he had three more children: William F. Jr. (c.1845-?), Adolfus (July 28, 1849-?) and Mary Ann (Oct. 1852-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 15, 19-20, 22-23, 30-32; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-17; FtVanCB 30; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 9; HBCA William F. Crate search file; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co. PPS: British and American Joint Commission, p. 104-108; CCR 1b

Crawford, Andrew (fl. 1844 - 1850) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near Irvine, Ayrshire, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Carpenter, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1847); Carpenter, Vancouver (barque) (1847 - 1848); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Carpenter, Cadboro (schooner) (1849 - 1850).

Andrew Crawford joined the HBC in 1843 on a five-year contract. He worked until October 31, 1846, at which point he returned to the British Isles on the barque Vancouver. As he was returning on the same vessel, the Vancouver was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia and so on June 8, 1848, he joined the schooner Cadboro. Little else is known of him for, apart from his many activities, he was sick in the fall of 1848. His movements after 1850 have not been determined.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 24-26, 28-32; YFDS 17, 19; log of Cadboro 6; FtVicASA 1-2

Crawford, William (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

William Crawford sailed to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal. After his arrival he deserted at Victoria and has not been traced further.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Creegan, James [variation: Creagan] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

James Creegan joined the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Crelly, John [variation: Crelley] (fl. 1842 - 1843) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly Wigtownshire, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Conlitz (barque) (1842 - 1843).

John Crelly was working on another vessel when he joined the HBC barque Conlitz in London in 1842 for its voyage to the Columbia. He made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast and likely continued his career elsewhere.

In 1843, his needy mother, Janet, who lived in Stenston, Scotland, sent her son John a plaintiff letter but it was not delivered. She was decrying her three absent son's inattentiveness to her financial needs.

PS: HBCA YFASA 22-23; YFDS 13; FtVanASA 7-8; PortB 1; MI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 161-63

Crete, Edouard [variation: Crate] (c. 1821 - 1894) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Lachine or Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1821 (born to Baptiste Crete and Marie Anne Lanoir)

Death: probably at Crate's Point, below the Dalles on the Columbia River

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1841); Boute, New Caledonia (1841 - 1843); Middleman, New Caledonia (1843 - 1845); Boute, New Caledonia (1845 - 1848); Boute, Fort Nez Percés (1848 - 1849); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850).

Edouard Crete (spelled Crate in later years) joined the HBC in 1838. In 1847 or 1848 he helped to man the boat that brought the Spalding and Whitman survivors, rescued by Peter Skene Ogden, down to Fort Vancouver after the massacre (CCR 1, A-18). In 1848 he appeared on the Muster Rolls during the Cayuse War as being a Private in D, E, 6th and 7th Company. In April 1850 he retired to Crate's Point below the Dalles, raising stock and transporting immigrants downriver in partnership with Charles Lefevé of Pendleton.

At Vancouver on June 24, 1844 he married Sophie Boucher (c.1830-?), daughter of Baptiste Boucher and Nancy McDougal and together they had fourteen children, some of whom became well-known citizens of Oregon. Four of their children were Edward (c.1843-?), Nancy (c.1845-?), Jane (c.1847-?) and John B. (c.1848-?) (1850 Census).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-9; YFASA 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 12-13, 15-17; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.
PPS: CCR 1b SS: McArthur, Oregon Geographic Names, p. 9; Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 506
See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste [c] (Father-in-Law)

Crevais, Antoine [variation: Crevaie, Crevers] (fl. 1822 - 1825) (Undetermined origin)

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

Both Antoine and Charles partook in one or more Snake Country expeditions. One day after a mass desertion from the Ogden party to the Americans, Antoine and François Sasanare rushed into the camp claiming that they had been pillaged by the Americans of their traps and furs and would have held them prisoner had they not escaped. As this was not characteristic of the Americans, William Kittson deemed the story to be a lie. From that point on, Antoine Crevais disappears from record.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 2, 3

Crevais, Charles [variation: Crevaie] (fl. 1822 - 1825) (Undetermined origin)Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Saskatchewan/Spokane (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

Charles Crevais, who may have worked for the NWC, appeared in the Columbia Department as a freeman in 1823 possibly working the territory between Fort Spokane and the Saskatchewan for the HBC. On February 10, 1824, when in charge of a small lodge at Prairie de Cheveaux (a short distance from Flathead House), freeman Crevais was joined by the Snake Party of Alexander Ross who gathered up the large party of encamped freemen for the subsequent journey. Ross had reservations about Crevais, considering him a "bad trapper" (SnkCoPJ 1, fo. 1d) as well as a less than sterling character - Crevais, on August 3, 1824 in the Payette River area, sold his adopted daughter (orphaned when her trapper father and NWC employee Denoyer had been killed years before at Fort des Prairies) for forty beaver skins (SnkCoPJ 1, fo. 41d). Nonetheless, he was taken on by Peter Skene Ogden for the next outfit's Snake Country expedition.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2

Crimp, Samuel (fl. 1839 - 1844) (British: English)Birth: Salcomb, Devon, England*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1840); Sailor, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1843); Sailor, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844).

Samuel Crimp joined the HBC in London on October 29, 1838 for five years. He sailed to the coast, worked in coastal shipping from October 1, 1839 and arrived back in London in June 1844.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 19-20, 23; YFDS 10-11; FtVanASA 6-8

Crisp, Isaac (fl. 1832 - 1836) (British: English)Birth: probably in or near Warton or Naze, Essex, England*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1833 - 1836).

Isaac Crisp joined the HBC in London on September 15, 1832 for three years. He sailed to the coast on the Ganymede and began work in coastal shipping on June 26, 1833. He transferred to the Dryad, a coastal trading and supply vessel on which he stayed until it arrived back in England at the end of April 1836.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Ganymede 1; YFASA 13-15; YFDS 5b-6; log of Dryad 1; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA

Crochetier, Louis (c. 1797 - ?) (Canadian: English)Birth: St. Elizabeth, Lower Canada - c. 1797

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826).

Louis Crochetier worked in New Caledonia for the HBC in the 1820s. In outfit 1821-1822 he was noted as being fined for misconduct and, in outfit 1826-1827, he returned to Montreal where he was paid.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2, 4-6; YFDS 1a; FtStJmsLS 1; FtStJmsRD 3
See Also: Dubois, Andre (possible Relative)

Croley, Dr. John [variation: Crowly] (fl. 1817) (probably British: Scottish)Birth: probably Edinburgh, Scotland*Fur trade officer

NWC Passenger, Levant (ship) (1817 - 1818); Surgeon, Fort George [Astoria] (1818 - 1820).

John Croley, did not have an opportunity to work long on the Pacific slopes. He likely received his medical training in Edinburgh and came to Canada in 1817. On September 24, 1817, while in Quebec City, he signed on with the NWC to act as a wintering surgeon for three years at Fort George on the Columbia. He travelled to Boston where he joined the NWC chartered vessel, Levant, and left in October for the Northwest Coast. Some time after his arrival at the post in July 1818, however, he was charged with having shot a man in cold blood, possibly in Edinburgh, and so was sent home to attend his trial. The date has not been determined as he was still on the NWC books in 1820-1821.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 60

Cromarty, William [variation: Cromartie] (c. 1814 - 1875) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: St. Margaret's Hope, South Ronaldsay, Orkney - c. 1814 (possibly born to John Cromartie and Catherine [Coregale] Cromartie)

Death: Fort Langley, British Columbia - November 1875

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1844 - 1845); Cooper, Fort Langley (1845 - 1863); Labourer, Fort Langley (1863 - 1870); Cooper, Fort Langley (1871 - 1872); In charge, Fort Langley (1872).

William Cromarty was one of four Cromarty boys, two of whom (the other being Peter [c.1821-?]) chose to be coopers. Another brother, Magnus (c.1816) chose fishing. As the HBC salmon trading operations at Fort Langley needed a qualified cooper, in 1843 in Stromness, William joined the HBC as a skilled tradesman, and sailed for York Factory. He stayed there that outfit before heading west the following July. After a further year, he was placed at Fort Langley where he spent the rest of his career and raised a family. Typically, he worked all year round at the cooperage along with Sandwich [Hawaiian] Islanders Charles Ohia, Peter Ohule and Maayo. During the salmon run, he "would be at the big cauldron making brine, ready for the salting" (Lugrin, p. 107). Between 1860-1863, he pre-empted 260 acres [105.2 ha] eight miles [12.9 km] north of Fort Langley in the Ruskin and Silverdale area on the north bank of the Fraser River. In 1868 he was made a school trustee and 1869 found him cutting and curing hams and making salmon barrels. As his first claim was somewhat distant from his place of employment, in August, 1869, he pre-empted a further 160 acres [64.8 ha] on the south bank of the river only three and a half miles [5.6 km] from Langley. On November 19, 1870 he retired but returned the following year to continue his work as a cooper and in 1872 he was left in charge of the post while the clerk in charge, Ovid Allard, was in Victoria. In 1875 he died at Langley [B.C.]. Four years after his death, in 1879, Cromarty's old house and barn were torn down.

William Cromarty married Salum'mia [aka Jane, Elizabeth and Jenny] (c.1830-c.1869) and had seven children: Elizabeth (1847-1883), William (1848-1881), Ann (1850-?), James (1853-1936), David (1855-1884), Mary (1858-1889) and Samuel (1869-1923).

PS: OrkA 1821 and 1841 U.K. Censuses, Orkney-South Ronaldsay; HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-16; HBCABio; BCA Guardian, Dec. 15, 1875; BCCR CCCath SS: Lugrin, p. 107; VanSTheo UCConArch; HBC Archivist Dec. 7, 1962 London letter to Cromarty relative; Cromarty descendants and relatives; Morton; Laing, p. 104, 177

Crooks, Ramsay (1787 - 1859) (British: Scottish and American)

Birth: Greenoch, Scotland - January 1787 (born to William Crooks and Margaret [Ramsey] Crooks)

Death: New York, New York - June 1859

Fur trade officer

PFC Partner, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (1812).

Ramsay Crooks had a varied career, much of it in the fur trade. In 1803 the sixteen year old joined the Montreal-based fur trade as a clerk. Later, in St. Louis he formed a partnership with Robert McLellan that lasted until 1810. After returning to Canada, he purchased shares in John Jacob Astor's PFC, became a partner and subsequently joined Wilson Price Hunt's Overland Expedition. At the beginning of August 1811, after crossing the Great Divide, they reached an abandoned Fort Andrew Henry where they built canoes. On the way down the Snake, the canoes proved impractical and Crooks' canoe broke apart at Caldron Linn resulting in the drowning of Antoine Clappin and the loss of provisions. The canoes were abandoned, and Crooks detached from the main party striking out on foot. When one member of the party, John Day, became seriously ill, Crooks remained behind to assist him. The pair were helped by the Snake Indians who shared food when they could. Subsequently they wandered for two months until they came upon the Umatilla River around April 15, 1812 and some sympathetic Umatilla Indians near the juncture with the Columbia. There an old grey haired Umatilla native helped them rest and revive for two days. The pair then travelled nine days down the Columbia to the falls, where they were stripped of all their possessions, including clothes by the local natives who traditionally collected tribute and, after some debate, let go. The now-naked Crooks and Day, being deprived of everything including knives, fled into the hills making their way up river again. Several days later they reached their old Umatilla friend, who once more looked after them. It wasn't until May 1812 that Robert Stuart eventually located Crooks and Day, now hardly recognizable, near the mouth of the Umatilla River, from which point they were taken down the river. They reached Astoria on May 11, 1812. There, as both Crooks and McLellan had had their share of adventure and Astor's enterprise, they struck out on June 29, 1812 and returned eastward only to be robbed of their horses in the Rocky Mountains by Crow Indians. They arrived in St. Louis April 30, 1813. Later, in 1817, when the Southwest Company was bought out by the AFC, Crooks became an agent for the AFC. For the next few years, he travelled to Mackinaw and St. Louis being the virtual head of the Company's business for twelve years after the Western Department was established in St. Louis. When Astor retired in 1834, Crooks purchased the Northern Department and became president of the northern independent branch (retaining the American Fur Company name) a company of which he remained president until it was dissolved. He also had varied business interests; he was the first president of the Mohawk and Hudson Railroad Company, serving until 1835. In his latter years he was a trustee of the Astor Library as well as of several learned societies.

Ramsay Crooks was related through marriage to the Chouteau family, having married Emily (Marianna Pelagie) Pratt, March 10, 1825.

PPS: Franchère, p. 72; Hunt, p. 45-51, 67; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 188-193; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; ChSoc LVII, p. 697 SS: Galbraith, The Hudson's Bay Company, p. 57-59; Coues, p. 882; Chittenden, p. 192, 381-82; Lavender, The Fist in the Wilderness; "Records of the Crooks Family" provided by a Crooks family descendant

See Also: Day, John

Croston, Richard (fl. 1833 - 1835) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835).

Richard Croston sailed on the HBC vessel Nereide from London on May 4, 1833 on an arduous, almost year long voyage to the Northwest Coast and back again. After stopping at Valparaiso, the vessel eventually arrived back in London May 28, 1835.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; log of Nereide 1

Crouch, Augustus (fl. 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Prince Albert (barque) (1854).

During the voyage of the Prince Albert to Vancouver Island in 1854 Augustus Crouch ran afoul of Captain Mannoek and had a criminal charge laid against him by the captain. As a result of this, Crouch was off duty for much of the voyage.

PS: HBCA FtVicCB 11

Crouch, John (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

John Crouch made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of the Princess Royal, 4; PortB 1

Crouch, Joseph [variation: Croutch] (fl. 1832 - 1836) (British: English)

Birth: probably Bermondsey, Surrey, England

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Carpenter, Vancouver (schooner) (1833); Carpenter, Dryad (brig) (1834); Carpenter, Fort Simpson naval service (1834 - 1835); Carpenter, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Carpenter, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836).

Joseph Crouch joined the HBC in London on September 15, 1832, for three years which were to be served on the coast. While on the Ganymede, he protested several times about having to do duties beyond his carpentry, and was transferred to the coastal schooner, Vancouver on July 18, 1833. However, the following year, on September 16, 1834, he was put ashore possibly to work on the new Fort Simpson. At the end of his contract, Crouch left the coast in October 1835 aboard the Dryad and arrived in England in April 1836.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; log of Ganymede 1; YFASA 13-15; YFDS 5b-6; FtVanASA 3; log of Dryad 2

Crownriver [variation: Crowener] (fl. 1850 - c. 1853?) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - 1827

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Hall or Fort Boise (1853 - 1854).

Crownriver joined the HBC around 1850 but deserted on June 29, 1851. He was in the Snake Country in 1853-1854 with a notation indicating that he had already "left," having received partial wages. He may have re-enlisted and deserted again in 1853 but this cannot be substantiated.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-31; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-10; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Cumming, Cuthbert Jr. (fl. 1840 - 1844) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Swan River, Rupert's Land (probably born to CT Cuthbert Cumming)

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1844).

Cuthbert Cumming joined the HBC in 1840 from Swan River and spent four years on the Pacific slopes. In 1844 he went to the Red River settlement.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 23; FtVanASA 6-8

See Also: Cumming, John (probable Brother or Cousin)

Cumming, John (c. 1820 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Swan River, Rupert's Land - c. 1820 (probably born to CT Cuthbert Cumming)

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1841 - 1842); Middleman, New Caledonia (1842 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1843 - 1844).

John Cumming from Swan River, probably a brother or cousin of Cuthbert Cumming, joined the HBC in 1841. He, along with Cuthbert, went to the Red River settlement in 1844.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8

See Also: Cumming, Cuthbert Jr. (probable Brother or Cousin)

Cumming, William (fl. 1822 - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Employee, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823).

William Cumming worked for the HBC in the Columbia Department in outfit 1822-1823 and was probably a member of the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10

Cummins, Edward (fl. 1817) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1817).

Edward Cummins signed on with the NWC in Montreal on October 1, 1815 to work as a clerk at Fort George in the Columbia. Although his movements have not been traced, it is assumed that he crossed the mountains and served out his time at that post.

PS: ShdeSB Liste

Cummins, James (fl. 1838) (probably British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1839).

James Cummins joined the HBC in London on November 18, 1837 and made one return trip to the Columbia. He left London in late 1837, arrived at Fort Vancouver the following spring servicing Forts McLoughlin and Simpson before leaving for England in November. He arrived back in England in the spring of 1839.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; log of Columbia 3; FtVanASA 5

Cunningham, John Patrick (1818 - 1870) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Ile a la Crosse, Saskatchewan - February 1818 (born to Patrick Cunningham and Nancy "Anne" Bruce)

Death: Paint Creek [Edmonton, Alberta area] - 1870

Fur trade employee

HBC Native apprentice, Columbia Department (1834 - 1836).

John Cunningham put in a brief appearance in the Columbia, probably as a cross-country brigade member. He joined the HBC at York Factory on June 1, 1833 as a native apprentice labourer. Although he was stationed at Island Lake district, the Saskatchewan district, and Fort Assiniboine for his first three outfits, he was entered in the Columbia records in 1834-1836, likely attached to the brigades. From 1836, however, he spent the rest of his career east of the Rockies, first as an apprentice at Fort Assiniboine until his retirement from the Saskatchewan District as a middleman, thence to the Red River Settlement in 1845. Eleven years later on January 1, 1856, he re-engaged at Fort Edmonton as an interpreter, his career being as follows: in charge, Lac St. Anne (1857-1858); post master and clerk, Fort Edmonton (1858-1867); and clerk in charge of St. Albert (1867-1868) when he retired from the service of the H.B.C. in 1868. In 1870, he was captain of the last buffalo hunt at Paint Creek in the Edmonton area and died there of smallpox and was buried at St. Albert.

John Patrick Cunningham had two successive wives and eleven recorded children. On February 28, 1841, he married Margaret Mondion of Saskatchewan at Rocky Mountain House. It appears that they had no children. Margaret may have died, as four and a half years later on September 15, 1846 at Lake St. Anne, he married Rosalie L'Hirondelle. The children from the second marriage were Catherine (1848-1848), Samuel (1849-1919), John (1851-1904), James (1854-1940), Albert (1856-1925), Nancy (1858-1918), Edward (1862-1920), Daniel (1864-1955), Rachel (1866-1881), Henry (1868-1955) and Alfred (1868-1936).

PS: HBCA Wills; HBCCont; YFASA 16-19; 20-25; YFASA 14-15; HBCABio SS: Descendant of Patrick Cunningham

Cunningham, Mr. (fl. 1825) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Fur trade employee

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

Mr. Cunningham appeared on the records as acquiring several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. Nothing else is known of Cunningham, who probably attended other Rendezvous' as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains.

PS: MHS Ashley 2

Curister, David (fl. 1845 - 1860) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Rendall, Orkney - 1826 (born to John and Ann Curister)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Colville (1846 - 1848); Farmer, Fort Colville (1848 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Colville (1849 - 1850); Farmer, Fort Colville (1850 - 1852); Farmer, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, York Factory (1852 - 1853); Farmer, Fort Colville (1853 - 1855); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1855 - 1860).

David Curister appears to have been raised in a family of two sisters and two brothers in the township of Gorseness, Rendall, Orkney. Around 1844, he entered the service of the HBC sailing from Stromness. After he arrived in the Pacific Northwest, he worked mainly in the Fort Colville area until 1860.

PS: OrkA 1841 U.K. Census, Orkney-Rendall; HBCA YFASA 25-32; YFDS 19, 21; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9-15; HBCABio

Curtis, James (fl. 1829 - 1832) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Boatswain, Vancouver (schooner) (1831); Boatswain, Ganymede (barque) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1831 - 1832).

James Curtis, along with his son or step-son, William, signed on in London with the HBC on December 28, 1829 for a period of five years and sailed to the Northwest coast aboard the brig Dryad. After his arrival in the Columbia on August 10, 1830, he worked for a year on coastal shipping, and the following year, on November 7, 1831, he left on the Ganymede for London and his family where he arrived on May 15, 1832. Later, the same year, he sailed to New South Wales with Aly & Price on the ship Windsor and did not appear to come back to the Northwest Coast.

James Curtis had one recorded wife, Mary (Litchfield?) and at least three children; Mary (bap. 1811), Hugh (bap. 1811) and William (bap. 1813). As William was referred to as William Litchfield, the three children may have been stepchildren (Beattie & Buss, p. 421).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 12; PortB 1; YFDS 4a; ShMiscPap 7, 14; HBCABio; MI 5; Beattie & Buss, p. 421
See Also: Curtis, William (Son or Step-Son)

Curtis, William (c. 1813 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England - c. 1811 (born to James Curtis and Mary Litchfield, although he was possibly the step-son of James Curtis and took on Curtis' name)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

On December 28, 1829 in London, an eighteen year old William Curtis, along with his father or step-father, James, signed on with the HBC for three years. He sailed to the coast aboard the brig Dryad and began his work in coastal shipping. On October 5, 1832, not having been under the watchful eye of his father for several months, William, along with seamen Robert Nicholls and Peter Calder, went ashore from the schooner Cadboro without officer supervision and purchased liquor. As a result, all three got drunk, used insolent language to their officers and rioted aboard the vessel. Consequently, they were sent into irons and, on October 26, 1832, were sent home in disgrace from the Columbia aboard the Eagle. Shortly after his arrival in London, he and two of his HBC seaman pals (Thomas Wood and John Flinn) met a cousin of Charles Fraser, still in the Columbia, at the George & Vulture Tavern, 39 Ratcliff Highway, London and, no doubt over a few pints, composed a newsy letter to him (Beattie & Buss, p. 24).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4a, 5a; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanCB 8; HBCABio; MI 5; Beattie & Buss, p. 21-24, 39-40

See Also: Curtis, James (possible Step-Father)

Cush (? - 1858) (Snohomish)

Death: Fort Nisqually, Washington Territory - May 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Cook, Fort Nisqually (1849 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1849 - 1851); Cook, Fort Nisqually (1855 - 1858); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1855 - 1858).

Cush first appeared intermittently in the Fort Nisqually journals from 1849 working as a cook and labourer in a variety of tasks which ranged from cooking and agricultural tasks to taking the mail to Fort Victoria. As a cook:

Cush thoroughly understood the art of very plain cooking. His great forte was frying beef steak in solid mutton or beef tallow and serving it up cooked a dark brown colour and swimming in thick gravy, which soon hardened to the consistency of pure, red pine chewing gum (Huggins, p. 204).

According to Huggins, he was a trusted, good natured, humorous mimic who was liked by all he met. However, on May 30, 1858, he became the unintended victim in a feud and received a bullet meant for Nisqually native, Gohome. In the early hours of that morning, there had been a terrible fight, actually a continuing feud involving knives and guns, between Gohome, his men and a group of Snoqualmies. Later that day, after working in the kitchen, an exhausted Cush lay down on a bed in the servants' quarters. A native, who had likely been involved in the fight that morning, came into the fort. Mrs. Tolmie watched him and thought nothing unusual until the native raised his gun to fire through the window at the sleeping figure whom he thought was Gohome. Her scream and the gunfire were simultaneous but too late for the sleeping Cush who died a day or two later from his wounds. The natives were chased up the Sound into territory that the pursuers dare not follow. A headstone, intended for Cush, never actually got made.

PPS: Dickey SS: Huggins, "Reminiscences of Puget"

Dafoid, Jans Peter [variation: Peter J. Davison] (fl. 1857 - 1861) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Europe

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858); Sailmaker, Princess Royal (barque) (1858 - 1861).

Jans Peter Dafois, whose name appears to have been anglicized to Davison, made four return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Princess Royal 5, 6

Dagenais, Suplien (fl. 1844 - 1852) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Polycarpe, Lower Canada - 1825

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1849).

Suplien Dagenais joined the HBC in 1844 on a three-year contract. In outfit 1849-1850 he deserted, probably for the gold fields in California, but was back in 1850. He appears to work casually until January 1, 1852 and stayed in the area.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-29, 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Dahonte, Jacques (c. 1795 - ?) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Regis, Lower Canada - c. 1795

Death: probably Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, New Caledonia (1832 - 1836); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1845); Middleman and Boute, South Party (1839 - 1840); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1842); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1844); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1846); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1847); Boute, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Boute, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1850).

Jacques Dahonte joined the HBC around 1831 and spent much time at Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-15, 19-20, 24-31; YFDS 5a-7; FtVanASA 4-8

Daigneau, Edouard [variation: Degneau, Deniau, Denioz] (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1825 (born to Basile Daignon and Marguerite Mittel of Chamblie, Montreal)

Death: probably Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1849).

Edouard Daigneau joined the HBC from Lachine in 1844 on a three-year contract. He spent his entire career at Fort Vancouver and, on February 21, 1849 while on a contract that would have ended in 1850, he deserted for the gold fields of California. Likely unsuccessful, he returned to the area and settled once again.

Edouard Daigneau had at least three successive wives and two children. On December 21, 1846, he married Rosalie, Keneheno (?-1848). Their single child, Basile (1847-1847) died at the age of two months. On August 16, 1848, eight months after the death of their son, wife Rosalie died. On December 30, 1852, he married Louise, Klitatat (?-1853) a "neophyte" from the Fort Vancouver mission. They had one child, Rosalie (1853-1853), who was born in the following year, on September 7, 1853. However, the following day, both wife Louise and daughter Rosalie succumbed to unknown causes. Two and a half years later, on January 5, 1856 at the St. Paul Mission, Daigneau married Marguerite (nee Marie Marguerite, Chinook), widow of Étienne Lussier. They then moved to the Lussier Claim on French Prairie but Marguerite soon divorced him. He may have had yet another wife for on July 14, 1878, a Philomena Daigneault (1878-?), daughter of an Edward Daigneault and Marie Boussiere, was baptised (CCR 1, A-19).

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28; YFDS 19 PPS: CCR 1b, 2a, 4a

See Also: Lucier, Etienne (Relative)

Daines, Henry [variation: Danes, Deans, Deane] (fl. 1844 - 1857) (British: English)

Birth: probably Dover, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1844); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1846); Settler, Fort Nisqually (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Seaman, Otter (steamer) (1857).

Henry Daines joined the HBC in 1843 in London and sailed to the coast, probably on the Cowlitz. From September 10, 1844 he did such things as scraping the decks, painting the waterways, loading and discharging cargo, etc., and, on July 8, 1845 at Fort Victoria, he was sent out with Abraham Norgate to kill a bullock for food. In December of that year, he returned to the British Isles on the barque Cowlitz but returned to the area with a different plan. He worked for the Company from July to September, 1846 at which point he retired, settling at Nisqually, holding a Company claim. He rejoined around 1848 but deserted on February 1, 1849 possibly for the gold fields of California. On February 17, 1857, he turned up in Nanaimo where he joined the steamer Otter, but walked off the job in Victoria on May 9. He was paid off and discharged on May 15, 1857.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-26, 28; YFDS 17-19; log of Cadboro 5; log of Vancouver [3] 2; log of Otter 1 PPS: Dickey

Dalcourt (Champagne), Jean Baptiste (c. 1804 - 1856) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1804

Death: Salem, Oregon - July 1856

Freeman

U.A. Freeman, Oregon District (? - ?).

As Jean Baptiste Dalcourt (Champagne) was a hunter in the northern prairies, he may have hunted west of the Rockies but he does not appear on Hudson's Bay Company employment records. He probably entered the area as an independent settler to build himself and his family a log cabin and barn on two hundred acres [80.9 ha] on Wallace prairie near Salem, Oregon, a claim which he had sold by 1846. When he drowned in 1856, he was listed as a tenant farmer.

Jean Baptiste Dalcourt was married to Agathe Cayuse (c.1813-1853) who had an earlier child, Cecile (c.1826-?) by Allan McDonald. The recorded Dalcourt children were Esther (c.1830-1884), Ambroise (c.1835-?), Thérèse (c.1837-1855), Pierre (1840-1842), Joseph (1842-1845) and Louis (c.1846-?). Agathe died on May 4, 1853.

PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 2c

Dallas, Alexander Grant (1816 - 1882) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Guyana, South America - July 1816 (born to Murdoch Dallas and Helena Grant)

Death: London, England - January 1882

Fur trade officer

HBC HBC Director, Western Department (1857 - 1861).

The Columbia Department, to Alexander Grant Dallas, was one stepping stone in a long career. Earlier, fever had ever forced him to leave a five year career (1842-1847) in China with British traders Jardine, Matheson and Company and return to the British Isles. After a time in London, he was sent by the London Committee to assist James Douglas (who had also been born in British Guyana) as it was felt Douglas was favouring the new Vancouver Island colony over the HBC, and to straighten up PSAC affairs, which were in disarray. Sailing from London in January 1857 he arrived in Victoria in May. Taking over Douglas' position when the latter resigned from the HBC to become governor, Dallas took an active role in the San Juan Island dispute and in 1859 he purchased a large amount of acreage in the Metchosin and Lake Districts. During his time in Victoria he quarrelled with Douglas over the role of the HBC and its land in the colony, even though, by marrying Douglas's daughter, he had become the governor's son-in-law. Less than two years after Sir George Simpson's death in September, 1860 Dallas left the Columbia, arriving at Fort Garry to become the new Governor of Rupert's Land. Two years after that, on May 17, 1864, he left for England where he died.

Alexander Grant Dallas had one wife and nine children. On March 9, 1858, he married Jane Douglas (?-?). Two children were Helena Amelia (?-1860) and Alister (?-?).

Dallas Mount, San Juan Island, is named after Alexander Grant Dallas.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5-14; BCA BCGR-AbstLnd; BCCR CCCath PPS: Helmcken, p. xix, 193-95; Cracroft, p. 12 SS: Walbran, p. 129; DCB Lamb

See Also: Douglas, Sir James (Father-in-Law); Douglas (Lady Douglas), Amelie (Mother-in-Law)

Dalrymple, John (fl. 1844 - 1850) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Leith, Edinburgh, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1846); Steward, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1846); Steward, Beaver (steamer) (1846 - 1850).

John Dalrymple joined the HBC in 1842 on a five year contract working on coastal shipping until 1850. He likely stayed in the area after that.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; YFDS 16; FtVicASA 1-2

Daly, John (fl. 1854 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855); Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

John Daly made two return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of the Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Danis, Antoine (fl. 1830) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830).

Antoine Danis was a Montreal comer and goer into the Columbia in the summer of 1830.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 26

Danis, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1821) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1821).

Jean Baptiste Danis may have been working on the cross-country brigade when he was found at Fort George in 1821. He was likely stationed at a post inland.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1

Danis, Louis (fl. 1821) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821).

Louis Danis is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1

Danneau, Antoine [variation: Deneau] (fl. 1849 - 1856) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, New Caledonia (1850 - 1851); Cook, New Caledonia (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Fort Langley (1853 - 1856).

Antoine Danneau, who signed his 1855 contract with an "X", worked with the HBC until 1856 and may have settled in the Langley or Victoria area.

Antoine Danneau had one wife and three recorded children. He married Josephine (?-?), Kwakiutl and together they had Louis (?-bap.1856-?), Caroline (1857-1857) and Marie (1858-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-3; HBCCont; FtAlexPJ 9; BCA BCCR StAndC

Dannis, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1830) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830).

Jean Baptiste Dannis was a comer and goer into the Columbia in the summer of 1830. He appeared to be stationed in Red River.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 18

Darby, William (c. 1804 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Maidenhead, Berkshire, England - c. 1804

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC Captain, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1835); Captain, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1837).

William Darby had a short career with the HBC but nonetheless made his mark. He joined the HBC in November, 1833 and was put in command of the brig Eagle with two mates and a crew of thirteen. It was on this ship that he transported Iwakichi, Kyukichi and Otokichi, three Japanese recently freed from slavery to the Makah natives, from Fort Vancouver to the Hawaiian Islands. In 1835 back in England, he was put in charge of the barque Columbia which sailed in company with the steamship Beaver to the coast. On the voyage, Darby had a dispute with his second officer, George Prattent who, on February 23, 1836 in the Hawaiian Islands, transferred to the Beaver, while the Beaver's officer came on board the Columbia. When it arrived on the coast, Prattent charged Darby with not only being drunk, but also illegally obtaining furs and trading these furs as well as other HBC goods in the Hawaiian Islands. Darby sailed the Columbia back to England (1836-1837) and on June 13, 1837, both Darby and Prattent were dismissed from the service of the HBC (Correspondence, fo. 117).

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; FtVanASA 3; YFASA 16; FtVanCB 10, 12; Correspondence outward, A.6/24, Governor and Committee November 15, 1837 letter to James Douglas, [Capt. Darby and Mr. Prattent dismissed] fo. 117; HBCA Captain William Darby search file

Darg, George (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

George Darg made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

See Also: Darge, William (Relative)

Darge, William (fl. 1854 - 1855) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

William Darge, who may be related to the above George, made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 1

See Also: Darg, George (Relative)

Daubin, Olivier [variation: D'Aubin] (c. 1810 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1810

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1841).

Olivier Daubin joined the HBC in 1832 and returned east over the Rockies in the spring of 1841.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]P] 3; YFASA 12-15, 19-20; YFDS 5a-7; FtVanASA 3-6

Daunais, Louis Aime (fl. 1844 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1844 - 1846); Middleman, Snake Party (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1849).

Louis Aimé Daunais joined the HBC in 1844. On March 1, 1849 while on a contract that would have ended in 1851, he deserted, presumably for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-28; YFDS 19

Dauny, Louis Francois [standard: François] (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1823

Death: probably Frenchtown [Lowden], Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Snake Party (1842 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1846 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Nez Percés (1851 - 1852).

Louis Dauny joined the HBC around 1839 and arrived in the Columbia on October 30 of that year. In outfit 1843-1844 he transported trappers to and from the Snake Country. In July, 1850, while working at Fort Vancouver, he was discharged and in Portland in July, 1851, he announced his intention to become a U.S. citizen. He re-enlisted on September 6, 1851 at Fort Nez Percés but he deserted from Fort Nez Percés on October 1, 1852. That same year he settled on a claim of 642 acres [259.8 ha] in Walla Walla County and by 1855, he was living in Frenchtown, near Walla Walla, with his wife and three children. The name "Donnie" on the tall obelisk monument on the site of the St. Rose Cemetery there undoubtedly refers to him.

Louis Dauny had one wife and two or three recorded children. On May 12, 1844, he married Suzanne (c.1830-?), Walla Walla at Walla Walla. Two of their three children were Suzanne (1846-?) (CCR 1b) or Margaret (1846-?) (1850 Census) and Joseph (1849-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-9; YFDS 14, 21-22; YFASA 20, 24-30, 32; FtVicASA 1; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co. PPS: CCR 1b; Washington Territory Land Claims, p. 209

Dauphin, Caesar (? - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Thompson River [British Columbia] - March 1854

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Middleman, Thompson River (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1852 - 1854).

Caesar Dauphin worked for the HBC and appears to have died in the Thompson River area on March 9, 1854. Upon his death, his possessions were sold.

PS: BCA Papers Relating to Fort Alexandria, 1850-52; HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-3, 9; FtVicAB 10

Dauphin, Joseph (c. 1835 - 1859) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1835

Death: possibly Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - December 1859

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Beaver (steamer) (1854 - 1855); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1856 - 1859); Middleman, Fort Langley (1859).

Joseph Dauphin, who may have been educated at the Red River school or elsewhere, worked for the HBC for five years generally along the coast. However, while he was on the coast, venereal disease appears to have plagued him between 1855-1857. On October 22, 1857, when he was recruited by missionary William Duncan's Night School for Men it was noted that he could both read and write well. He died at the age of twenty-four, possibly in the Victoria area.

Joseph Dauphin was married to an unnamed native woman from the Nass area. No children have been traced.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 2-9; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; BCA BCCR StAndC; UBC-SC Duncan

Dauphine, Louis [variation: Dauphin] (fl. 1817 - 1823) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Faubourg des Recollets, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Tailor, Fort George [Astoria] (1817 - ?); Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1823).

On September 15, 1817, Louis Dauphin signed on with the NWC from Faubourg Des Recollets to work at Fort George [Astoria] as a tailor for three years. While working there, he had his wages paid to his wife from at least June 1, 1819 to at least October, 1821. That year, at the time of coalition, he transferred to the HBC and left in 1823 when he returned east of the Rockies to his wife.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 4, 9; YFASA 1; FtGeo[Ast] AB

Dauphine, Olivier [variation: Doufina, Duffany] (c. 1816 - 1852) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Barthelemy (d. of Montreal), Lower Canada - c. 1816

Death: probably Cowlitz, Lewis County, Oregon Territory [Washington] - August 1852

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1840); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1841 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1844 - 1846); Settler, Cowlitz (1845 - 1846).

Olivier Dauphine joined the HBC in 1832 from St. Barthelemy and worked mainly at Fort Simpson for almost fourteen years. On November 30, 1845 he settled at Cowlitz and, in October of the following year, settled on a claim of 640 acres [259 ha] in that area. Dauphine declared his intention to become a U.S. citizen in 1849. Two years later, in 1852, he died of unstated causes leaving a family of five children; Xavier Kateman was the administrator of his estate.

Olivier Dauphine had one recorded wife, Catherine (c.1825-?) from the Oregon Territory and five recorded children: Joseph (c.1835-?), Benjamin (c.1844-?), Baptist (c.1847-?) and Adelia (c.1849-?) and Sophia (?-?).

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFASA 12-15, 19-20, 24-25; YFDS 5a-7, 16; FtVanASA 3-8; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co PPS: Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 18

Davidson, Peter (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Sailmaker, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Peter Davidson made one return voyage from London to the Northwest Coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4

Davie, Malcolm (1812 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Grimbuster, Firth, Orkney - 1812 (born to James Davie and Isabel [Isbister] Davie)Death: probably Firth, OrkneyFur trade employee*HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1833); Labourer, Fort Colvile (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Colvile (1837 - 1838); Middleman and route, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1839 - 1840).

Malcolm Davie was born into a farming family of six children and christened February 13, 1812. At twenty-one years of age, and probably in an effort to raise capital like so many of his age, he and his brother William joined the HBC on June 11, 1833 from Heddle, Firth as a labourer, originally for five years. They sailed to Hudson Bay and the following year reached Fort Colvile where they worked for four outfits. During Malcolm's time on the Pacific slopes he appears to have worked quietly and competently as a middleman at a total of three locations, all containing farms, to the end of his contract in 1840 when he returned to the British Isles on the Prince Rupert. The following year he was back farming in Heddle, Firth where he was living with his sister, Mary and, in 1842, he married Catherine Robertson. The Davie family moved around to Orphir and Stenness and in 1861 they were raising six of their ten children on twelve acres [4.9 ha] at Coupen (Cupping?), Firth very close to Heddle. Malcolm Davie has not been traced after that.

Malcolm Davie had one wife and ten children. On February 24, 1842, he married Catherine Robertson and together they had Margaret (1843-1872), Catherine (1844-?), Isabella (1844-?), Malcolm (1846-?), Mary Ann (1849-?), John Tait (?-?), James (1852-?), Jemima (1855-?), William (1856-?) and Jane (1859-?).

PS: OrkA OPR; 1841 and 1861 Census, Orkney-Firth; IGI File, Orkney; HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV, 7; YFASA 14-15, 19; YFDS 5c, 7, 9; FtVanASA 3-5; SS: Davie/Robertson family genealogy, Kirkwall, Orkney

See Also: Davie, William (Brother)

Davie, William (1810 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Heddle, Firth, Orkney - 1810 (born to James Davie and Isabel [Isbister] Davie)Death: probably Orkney, United KingdomFur trade employee*HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1833); Middleman and labourer, Fort Colvile (1834 - 1838).

William Davie, brother to Malcolm Davie, joined the HBC on May 1, 1833 as a labourer for five years for a limited time, also quite likely to acquire capital. After sailing to Hudson Bay, he spent the entire five years working as a labourer or middleman at Fort Colvile and, at the end of his contract, returned east over the Rockies in March 1838 and back to the Orkneys to farm in the Orphir region. There he raised a family on four acres [1.6 ha] but cannot be traced after 1851.

The name of William Davie's wife has not been traced. Three of his children were John (1842-?), William (c.1844-?) and Malcolm (c. 1845).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 7; YFASA 14-15; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-5; OrkA OPR; Cen 1851, Orkney-Orphir; IGI File, Orkney

See Also: Davie, Malcolm (Brother)

Davies, Alexander [variation: Davis] (c. 1821 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scotland - c. 1821Death: probably ScotlandFur trade employee*HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1851 - 1852); Miller, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Vancouver mill (1853).

Alexander Davis joined the HBC around 1851, arrived on July 4 and began work at Fort Vancouver on July 8 of that year. He worked for the next two years in the fort's vicinity as a labourer and miller until he retired two years later in 1853. That fall, he declared his intention to become a U.S. citizen, settled on a claim of 158.5 acres [64.1 ha] in Clark Co., Washington and got married. His thirteen year old wife, who had been a boarding pupil at the sisters' School at St. Paul in 1850, lived with him until June, 1857 at which point she left and would not return. Five years later, in 1862, he sold his claim and by 1905 when he was in his eighties, he was living with a McLean Chambers near Roy, Pierce Co.

Alexander Davies had one wife and one recorded child. On August 1 or 25, 1853, he married Ellen St. André (1840-?), daughter of Pierre St. André, in Clark Co., Washington Territory. Their child, Peter (1856-1856) lived only one week.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1; FtVanASA 9-10 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b; Washington Territory Land Claims, p. 189-90; TacP-FtNis Huggins, May 6, 1905

See Also: St. Andre, Pierre (Father-in-Law)

Davis (fl. 1853) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

Davis shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853 during the height of the smallpox epidemic, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Davis, John (fl. c. 1840 - 1842) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

John Davis shipped on with the HBC vessel Cowlitz in London on August 24, 1840 and sailed to the coast. He traded on the coast until December 1841, when he left Fort Vancouver. He arrived back in London in July 1842.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; log of Columbia 2

Davis, Joseph (fl. 1837 - 1838) (probably British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838).

Joseph Davis came to the coast on the HBC chartered ship Sumatra. He left England in February, 1837 and, in August, arrived in Oahu where he overstayed his shore leave by two days. He spent about a month at Fort Vancouver and arrived back in London in April 1838. (He likely sailed with the HBC again, this time on the barque Vancouver leaving London September 2, 1844, but had several disputes with the first mate and so deserted on the isolated island of Juan Fernandez on December 16, 1844. He most certainly joined another vessel passing by to make his way off the island.)

PS: HBCA log of Sumatra 1; log of Vancouver [3] 2

Davis, Thomas [1] (c. 1805 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Cumberland, England - c. 1805Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Boatswain, Naval Department (1832 - 1834); Boatswain, Dryad (brig) (1834 - 1835); Boatswain, Ganymede (barque) (1835 - 1836); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1836 - 1837); Boatswain, Lama (brig) (1837 - 1838); Boatswain or Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1841); Boatswain, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1842); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1842 - 1843).

Thomas Davis [1] joined the HBC at Oahu on September 4, 1832 and, after sailing to the Coast in the Ganymede, spent his entire career in the Columbia as a boatswain/seaman on various coastal ships. On May 31, 1838, he deserted at Monterey but was soon back at work. He left for England in 1842 and, on the return voyage he was quite ill but appears to have arrived back in London in one piece.

PS: HBCA YFDS 5a-6, 13; YFASA 12-15, 18, 20, 22; ShMisPap 14; FtVanASA 3-8; log of Cowlitz 1

Davis, Thomas [2] (c. 1795 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Deptford, Kent, England - c. 1795Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1835); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Thomas Davis [2] joined the HBC on December 7, 1833 for five years. From November 10, 1834, until November 15, 1836, he serviced various coastal posts and the Hawaiian Islands. He arrived back in London in the spring of 1837.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMisPap 14; YFASA 14-15, 17; YFDS 5c, 7; FtVanASA 3-4

Davis, Thomas [3] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Thomas Davis made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal. He may have previously sailed for the HBC on a run to Hudson Bay in 1850 on the Prince Albert.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1; log of Prince Albert 9

Davis, William [1] (fl. 1834 - 1839) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Milford, Whitechurch, Pembroke, Wales, United Kingdom

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1838); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1838); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

William Davis joined the HBC on December 7, 1833 for five years. From November 10, 1834 to November 1, 1838, he worked on coastal shipping and arrived back in England on May 20, 1839.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMisPap 14; YFASA 14-15, 18-19; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-5

Davis, William [2] (c. 1827 - ?) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1827

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1846 - 1848).

William Davis joined the HBC in 1845 on a three-year contract. When the international border was drawn in 1846 while he was in the Kamloops area, he joined the A.C. Anderson Expedition to find an overland route to the coast. He deserted from the brigade but was taken back with the threat of capital punishment were he to do it again. He retired from contract in 1848 and returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-27; FtKamPJ 3; FtAlexPJ 7

Davis, William [3] (fl. 1850 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Una (brigantine) (1850 - 1852).

William Davis joined the HBC in London on January 3, 1850 and sailed to the coast on the brig Una. He appears to have stayed with the vessel until it was driven aground at Neah Bay in December 1851. He made his way to Oahu on an unknown vessel and was discharged there on February 5, 1852.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 10; YFASA 30-31; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1

Davison, John (fl. 1830 - 1832) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman of ship's officer, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1832).

John Davison, who may have previously worked on Hudson Bay runs as a gunner, joined the HBC vessel Ganymede in London around November 1830 and sailed for Fort Vancouver. He departed in November 1831 and arrived back in London in 1832.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert IV 3; ShMiscPap 7

Dawkins, James (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

James Dawkins joined the HBC as a cook on September 14, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. He arrived at Fort Vancouver on May 28, 1828. He crossed the bar on the outward voyage on August 20, 1827 and arrived at the London docks on February 13, 1829. Dawkins was discharged the following day.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1

Daws, Thomas (? - 1828) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of AmericaDeath: Umpqua River region [Smith River, Oregon] - July 1828Free trader*U.A. Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1827 - 1828).

Thomas Daws was a trapper on Jedediah Smith's Southwest Expedition of 1827-1828. He first appeared on record at the 1827 Rendezvous and left with Smith in July, heading south, crossing the Colorado River and into California. Daws escaped an attack by Mojaves which killed ten members of the expedition. In California, after a great deal of difficulty with Spanish authorities, the expedition headed north. In an area just north of the Umpqua River [Oregon] Daws' luck ran out in 1828 for, just after the expedition leader set out to scout out a route to travel, natives killed all the expedition members in camp except one, who managed to escape.

PPS: HBRS X, p. 61 SS: Carter, "Jedediah Smith", p. 97-104

Day, John (1771 - 1820) (American)

Birth: Culpepper Co., Virginia, United States - 1771 (born to Ambrose Day and Mrs. Day)Death: [Idaho area] - February 1820Fur trade employee*PFC Hunter, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Hunter, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814).

John Day was an unlucky fur trader who had a complete breakdown after suffering under extreme conditions in the Pacific Northwest. According to Irving, the tall, strong Day, who was also a good shot, had lived excessively in early life, weakening his constitution for later life. Around December 26, 1810 at Nodowa [near St. Joseph, Missouri], and after spending several years in the fur trade, forty-year-old Day joined the Wilson Price Hunt's Overland Expedition as hunter for the Astor Company. In 1811, they reached the then-deserted Fort Andrew Henry, and, realizing that the Snake River would lead them into the Columbia, abandoned their horses and built canoes. They began their journey down the Snake but the canoes proved impractical for one man drowned and provisions were lost. Because of this, the canoes were abandoned as well, and Day and four others joined Ramsay Crooks in a small party of detached men striking out on foot along the banks of the river. Unable to descend the precipitous banks of the Snake River, they almost died of thirst. As there was no food, they had to roast their beaver skins and eat their shoes. When Day became seriously ill, old friend Crooks remained behind to assist him. The pair were helped by the Snake Indians who shared food when they could. However, when they were alone, they would have starved had it not been for a wolf which they shot and consumed in total, reserving some dried meat for the future. The pair wandered for two months until they came upon the Umatilla River around April 15, 1812 and happened upon some Umatilla Indians near the juncture with the Columbia. There, Yeck-a-tap-am, an old grey haired Umatilla native, helped them rest and revive for two days. The appreciative pair then travelled nine days down the Columbia and were near the falls when the local natives, in an apparent retaliation for a previous killing, stripped them of all their possessions, including clothes and, after some debate, let them go. The now naked Day and Crooks, being deprived of everything including knives, fled into the hills and made their way up river again. At a deserted native camp, they found fish bones which they pounded but couldn't swallow. Several days later they reached their old friend, Yeck-a-tap-am who similarly came to their rescue. It wasn't until May 1812 that Robert Stuart eventually located Crooks and Day, now hardly recognizable, near the mouth of the Umatilla River, from which point they were taken down the river. They reached Astoria on May 11, 1812. The next month, on June 29th, he began a return journey to St. Louis with Stuart with dispatches for Astor. Three days later, on July 2, while camped on or near Wapato Island, Day became violently insane and the following morning tried to commit suicide. As a result, he was sent back with some friendly natives to Astoria. His movements are difficult to trace for the next year, but he spent the winter of 1813-1814 at Willamette and returned to Astoria on March 20, 1814. The following month, on April 4, 1814, he joined the brigade of ten canoes containing seventy-eight men bound for the Athabasca Pass. He then disappears from record; however, at some time he entered the service of the NWC and possibly spent the next six years in the Idaho area although one surviving oral tradition suggests that he lived in a small cabin on the banks of a large creek which empties into the Columbia a few miles above Tongue Point. John Day died in 1820 while he was with Donald McKenzie on a trapping expedition in the Salmon River Mountains of Idaho.

It appears that John Day had neither wife or children for in his will, written one day before he died, he bequeathed most of his estate to Donald McKenzie and the remainder to friends.

Two Oregon rivers running into the Columbia, both named after John Day, kept the name of the fur trader. The first runs through Gilliam, Grant, Jefferson, Sherman, Umatilla, Wasco and Wheeler Counties and the second through Clatsop County.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; SnkCoPJ 3 PPS: T. C. Elliot, "Last Will", p. 373-77; Franchère, p. 64-68; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 187-193; Astorian Adventure, p. 97-08; McDougall, p. 89ff; Hunt, p. 45, 67; ChSoc LVII p. 717n SS: Irving, Astoria, p. 115, 211-212, 273; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 103-12; Lavender, The Fist in the Wilderness, p. 169-71

See Also: Crooks, Ramsay

D'Allaire, P. (1808 - 1810) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]Fur trade employee*NWC Member, Simon Fraser (1808); Untraced vocation, McLeod Lake Post (1810).

The names of nine of the nineteen men who descended the Fraser River in the spring of 1808 with Fraser, his clerks John Stuart, and Jules Maurice Quesnell have survived. Of the nine, Le Garde and Waccan had been with Fraser since 1806, among the others, all of whom must have arrived at some subsequent point, were Baptiste, Bourbonné, D'Allaire, Gagnier, La Certe and La Chapelle. P. D'Allaire, together with his "woman" had been working in the Rocky Mountain House area prior to Fraser's departure in May 1806. Passing through McLeod's Lake in November 1810, Daniel Harmon found D'Allaire, who had spent the summer there, still present.

PPS: Fraser; Harmon, Harmon's Journal

D'Arche, Joseph (fl. 1849 - 1858) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada (born to François D'Arche and Marie Stay)Death: possibly West of the Rockies*Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1853);Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1852 - 1853); Prisoner, Fort Victoria (1853); Labourer, Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1854);Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1856 - 1857); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1857 - 1858); Stoker, Otter (steamer) (1858).

Joseph D'Arche, who joined the HBC on April 26, 1849, possessed a strong character. In 1853 while at Fort Rupert, he went on strike for lack of provisions and was taken to Fort Victoria where he was imprisoned for an undetermined length of time. Rather than being sent back to Canada, he was put to work on the HBC steamer that year. By 1857, he was working at Fort Simpson and while there, even though he was marginally literate, he attended missionary William Duncan's Night School for men. He retired, leaving on a steamer Otter for Victoria on May 2, 1858, and, eleven years later, on December 2, 1869, pre-empted land in the Fraser Valley in the Matsqui Community area. Little is known of his activities on the land as it was transferred to another owner in 1876.

Joseph D'Arche had one wife but no recorded children. On February 12, 1855 quite likely in Victoria, he married an unnamed native woman from "Tangash" (Tongass?). (The March 13, 1878 Ross Bay Cemetery burial of a Mary Darch, born in B.C., and buried from the lunatic asylum, may be a wife or child of Joseph).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-2, 4-5; FtVicCB 7; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; log of Otter 1; BCA BCCR StAndC; RossBayCem; UBC-SC Duncan SS: Laing, p. 182

D'Arcy, John (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

John D'Arcy made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

D'Eau, Baptiste (fl. 1811) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Ile Perrot, Lower CanadaFur trade employee*NWC Athabasca Pass/Columbia River with David Thompson (winter 1811).

On September 24, 1810, D'Eau left Boggy Hall with Alexander Henry the Younger and later joined David Thompson to cross over the Athabaskan Rocky Mountains. He didn't stay long for, on January 26, 1811, he deserted from Canoe camp on the Columbia River.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 629; Belyea, p. 141

D'Eon (Leblanc), Timothe (c. 1809 - 1817) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Baie du Febvre, Lower Canada [Quebec]Fur trade employee*NWC Bowsman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Bowsman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Timothe D'Eon first joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on December 4, 1809 to work at Lesser Slave

Lake. At the end of his contract, he agreed to work for three or four more years in the Columbia and, in 1813, was at Fort George. He joined the brigade for the east, probably as a bowsman, in the spring of 1814 in a canoe headed by Alexander Ross and Donald McGillis. On April 3, 1817, he signed a further contract to work in the Northwest, possibly at Fort George as a middleman and bowsman, or possibly as a member of the cross-country brigade.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10

De L'Hubert, John [variation: de L'Herbert] (c. 1827 - ?) (British: Channel Islander)

Birth: possibly Guernsey, United Kingdom - c. 1827

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1849).

John De L'Hubert (Herbert in the logs) shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and made one return voyage to the coast on the barque Cowlitz. De L'Hubert was ill for several weeks on the voyage out suffering from a shortness of breath. On February 22, 1847 while at Fort Vancouver, he and two others were lowering a top gallant mast which accidentally slipped and killed the popular boatswain, George Bignmore. De L'Hubert arrived back in London on May 24, 1849.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6; YFASA 27-28

De Smet, Father Pierre Jean (1801 - 1873) (Belgian)

Birth: Termonde (Dendermonde), Belgium - January 1801

Death: St. Louis, Missouri - May 1873

Other

U.A. Travelling Priest, Rendezvous (1840); Priest, Oregon District (1840 - ?).

Charming, genial, and well liked (but intolerant of other faiths), mediator missionary Father Pierre Jean De Smet set up numerous missions throughout the Oregon District. De Smet studied at the Malines Seminary [Mechelen, Belgium], came to the United States in 1821 and was ordained in 1827. In 1840 he went to Montana in response to two Flathead natives who had come to St. Louis in search of a "Black Robe". He established many missions throughout the Oregon District and became particularly valuable in later years as a mediator during the troubled times of the Indian Wars. For example, in the unrest of the 1850s as an army chaplain he helped to bring an air of calm. During the "Mormon War" he apparently showed Brigham Young where to settle. In the 1860s he travelled with the Peace Commissioners and chose to enter the Sioux camp alone, being the only trusted white and was able to secure a temporary peace. On behalf of the native peoples, he crossed the ocean nineteen times, visiting various heads of state, etc. De Smet wrote several books which are considered good sources of history.

Manuscripts: St. Louis University archives contain the originals of De Smet's known writings.

Published Manuscripts: Letters and Sketches, with a Narrative of a Year's Residence among the Indian Tribes of the Rocky Mountains," (1843); Oregon Missions and Travels over the Rocky Mountains in 1845-46," (1847); Voyage au grand désert en 1851," (1853), Western Missions and Missionaries (1859) and New Indian Sketches (1863).

SS: Chittenden & Richardson; DAB Shafer; OHQ X, p. 239-62; E. O'Hara, p. 62-85; Bishchoff, p. 13-37; Corning, Dictionary of Oregon, p. 72-73

Dean, John (fl. 1830 - 1831) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

U.A. Seaman, Lama (brig) (1830 - 1831).

John Dean likely joined the Lama [William Henry McNeill] before October 6 in Boston and sailed to the Coast. On June 25, 1831, at the Tlingit village of Hanaga on Prince of Wales Island, he got drunk on rum purchased from the local natives and threatened to shoot the 2nd officer, Ephraim Hanson. As a result, he was put in irons until August 9th, when, in Sitka he was released to the care of the Russians after being given one dozen lashes. His fate beyond that has not been ascertained.

PS: BCA log of Lama 1

Dean, William (c. 1832 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Chislehurst, England - c. 1832

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1850).

William Dean shipped on with the HBC on September 19, 1846 and came to the coast twice on the barque Cowlitz. On the second voyage, Dean and fellow apprentices Arthur Orbell and Robert Lawrence attempted unsuccessfully to desert in Honolulu but apologized after they were put in irons. However, three weeks after arriving at Fort Victoria, the three deserted with the intention of making their way to the California gold fields and were not heard from again.

An undelivered 1849 letter to William Dean written in England by his sister and brother in law, Mr. & Mrs. J. C. Wilson, rests in the HBCA. It indicated that the family was having financial difficulties.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6; YFASA 27-28; C.3/7, fo. 41; ShMiscPap 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 234-38

Dears, Thomas (1797 - 1840) (British: English)

Birth: Hackney, London, England - 1797

Death: St. Thomas, Upper Canada - 1840

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); Superintendent, Fort Colville (1825); Clerk, Snake Party (1825 - 1826); Clerk, Fort Kamloops [Thompson's River Post, She-waps Post] (1826 - 1830); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1830); Clerk, New Caledonia (1826 - 1830); Clerk, Fort Fraser (1830 - 1831); Clerk, New Caledonia (1831 - 1832); Clerk in charge, Fort Connolly (1832 - 1836).

Thomas Dears joined the HBC in 1817 in Canada working at four posts east of the Rockies before coming to the Columbia in 1824. In 1825 he found himself superintending the construction of Fort Colville and, by the end of the year, was part of a Snake Expedition. Discontent with the snow and isolation of Fort Connolly (and, he felt, his non-commensurate salary), caused him to express considerable unhappiness. As well, Dears' views on the distribution of liquor to the Natives was considerably more liberal than Company policy. He left New Caledonia with his family in 1836 heading eastward over the Rockies via Peace River. Dears settled in St. Thomas, Ontario, where he died four years later.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 4; YFASA 4-6, 8-9, 11-16; YFDS 1a, 3a-3b, 4b-6; FtVanASA 1-2 PPS: HBRS I, p. 436; HBRS XXX, p. 205; A. McDonald, p. 114, 128; E. Ermatinger, p. 113, 116 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 116, 167

Deas, William (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

William Deas joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Dease, John Warren (1783 - 1830) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Niagara, Ontario - June 1783 (born to Dr. John Dease)

Death: The Columbia Dalles - January 1830

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Nez Percés (Walla Walla) (1822 - 1825); Chief Trader in charge, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (at Kootenay but mainly Flathead post) (1826 - 1829).

A brother of the Arctic explorer, Peter Warren Dease, John Warren Dease entered the NWC at an unspecified date and from 1814-1821 was in charge of the post at Rainy Lake. He became Chief Trader in 1821 and, from 1822, was at a variety of posts in New Caledonia and the Columbia. In 1825-1826, David Douglas found the Chief Trader to be extremely helpful. On February 22, 1829, while in the Colville area, he wrote his will, perhaps a foreshadowing of the severe illness which was to strike him in the summer of that year. Around that time, he had an argument with John McLoughlin, the nature of which is obscure, but it was important enough that he had to travel to Fort Vancouver in a very ill state in the fall when he was unfit for duty. In the middle of that winter, while returning to Colville, he died on January 11, 1830 at The Dalles and was transported back to and buried at the Fort Vancouver cemetery on January 14. In his will he gave John McLoughlin, who was a chastened, changed man, and John Dugald Cameron each £5 to purchase rings in memory, or mourning rings. He also stated that if widow Jenny Beignoit was to cohabit with anyone else, her money would go to her children.

John Warren Dease had three successive wives and eight children. One wife was Mary Cadotte of Sault St. Marie, by whom he had two daughters, Jenny (?-?) and another unnamed daughter. A second wife was Jenny Beignoit, with whom he had Margaret (1818-?), Mariane (1820-?), John (1823-?), Nancy (1825-?) and William (1827-?). Peter Goulay was another son of Jenny, but was not fathered by Dease. Napoleon Dease (?-?) was his son by a Flathead woman while he was living in the Colville District.

PS: HBCA YFASA 3-6, 8-9; FtVanCB 5; Wills; George Simpson letter of July 30, 1830 to John George McTavish, B.135/c/2,

Dease, Napoleon (c. 1827 - 1861) (Mixed descent: English and Salish [Flathead])

Birth: c. 1827 (born to John Warren Dease and a Flathead woman)

Death: Fort Langley, British Columbia - September 1861

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Apprentice carpenter, Fort Colvile (1847 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Langley (1849 - 1852); In charge, Fort Hope (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Langley (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1854 - 1859); Interpreter, Fort Langley (1859 - 1861).

Born into the fur trade, Napoleon Dease was hired by the HBC in 1846 and began work on November 1st at Fort Vancouver. In 1852 he was put in charge of Fort Hope but the following year was removed because of "scandalous conduct" (FtVicCB 10, Douglas letter). His five years at the PSAC sheep farm on San Juan Island were spent raising a family and doing carpentry work. Napoleon left there June 15, 1859 and died two years later at Fort Langley at the young age of thirty-four.

Napoleon Dease had one wife and three recorded children. He married Marguerite (?-?), Saanich and together they had Elise (c.1849-?), Johnny (1853-?) and Marie (1855-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-32; YFDS 17; FtVicASA 1-10, 12; FtVicCB 10, 18, FtVicCB 10, James Douglas April 19, 1854 letter, HBCA B.226/b/10; BelleVuePJ 1, 2; BCA BCCR StAndC PPS: CCR 1b
See Also: Dease, John Warren (Father); Dease, Peter Warren (Relative)

Dease, Peter Warren (1788 - 1863) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Mackinac, Michigan - January 1788 (born to Dr. John Dease and Jane French)

Death: Montreal area, Canada East - January 1863

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Factor, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Chief Factor, Fort St. James (1831 - 1835); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver sundries accounts (1836 - 1837).

Peter Warren Dease, who was as much an explorer and mapper as he was a fur trader, spent five years on the Pacific slopes. Named after a relative, Sir Peter Warren, the captor of Louisbourg in 1745, in 1801 and at the age of thirteen, Dease joined the XY Company, then the NWC. Upon joining the HBC in 1821, he was given the designation of Chief Trader. On George Simpson's recommendation, he was attached to Franklin's second Land Arctic Expedition of 1825-1827. In 1828 he was appointed Chief Factor and spent the next three years in the Mackenzie River district. After his years on the Pacific slopes, Dease and Thomas Simpson made three surveying expeditions between 1837-1839 along the Arctic coast, thus making a significant contribution to the geographic knowledge of the area. He retired in 1842 and moved to a farm at Cote Ste. Catherine outside Montreal in 1843 and died in 1863.

At some time during his career he married Métis Elizabeth Chouinard, with whom he had four sons and a daughter.

Dease Lake and River were named by Robert Campbell after Peter Warren Dease.

PS: HBCA YFASA 10-11, 14; FtVanASA 2-3; YFDS 4a-4b, 5c PPS: HBRS XXX, p. 184-85n; HBRS vol. XXII, p. 436; HBRS III, p. 434-6 SS: RootsWeb.com
See Also: Dease, John Warren (Brother); Dease, Napoleon (Relative)

Debhors, Alexander (fl. 1835) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Ganymede (barque) (1835).

Alexander Debhors was engaged at Oahu on June 1835 by the HBC as a seaman possibly coming to the Coast on the Dryad or some other HBC vessel. He sailed back to Oahu on the Ganymede and was discharged there in December of that year.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 15; FtVanASA 3; YFDS 6

Deblo [variation: Diblo] (fl. 1834 - 1838) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company (1834); HBC Labourer, Oahu (1836 - 1838).

Deblo was one of twenty Hawaiians who joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's CRFTC in Hawaii in 1834 and reached Fort Hall just before Christmas. The records are unclear, but Deblo may have been a labourer for the HBC in Hawaii since he was hired and discharged in two successive outfits, 1836-1837, 1837-1838. He did not receive wages in outfit 1837-1838. In 1836-1837 he was listed in the Fort Vancouver accounts with half the wage of a labourer.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-4; YFDS 7; YFASA 16-17 PPS: Beidleman, p. 238

Dechamp, Antoine [variation: Deschamps, Deschamp] (c. 1800 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1800 (born to François Deschamps and a Cree woman)

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Boule, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1835); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1835); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1837); Trapper, South Party (1837 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Snake Party (1844 - 1845); Goer and comer, Snake Party (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1850).

When Red River native Antoine Dechamp, brother to Pierre Dechamp, first hired on with the HBC at Red River in 1826, he signed his contract with an "X". From 1831-1850 he worked in the southern reaches of the Columbia Department both as a trapper and middleman. Around 1850 Antoine Deschamps disappeared from view and was shown on the 1851-1853 abstracts as carrying a debt from the previous outfits of £13.19.1 indicating no further action on his account in the Columbia.

Antoine Dechamp had two wives and three recorded children. He had a son David on June 29, 1839 by his first wife, Marie Anne, a Nez Percés. On January 27, 1844, he married a minor, Marie Tikillis/Aloise of the Cowlitz/Louise Chehalis, who bore him a son David on August 1, 1845 and a daughter Marie in March, 1849.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 11-13, 15, 24-32; YFDS 4b-7, 16; FtVanASA 3-8 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b

See Also: Deschamps, Pierre (Brother)

Dechamp, Baptiste [variation: Deschamps] (fl. 1841 - 1846) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rupert's Land, British North America

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1845); Apprentice, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846).

Baptiste Duchamp, hired on in the Rupert's Land area, entered the fur trade in 1841. His contract ended in 1846, and in outfit 1845-1846 he was transferred to the Catholic Mission.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-25

Dechamp, Francois [standard: François] (? - 1828) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - March 1828

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1828).

François Dechamp first appeared in the Columbia Department in 1825. He died at Fort Vancouver in 1828 of unspecified causes.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-8; YFDS 2a; FtVanASA 1

Dechamp, Jean Baptiste [variation: Deschamp] (c. 1821 - c. 1891) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest – Before 1892

Maritime employee

HBC Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1848 - 1849); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1849 - 1851).

Jean Baptiste Dechamp joined the HBC in 1848 on a two-year contract. On June 19, 1850, while serving on the steamer Beaver, he deserted, along with Baptiste Kanataconda and Samuel Pepper. Jean made his way to the Nisqually area and settled on a piece of land near Roy [Washington]. In 1852 he was warned by PSAC that he was trespassing on their land. He died before 1892.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-30; YFDS 21; log of Beaver 1; WSA Tacoma, March 4, 1892, p. 4

Decornique, Jean Baptiste (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831).

Jean Baptiste Decornique joined the HBC in 1830 but was discharged at Red River on February 1, 1831.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFASA 10

Decruz, John (fl. 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

Seaman John Decruz got himself into considerable trouble with his superiors when he was on a ship rounding the Horn on its way to the Northwest Coast. It started when the schooner Columbia was rounding Cape Horn on June 14, 1814, and the plan of Decruz, along with seamen John Happy, John Peterson and boatswain John Carpenter to kill the 1st mate, captain and officers, was exposed by fellow crew member Thomas Smoke. As the officers were warned, the mutiny didn't materialize and the four were put in irons. As Carpenter confessed, he was put in irons separate from the rest who had threatened to murder him for his confession. Decruz presumably disembarked at Fort Astoria where he disappears from record. His friend, Carpenter, on the other hand, continued to make a nuisance of himself.

PPS: Barry, "Peter Corney's", p. 356-57

Degrais, Pierre Philippe [variation: De Grais] (c. 1766 - 1847) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Sorel, Province of Quebec - c. 1766

Death: St. Paul, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Blacksmith, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Blacksmith, Fort Colville (1826 - 1834); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1834 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Colville (1836 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Colville (1840 - 1842); Settler, Willamette (1842 - 1843+).

Pierre Phillippe Degrais entered the fur trade around 1793 and was a member of the NWC when he joined the HBC in 1821 in the Columbia area. After 1826 he spent the remainder of his career, partly as a blacksmith, at Fort Covile but his age appeared to catch up to him. By April 19, 1830, for example, at the age of sixty-four, his superior Chief Trader, J. E. Harriot was afraid to trust him on a voyage across the mountains on account of his age and so he was put on gardening duty. In his last few years, his pay was very low indicating that he may have worked part time. In 1842 he settled in the Willamette Valley around the age of seventy-six and died there in 1847 at the age of eighty-one. On February 29, friends Louis Pichet and André Chalifoux buried him at St. Paul - the Catholic records claimed that he was 108 years old.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; YFASA 1-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 5a-9; FtVanASA 1-7; FtColPJ 1
PPS: CCR 2a

Degre, Jean Baptiste [standard: Degré] (c. 1816 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1816

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1844).

Jean Baptiste Degré joined the service the of the HBC in 1839 in Montreal. He appears to have left the area at the end of his contract in 1844.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20; FtVanASA 6-8

Deguire (Desrosiers), Joseph (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1843).

Joseph Deguire (Desrosiers) joined the HBC in 1840, worked at Fort Vancouver and returned east of the Rockies to Canada in 1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 22; FtVanASA 6-8

Dehodionwassere, Ignace [variation: Dihodiuassere, Dehodionwarare] (fl. 1822 - 1825) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

Ignace Dehodionwassere joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on December 15, 1818 to work for four years as a hunter in Indian Country. By outfit 1822-1823, he was working in the Columbia Department as a freeman with Miaquin Martin's band of independent Iroquois trappers. On February 10, 1824, when he was camped near Flathead post, he joined Alexander Ross' nine month HBC Snake Country trapping expedition. At that point, Ross deemed Dehodionwassere as being unfit for Snake Country, an assessment which applied to practically all the Iroquois of the group. When he returned from the Ross expedition, he joined Ogden's 1824-1825 Snake Country expedition at Flathead post on December 20, 1824. He didn't complete the expedition for on May 24, he and most of the Iroquois deserted the party at Weber River [Utah]. He did not pay his debt and has not been traced after that.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3

Dehosrays, Belasario or Juan [variation: Delofreys] (fl. 1815) (possibly Portuguese)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

Juan Dehosrays signed on as a crew member of the schooner Columbia on May 1, 1815. He was paid off on February 29, 1816 at which point he entered the Portuguese service.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Dejenai, Antoine (c. 1796 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Terrebonne, Lower Canada - c. 1796

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Boute, Thompson River (1833 - 1834).

Antoine Dejenai joined the HBC from Terrebonne in 1832, worked through his three year contract in the Columbia, and then returned east over the Rockies.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-13; YFDS 4b-5a

Delanney, John [variation: Dalony] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

John Delanny joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Delard, Antoine [variation: Deslard] (fl. 1830 - 1831) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830 - 1831).

Antoine Delard was a member of the cross-country brigade in 1830-1831 and in 1831 was back in Montreal as a summerman.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 26; YFASA 10

Delard, Joseph [variation: Deslard] (c. 1798 - 1869) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - August 1869

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1817); HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Bowsman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); Steersman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Steersman, Thompson River (1826 - 1828); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1829); Trapper, Snake Party (1829 - 1832); Trapper, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1837).

Joseph Delard joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on October 30, 1813 to work at Fort William as a middleman and bout. Four years later, in 1817, he signed up again and came west across the Rockies that same year with Joseph LaRocque. He was a good steersman and handled horses well. On November 24, 1831, while he was on the John Work Snake Expedition, he was wounded by the Blackfoot. A bullet (ball) entered his left breast and came out under his arm, leaving one rib and part of his breast bone broken. He was carried on a bed of poles, which jolted him severely causing him to loudly complain. By December 8, 1831, however, he had recovered sufficiently to ride on his horse once again. In 1832 he settled near Fairfield on French Prairie and yet still did work for and sold grain to the HBC carrying on transactions until 1839. During this time he was also one of the eighteen petitioners who asked for the missionaries to come into the area and constructed a small log chapel before their arrival. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. Joseph Delard died in 1869 and was buried in St. Louis, Oregon.

During his long life, Joseph Delard married two or three times and had eleven recorded children. On January 21, 1839, he legitimized his marriage to Lisette Shuswap (1806-1841) in St. Paul, Oregon: their family members were Catherine (c.1821-1858), Pierre (c.1824-?), Marie (c.1826-?), Augustin (c.1826-?), Basil (c.1831-?), Marie Anne (c.1835-?), Antoine (1838-?). On January 16, 1843, he married Marie Toussaint Poirier (?-1914), daughter of Toussaint Poirier. The second Delard family consisted of Marguerite (1847-1853), Cecile (1852-?), Marguerite (1857-1880), and Catherine (1862-1862).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 10; YFASA 1-9, 11, 13-15; FtKamPJ 1, 2; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFDS 2a, 3b-8, 10-11; FtVanASA 1-6; SnkCoPJ 11; HBCABio; OHS 1849 Census, Champoege; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: HBRS X, p. 229; CCR 1a, 2a, 3a, 3b SS: Québécois in Oregon, p.115
See Also: Poirier, Toussaint (Father-in-Law); Gardepied (Lucier), Jean Baptiste (Son-in-Law)

Delauney, Joseph (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814); Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

Joseph Delauney was engaged by the PFC on or before March 9, 1811, possibly in St. Louis and came overland with Wilson Price Hunt. He crossed the Great Divide with the expedition and reached Fort Henry on the Snake River in October, 1811. He likely travelled with the main group which reached Astoria in February 1811. He did not join the NWC when the latter took over the former and left Fort George for Montreal on April 4, 1814, in a brigade of ten canoes of seventy-eight men.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106

Delauney, Pierre [variation: Delaunay, Delaunaye] (? - c. 1813) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - c. 1813

Fur trade employee

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1813); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); Hunter, Snake Country (winter 1813 - 1814).

Pierre Delauney, an ill-tempered hunter and trapper (likely from Canada), joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition at the Aricara village on July 17, 1811 on a three year contract. He crossed the Great Divide with the expedition but detached himself in September 1811 at the Mad [Snake] River to trap beaver. In the spring of 1812, he was robbed by the Crows. He was picked up by John Reed and taken by McKenzie to Astoria on January 16, 1813. He was then sent with Reed's party to the Snake River country once again but, in the fall, along with his native wife, wandered off in a fit of anger. Sometime after this, he was likely killed for his scalp was seen by Pierre Dorion in the possession of the natives. This killing was likely in retaliation for the hanging of a native by the Clarke party after a theft.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 278; ChSoc XLV, p. 153; Franchère, p. 133

Delcourt, Jean Baptiste [variation: Baptiste Dalcour] (fl. 1809 - 1811) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Terrebonne, Lower Canada (born to Joseph Delcourt)

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Rocky Mountains (1809 - 1810) (with David Thompson); Member, Columbia River (September 1811) (with David Thompson).

Jean Baptiste Delcourt, joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on the same day as his father, January 28, 1809. Baptiste and his father wintered with David Thompson in the mountains in 1809-1810 and followed him out of the mountains. On July 8, 1810, both Baptiste and his father began their return canoe trip with James McMillan from White Earth House back to the mountains. On November 1, 1810, while the group was journeying with Thompson from Boggy Hall on the Saskatchewan to the Athabasca River, Baptiste was sent off with Pierre Pariel and Joseph Cote along with five horses to take provisions to Alexander Henry. On December 14, Baptiste and five others were sent off to Rocky Mountain House for pemmican and other goods left there. Delcourt was last heard from on September 22, 1811, when he brought word to Thompson at Canoe Creek about the movements of William Henry, who had just crossed the mountains.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 610; Belyea, p. 117, 130, 177-78
 See Also: Delcourt, Joseph (probable Father)

Delcourt, Joseph (fl. 1809 - 1810) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Terrebonne, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Steersman, Rocky Mountains (1809 - 1810) (with David Thompson).

Joseph Delcourt must have had some experience in the fur trade for, on January 28, 1809, Delcourt, signed on with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] as a wintering steersman for three years in the Northwest. On that same day, his son Jean Baptiste signed on as a middleman. He spent part of his career (the winter of 1809-1810) with David Thompson, and followed him out of the mountains. On July 8, 1810, he was part of James McMillan's brigade to the Columbia.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 610
 See Also: Delcourt, Jean Baptiste (probable Son)

Delonie, Louis Henry [variation: Delaunais, Delaunois, Delonais] (1797 - c. 1852) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Montreal, Lower Canada - October 1797 (born to Antoine Delaunais and Marie Ursule Marguerite Judith Connaissant)

Death: probably Cowlitz area, Lewis County, Washington Territory - c. 1852

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1822 - 1823); Boute, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Steersman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Steersman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826); Boute, New Caledonia (1827 - 1828); Boute or steersman, Fort Langley (1828 - 1835); Boute, Fort Nisqually (1835 - 1836); Boute, Fort Langley (1836 - 1841); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1841); Settler, Cowlitz (1843 - 1844+).

Louis Henry Delonie worked for the HBC mostly west of the Continental Divide. A teenage Delonie joined the Company in 1815 and spent outfits 1818-1821 at Great Slave Lake, Harrison's House and Fort Wedderburn respectively. In 1822 he crossed the Continental Divide to what is now northern British Columbia and one of his first assignments was to erect a new post at the end of Babine Lake. For the next twenty years he worked at a variety of locations throughout New Caledonia and the Columbia as a boute. Delonie rarely appeared on the journal records which is probably much to his credit. He worked with the Company until October 31, 1841, at which point he retired to become a farmer in the Cowlitz area. On August 7, 1852, most likely in a state of deteriorating health, he wrote his will in Lewis County and, by October of that year, had succumbed. The will was very simple. It read:

I the undersigned do, by the present, charge Pierre LaPlante dit Badiac, to draw for my children from Mr. G. Drew what remains for him to pay on the purchase of the improvements of the land claim I formerly occupied." Louis "X" (his mark) Delaunais (WSA Will).

Louis Delonie had two successive wives and four recorded children. On December 20, 1841, he married Elizabeth Kwoithe (c.1807-1843) and together they had two daughters, Fe'licite (c.1832-?) and Catherine (c.1833-1902). Elizabeth died February 19, 1843 and was buried at the St. Francois Xavier Mission on Cowlitz Prairie. About a year after Elizabeth's death, on February 17, 1844, Delonie married Marie Cowlitz and together they had two daughters, Mary (c.1845-1924) and Adelaide (c.1847-1909).

PS: Family History Library, Salt Lake City, Film #0375846 Notre-Dame de Montreal, Quebec, 19 October 1797, p. 71; HBCA YFASA 2, 4-5, 8-9, 11-15, 19-21; FtBabPJ 1; YFDS 1a, 4b-7, 12; FtStjmsLS 1; FtVanASA 1-3, 5-8 PPS: WSA Will PPS: HBRS 1, p. 436; CCR 1a; Delonie descendant

Delorme, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1813 - 1819) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - July 1819

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Middleman, Fort Okanagan (1813); NWC Middleman, Kootenae House (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Snake Country (1819).

Jean Baptiste Delorme joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition around July 6, 1810 at Lachine. He crossed the Great Divide with the expedition in late summer 1811 and reached Astoria on February 19, 1812. When the NWC took over the Astorian enterprise, he joined the Montreal company on October 23, 1813, a contract which was to expire May 1, 1814 at Montreal. He spent the winter of 1813-1814 in the Kootenay area and likely returned to Montreal on the brigade which left Astoria April 14, 1814 for Montreal. There he likely re-engaged with the NWC for by 1819 he was back in the Snake Country area. In July of that year, as part of Wm. Kittson's brigade, Delorme and Icanvene were killed by Shahaptans as they were on their way to Fort Nez Perces with Donald McKenzie's returns.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; NAC-RD A-41, Keith, James, microfilm A-676, A-2: Memorandum Book, [Deslorme killed summer, 1819] p. 25 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106; A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 142, 155

Delorme (Eneau), Joseph (1821 - 1823) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1823).

Joseph Delorme (Eneau) was living at the house of Eustache Dostoller in Berthier when he joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on December 2, 1816 to work for three years at Fort William. In 1819, at the end of that contract stationed at the lakehead, he signed on again to work in the Northwest. It is uncertain when he entered the Pacific slopes but, at the time of coalition of the NWC and Hudson's Bay Company, he was already in New Caledonia when he joined the HBC for two more years of work. He appears to have left around 1823 and has not been subsequently traced.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA YFASA 1-2

Delreymoy, John (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

John Delreymoy made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Delton, James (fl. 1841 - 1842) (possibly British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1841); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842).

James Delton boarded the Cowlitz somewhere between San Francisco and Fort Taku in 1841 and was discharged into the Columbia at Fort Vancouver on November 24. From there he sailed for England on the Columbia but shortly after it departed the coast he was "discharged and put in the watch" (log of Columbia, 4, fo. 244d).

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; log of Columbia 4

Demers, Bishop Modeste (1808 - 1871) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St.-Nicholas-de-Levis, Lower Canada - October 1809 (born to Michel Demers and Rosalie Foucher)

Death: Fort Victoria (Victoria), British Columbia - July 1871

Other

U.A. Priest, Columbia Department (1838 - 1871); Priest, New Caledonia (1838 - 1871).

Modeste Demers, born into a Quebec farming family, was ordained for the priesthood in 1836. In 1838, Demers, along with Rev. Francis Norbert Blanchet, was sent to the Columbia and New Caledonia Departments at the request of the Canadians working for the HBC. He did extensive work from the Willamette up into New Caledonia touching at many HBC posts. Demers, who developed some knowledge of several native languages, was appointed bishop of Vancouver Island in 1846 while Blanchet became the first metropolitan in Oregon. He purchased 106 acres [42.9 ha] there in 1854. In 1858 he convinced the Sister of St. Ann of Montreal to come and set up a girls school in Victoria, which was attended by female descendants of the fur trade; as well, the Oblates of Mary Immaculate set up a boys school. By 1865, Demers' health had begun to fail and he went to San Francisco for medical care. He spent the next three years soliciting men and money in a three year extended tour of South America, the eastern United States, Quebec and France. He returned briefly to Victoria in 1869 and then went back to Europe to attend the Vatican Council of 1870. On the way, however, he was injured in a train wreck in France and never fully recovered. He returned to his Victoria residence where he died the following year.

Published Manuscript; Demers, Modeste. Chinook Dictionary, Catechism, Prayers and Hymns. Composed in 1838 & 1839 by Rt. Rev. Modeste Demers. Revised, corrected and completed, in 1867 by most Rev. F. N. Blanchet. With modifications and additions by Rev. L. N. St. Onge, Montreal, 1871.
PS: HBCA FtVicASA 2-3; BCA AbsLnd; PPS: SS: Bagley, C. G., Early Catholic Missions, p. 40, 58; Bishchoff, Jesuits in Old Oregon, 236; Hill, "The most Reverend Modeste Demers," p. 29-35; O'Hara, E. V., Pioneer Catholic History, 26, 36, 118, 219; Morice, History of the Northern Interior; DCB: Usher

Denault, Jeremie (fl. 1842) (Undetermined origin)Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1842).

Jeremie Denault, possibly a member of the Overland Brigade for the HBC, is on record as going east over the Rockies in the spring or summer 1842.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7

Denille, Louis [variation: Dinnelle] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (possibly Canadian)Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]*Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1811); Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1813); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Louis Denille joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition at Nadowa [near St. Joseph, MO] by December 1, 1810. He spent the winter of 1813-1814 at Fort George and on May 1, 1814, he headed east in a ten-man light canoe.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106

Denn, George (fl. 1857 - 1858) (probably British: English)Birth: probably England*Fur trade employee

HBC Sponsored settler, Columbia Department (1857 - 1858).

George Denn received an advance in England from the HBC for his journey to Vancouver Island.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5

Dennison, Edward [variation: Denison] (fl. 1830 - 1832) (British: English)Birth: possibly in or near Maker, Devon, England*Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Carpenter, Vancouver (schooner) (1830 - 1831); Carpenter, Ganymede (barque) (1831 - 1832).

Edward Dennison joined the HBC in London on October 31, 1829 as a carpenter for three years and came to the Northwest Coast on the Isabella (which ran aground and was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia in May 1830). However, during the voyage Dennison argued with the captain and others and had to be put in irons. In fact, he had such a disagreeable temper that he was put on the first available vessel heading back to England. As a result, he left Fort Vancouver for England on the Ganymede.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella 1; ShMiscPap 7, 14; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11; YFDS 4b PPS: HBRS IV, p. 234-35

Denoyer, Edouard (c. 1814 - ?) (Canadian: French)Birth: possibly La Prairie, Lower Canada - c. 1814*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1834 - 1835); Steersman, Snake Party (1835 - 1836).

Eduoard Denoyer joined the HBC on March 12, 1834 for three years. In March 1837 at the end of his contract, he went east over the Rockies to Montreal.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 14-17; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4

Deon, Antonio (fl. 1824 - c. 1827?) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1824 - 1827).

Antonio Deon shipped aboard the Convoy [William Henry McNeill], in Boston as a seaman before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. After arriving at Honolulu on March 16, 1825 and discharging cargo, it took on supplies for the Northwest Coast, departing April 1. It is uncertain how long he stayed with the vessel.

PS: BCA Log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Depot, Pierre (c. 1803 - 1868) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly in or near L'Assomption or St. Roche, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon - April 1868

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821); HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Freeman middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Trapper, Snake Party (1827 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836+).

Pierre Depot first joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] in Montreal on December 28, 1819 as a winterer for three years. With the amalgamation of the two companies in 1821, he continued his career with the HBC in the Columbia. He appears to have been an efficient trapper in his eight years trapping in the Snake Country. For example, in Ross' nine month expedition to the Snake Country, Depot was mentioned only as having been supplied. Under Peter S. Ogden, 1825 was a bad year for he had a nasty encounter with a grizzly bear as well as with the Blackfoot Indians. On May 4, 1825, when a grizzly bear attacked him while he was setting his traps, he saved his life by diving into the river. On September 16, 1825, he reported to Ogden that because a LeBlanc (untraceable in records), a Company member who had been with him, had been killed by the Blackfeet, Depot had had to abandon his horse and take flight into the bushes for the night. He continued working in the Snake Country under John Work where he was noted as working in a contingent headed by Alexander Carson. After five years of working in the Indian trade out of Fort Vancouver, he retired to farm in the Willamette and raised a family. As a settler in the Willamette from 1836-1842, he sold wheat and furs to the Company at Fort Vancouver. In 1839 he took up the former claim of Nicholas Montour near the present village of Gervais. By 1842 he had a very productive farm on one hundred enclosed acres [40.5 ha]. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon, but became a citizen in 1851. He died April 18, 1868.

Depot had three wives and seven children. Pierre Jr. (1835-?) was born to an unknown woman who was deceased by 1839. On January 23, 1839, the farmer Depot married a Marguerite Klamak (?-1850) by whom he had four children, Pierre (1839-?), Joseph (?-?), Adelaide/Harriette? (1842-1858), and Etienne (1847-?). On August 23, 1858 Depot married Lisette, "orphan under the protection of Louis Vandale", having daughters Catherine (1859-?) and Marcelline (c.1868-?).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; YFASA 1-5, 8-9, 11-15; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; SnkCoPJ 1-3, 9; FtVanASA 1-6; YFDS 3b, 4b-7, 9-11; OHS 1842 Census; 1849 Census, Champoege; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: HBRs XIII, p. 1, 82, 231; CCR 1a, 2a, 3a SS: Holman, p.115

Derio, John (fl. 1824 - 1826) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826).

John Derio worked with the HBC in the Columbia, but by 1825-1826 he was a freeman working in the Severn District.

PS: HBCA YFASA 4

Deroche, Charles [variation: Desroches] (c. 1819 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: St. Jean, suberb of Quebec City, Lower Canada - c. 1819 (born to Charles Desroches and Susanne Patrie)

Death: probably Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Chinook Store (1853 - 1854).

Charles Deroche joined the HBC as a middleman in 1840. After coming west over the Rockies, he worked mainly at Forts Vancouver and Victoria before ending up his employment at the Chinook store. In 1846, while he was living at Fort Vancouver, he had "a dwelling, lined and ceiled, 30 x 20 ft. on the main road" through the village outside the palisades leading down to the river (CCR 1, A-21). He retired in 1854 and continued to live in the area.

Deroche was married twice and had four children. On November 26, 1842, Deroche married Nancy Kilemniks, Chinook and together they had four children, Susanne (1845-?), Pierre (1847-1847), Louise (1850-?) and Emelie (1853-?). On August 16, 1854, after the death of Nancy, Desroche married Angele Poirer, daughter of Basile Poirier and Louise Moatwas.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-31; FtVanASA 6-11; YFDS 21 PPS: CCR 1b
See Also: Poirier, Bazil (Father-in-Law)

Desaire, Pierre (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Death: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1828 - 1829); Middleman, New Caledonia (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Columbia Department (1831 - 1832).

Pierre Desaire joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1827 and came west with the returning York Factory Express in the fall of 1827. A sick Desaire was taken by William Connolly from Nez Percés to Fort Vancouver in 1829 and left there until he recovered sufficiently before going to New Caledonia in the fall. In 1831-1832 he returned to Montreal where he was paid.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFASA 7, 9, 11; YFDS 3a-4a PPS: HBRS X, p. 240; E. Ermatinger, p. 105

Desasten (Martineau), Louis [variation: Desastin] (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Rivière du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Death: possibly West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1826 - 1829); Middleman or labourer, Thompson River (1829 - 1840); Middleman and trader, Thompson River (1840 - 1841); Middleman, New Caledonia (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1842); Middleman, New Caledonia (1842 - 1843); Horsekeeper, New Caledonia (1843 - 1850); Horsekeeper, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Horsekeeper, New Caledonia (1851 - 1852); Horsekeeper, Thompson River (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Thompson River (1853 - 1858).

Louis Desasten (Marineau) joined the HBC in 1825 from Rivière du Loup. He worked mainly in the New Caledonia and Thompson River area until about 1858.

PS: HBCA YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 2a, 3a-7, 14-15; 23; FtVanASA 2-8; FtAlexPJ 5; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-5, 9; BCA FtAlex 1

Desautel (DeGaspar), Joseph [variation: Dessotel, Deshotel] (c. 1827 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. March 1824/1827 (born to Joseph DeGaspar and Janette DeChalan)

Death: probably Curlew Lake, Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1843 - 1847); Middleman, Thompson River (1847 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Colville (1852).

Joseph Desautel, born Joseph DeSautel DeGaspar into a Montreal family of nine children, was educated in French schools and went to work at age eleven. He joined the HBC in 1843 from Yamaska [Lower Canada] and came west where he spent the rest of his life, except perhaps for a short visit to Canada at the end of his first contract. Throughout his career with the HBC west of the Rockies, he moved progressively south until he reached Fort Colville where he spent the last year of his work. He retired in 1852 and remained in the area. Between 1852-1854, he settled on a claim on 320 acres [129.5 ha] in Steven's County [eastern Washington] at Pinkney City. Although he declared his intention of becoming a U.S. citizen in 1854 or 1855, he did not get his citizenship papers until 1887. For this reason and a lack of documentation, his property, which he sold in 1885, was for many years the subject of many other claims (which filled almost three hundred pages). Throughout this, however, Desautel was able to hang onto his property. According to the Stevens County History, after selling his Pinkney City property, he went to Nespelem but was sent out of that country by General Howard, who was in charge of the military affairs and was separating the whites from the natives. Desautel returned to Colville where he stayed for eleven years and then went to Republic in 1896 (?). He settled seven miles [11.3 km] north of Republic at Curlew Lake [Ferry County]. In his later years, he became a strong Republican.

Joseph Desautel had one wife and eight children. On May 4, 1851, he married Julia Lafleur (c.1836-?), daughter of Joachim Lafleur, of Fort Colville, Walla Walla Co. Their children were Maxine (?-?), John (1857-?), Adolphe (?-?), May (?-?), Frank (?-?), Rose (?-?), Olive (?-?) and Felix (?-?).

Deschamps, Michel [variation: Dechamps] (c. 1826 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Polycarpe, Lower Canada - c. 1826 (born to Bilane Deschamps and Marie Dalonde)

Death: probably New Caledonia

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman and labourer, New Caledonia (1845 - 1877).

Michel Deschamps joined the HBC in 1844 from St. Polycarpe and worked in the New Caledonia area until 1878, when he retired. He raised a family in the Fort St. James area.

Michel Deschamps had one (possibly two wives) and five recorded children. Michel chose as his wife Maria Boucher/Cootchay of McLeod Lake. Their children were Michel (c.1856-?), Benjamin (c.1856-?), Moses (c.1859-?), Mary/Maria (c.1861-?) and Anthony (1867-?). Maria Boucher must have died before 1874 as, on January 4, 1874 at Fort St. James, Michel married Maria Soltsis (c.1824-?) from Grand Rapids, B.C.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-16, 25; HBCABio; BCA BCCR StPetStLk, OlofGH

Deschamps, Pierre [variation: Dechamp] (fl. 1838 - c. 1866) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] (born to François Deschamps and a Native woman from Red River)

Death: probably Willamette, Oregon - between 1866 and 1869

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and bout in Athabasca River, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Middleman, Snake Party (1839 - 1846); Settler, Willamette (1846+).

Pierre Deschamps, a brother to Antoine, was hired on by the HBC in 1838. He helped bring the priests to the Columbia that year, saving himself from drowning when the bateau upset in the rapids. He spent the majority of his career in the Snake River area, sometimes transporting Company servants back and forth. He worked until July 31, 1846, at which point he settled in the Willamette. Deschamps died between 1866 and 1869

On September 7, 1853 Pierre Deschamps married Marie (daughter of Louis Oskanha [Monique] and Charlotte Chinook) at St. Louis, Oregon. Their recorded children were Florence (c.1851-1855), Christine (1854-?), Odile (1856-1856), Odile II (1857-?), Chloris (1859-?), Rosalie (1862-?), Pierre (1863-?), Celestine (?-conf.1865-?) and Jean Ephram (1866-?). In 1869, after Deschamp's death, his widow Marie married Jean Baptiste Jeaudoin.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFDS 9, 11, 17; YFASA 18-20, 2426 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 2b, 3a
See Also: Dechamp, Antoine (Brother)

Deschiquette, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Dechiquette, Deschiquettes, Duchoquette, des Choquet, Dichoquete, Ducharquette] (c. 1819 - 1862) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1819 (born to Francois Ducharquette and Marie Marguerite Okanogan)

Death: probably Similkameen, British Columbia - August 1862

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1839); Native apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1844); Middleman, Columbia Department (1844 - 1845); Labourer, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Officer's servant, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Thompson River (1847 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Colville (1852 - 1856); Interpreter and post manager, Okanagan (1856 - 1860); Post master, Similkameen Post (1860 - 1862).

Short and stout François Deschiquette was around sixteen years of age when he was hired on locally by the HBC. He is said to have been intelligent and competent in business, but fond of drink. In 1844, he probably checked out settlement prospects in the Willamette valley, for in St. Paul on July 18, 1844 he was baptised by the local priest. He quit work in 1849 but re-engaged in 1856 to manage the Okanagan post. When the Okanagan post closed in 1860, he and a group of Indians packed up everything and he moved north of the border; he was instructed to build a log hut or two, and cultivate a few acres of land, raising oats, potatoes and other vegetables. A two-month trial location was on the bank of Brown Creek, the site of the present Cawston store, but the Indians so objected to its presence that Deschiquette moved the post site to Keremeos. There he worked at the Similkameen post between 1860-1862. In a quarrel with Frank Peto, Deschiquette was shot to death and died around forty-two years of age, most likely at the Similkameen post, on August 30, 1862. His grave is on the north side of Blind creek where the old Similkameen-Fairview Road winds up the hill. He was succeeded by Roderick McLean.

Desjardines, Jean Baptiste [variation: Desjardins] (c. 1825 - 1856) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1825

Death: probably Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Fort Umpqua (1843 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Middleman, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1846 - 1847); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1847 - 1848); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1848 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1850 - 1851); Middleman, Snake Country (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Snake Country (1852 - 1856).

Jean Baptiste Desjardines joined the HBC in 1842 and worked, more or less steadily, until 1853 when he quit. He re-enlisted, for he worked until 1856 when he was killed, probably in the Snake Country.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-12; YFASA 22, 24-32; YFDS 21; FtVanCB 41; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Desjarlais, Antoine [variation: De'jarlais, Desjarlois] (fl. 1828 - 1829) (probably Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

NWC Interpreter, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829).

Antoine Desjarlais, who is difficult to follow, put in a brief appearance in the Columbia Department. (An Antoine Desjarlais, from Lac St-Francis, signed a contract on January 29, 1793 with the NWC [D. P. Grant] to work in the northern area; and, an Antoine Desjarlais, from Montreal, signed a contract on December 23, 1795 with Alexandre & James [NWC] to work in the north. Other Desjarlais' from the NWC contract sheets are from Riviere du Loup - François, Charles & Moise signed on in 1792, 1808 and 1819 respectively.) A former guide for the NWC who had been free since 1805, Desjarlais was encountered by Gabriel Franchere in 1814 at Lac La Biche on his return to Canada from the coast. On June 5, 1814, Desjarlais provided the party with provisions. On June 6th, Franchere saw that Desjarlais was living contentedly with his family at Lac la Biche and hunting for food. Desjarlais asked Franchere to read two letters from his sisters in Varennes, letters which he had held onto for two years waiting for someone who could read. This may be the same Antoine Desjarlais who contracted with the HBC on May 28, 1828 as an interpreter for two years and included work in the Columbia Department. By May 1833, an Antoine Desjarlais, perhaps not the same, was contracted to work elsewhere as a post master or interpreter.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA HBCCont; HBCA YFASA 8 PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 167-68; Coues, p. 237
See Also: Desjarlais, Francois (possible Son)

Desjarlais, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Desjarlaix] (? - 1811) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lac la Biche [Alberta] (born to Antoine Desjarlais)

Death: in the Saleesh River, Pacific Northwest - June 1811

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1810 - 1811) (with David Thompson).

François Desjarlais may have been the son of Antoine Desjarlais whom David Thompson encountered on May 29, 1812 at Lac la Biche (or Red Deer Island). Francois worked with David Thompson west of the Rockies in the winter of 1810-1811. However, around the end of June, 1811, François, his wife and four children all drowned in one of the Dalles of the Saleesh River.

PS: SHdeSB Liste PPS: Belyea, p. 130, 132, 137, 138, 141; ChSoc XL, p. 337 SS: Coues, p. 237
See Also: Desjarlais, Antoine (possible Father)

Deslard, Pierre [1] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Steersman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Steersman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Pierre Deslard was engaged by the NWC in 1813 in Athabasca and spent the winter of 1813-1814 at Fort George. On April 5, 1814, he joined the large ten-canoe brigade for Fort William/Montreal.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Coues, p. 875

Deslard, Pierre [2] (fl. 1830 - 1831) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1831).

Pierre Deslard was a Montreal summerman in 1829-1830 before joining to the Snake Party the following outfit.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9; FtVanASA 2

Desloges (Lavigneur), Hyacinth [variation: Henry, Henrie Deloges (Lavigneur)] (c. 1797 - 1846) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly in or near St. Geneviève, district of Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1797

Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - November 1846

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Colville (1828 - 1837); Carpenter, Fort Colville (1828 - 1837); Middleman, Willamette (1837 - 1844).

Hyacinth Desloges (Lavigneur) joined the HBC in 1821 from St. Genevieve and eventually became a settler in the Willamette at the age of forty. In 1828, while Desloges was at Fort Alexandria, George Simpson found his conduct to be "generally improper" and his character to be "notoriously bad" (HBRS X, p. 200), an evaluation which did not appear to hinder his career in the fur trade. In outfit 1828-1829, he spent a short time at Fort Colville. He worked at least for sixteen years in the fur trade and died in 1846.

Desloges, known as Lavigneur in the Catholic Records, had one wife and eight children; he already had a family by the time the priests arrived in the Columbia. On January 21, 1839, shortly after their arrival, he formalized his marriage to Marguerite Colville (1814-1848). Their children were Noel (c.1829-1848), Jean Baptiste (c.1832-1847), François (c.1834-?), François Xavier (c.1836-1850), Joseph (1838-?), Josephite (1840-?), Hyacinthe Jr. (1842-?), and an unnamed son (1845-?). Marguerite died April 1, 1848 in St. Paul.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2, 4-9, 11-15; YFDS 1a, 3a-5c, 7, 10-11; FtVanAB 1, 2, 10; FtVanASA 3-8 PPS: HBRS X, p. 200; CCR 1a, 2a, 2b

Desmarais, Charles (c. 1839 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1839

Death: probably West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1861 - 1862); Labourer, New Caledonia (1862 - 1863); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1863); Labourer, Thompson River (1863 - 1864); Labourer, New Caledonia (1864 - 1884).

Charles Desmarais joined the HBC from Rupert's Land and spent the next twenty-four years working as a labourer in the New Caledonia area where he also raised a family. Little is known of him but a dismissal of "scamp Desmarsee" from the service on April 30, 1863 (FtAlexPJ 10, fo. 109d) was short lived for he was soon back at work.

Charles Desmarais had one wife and six recorded children. Charles chose as his mate Amelia Boucher (c.1853-?), daughter of "Waccan" Boucher and Nancy McDougal. Their children were Alfred (?-bap.1869-?), Charles (c.1864-?), Frederick (c.1866-?), Henriette (?-bap.1871-?), Joseph (c.1876-?) and Robert Charles (?-bap.1877-?).

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 8-16, 31; FtAlexPJ 10; BCA BCCR StPetSL; Kincolith; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census
See Also: Boucher, Jean Baptiste (c) (Father-in-Law)

Desmarais, Goddy [variation: Baptiste Godoy Demarrais] (fl. 1842 - 1861) (possibly Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Athabasca [Alberta]

Death: possibly West of the Rockies

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1843); Apprentice, New Caledonia (1843 - 1845); Middleman, New Caledonia (1851 - 1854); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1854 - 1857); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1857 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861).

Goddy Desmarais joined the HBC from Masta in 1841 and for the next twenty years worked both on and off the Pacific slopes. At first, he worked largely in the New Caledonia area before heading for Red River in 1845. In 1846-1847 he worked between posts, from 1847-1849 in the Saskatchewan and in 1849-1850, he returned to Red River. He was back on the Pacific slopes in 1851 and, from the end of his contract in 1854, worked at coastal posts until 1861 when he appears to have retired. While he was working at Fort Simpson in 1857, he was recruited by missionary William Duncan as a student for his Men's Night School; at that time, Desmarais could not read or write. Also, on March 4, 1858, he was involved in an unfortunate accident; a log which Desmarais was sawing fell and crushed a native child to death. For this, the Company paid the grieving parents six blankets, fifteen pieces of cotton, three shirts, four handkerchiefs, three pounds [1.4 kg] of tobacco leaf and two papers of vermilion (FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 128d). Goddy has not been traced after he retired.

Goddy, who also went by the name Baptiste, had an unnamed wife. On April 26, 1857, she gave birth to twins, unnamed (1857-1858) and unnamed (1857-1859).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFDS 22; YFASA 24, 31-32; FtVicASA 1-9; FtSimp[N]PJ 8; FtAlex 9; HBCABio; UBC-SC Duncan

Desmarais, Joseph (fl. 1807 - 1819) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Yamaska, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Joseph Desmarais likely joined the Michillimackinac Co. on June 16, 1807 to work at Michillimackinac, renewing his contract two years later. By 1812 he was working out of Fort William for the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] and was probably a member of the cross-country brigade when he wintered at Fort George [Astoria] in the winter of 1813-1814. He returned east in the spring of 1814 in a canoe led by Alexander Stewart and Thomas McKay. Desmarais was free in Montreal in 1816 and returned to Fort William where he worked until at least 1819.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Coues, p.872

Desmarais, Louis (fl. 1813 - 1816) (possibly Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Bowsman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Bowsman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Louis Desmarais joined the NWC in Fort William in 1813 and spent the winter of 1813-1814 in Fort George [Astoria]. He left as part of the the brigade for Fort William in April 1814. He was to be free in Montreal in 1816.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Coues, p. 872

Despard, Joseph (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832).

Joseph Despard joined the HBC from Trois Rivières in 1830 as a middleman and may have returned east in 1832.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-4b; YFASA 10-11

Despard, Joseph Frederick [a] [variation: Despart] (c. 1794 - 1875) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly in or near Yamaska or St. Hyacinthe, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - May 1875

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); Trapper, Snake Party (1825 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1837); Settler, Willamette (1837+).

Joseph Frederick Despard entered the fur trade around 1816. He appears to have worked mainly in the Snake Country and at various points elsewhere in the Indian trade. Ogden's journal from Monday, December 11, 1825 reveals an altercation between Despard and Finan McDonald's slave, who died as a result of the fight (SnkCoPJ 7, fo. 6d-7). Other than that, Despard appears to have carried himself well throughout his career, for he is rarely mentioned in the records, a sign that he carried out his job well. Evidence points to a somewhat kindly Joseph Despard for, together with George Montour and the HBC, he helped raise a native child and probable orphan, called "Umpqua Joe" (CCR 1, A-21). Around 1837 he retired to the Willamette, west of Champoege, and by 1842 he had a very productive farm on seventy-five enclosed acres [30.4 ha]. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. Despard died in 1875 and was one of the last to be buried in the old St. Paul Cemetery.

Joseph Frederick Despard had one wife and five children. On January 21, 1839 he formalized his marriage to Lissette, Chinook (c.1808-1851). The Despard children were Joseph (c.1827-?), Marie Anne (c.1834-?), Rose (c.1836-?), Marguerite (1838-?), Marie (1840-?) and Victoire (1843-?). Lissette died on April 27, 1851 at St. Paul.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2-9, 11-15; FtVanASA 1-6; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-5c, 7, 10-11; SnkCoPJ 7; BCA BCCR CCCath; OHS 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 2c SS: Holman, p.115

Desrivieres, Pierre (c. 1798 - ?) (Assiniboine Nation)

Birth: probably Assiniboia [Saskatchewan] - c. 1798

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, South Party (1828 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Trapper, Fort Umpqua (1836 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1839 - 1841); Hunter, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1839 - 1841); Trapper, South Party (1841 - 1845).

Pierre Desrivieres, of the Assiniboine Nation, had a long career as a trapper with the HBC, mainly in the southern regions. His movements after 1845 have not been traced.

Desrivieres had one wife and five recorded daughters. On October 28, 1839, he formalized his marriage to Marie, Manon (c.1813-?). The Desrivieres children were Marie Louise (c.1834-?), Angelique (c.1837), Marguerite (1840-?), Josette (1842-?), and Isabelle (1845-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 20, 24; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1a, 2a

Detaye, Pierre (? - 1812) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - 1812

Fur trade employee

PFC Trapper, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811); Trapper, Snake River (1811 - 1812).

Pierre Detaye joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition at Aricara village around July 3, 1811. During the late summer he crossed over the Great Divide and at Mad River separated from the main group to hunt beaver. In the spring of 1812, he was killed by the Crow Indians.

PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 106

Diamare (Baron), Charles [variation: Baront, Borò, Borrans] (c. 1822 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Ours, Lower Canada - c. 1822

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1845); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1847); Settler, Willamette (1847+).

Charles Diamare (Baron) joined the HBC in 1841 as a carpenter and settled in the Willamette in 1847. Diamare was illiterate and barely able to write his own name (resulting in a considerable variety of spellings); he appears to have been, nonetheless, generous as he was godfather to numerous children.

Charles Diamare (Baron) had one wife, perhaps two, Thérèse, Tmiway (CCR 1b, p, 73), and/or Louise (c.1825-?) (1850 Census) and one recorded daughter Marie Irène (1846-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 20-24, 25-27; FtVanASA 6-8; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1b

Dick (Owhyhee) [variation: Loolon] (fl. c. 1817 - 1855) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - December 1855

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia River (1817 - 1822); HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1825); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); NWC Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1854).

Dick joined the NWC from Oahu around 1817 at about the age of seventeen and worked in the fur trade for the next third of a century. At the time of coalition, he continued working with the Hudson's Bay Company in the Fort Vancouver area (possibly at the sawmill) and lived in the Kanaka village. However, by the beginning of the 1850s, the US Army was assuming control of the Vancouver area. At that time the condition of the village buildings was deteriorating and those Hawaiians, such as the now fifty year old Dick and his family (who were not deployed to Fort Victoria with the Company), were left to their own devices in the dilapidated structures. According to the 1850 census, which put his birth date at an unlikely 1832, he was then working as a steward for the remaining people at the fort. He last appeared with the HBC in 1854 as a pensioner at Fort Vancouver, and subsequently died and was buried on December 18, 1855, probably in the graveyard north of the fort.

Dick had a wife and four children. With his wife, a native Chinook, he had Richard (?-bap.1838-?), James (?-bap.1838-?) (baptised Anglican), Thérèse (1840-?), and Luce (1843-1844), who was baptised Catholic.

Dick (fl. 1834 - 1837) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, CRFTC Brigade (1834); Labourer, Fort William [Sauve Island, OR] (1835); Labourer, Fort Hall (1835 - 1837).

Dick was one of twenty Hawaiians recruited in Hawaii in 1834 for Nathaniel J. Wyeth's CRFTC. He and the others arrived in the Columbia River in September and twelve of them (including Dick) who set out in a brigade under Captain Joseph Thing for Fort Hall, deserted. He was later found by Wyeth at Fort Vancouver and taken to Sauve Island and then Fort Hall where he worked until 1837. At that point, when the post was sold to the HBC, Dick chose not to return to Hawaii and apparently went his own way. Because of the name similarity to the above Dick, there is a possibility that some of the baptised children may be his.

PS: OHS FtHallAB PPS: N. J. Wyeth, p. 250 SS: Beidleman, p. 238

Dick, James (c. 1807 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Glasgow, Scotland - c. 1807

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lama (brig) (1836); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837); Steerage Passenger, Vancouver (barque) (1843).

James Dick joined the HBC in London in August 1835 for five years and sailed to the coast. He stayed for about five months servicing coastal posts and left for England on the Columbia on November 1, 1836 arriving back in May 1837. He may have returned to the area for on October 31, 1843 a James Dick came on board the barque Vancouver at Fort Vancouver as a steerage passenger bound for Oahu.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 4a; FtVanASA 3; YFDS 7; YFASA 16; log of Vancouver [3] 1

Dickenson, Thomas [variation: Dickerson] (fl. 1833) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Littlehampton, Sussex, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833).

Thomas Dickenson joined the HBC on May 4, 1833 for three years of service in the Columbia Department; and, sailed that day with the Nereide. As he does not appear on the HBC Columbia abstracts, it is possible he may have left on the outward journey's five week stop at Plymouth, the two week stop at Lisbon or the mutiny at Valparaiso, Chile.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Nereide 1

Dickson, James (? - 1861) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - 1814 (born to Robert Dickson and Christian [Firth] Dickson)

Death: Orkney, United Kingdom - 1861

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1835); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1843); Passenger, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844).

As the Dicksons had been blacksmiths at "Feolquoy" Harray, Orkney since the 1600s, James Dickson naturally chose to become a blacksmith, probably never realizing that his humble profession would take him to the other side of the world. By 1831 he was married and had a child. Some time after the birth of his child, his wife Jean died and possibly because of this, on April 3, 1835 he joined the HBC for five years as a blacksmith. Leaving his son James with his sister, Christian Isbister (Beattie & Buss, p. 323), James travelled to the Pacific Northwest where he appears to have spent his entire career at the Fort Vancouver blacksmith shop, pounding out nails and other such items on one of the four anvils used by the four to six blacksmiths working within the stockades of that Columbia River fort. He worked until October 31, 1843, at which point he returned to the British Isles on the barque Vancouver. Dickson returned to "Feolquoy" where he remarried and continued on as a blacksmith until his death in 1861.

James Dickson had two successive wives and one child. Around 1831 he married Jean Flett and together they had a son James (1831-?). When James Sr. returned to Orkney, he married Mary Johnstone (c.1814-1877). They had no children.

Several undelivered HBCA letters from family members reflect the mood in the area surrounding the Presbyterian-Free Church of Scotland divide of 1843.

PS: OrkA 1653 Valuation of Harray; OPR; HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 8; FtVanASA 3-8; YFDS 7, 14; YFASA 16, 19-20, 23-24; MI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 319-26
See Also: Dickson, Joseph (Relative)

Dickson, Joseph (fl. 1836 - 1844) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Harray, Orkney, United Kingdom (born to James Dickson and Margaret [Sinclair] Dickson)

Death: probably Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1835); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1835); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1840); Trader, Willamette Falls (1840 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1844).

A cousin once removed of James Dickson (Joseph's grandfather's brother was the father of James), Joseph Dickson joined the HBC on May 6, 1835 as a labourer, originally for five years. He sailed that June on the Prince of Wales for Moose River, thence on the Prince Rupert to York Factory where he may have wintered over before striking out overland for the Northwest Coast. Dickson spent his entire career at Fort Vancouver except for a brief period at Willamette Falls. Both Dicksons returned to the British Isles in 1844, Joseph returning via the Prince Rupert. When he arrived back in Orkney, he farmed in Deerness.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 12; YFASA 19-20, 23-24; YFDS 7, 11-12; FtVanASA 3-8; OrkA Cen 1851, Orkney; IGI File, Orkney
See Also: Dickson, James (Relative)

Dido (fl. 1834) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company (1834).

Dido was one of twenty Hawaiians who joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company in Hawaii in 1834 and reached Fort Hall just before Christmas. He has not been subsequently traced.

PPS: Beidleman, p. 238

Dionne, Cyprien [variation: Dion] (fl. 1849 - 1859) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1851); Middleman, New Caledonia (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Fort Langley (1853 - 1858); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1858 - 1859).

Cyprien Dionne had one wife and child. His native wife, a "Skames" (?-?), bore him Ada (?-bap.1856-?) at Fort Langley.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-6; BCA FtAlex; BCCR StAndC

Dixon, F. M. (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Butcher, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

F. M. Dixon made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Dixson, George [1] [variation: Dixon] (fl. 1839 - 1842) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Lancaster or Liverpool, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1839 - 1841).

George Dixson [1] who joined the HBC in London on October 29, 1838 on a five year contract, made one return voyage to the Coast. He worked in coastal shipping on the same vessel from October 1, 1839 and arrived back in England in the spring of 1841. The following year, he made a run to Hudson Bay.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 19-20; YFDS 10-11; FtVanASA 6; log of Prince Rupert V 1

Dixson, George [2] [variation: Dixon, Dickson] (c. 1801 - 1859) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England - c. 1801

Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - April 1859

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Conlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1845 - 1846); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1846 - 1847); Boatswain, Fort Victoria (1847); Crew member, Cadboro (schooner) (1848); Boatswain, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1848 - 1849); 2nd mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1849 - 1850); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1850 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Cadboro (schooner) (1852 - 1853); Boatswain, Cadboro (schooner) (1853 - 1855).

George Dixon [3], possibly the same as George Dixon [2], joined the HBC in 1843 on a five-year contract and appears to have come out on the barque Conlitz. His time on the Cadboro was rather uneventful for when the crew refused to obey the mate, William Mouat, on January 29, 1847, Dixon was the only one of the crew who would obey; but, on the other hand, on January 31, 1847 while it was anchored at San Francisco, he did not return to the ship on time. As well, he was sick for four days in June. On November 1, 1847, he transferred to Fort Victoria and a year later joined the Cadboro for a short time. In 1850 he was a mate on the Cadboro and in 1853, purchased a town lot in Victoria. Around 1855 he retired from a loss of eyesight and for the next few years carried on transactions with the HBC. In 1859 in Victoria, ten days after Dixon had a paralytic stroke and was unable to speak, he died. He was buried the following day.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1-4; YFDS 18, 20; log of Cadboro 5; HBCA George Dickson search file; BCA CrtR-Land; Vic.Gazette, Apr. 5, 1859, p. 3; BCCR CCCath; OHS Statesman, May 10, 1859, p. 3

Dobbs, Francis A. (? - 1865) (Irish)

Birth: probably County Antrim, Ireland

Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - July 1865

Fur trade employee

HBC Cuddy servant, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1858 - 1859); Clerk, Fort Simpson (1859 - 1861); Post master, Fort Simpson (1861 - 1863).

Francis A. Dobbs came to the coast on the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal as a servant in the captain's cabin. After his arrival, he spent his career working at Fort Simpson but the daily journals did not reveal anything of his life other than a busy work schedule. He retired from service on November 18, 1863 and returned to Victoria where he may have become a policeman for a short time. His death two years later in Victoria on July 18, 1865, recorded in the Colonist the following day, provides a glimpse into his character on that one particular day.

"A man named Dobbs...was yesterday found dead by the police at the residence of the inebriate Dr. Walker. Deceased, who had been drinking hard, is said to be very respectably connected at home" (The Colonist, July 19, 1865, p. 3). An inquest held the following day ruled that he had died of "excessive intemperance" (The Colonist, July 20, 1865, p. 3).

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1; FtVicASA 6-12; BCA FtSimp[N]PJ 1; Van-PL Colonist, July 19, 1865, p. 3, July 20, 1865, p. 3

Dockery, Robert [variation: Doughery] (fl. 1849 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1849 - 1850).

Robert Dockery joined the HBC in London on September 6, 1848 and sailed to the coast aboard the barque Columbia. After six months of coastal shipping, Dockery stabbed and nearly killed Charles Paul in a fight and was consequently put in irons. A month later, on October 29, 1849, Dockery joined the Cadboro where he worked until at least 1850. Where he worked after that is a mystery although he remained on the books until 1853.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 10; YFASA 29-32; YFDS 20

Dodd, Andrew (fl. 1848 - 1850) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1850).

Andrew Dodd shipped on with the HBC in Honolulu on August 12, 1847 and may have stayed with the same vessel until 1850.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 10; YFASA 28-30

Dodd, Charles (1808 - 1860) (British: English)

Birth: probably Norwich or New Buckenham, Norfolk, England - 1808 (born to John Dodd and Mary Cobbold)

Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - June 1860

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835); 2nd mate, Beaver (steamer) (1835); 1st mate, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); 1st mate, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1838); 1st mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1838 - 1839); 1st mate, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840); 1st mate, Cowlitz (barque) [at Fort Stikine] (1840 - 1842); Clerk in charge, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1846); Clerk, Beaver (steamer) (1845 - 1851); Chief Trader, Beaver (steamer) (1852 - 1858); Chief Trader, Labouchere (steamer) (1858 - 1860).

Charles Dodd joined the HBC on May 3, 1833 and spent almost his entire career on the Company's sailing vessels. He also took charge of Fort Stikine after the murder of John McLoughlin Jr. On November 1, 1845, he took over as master of the steamer Beaver and for the next four years, for example, shipped sheep, horned cattle and horses from Nisqually to Victoria. In 1846, he made an unsuccessful claim for land around Fort Nisqually. On the other hand, between 1856-1859, he purchased 276 acres [111.7 ha] of land in the Victoria District and Lake District. On February 27, 1860, he was awarded the rank of Chief Factor but in May became seriously ill and was taken on the Labouchere from Port Simpson to Victoria where, on June 2, 1860, he died at his residence near St. John's church. He was buried at the Quadra Street Cemetery. At his death, Dodd owned three city lots in or near Cormorant Street.

Charles Dodd appears to have had one wife and seven children. On November 22, 1842, he married Grace McTavish (c.1826-?), daughter of John George McTavish and Nancy McKenzie. Their children were Mary Grace (1843-?), Elizabeth Nancy (1845-?), Charles John (1848-?), Edward James (1851-?), Roderick Finlayson (1853-?) Dugald McTavish (1857-?) and Henry Work (1860-?).

Dodd Narrows, Northumberland channel, Dodd Passage, Port Simpson, Dodd Rock, and Finlayson Island, are all named after Charles Dodd.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Nereide 1, 2; FtVanASA 3-8; YFDS 7, 10; YFASA 17-19, 24-32; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVicASA 1-7; FtVicCB 30; Wills; HBCABio; BCA PSACFtNis; BcGR-AbstLnd; Van-PL The Colonist, June 5, 1860, p. 2 PPS: CCR 1b SS: Walbran, p. 145-46

See Also: McTavish, John George (Father-in-Law)

Dods, James [variation: Dodd] (fl. 1815 - 1816) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Pacific Ocean - May 1816

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

James Dods engaged his services with the Columbia on July 19, 1815 when the ship was probably at Fort Astoria. He was paid off in Macao on February 29, 1816 but continued on with the schooner until May 31st, when he fell overboard from the main boom and couldn't be rescued.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1 PPS: Corney, Voyages in the Northern, p. 50

Dominis, John (c. 1805 - 1846) (possibly Croatia and American)

Birth: probably Trieste [Republic of Venice], Italy - c. 1796 (born to Vicenco de Dominis and Agnes Galzignia)

Death: killed by the natives of Ebon Island - 1846

Maritime officer

NWC Junior Officer, Inore (brig) (1821); 2nd mate, Eagle (brig) (1821); Captain, Convoy (brig) (1826); MW Captain, Omhyee (ship) (1826 - 1830); Captain, Bolivar Liberator (brig) (1834 - 1837); Captain, Joseph Peabody (brig) (1839 - 1840).

John Dominis was a maritime fur trader, possibly of Croatian descent, who came into direct conflict with the land-based fur trade. Arriving in Boston from Europe in 1819, he may have first come to the coast in 1821 as a junior officer of the brig Inore [Eliab Grimes]. In late 1821, he served as Grimes' second mate on the brig Eagle on its short trading voyage to the California coast. His voyages have not been tracked until May 1826 when, as captain of the Convoy he sailed from Boston to the Northwest Coast in company with the Tally Ho [William Henry McNeil] for a six month trading voyage to the Northwest Coast. In December of that year, he was given command of the Omhyee which took him to the Columbia for a ten day visit in 1827 under the pretext of gathering wood and spars. The natives were delighted with his visit as he paid two times the HBC price for furs. When he returned two years later, and traded as far north as Kaigarnee [Alaska], he announced that the stay was indefinite for he was on an obvious mission to gather furs for his employers, Josiah Marshall and Dixey Wildes of Boston. HBC officer, Dr. John McLoughlin, reacted by sending out parties to intercept the natives before they could reach the river and the Omhyee. He also sent James Birnie to construct a post at the Dalles for the sole purpose of intervening and opposing a post which had been built by American, Bache Goodriche. In spite of these preventative measures, Dominis left the Columbia in July 1830 with 2900 skins and a large quantity of trade goods. Prior to his departure, he said that he had intended to be in the area until 1832, but he decided against this and attempted unsuccessfully to sell his trade goods to the HBC. One of the factors in his decision to leave earlier may have been in 1829, when Dominis refused to join the punitive expedition against the Clatsops who were perceived to have killed the crew of the wrecked William & Ann. He did, however, agree to stop selling them guns for a day. When he returned to the East Coast, he was quoted in the New York Gazette as having stated that the HBC was too well established in the Columbia for Americans to work in the fur trade in that area. Nevertheless, he was back on the Coast in 1834 commanding the Bolivar Liberator and engaged in the fur trade in ships such as the Joseph Peabody which still ran furs to Canton. In the 1840s Dominis began construction of a mansion in Honolulu [now Washington Place, the present Governor's Mansion, and the final residence of the deposed Queen Liliuokalani] but was unable to finish it as in 1846 he was lost at sea in the brig William Nelson in the area of Micronesia. Initial theories had him foundering in a typhoon off Ebon Island but later evidence seemed to indicate that when he and the other finely dressed officers touched on Ebon Island for fresh water, they were lured inland and stoned to death by the natives for their clothes.

John Dominis was in Boston c. October 9, 1824 when he married Mary Jones (c.1809?-?) whom he later brought, along with his son, to Oahu. The son, John Owen Dominis (1831-1891), born in Shenectady, New York, married the sister of King Kamehameha, the later Queen Liliuokalani the last reigning Hawaiian monarch. Two daughters probably born in Boston were Mary Elizabeth (c.1825-1838) and Frances Ann (c.1829-1842), both of whom probably stayed in Boston.

PS: CU-B Inore/Eagle; CHS log of Owhyhee; HBCA FtVanCB 6, 8, 12; SandIsAB 6; USNA DesPHon; HU-Wid ColCent, Oct. 9, 1824 PPS: HBRS X, p. 107; G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 323 SS: Howay "Brig Owhyhee in the Columbia, 1827", p. 324-29; Howay, "The Brig Owhyhee in the Columbia, 1829-1830", p. 10-21; Bancroft, History of California, vol. II, p. 783; Judd, p. 241; Kovačević, p. 3-24; HSA Dominis.

Donald, John (fl. 1836 - 1840) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly Glasgow, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer (1st), Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1840).

John Donald joined the HBC in London on August 5, 1835 as assistant engineer on the steamer Beaver for five years. At the end of his contract "he had affairs which called him home" (FtVanCB 28, fo. 58d) and was replaced by a blacksmith. He left the Beaver on October 31, 1840. His return home was delayed when the Vancouver, on which he returned to England in the fall of 1840, ran aground between Forts Stikine and Taku on the Alaska panhandle. On his way home, with the permission of John McLoughlin, he was allowed to dine with the captain.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 3-6; YFDS 7, 11; YFASA 17-20; FtVanCB 28

Donderfield, John (fl. 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Crew member, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

John Donderfield was a crew member of the schooner Columbia in 1814.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Donpier, David [variation: Dompier, Dom Pierre] (c. 1800 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1800

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - October 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1832); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1830 - 1832); Boatbuilder, New Caledonia (1832 - 1834); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1834 - 1836); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1840); Baker, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1840); Settler, Willamette (1840 - 1842+).

David Dompier joined the HBC from Quebec in 1830 and worked at a variety of jobs for ten years. He settled in the Willamette and by 1842, was raising a family, and had a productive farm of forty enclosed acres. On May 2, 1843 he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon.

David Dompier had one wife, seven recorded children and raised eight. On December 9, 1838 at Fort Vancouver, he married a Marguerite (?-?), Souillie're, daughter of Basile Souillier and a Cree woman. The Dompier family, fathered by David, consisted of Marie Genevieve (1834-?), David (1837-1858), John/Jean Baptiste (c.1838-?) , Julien (1839-1840), Philomene (1843-18 54), Louis (c.1844-?) and François Xavier (1845-?). Son Joseph (c.1831-?) was most likely fathered by Charles Roussin who worked in New Caledonia as a clerk. After Dompier's death, his widow married Joseph Rocquebrune, she being his second wife, in 1850.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-6; YFDS 4b-7; YFASA 11-15, 20; BCA BCCR CCCath; OHS 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 2c, 3a SS: Holman, p.116

See Also: Roussain, Charles (probable Relative); Rocquebrune, Joseph (Relative)

Dorion, Isadore (fl. 1815) (probably Canadian: French)

Maritime employee

NWC Apprentice, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

Isadore Dorion was an apprentice crew member of the schooner Columbia in 1815 and worked on it into 1816.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Dorion, Jean Baptiste [1] (c. 1785 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Trois Rivières, Province of Quebec - c. 1784

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1821).

When thirty-six year old Jean Baptiste Dorion was found at Fort George in 1821 during the amalgamation of the NWC and HBC, he had one year left to serve; he appears to have been made redundant at that time.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1

Dorion, Jean Baptiste [2] (1813 - c. 1850) (Mixed descent)

Birth: 1813 (born to Pierre Dorion and Marie L'Aguivoise Dorion)

Death: probably Willamette, Oregon - c. 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Native apprentice, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Native apprentice, Fort Nez Percés (1831 - 1834); Native apprentice (full wages), Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Native apprentice, Snake Party (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Snake Party (1835 - 1836); Native apprentice, Fort Nez Percés (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1838 - 1842); Interpreter, Columbia Department (1842 - 1843).

Baptiste Dorion, son of an Astorian overlander, entered the service as an apprentice in 1830. He appears to have worked on and off out Fort Nez Percés as he is listed as being discharged from that fort in 1837 and was later re-employed. He was a guide for J. K. Townsend in 1835, and in 1842 acted as interpreter for Dr. Elijah White when he visited the Cayuse and Nez Perce Indians. Dorion died around 1850, quite likely in the Willamette area.

Jean Baptiste Dorion had one recorded wife and seven (possibly eight) children. On February 3, 1845 he married Josephine Walla Walla, a native Cayuse woman with whom he had seven children; Pierre (c.1836-1854), Genevieve (1842-1854), David (1844-?), Philomene (1845-1845), Joseph (1846-1847), Marie Denise (?-bap. 1848-?) and Marianne (1849-?). Paul Dorion (?-?) may also have been a son.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-7; YFDS 4a-7; YFASA 11-15, 17, 19-20 PPS: CCR 2a, 3a,7a

See Also: Dorion, Pierre (Father); Dorion, Marie L'Aguivoise (Mother); Laframboise, Francois (Son-in-Law)

Dorion, Marie L'Aguivoise [variation: Aioe] (1786 - 1850) (Native: Iowa)

Birth: Iowa [United States] - 1786

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - September 1850

Other

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811); Member, Snake Country (1813 - 1814).

Iowa native Marie Aioe/L'Aguivoise, wife of Pacific Fur Company overlander Pierre Dorion, became more well-known than her trapper-husband. Little has been traced of the early life of Marie, but in 1811 she left Missouri with her husband and two sons, Paul and Jean Baptiste Dorion, on the 1811 Wilson Price Hunt party of the PFC, which took a southern route to the Columbia to avoid the Blackfoot Indians. The party arrived at Astoria in 1812 and, in the summer of 1813, the Dorion family returned to the Snake Country as part of John Reed's trapping party. In January 1814, while the trappers were going about their business, a band of angry Snake Indians set about to wipe out the party. Upon hearing the news that the Snakes had burned one of the houses, Marie set out with her children to warn her husband but, not being able to warn him in time, found only one dying survivor, Giles Leclerc. After finding the rest of the party murdered, scalped and cut to pieces, Marie and her two children set out and lived out the winter hiding in the Blue Mountains. After tremendous hardships, surviving cold and starvation, she returned to the Columbia area and safety. The widow Marie subsequently married two more fur traders and lived in Walla Walla and the Willamette Valley.

She died September 3, 1850 but her Snake Country survival story has become legendary.

After the death of Pierre, with whom she had three children: Paul (1809-89), an unnamed son (b. Dec. 30, 1811, d. Jan. 7, 1812) and Jean Baptiste (1813-c.1850), Marie married Louis Joseph Vagnier/Venier, with whom she had a daughter, Marguerite (c.1815-1858), and later, Jean Baptiste Toupin, with whom she had a son François (c.1824-?) and daughter, Marianne/Marie Anne (c.1827-?). Marie L'Aguivoise died on September 3, 1850 and was buried in the Old Catholic cemetery at St. Louis, Oregon.

PPS: A. Ross, Adventures, p. 278-82 SS: Carey, A General History, vol. II, p. 202-03; OHQ, vol. XXX, p. 277; vol. XXXVI, p. 102-103; Corning, Dictionary of Oregon History, p. 75

See Also: Dorion, Jean Baptiste (Son); Dorion, Pierre (Husband); Vagnier, Louis Joseph (Husband); Toupin, Jean (Husband)

Dorion, Pierre [variation: Durion, Durrien, Daion] (c. 1781 - 1814) (Mixed descent)

Birth: a Yankton village [Dakotas - United States] - c. 1781 (born to Pierre Dorion and a Yankton woman)

Death: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest – 1813 or 1814

Fur trade employee

PFC Trapper, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); Trapper, Columbia District (1812 - 1813); Trapper, Snake Country (1813 - 1814).

Pierre Dorion had the misfortune of being in the wrong place at the wrong time. Originally descended from a Pierre Dorionne, of Senlis, France, who had immigrated to Canada in 1688, young Pierre was the immediate son of Pierre Dorion Sr., who had not only lived and worked amongst the Sioux but also, as a Sioux-speaking fur trader, interpreted for Lewis and Clark between June 12 and September 24, 1804. The young mixed descent Pierre and his father were first encountered by Lewis and Clark on August 29, 1804 where the former were trading with a large group of natives. Consequently, young Pierre and Sgt. Pryor of the expedition delivered some hominy, kettles, tobacco, etc., as a friendly gesture to the Sioux. Seven years later, on March 12, 1811 in St. Louis, Dorion was hired on to Wilson Price Hunt's Pacific Fur Company Overland Expedition as a Sioux speaking interpreter. At first Dorion refused to go unless he could be accompanied by his wife (whom he beat when he drank too much), and two children. Together with the expedition, they crossed the Continental Divide in late summer, 1811. Taking a southern route through the Snake Country to avoid the Blackfoot Indians, he made his way with the group to Astoria. He signed on with the PFC again on June 25, 1813 and on July 5, 1813, left with John Reed's Party for the interior Snake Country area to trap throughout the winter. It appears that Dorion was in the wrong place at the wrong time for that winter, in an attempt to revenge the death of a Nez Perces hanged by John Clarke for stealing a metal cup, Bannock or Nez Perce natives massacred Dorion along with most of Reed's group. His wife and two children, being away from the party, survived the massacre and had to fend for themselves.

Pierre Dorion appeared to have had one wife, Marie L'Aguivoise (1786-1850) and two children, Jean Baptiste (c.1815-c.1850) and Paul (?-?).

PS: MHS Chouteau; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: A. Ross, Adventures, p. 277-282; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107 SS: Irving, Astoria, p. 449-50, 499-500; Barry, "Madame Dorion", p. 272-77

See Also: Dorion, Jean Baptiste (Son); Toupin, Jean (Relative); Vagnier, Louis Joseph (Relative); Dorion, Marie L'Aguivoise (Wife)

Doughty, George (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849); Cook, Columbia (barque) (1849); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1849 - 1850).

George Doughty first shipped on with the HBC in London on May 31, 1847 to join the Prince Albert for a run to Moose Factory. In September 1848 he left England for the Northwest Coast on the Columbia and served briefly as cook from July-October 1849. He visited coastal posts from Sitka to Victoria before his return journey. Doughty then returned to the Hudson Bay run on the Prince Rupert V.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Albert 6; PortB 1; log of Columbia 10; YFASA 30-31; log of Prince Rupert V 11

Douglas, Benjamin (fl. 1833 - 1836) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman or labourer, Thompson River (1833 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836).

Benjamin Douglas, an employee of the HBC, is noted as going over the Rockies in the spring of 1836.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-16; YFDS 5b-6; FtVanASA 3

Douglas, David (1799 - 1834) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scone, Perthshire, Scotland - July 1799 (born to John Douglas and Jean Drummond)

Death: Mount Roa, Hawaiian Islands - July 1834

Other

HBC Passenger, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1825); U.A. Naturalist/Botanist, Pacific slopes (1825) (with McDonald) and McKay); Naturalist/Botanist, South Party (1826 - 1827); HBC Passenger, Lama (brig) (September, 1832); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (October, 1833).

Enormously productive, David Douglas introduced more plants to Europe (254) than any other person. An apprentice gardener at age eleven, he tended various gardens in Scotland. Later, Douglas (by assisting a University of Glasgow professor) was recommended to the Royal Horticultural Society for a Botanical expedition to North America, which, in 1823, sent him to the eastern United States to collect a variety of oaks. He was sent out again by the RHS, in conjunction with the HBC, on the William & Ann in July 1824 to explore the continent from the west. Arriving at Fort Vancouver in April 1825, he travelled up the Willamette River, and through the Cowlitz area to Puget Sound. The following spring, he travelled upriver as far as forts Colville and Spokane, east into the Blue Mountains, and south into the Umpqua River Valley. Ever resourceful, on Thursday, October 19, 1826, while with McLeod's Umpqua expedition, he fell while chasing a deer and wounded himself in the chest. After bleeding himself on the left foot, he felt much better and carried on. In 1827 he went overland and returned to England. An impressed RHS sent Douglas to the San Francisco area and Hawaii in 1831-1832, and in the fall of 1832 he sailed for Fort Vancouver on the Lama. At this time he received news that his friend, the secretary of the RHS, had resigned and so Douglas likewise resigned as collector. Nonetheless, he spent the next year travelling into the interior of British Columbia. In October 1833, he sailed to Oahu on the Dryad. The end came in Hawaii on the slopes of Mount Roa on July 12, 1834. While on his way to retrieve a forgotten bundle, Douglas fell into a pit in which a wild bull had been trapped. He was trampled to death. After his body was found, it was carried more than thirty miles [48.3 km] to a Mr. Goodrich's house.

Amongst many other plants, the Douglas fir was named after David Douglas. About fifty plant species and one genus, Douglasia, are named for him. Between 1827-1834, Douglas himself wrote eight papers for various societies and authored extensive detailed journals, which were finally published in 1914.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann, 1; ShMiscPap 14; HMCS SReynoldsJ PPS: Douglas, Journal; DCB Tyrwhitt-Drake

Douglas, Sir James (1803 - 1877) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Demerara, British Guiana, South America - 1803 (born to John Douglas and Martha Ann Ritchie Telfer)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - August 1877

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk, Fort St. James (1825 - 1829); Clerk, Columbia Department (1827 - 1828); Clerk, New Caledonia (1828 - 1829); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1835); Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1839); Chief Factor, Fort Vancouver (1839); Untraced vocation, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840); Chief Factor, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1843); Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1859); Member, Brigade for Fort Vancouver (May 1826 - May 1826); Member, Snake Party (Summer 1826); In charge, Fort Connolly (Summer 1827).

James Douglas was one of the more notable mixed-descent characters to come out of the fur trade. Born in South America to a Scottish merchant father and Creole mother, he was schooled for four years in Scotland in Lanark and then Chester. Coming to British North America, he apprenticed in 1819 at the age of sixteen to the NWC and continued on with the HBC at the coalition of 1821. In 1826 he accompanied Chief Factor William Connolly from Fort St. James to Fort Vancouver, establishing an annual north-south fur brigade. A dispute in Fort St. James which could have cost him his life prompted a transfer to Fort Vancouver where he worked under Dr. John McLoughlin. In 1840 as Chief Factor, he engaged in and oversaw activities from Alaska to California and, in 1843, in anticipation of a new international boundary isolating Vancouver, oversaw the construction of Fort Victoria. In 1849, over fear of American northward expansion, Vancouver Island was made into a colony and was leased to the HBC with Douglas appointed as agent and Richard Blanshard as Governor. Douglas replaced the Governor two years later when the latter resigned over colonial HBC jurisdictional boundaries and, more, Douglas' disagreement over punishment of natives involved in an incident at Fort Rupert. All the while, Douglas had double duty, protecting HBC interests on Vancouver Island as well as overseeing HBC business activities on the mainland area claimed by the Company. In 1858, with the arrival of 25,000 gold miners from California on their way to New Caledonia, Douglas tried to protect HBC mainland interests. It was for naught, for that year, the HBC lost its special rights on the mainland. Douglas subsequently retired from the HBC on June 1, 1859, and was inaugurated at Fort Langley as governor of the new colony of British Columbia. However, when the capital of the colony of British Columbia was moved to New Westminster, Douglas rarely visited it, choosing to stay on Vancouver Island where he remained governor. Many of the new breed of colonists called for his resignation and perceived him as being stiff, pompous and aloof, as he never quite was able to move out of the paternalistic role fostered by years of working with HBC employees and natives. In spite of his stern reputation, BCA-held letters to his daughter reveal that he was a sensitive, caring man. He retired in 1863 and was knighted for his efforts. James Douglas died in Victoria fourteen years later in 1877 and was buried five days later at the Ross Bay Cemetery in Victoria.

On February 28, 1837 under Reverend Beaver at Fort Vancouver, he married Amelie Connolly (1812-1890), daughter of William Connolly, although he had gone through the ceremony ten years earlier at Fort St. John. Ten of the thirteen Douglas children were: Cecilia (1834-1865), Ellen (1836-1837), Alexander (-?), Jane (1839-1909), Agnes (1841-1928), Alice (1844-1928), Marguerite (1846-1848), Rebecca (1849-1849), James William (c.1851-1883) and Martha/Marthe (1854-1933).

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-6, 9, 11, 13-14, 17-18, 27, 29-32; FtVanASA 1-8; YFDS 3a, 4a, 5a-7; FtVicASA 1-7; BCA BCCR CCCath; BCCR RefEC; Douglas Letters PPS: HBRS VII, p. 309-14; HBRS XXX, p. 204-05n; CCR 1a, 1b SS: Lamb, "Some Notes on the", p. 41-51; Girard, "Sir James Douglas' School Days", p. 56-63; Girard, "Sir James Douglas' Mother", p. 25-31; Girard, "Some Further Notes", p. 3-27; Pethick, James Douglas; Klippenstein, p. 22-29
See Also: Connolly, William (Father-in-Law); Dallas, Alexander Grant (Son-in-Law); Douglas (Lady Douglas), Amelie (Wife); Helmckin, John Sebastian (Son-in-Law); Kittson, Edwin (Relative)

Douglas (Lady Douglas), Amelie (nee Connolly) (c. 1812 - 1890) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort Assiniboine [Manitoba] - c. 1812 (born to William Connolly and a Cree woman)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - 1890

Amelia Connolly, of mixed descent, achieved some note for exhibiting common sense in an emergency, thus saving her husband's life as well as rising to the level of Lady Douglas - the first lady of British Columbia. At a young age, she travelled with her father to New Caledonia. There, at Fort St. James, she met her future husband. There are many versions of the story of her saving her husband's life, but the John Tod, "History of New Caledonia" version appears plausible. Douglas, it appears, had killed a native in revenge for a previous murder in the village of an unrelated native group, thus endangering that group from vengeance from the relatives of the dead man. The angry natives seized Douglas, who was only released when Amelie threw from the walls enough goods to compensate the relatives for any future revenge they might exact. When her husband was sent to Fort Vancouver to act as assistant to John McLoughlin, a pregnant Amelie stayed behind. The baby died shortly after birth, and Amelie travelled south in the company of her father, almost losing her life after her horse lost its footing and she was dragged for some distance down the river. Later she moved with her husband to Fort Victoria, where she lived for the rest of her life.

Amelie Connolly was married once and had nine children. On April 27, 1828, she married her one and only husband, James Douglas, at Stuart Lake (Fort St. James) and reconfirmed the marriage in 1837 with the Reverend Herbert Beaver at Fort Vancouver. The Douglas children were Cecilia (?-?), Ellen (?-?), Alexander (?-?), Jane (1839-?), Agnes (?-?), Alice (1844-?), Marguerite (1846-48), Rebecca (1849-?) and Martha (?-?).

PS: BCA Tod PPS: CCR 1a, 1b SS: Morice, The History of, p. 138, 143; Lugin, p. 10-24; Akrigg & Helen, p. 201, 256, 303
See Also: Connolly, William (Father); Douglas, Sir James (Husband); Dallas, Alexander Grant (Son-in-Law)

Douillette, Emanuel [variation: Manuel Duett, Duette, Dewette, Douett, Deuette, Deleutte] (c. 1824 - 1858) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1824

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - January 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Thompson River (1841 - 1844); Middleman, New Caledonia (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Thompson River (1845 - 1846); Boute, Thompson River (1846 - 1849); Boute, New Caledonia (1849 - 1851); Boute, Fort Alexandria (1851 - 1852).

Emanuel Douillette joined the HBC from Canada in 1839 and worked mainly in the New Caledonia region. After retirement he carried on transactions with the Company until 1854, and may have worked for the PSAC during this time. In December 1853, Douillette, the managing bailiff of a neighbouring farm in the Victoria area, was accused of stealing pigs from the Reverend Robert John Staines. The pigs were forcibly seized and, according to James Douglas, Douillette was fined and imprisoned. According to James Cooper, the incident was quite different. The pigs had wandered onto Douillette's farm and Staines, for all his threats, was arrested but put on bail, and somehow avoided being tried for the offence. Douillette died at a relatively young age, likely in the Victoria area and was buried on January 2, 1858.

Emanuel Douillette had one wife and possibly five children. He chose as a wife, [Ah Jael] Isabelle (?-?), Shuswap, whom he most likely met when he was working in the Kamloops area in the 1840s. Their recorded children were Joseph (c.1845-?), Emmanuel (c.1846-?), Isabel/Isabella Mary (c.1846-1921) François (c.1855-?) and Pierre (?-bap.1857-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 18-19; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVicASA 1; BCA Alexandria; BCCR StAndC; BCGR CrtR-Gaols; BCVS-RBDM; Dia-Rem Cooper; Van-PL 1901 Canada Census, Yale & Cariboo, Yale West (Lytton) SS: Slater, "Reverend Robert John", p. 221 PPS: Cooper

Downie, Dr. (fl. 1815 - 1816) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: aboard Colonel Allen at Fort George [Astoria] - 1816

Maritime officer

NWC Surgeon, Colonel Allan (brig) (1815 - 1816).

Dr. Downie likely received his medical training in the British Isles and probably signed on as ship's surgeon with the NWC's Colonel Allan [Donald McLennan] in 1815 in London. He sailed round the Horn, arriving at the Columbia River in June 1816. He certainly stayed with the vessel when it traded down the coast and while his captain surveyed the Columbia River estuary. However, around the time the vessel was to depart to China, the sober and well-liked Mr.

Downie (after visiting a recently arrived American trading vessel commanded by Stephen Reynolds) shot himself with a pistol. According to Ross, Downie was a near relative of the "unfortunate captain of that name who fell so gallantly on Lake Champlain." The motive for his suicide has not been determined.

PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 60-61

Dredge, Thomas (fl. 1852 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson general charges (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1854).

Thomas Dredge worked for the HBC for a brief period.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-2

Drew, Joseph (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

Joseph Drew made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Drinville, Louis (c. 1797 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Jean, Lower Canada - c. 1797Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Fort Nez Percés (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825).

Louis Drinville joined the HBC in 1821 and worked on the Pacific Slopes until 1825 when he transferred to York Factory. A May 10, 1828 contract, which he signed with an "X", shows him at York Factory about to go to Canada to get his wife. They were both to take charge of some cattle.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-4; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtVanAB 2a; HBCCont

Drips, Andrew [variation: Dripps] (1789 - 1860) (American and Irish)

Birth: Ireland - December 1789Death: Kansas City [formerly Westport], Missouri - September 1860*Fur trade employee

AFC Fur trader, Pacific slopes (1830).

Andrew Drips spent forty years in the fur trade, outliving many of his contemporaries. According to family tradition, he was taken from Ireland as an infant to Pennsylvania where he grew up. He came to St. Louis in 1817, enlisted in the Missouri Militia, and in 1819 associated with fur trader Joseph Perkins for a short time. In 1820 he joined the Missouri Fur Company and two years later was a full partner, but upon its dissolution in 1824 rejoined with Lucien Fontenelle, William Henry Vanderburgh, Josiah Pilcher and Moses Carson. After making an arrangement with the American Fur Company, he began trading west of the Divide in 1830. He continued this association with the AFC-Pierre Chouteau & Co. for many years and attended most, if not all of the Rendezvous' up to 1840. While at the 1832 Rendezvous at Pierre's Hole, his wife gave birth and his hat was shot through during the well-known skirmish there. As the era of the fur trade for the mountain men was dying by 1840, Drips went to Kansas City and between 1842-1846 was Indian Agent for the Upper Missouri. Accusations of partiality toward Pierre Chouteau Co./AMF saw him withdrawing as Indian agent and he renewed his association by managing several trading posts. He died at the home of his daughter in 1860 in Kansas City [Missouri].

Andrew Drips had two wives. The first was Margaret (Mary)/Macompemay (?-1846), an Otoe native, whom he married in 1823 in Bellevue [Nebraska]. Their children were Charles (1824-?), Jane (1827-?), Katherine (1832-?) and William (1834-?). After the death of Margaret, he married Louise Geroux (?-?), mixed French and Sioux. Their children were Andrew Jackson (1850-?), Thomas (?-?), Anna (?-?), Julia (?-?) and George (1857-?).

Manuscripts: Drips' Papers are now housed with the Missouri Historical Society, St. Louis, Missouri.

PS: MHS Chouteau; Drips PPS: O. Russell SS: Carter, "Andrew Drips", p. 332-45; Chittenden, p. 392

Driver, Edward (? - 1827) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Westray, Orkney - May 1801 (born to George Draver and Isabel [Seator] Draver)Death: Vancouver Island, Columbia Department - October 1827Maritime employee*HBC Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1826 - 1827).

Seaman Edward Driver was a casualty of the fur trade. Driver (a variation of Drever or Draver) gave his residence as Kirkwall when, on September 16, 1826, he signed on as a seaman with the HBC for what was to be a five-year contract. A teetotaler, Driver sailed around the Horn on the Cadboro. However, on October 11, 1827, on what should have been a normal voyage from the newly established Fort Langley south to Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River, he went ashore on the eastern shores of Vancouver Island, opposite to point Marshall on Texada Island, and was killed. After the Cadboro reached Fort Vancouver, CF John McLoughlin wrote to the Governor and Committee on November 14, 1827 describing most of the incident:

one of the Sailors (Driver) was murdered and a Boy (Peter Calder) wounded by the Indians...It was calm, the vessel lay about a mile [1.6 km] from a small creek, a Boat and five Sailors were sent to it for Water, on their reaching the place Six or Seven Indians came out of the woods and joined our people who imprudently allowed the Indians to come among them and were so little on their Guard that an Indian came behind Driver and Snatched his Gun from him... (FtVanCB 3, fos. 21-21d).

His body was entirely stripped of clothing and mangled. The motive appears to have been robbery.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 4; log of Cadboro 1; FtVanASA 1; YFASA 6-8; YFDS 2b; FtVanCB 3, fo. 21-21d

Duaime, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1811Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1833).

François Duaime entered the service of the HBC in 1830, returning east of the Rockies in 1833.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4b-5a

Dube, Joseph (c. 1798 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Champlain, Lower Canada - c. 1798Death: possibly East of the Rocky MountainsFur trade employee*HBC Mason, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1833).

Joseph Dube signed on with the HBC at Lachine on February 19, 1830 for three years. By the summer of 1830, he was in Red River on his way to the Columbia and, at the end of his contract, returned east in 1833.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanAB 26; YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4b-5a

Dubeau, Louis (c. 1822 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1822Death: possibly West of the RockiesFur trade employee*HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1843); Middleman, New Caledonia (1843 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1846 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Langley (1865 - 1866).

Louis Dubeau joined the HBC in 1841 and split his time between interior posts and Fort Victoria; he retired in 1850. From that point, he may have moved to Cowlitz Prairie, but in 1865 he was back in Victoria where he was hired to work as a labourer for a year at Fort Langley.

Louis Dubeau may have married Isabelle [Elizabeth] Cotnois of Cowlitz Prairie on June 8, 1863. One daughter was recorded as having been born (1876-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-32; FtVicASA 1; OHS Oregonian, June 20, 1863, p. 8; March 28, 1876, p. 2

Dubois, Andre (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Vaudreuil, Lower Canada - c. 1800 (born to Basile Dubois and Genevieve Champo)Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific NorthwestFur trade employee*HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1839); Settler, Willamette (1840 - 1842+).

André Dubois joined the HBC in 1819 and spent his entire career in the New Caledonia area. In February, 1827, he took a wife at Fort Babine and promised to provide for her if and when he departed. In all, he worked twenty-one years as a middleman before retiring to the Willamette as a settler on November 10, 1839. On May 2, 1943, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. In 1849, he was included in the Champoege census and in 1850 was listed as a farmer.

André Dubois had two or more successive wives and two children. He had a wife, "LaBoitrun", in 1826 at Babine. On April 2, 1840, he legitimized his marriage to Marguerite (?-1844), Cree. Their only recorded child was Basile (c.1829-?), a Joseph Crochiere (c.1825-?) being brought in from a previous marriage of Marguerite (and possibly Louis Crochetier). Marguerite died around March 13, 1844. On January 14, 1845, he married Josette Marie Quesnel, (c.1830-?) daughter of Amable Quesnel and Angelique, Chehalis. Their one recorded child was André (c.1849-1850).

PS: HBCA YFDS 1a, 2a, 3a-3b, 4b, 5b-7, 10; FtStJmsLS 1; YFASA 4-9, 11-15, 19; FtStJmsRD 3; FtVanASA 1-6; FtStJmsCB 5; BCA PJ FtBab1; OHS 1849 Census, Champoege; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 2a, 3a SS: Holman, p. 116

See Also: Crochetier, Louis (possible Relative); Quesnel, Amable (Father-in-Law)

Dubois, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1821) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1821).

François Dubois appears to have been at Fort George when the HBC and NWC merged in 1821. As he was likely redundant, he went inland over the Rockies.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 1

Dubois, Jean Baptiste (c. 1808 - 1828) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Cuthbert, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Death: Fort Nez Percés [Washington] - July 1828

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1828).

Jean Baptiste Dubois entered the service of the HBC from the parish of St. Cuthbert in 1825. He was in on the construction of Fort Langley and gave notice to retire from the HBC but drowned in 1828 at Fort Nez Percés.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5, 79; YFDS 2a, 3a; FtVanAB 10 PPS: E. Ermatinger

Dubois, Pierre (Below) [variation: Bilow, Below] (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Cuthbert, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Snake Party (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1832); Middleman and boue, Fort Vancouver general charges (1832 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Colville (1833 - 1834); Boue, Fort Colville (1834 - 1840); Boue, New Caledonia (1840 - 1843); Freeman boue, Fort Colville (1843 - 1845); Settler, Willamette (1845+).

Pierre Dubois joined the HBC in 1825 and may have been a freeman by 1844, when he began using the name Below. He married, and settled shortly thereafter.

Pierre Dubois married Catherine Simipchinó [Spokane] on January 19, 1845.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-25; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFDS 2b-3a, 4b-7 PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 113; CCR 1a, 1b

Dubord (Latourelle), Joseph (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1834).

Joseph Dubord (Latourelle) joined the HBC in 1831 from Berthier as a middleman and was probably related to Pierre Durbord (Latourelle). (The District Statements indicate that they are the same person but clearly they are not.)

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-13; YFDS 4b-5b

See Also: Dubord (Latourelle), Pierre (Relative)

Dubord (Latourelle), Pierre (c. 1811 - 1832) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Death: Port Simpson [Nass] [British Columbia] - June 1832

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1832).

Pierre Dubord (Latourelle) joined the HBC in 1831 from Berthier as a middleman and was probably related to Joseph Durbord (Latourelle). He died at Fort Simpson on June 19, 1832.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4b-5a

See Also: Dubord (Latourelle), Joseph (Relative)

Dubreuille, Jean Baptiste [variation: Dubreuil] (c. 1791 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Anne, Lower Canada - c. 1791

Death: California, United States - 1849

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1813); Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813); NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1821); HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); Member, Snake Party (1825 - 1826); Steersman, Fort Umpqua (1826 - 1828); Trapper, Snake Party (1827 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1836); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1836); U.A. Trapper trading to HBC, South Party (1836 - 1841); HBC Settler, Willamette (1841+).

Jean Baptiste Dubreuille began his career in the fur trade in 1806 and signed on with Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland party in St. Louis around September 18, 1810. After crossing the Great Divide in late summer 1811, and unsuccessfully attempting to canoe down the Snake River, Dubreuille joined the separated Ramsay Crooks group. However, in March, 1812 he left the group, being too exhausted to keep up with it. He and six others (Alexander Carson, Pierre Delaunay, Louis St. Michel, Jean Baptiste Turcotte, Joseph Landrie and André LaChapelle) were picked up by John Reed, who discovered that the small group, despairing that they would ever reach the Columbia, had raided the caches left on the way by Hunt. Dubreuille and others were taken by McKenzie to Astoria where they arrived January 16, 1813. In the winter of 1813-1814 he wintered at Fort George [Astoria] and in 1814 joined the North West Company at the time of the takeover of assets in the Columbia. On April 14, 1814, he returned with the brigade to Fort William/Montreal but most likely returned to Fort George and continued on with the HBC at the time of coalition. On September 1, 1836, he became a freeman but appears to have acted in a supporting role to the HBC, supplying it with furs. In outfit 1841-1842, he became a settler in the Willamette just south of Champoege and the last mention of him was with the 1844 tax records. After he died in the gold fields in 1849, Narcisse Cornoyer was appointed guardian of his children.

Jean Baptiste Dubreuille had one wife and six recorded children. On July 9, 1839, he formalized his marriage to Marguerite Yougoulhta (Yukleta), Chinook (c.1810-?). The Dubreuille children were Michel (c.1835-?), Baptiste (c.1838-?), Sophie (c.1839-?), Isaac (1842-?), François (1844-?), and Thérèse (1846-?). After his death, his widow married Charles Plante at St. Paul in 1851.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; YFASA 1-7, 9, 11-16; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10, 11; FtVan/ASA 1-5; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-5a, 5c, 7; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 217-218; Coues, p. 875

See Also: Plante, Charles (Relative)

Ducette, Charles (fl. 1793) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Alexander Mackenzie's journey to the Pacific (1793).

Charles Ducette joined Alexander Mackenzie at Fort Chepewyan for his May-August 1793 return journey to the Pacific after having been on a previous voyage with the Scottish explorer. He is mentioned only once in the Mackenzie journals.

PPS: HakSP Mackenzie, p. 163n, 257

Duchainais, Rocque [variation: Duchainay, Ducheney, Duchenay, Ducheny] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Death: possibly Oregon State, United States

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Shopkeeper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1852); Labourer, Chinook Store (1853 - 1855); Post master, Chinook Store (1855 - 1860).

Rocque Duchainais joined the HBC in 1841 from Maskinongé and spent most of his career in the sales shop of Fort

Vancouver. He oversaw the HBC's store at Point Chinook during the closing years of the fur regime in Oregon.

Duchainais had one wife and six recorded children. He married Mary Rondeau (1829-?), born to Louis Rondeau and a Marguerite (Concomley's daughter) during the Company brigade to California. The Duchainais children were Judith (c.1844-?), Louis André (1846-?), Joseph (?-1849), an unnamed child (1851-1851), Lucie Agnes (1852-?) and Charlotte Cécile (1860-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-15; YFASA 24-32; YFDS 23; FtVicDS 1; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co. PPS: CCR 1b, 1c SS: Pollard, p. 176

See Also: Rondeau, Louis (Father-in-Law)

Ducharme (Maron), Joseph [variation: Marron] (fl. 1831 - 1852) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Hudson Bay, Rupert's Land

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1835); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1849 - 1852).

Joseph Ducharme (Maron), from the Hudson's Bay area, signed on with the HBC on July 23, 1829 as a middleman. For the next twenty-three years, he worked as both a middleman and bote around the Fort Vancouver area and, in outfit 1846-1847, he was in charge of the thrashing mill there. When he was discharged in 1852, he took out a claim in Clark County.

On April 27, 1845, both he and Thérèse, a native woman of unknown origin, were baptised and married. They sheltered a young girl by the name of Rose (c.1836-1848), who died March 3, 1848.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 11-15, 19-20, 22, 24-32; YFDS 4b-7; FtVanASA 3-9 PPS: CCR 1b

Ducharquette, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Duchouquette, Dechouquette] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Prairie du Chien [Wisconsin]

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); Blacksmith, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813); Blacksmith, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

François Ducharquette joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition, possibly in St. Louis, in March 1811. Later that summer he crossed the Continental Divide into the Snake Country and down the Columbia to Fort Astoria, some time in 1812. He joined the NWC in the fall of 1813 and on May 1, 1814, he went on the express to Fort William. He appears to have returned to the area.

He appears to have married Marguerite Okanogan. Their child was François Ducharquette Jr. (c.1819-c.1862).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107; CCR 1a, 1b

See Also: Deschiquette, Francois (Son)

Duchesne, Benjamin (fl. 1813 - 1816) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Carpenter, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Benjamin Duchesne (under the name Benjamin Perrault a.k.a. Duchesne, from St. Paul) may have first joined the Michillimackinac Co. as early as 1809 to work at Michillimackinac. He joined the NWC in Montreal in 1812 as a carpenter and middleman for four years and spent the 1813-1814 winter in the Columbia District. February 20, 1814, was a bad day for Duchesne. On that morning, having not had any chance to do it before, Duchesne began to mend his stocking when Alexander Ross ordered that he hoist the British flag at the fort. When Duchesne refused, Ross went to his room and got his dirk. Henry reported that Ross:

"went in search of the man, and wounded him deeply on the temple over the left Eye. The poor fellow came into my room with blood streaming from his face, and his shirt torn to atoms, and besmeared with blood..." (ChSoc LVII, p. 682).

He has not been tracked after 1814 but was to be free in Montreal in 1816.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 682

Dudouaire, Felix [variation: Dudoire, Doudouaire] (1816 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: November 19, 1816 (born to St. Denis-sur-Richelieu, Quebec butcher Louis Dudevoir and Marie Françoise Maillet)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1842); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1843 - 1844); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1847 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1853 - 1858); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1858 - 1859).

Felix Treffle Dudouaire was to spend half his life on the coast far away from where he was born. A twenty-four year old Dudouaire joined the HBC in 1840 spending much of his career at Fort Simpson, both at the fort and working out of the fort on the Beaver. While at the fort, he was a tailor by trade and was in charge of a group of men who looked after the clothing and equipment needs of the fort. At Fort Simpson he married Deax of the "Gitandou branch of the Kispalotz tribe" (Large, p. 91) and of the house of Legaic (Bolt, p. 38), a woman who had fled to the protection of the fort to avoid marriage to an older man. Together they had one child, Alfred (1850-?), and, at an unknown date, Deax departed with her son to Victoria where Alfred received some education. This is possibly because Dudouaire beat his wife. Alfred also was educated at Metlakatla under Duncan, even becoming Duncan's personal servant. Felix Dudouaire's fate is unknown for he worked until 1859, and from that date, his accounts appear under outstanding balances, a sure sign of moving on. He sailed into retirement from Fort Simpson on March 7, 1859 and his subsequent movements have not been traced.

An apparently single Deax remained in Victoria while Alfred (1848-?) was most likely in Metlakatla. Alfred returned or came to Victoria, for there, a grown Alfred met Mary (Kate or Catherine) Holmes (a Gitna-khan-geak mixed-descent daughter of a sister of Chief Shakes' and a Captain Holmes of Victoria [Large, p. 91]) and together they returned to Fort Simpson. Remaining in Victoria, Deax joined the Crosby Methodists and later on a visit to Victoria, Alfred and family (his wife's name was now Kate) also joined the Methodists and the family name then became anglicized to "Dudoward", apparently at the instigation of Crosby himself.

The Dudowards, whose children were William, Alice, Flora, Ernest, Fred, Rufus and Charlie (Large, p. 92), owned a store in Port Simpson and did business up and down the coast from their schooner "Georgina" (Seguin, p. 45). Alfred later became a spokesman for Tsimshian land rights of the area, himself ascending to the leadership of the Gitands tribe because of his lineage.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-32; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVicASA 1-6; FtSimp[N]PJ 7-8; BCA BCCR-StAndC SS: Large, The Skeena, p. 91-93; Bolt, p. 39; Seguin, p. 45; Port Simpson descendant, Inez Helin correspondence, 1994-95

Dufort, Charles [variation: Duford] (fl. 1822 - 1825) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Anne, Lower Canada

Freeman

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Snake Party (1824 - 1826).

Charles Dufort joined the HBC from St. Anne likely in or before 1821. Between 1821-1823 he worked in the Northern Department and at Bow River, and came to the Columbia, possibly in 1823. In the fall of 1824, as part of a party of fifty-eight trappers, he left Flathead Post for the Snake country with one gun, four horses and six traps. On May 24, 1825, while he was with the expedition, he and eleven others deserted to the American camp, taking his furs with him. Needless to say, as he had deserted without paying his debt, he was not paid, and so continued the rest of his career (possibly as a freeman).

PS: HBCA YFASA 2-5; SnkCoPJ 2, 3; FtVanAB 2a

Dufresne, Andre [standard: André] [variation: Dufrene] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Middleman, Willamette Post (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (winter 1814); Middleman, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813 - October 13, 1813).

André Dufresne joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition in Lachine around July 6, 1810. He crossed the Continental Divide in late summer 1811 and arrived at Fort Astoria January 18, 1812. He spent the winter of 1813-1814 at the Willamette post and chose not to join the NWC which had taken over the PFC. On April 4, 1814, with the intention of suing the PFC for wages, he joined the ten-canoe brigade heading for Montreal.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107; Coues, p. 875; McDougal, p. 68

Duhamel, Jean Baptiste (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Contrecoeur, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1832 - 1836).

Jean Baptiste Duhamel joined the HBC from Contrecoeur in 1832 and spent three years in the New Caledonia area. On January 8, 1836, he further contracted to be a middleman and winterer elsewhere.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c; HBCCont

Duhamel, Pierre [variation: Duenn] (fl. 1821 - 1830) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Ours, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1821 - 1823); Middleman, New Caledonia (1829 - 1830).

Pierre Duhamel signed on with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on January 4, 1820 to work for three years as a wintering middleman in the Northwest. He probably headed straight for the Pacific slopes and is on record as having transferred to the HBC in 1821. By 1823, he had returned to Canada but reappeared on the Pacific slopes in 1829-1830 for one outfit.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1-2; FtGeo[Ast] AB 10; FtAlexAB 1

Dumais, Augustin (? - 1832) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Snake or Salmon River, Pacific Northwest - 1832

Freeman

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1828 - 1829); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1829 - 1832).

Augustin Dumais worked for the HBC starting in 1828, spending half a year at Fort Colville that outfit. For the next three years, he worked in the Snake Country until he drowned in February 1832.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 8-9, 11-12; YFDS 3a-4b; FtVanASA 2

Dumet, Moysse [variation: Moise] (fl. 1844 - 1855) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Polycarpe, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1845 - 1847); Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Colville (1849 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Colville (1853 - 1855).

Moysse Dumet joined the HBC from St. Polycarpe in 1844 on a three-year contract. In 1847 he returned to Canada, then east of the Rockies, but returned to work in the Columbia where he worked off and on until 1855.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-26, 28-32; YFDS 23; FtVicDS 1; FtVanASA 9-12

Dumond (Guerette), Alexander (1815 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Green Bay [Wisconsin]

Death: probably Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1838); Middleman, Fort Colville (1838 - 1841); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1838); Blacksmith, Fort Colville (1838 - 1841); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1841 - 1842); Trapper, Flathead District (1842 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1844).

Alexander Dumond, a person of mixed descent born in Green Bay, Wisconsin, was hired on within the area on January 10, 1838 (he claimed he came to Oregon in 1836) and worked for the HBC as a middleman, blacksmith and trapper for six years before becoming a freeman in 1843 and, later, a settler. In 1852 he took out a claim in Marion county, then he and his family moved south to the Douglas County area about six miles [9.7 km] from Canyonville. In the Roseburg area many of his descendants fill the church records. He came to visit or trade in St. Louis and Oregon City, for his daughters were registered there.

Alexander Dumond/Dumont had one wife and several children. He married Susette (Josephine Finlay) in 1841. His recorded children were Marguerite (1837-?), Alexandre (1839-?), André (1849-?), Marie (1851-?), Genevieve (1851-?), François (1856-?) Emilie (1858-?) and Eleanore (1861-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-7; YFDS 8; YFASA 17, 19-20, 23; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1a, 3a, 5a
See Also: Finlay, Jacques Raphael (possible Father-in-Law)

Dunbar, Robert (fl. 1845 - 1848) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1846 - 1847); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1848).

Robert Dunbar, who shipped on with the HBC in London on September 29, 1845, sailed to the coast on the Columbia but was taken off it at Fort Vancouver to be put under the care of Dr. Forbes Barclay. When he recovered, he was placed on the coastal schooner Cadboro on June 3, 1846, but was ill for several weeks during the fall. In November, he burned himself while firing the sixth gun at Fort George, "by the explosion of the Cartridge, owing to the chamber of the gun not being properly sponged out" (log of Cadboro 6, fo. 11). In the following month, he was again sick and off duty for a week. At about three p.m. on January 31, 1847, while the Cadboro was at San Francisco, Dunbar was escorted back on board by an officer of the United States sloop of war, Warren, as Dunbar had been so insolent to the people of the American ship. The US officer would have punished Dunbar, but somehow the sailor managed to convince the officer that the HBC seaman was a second officer of the Cadboro (log of Cadboro 6, fo. 26d). After some further sickness, on November 4, 1847 at Fort Victoria he rejoined the Columbia and arrived back in London on May 22, 1848. He was an accident waiting to happen.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 9; YFASA 26-27; YFDS 17; log of Cadboro 5, 6

Duncan, Alexander (fl. 1830 - 1848) (British: Scottish)

Birth: in or near Carronshore, Sterling, Scotland (born to Alexander Duncan and Mrs. Duncan)Death: possibly Michigan, United States*Maritime officer

HBC Seaman, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1825); Seaman, William & Ann (brig) (1825 - 1826); Boatswain, William & Ann (brig) (1825); 2nd mate, William & Ann (brig) (1826 - 1828); 2nd mate, Prince of Wales (ship) (1828 - 1829); 1st mate, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Captain, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1832); 1st mate, Ganymede (barque) (1833); Captain, Vancouver (schooner) (1834); Passenger to London, Dryad (brig) (1835 - 1836); Captain, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Captain, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838); Captain, Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1843); Captain, Beaver (steamer) (1843 - 1844); Captain, Columbia (barque) (1844 - 1848).

Alexander Duncan, unlike other English sea-captains working in the service of the HBC, was a commander who, throughout his career, drew praise for his work. Duncan signed on with the HBC in 1824 as a seaman and from February 26, 1825 rose quickly through the ranks. While in the Columbia he learned some Chinook and returned to England to improve his navigation and other skills. He was reengaged by the HBC in London and sailed back to the Columbia on the William & Ann with full expectation of taking up the position of first officer and clerk of the Cadboro upon his arrival. However, upon his arrival, because he was offered only the second officer's position, he sailed back to England and spent 1828 and 1829 on the Moose Factory run. He married in 1829, but long voyages, which sometimes returned to London, were to limit contact with his wife for the next nineteen years. In 1830 he returned to the Northwest Coast on the Dryad as first officer and soon became its captain. On March 3, 1834, he was master of the schooner Vancouver when it was wrecked on Point Rose [Queen Charlotte Islands]. After being exonerated from all blame, the following year he was appointed master of the Cadboro. He served on a variety of ships servicing the coast, Hawaii and England and retired in 1848. In 1849, as his wife had grown weary of the long separations and, preferring the family life, Duncan moved with his wife and family to a farm in New York and later Oakland Co., Michigan (Beattie & Buss, p. 69).

Alexander Duncan had one wife and three children. On March 15, 1829, he married Ann Simpson in Larbert, Stirling. Their children were Ann (1837-?), Margaret (1839-?) and John Alexander (1846-?)

Six undelivered letters, five from a frustrated wife in Kincardine [Scotland] and one from a friend at Moose Factory, now rest at the HBCA.

PS: HBCA Portledge Books, C.3/13, fo. 30; HBCCont; FtVanASA 2-4, 6-8; log of Prince of Wales I 8; YFDS 4a-4b, 5b-6, 10-11, 18; YFASA 11-15, 17, 19-20, 24, 26-27; ShMiscPap 11, 14; log of Columbia 6, 7; PortB 1; FtVanCB 6, 8-9, 11, 17; HBCABio; MiscI 5; HBCA C.7/32, fos. 65-74 PPS: HBRS IV, p. 235, 318, [biography] p. 343 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 58-69
See Also: Simpson, James (Relative)

Duncan, John (fl. 1845 - 1850) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly in or near Carron, Ross, ScotlandMaritime employee*HBC Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1847); Carpenter, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1847 - 1850).

John Duncan shipped with the HBC in London on September 29, 1845 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. Soon after his arrival in May 1846 he got involved in a fight with Henry Winchcomb and got kicked in the face by John Watkins, disfiguring him. He apparently recuperated in short order and continued on the Columbia until October 29, 1847 when he joined the Mary Dare and may have stayed in the area after 1850.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 9; YFASA 26-32; YFDS 18

Duncan, Peter (c. 1792 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Carronshore, Sterling, Scotland - c. 1792

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Carpenter, Vancouver (schooner) (1831 - 1833); 2nd mate, Vancouver (schooner) (1831 - 1833); Carpenter, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1835); Carpenter, Lama (brig) (1835 - 1837); Carpenter, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1839); 2nd mate, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1839); Carpenter, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840).

Peter Duncan joined the HBC on November 20, 1830 in London and sailed to the Northwest Coast where he spent much of the next nine years. Apart from a break in which he made a short return trip to Hudson Bay, he worked on coastal shipping before being discharged in London on April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 11-13, 15, 19; YFDS 4b-5b, 6-7, 10; ShMiscPap 7, 14; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Nereide 2

Dunn, A. [variation: Dun] (fl. 1825 - 1827) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Dryad (brig) (1825 - 1826); Captain, Dryad (brig) (1826 - 1827).

A. Dunn, a “sober, careful and attentive to his Duty” (FtVanCB 2, fo. 27) ship’s officer was the antithesis of his very alcoholic captain, James Davidson, who commanded the brig Dryad (Simpson, p. 119). As first mate of the 203 ton vessel, Dunn left London some time in 1825 shortly after the HBC chartered it for a supply run to Fort Vancouver. In 1826, he left the Columbia on September 30th with 230 bales and puncheons (roughly hewn timber). On October 7th, 1826, while sailing south, Davidson became ill from dropsy and fever. As a result, the ship sailed to Valparaiso, Chile arriving December 17. It was too late for Davidson, and he died there two days later. Dunn took over as acting captain and arrived back in the British Isles some time in 1827.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 2; HBCA Captain James Davidson search file PPS: G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 119

Dunn, John Thompson (fl. 1832 - 1838) (British: English)

Birth: possibly in or near Great Parndon, Essex, England

Death: Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Storeman, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1832); Seaman or Trader, Dryad (brig) (1832 - 1834); Post master (high wage), Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1835); Post master, Fort Vancouver general charges [Fort George, Astoria] (1835 - 1836); Trader, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); Trader, Nereide (barque) (1837); Post master, Fort McLoughlin (1837 - 1838); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838); Post master, Columbia Department general charges (1838 - 1839).

After studying at the naval academy of Greenwich, England, John Thompson Dunn of Great Parndon, Essex, joined the HBC on November 20, 1830 as an apprentice on the Ganymede. He rose through the ranks to become a post master and had such diverse duties as trading from the decks to ships to salting salmon and acting as post master. While he was on the coast, he married and began to raise a family. Induced by his father to return home, he retired and left Fort Vancouver (apparently alone) on the Columbia [Charles Humphreys] on November 1, 1838, sailing to the Hawaiian Islands, around Cape Horn and finally to the London docks, where he arrived on May 21, 1839. He tried to re-enlist but the salary was too low so he declined the offer of the HBC. In 1845 he published his experience which displeased the HBC for, by doing so, he had apparently violated the company rule of surrendering all journal’s to the company. In the book, he took a decidedly pro-British stand in the Oregon territory issue. According to family tradition, he wandered around and finally ended up in Hawaii, where he died and is buried.

John Dunn had one wife, an unnamed Russian or mixed descent woman, whom he married (possibly at Fort Simpson or in Alaska) and had two daughters, one unnamed (?-c.1837) and Elizabeth (c.1833-?).

Publications: Dunn, John Thompson, The History of the Oregon Territory, London, 1845; ibid, The Oregon Territory and the British North American Fur Trade, G. B. Zieber Co., Philadelphia, 1845.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 11, 13-17, 19; YFDS 4b-7, 9; FtVanCB 11; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Dryad 1; ShMiscPap 14; HBCA John Thompson Dunn search file; Van-A Pamphlet SS: Lewis and Dryden, p. 14; J. Dunn, The Oregon Territory
See Also: Cotsford, Thomas Jonathan (Son-in-Law)

Dunord, Antoine (fl. 1804 - 1811) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Athabasca Pass (1810 - 1811) (with David Thompson).

Antoine Dunord, a NWC voyageur at Fort des Prairies in 1804, appears to be the Du Nord of the Thompson journals. A voyageur with a quick temper, he was found by Thompson at Boggy Hall on the Saskatchewan in 1810 and went with Thompson to the Athabasca Pass area. That year, on December 29, Dunord was given a large load for his dog and sled, but, on January 8, 1811, on the way up to the Pass, Dunord beat his dog senseless, throwing aside both his broken sled and dog. Thompson, who felt that Dunord was a "poor spiritless wretch" (Columbia, p. 135-36), allowed him to continue. By January 15, Dunord did not want to continue and others had to carry his provisions; however, he seemed to change his mind three days later when, on being sent out to hunt for meat, he shot two moose. Nonetheless, on January 23, 1811, a dispirited Dunord, whom Thompson felt was as useless as an old woman, gave notice that he, and his fellow Fort des Prairies men, were returning to Fort des Prairies. Three days later, Dunord deserted and has not been traced after that.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Belyea, p. 132, 135-38; 140-41 SS: Coues, p. 572-73

Dupere (fils), Joseph (c. 1818 - 1858) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1818 (born to Joseph Dupere and Marie Anne Dupille)

Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - June 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1843); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1843 - 1844); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1846).

Joseph Dupere joined the HBC on April 13, 1840 in Montreal and spent the majority of his time at Fort Vancouver. In 1843 he was involved in the beating of Daniel Harvey, future son-in-law of Chief Factor McLoughlin. He retired, probably into the St. Louis, Oregon area, around 1846 and in 1849 he appeared on the Champoege Census. His name appeared on the Company accounts until 1851 but showed no further transactions. On June 29, 1858 Dupere shot and killed William Martindale in a dispute at Martindale's house at Chinook. Dupere was immediately arrested, shackled and sent upriver to Vancouver on a steamer in care of John Douglas. When the steamer was just below the mouth of the Willamette, Dupere jumped overboard but was dragged under the water by his heavy shackles, rising to the surface only once before he drowned.

Joseph Dupere appears to have married three times. He married Susanne Chinook (c.1824-1844) at Oregon City on March 30, 1842; Louisa Cowlitz/Nisqually (c.1822-?) at Vancouver on March 26, 1845 and Marianne Walla Walla (?-?) at St. Louis on January 17, 1848.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 20, 24-28; YFDS 15-16; FtVanCB 30; OHS 1849 Census, Champoege PPS: CCR 1b, 3a, 4a; OHS Oregonian, July 10, 1858, p. 2

Duperron, Pierre (fl. 1844 - 1847) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Polycarpe, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1845 - 1847).

Pierre Duperron joined the HBC in 1844 from St. Polycarpe and in 1847 returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-26

Duplante, Belonie [variation: Belone] (? - 1823) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in Rigaud, Lower Canada

Death: Fort George, New Caledonia – summer of 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1823).

Belonie Duplant joined the NWC [Mctavish and McGillivray] on December 29, 1819 in Montreal, originally for three years. At the time of coalition, he transferred to the HBC. It has not been determined where he worked between 1819-1823, but it was likely in the New Caledonia area. By the summer of 1823, while he was working at Fort George [New Caledonia], Duplante and fellow HBC servant, Joseph Bagnoit, were left in charge of the fort while James Murray Yale went off to the posts at Fraser Lake and Stuart Lake [Fort St. James] about two hundred miles [321.9 km] distant and, according to Simpson, "on some frivolous pretext" (HBRS III, p. 107). While he was gone a former lover of Yale's woman and his friend came to the fort. When Duplante and Joseph Bagnoit threatened to tell Yale of the re-ignited love affair, the two natives murdered both of them to keep them quiet. After killing Duplante and Bagnoit, the natives ransacked the store and fled with Yale's woman, leaving the two former servants dead in their beds. In the following spring, because of the murders, and because the perpetrators had not been caught, the fort was abandoned.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA YFASA 2; YFDS 1a PPS: HBRS III, p. 107; HBRS X, p. 24

See Also: Bagnoit, Joseph

Dupont, Nicholas [variation: Dupond] (fl. 1823 - 1828) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Member, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Member, South Party (1826 - 1827); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1827 - 1828).

Nicholas Dupont [Dupond] joined the HBC in 1821 and first served in Athabasca. While in the Columbia in the fall of 1824, he is on record as leaving Flathead Post for the Snake Country with one gun, two horses and four traps. In the following spring, on March 21, 1825, while exploring on foot in the vicinity of the Lemhi River, Dupond, William Kittson, Baptiste Roy and Joseph Pin were stalked by a party of Blackfoot Indians. The small group had to run three miles [4.8 km] back to their base camp and a further four miles [6.4 km] with saddles in hand to catch up to a party which had gone out with the horses. In 1826, Dupond was too unwell to accompany McLeod on a southern expedition and on April 25, 1828, was back in Montreal. At the signing, George Simpson promised him the "choice of his Wintering post" (HBCCont, fo. 303).

PS: HBCA YFDS 1a; YFASA 3-6, 8; HBCCont, A.32/26, fo. 302, 303; SnkCoPJ 2, 3; FtVanCB 1

Dupre, Nazaire [standard: Duprè] (c. 1804 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1806 (possibly born to François Dupre)

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - May 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Colville (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Colville (1837 - 1842); Seedsman, Fort Colville (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Colville (1843 - 1844); Seedsman, Fort Colville (1844 - 1847); Settler, Willamette (1846 - 1847).

Nazaire Dupre joined the HBC in 1831 from Berthier and spent sixteen years in the fur trade. He worked much of his career at Fort Colville before he retired on September 30, 1846, to become a farmer in the Willamette. (Nazaire Dupre may have been the son of old François Dupre (1768-1858) who died at St. Paul, "aged about ninety", on December 13, 1858, but there is no proof of any relationship) (CCR 1, A-24). Nazaire died May 29, 1849 in the St. Louis parish.

Nazaire Dupre had one wife and four children. He married Catherine Lafantaisie, daughter of Jacques Lafantaisie and Susanne Okanogan about 1843. The recorded Duprè children were Charles (1839-?), Angelique (?-m. 1857-?), Nazaire, Jr. (c.1844-1849) and Genevieve (1847-1848). After Nazaire's death, his widow Catherine married David Mongraine.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-15, 19-20, 24-26; YFDS 4b-5b, 6-7, 13, 17; FtVanASA 3-8; BCA PJ FtBab 1 PPS: CCR 1a, 2b, 3a

See Also: Lafontasie, Jacques (possible Father-in-Law); Mongrain, David (Relative)

Dupuid, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (winter 1813 - 1814).

A François Dupuis joined Alexander McKenzie to work at Grand Portage in 1802 and a François Dupuis also signed on at Rainy Lake in 1803. For certain, this François Dupuis joined the NWC in 1812 probably at Bas de la Riviere [on Winnipeg River near Lake Winnipeg] on a two year contract and in the winter of 1813-1814, found himself at Flathead Fort. Probably a member of the cross-country brigade, he was to be free in Montreal in 1814.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10

Dupuis, Bernardin [variation: Dupuy] (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly in or near St. Margarite or Blairfindie, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838).

Bernardin Duputy joined the HBC in 1834. He stayed for one contract, went over the mountains in 1837, and picked up his wages in Montreal in outfit 1837-1838.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-17; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4

See Also: Dupuy, Nicholas (possible Brother)

Dupuis, Jean Baptiste (c. 1818 - 1874) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1818

Death: Saanich, Colony of Vancouver Island - December 1874

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1847); Dairyman, Fort Victoria (1847 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Shepherd (1856 - 1857).

Jean Baptiste Dupuis joined the HBC in 1839 from Riviere Du Loup, and worked at mainly two forts over the next thirteen years. He retired in the Victoria area in 1852 and carried on periodically with the HBC in doing such things as working on the construction of Fort Shepherd, which was the replacement for Fort Colvile. Dupuis raised a family in Victoria and eventually moved into the Saanich area, the home turf of one wife. He likely did not buy land but had a team of oxen and ploughed for farmers. While he was hand logging on the beach, he had a heart attack and died at the end of December, 1874. He was buried, January 1, 1875, and was the first person to be buried at the Church of the Assumption, Saanich.

Jean Baptiste Dupuis' family records are somewhat confusing. They show him having as many as four successive wives and five boys. His first recorded wife was Emilie (1833-?), Saanich, with whom he had Alexandre (1851-1852), Narcisse (c.1853-1859) and Louis (?-bap.1855-?). Emilie must have died in the late 1850s, for, on February 8, 1859, he married Marie (?-?), Saanich. She may also have died (or also been called Julie) for a Julie, the wife of Jean Baptiste, died on November 21, 1859. A later wife appears to have been native Cecile (?-?) who was the mother of their child Maxime (?-bap.1870-?). Another son from one of the mothers was Charles (?-1866).

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-31; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVicASA 2-4; BCA BCCR StAndC SS: Virgin, p. 43

Dupuis, Leon (c. 1798 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly in or near St. Constant, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1822 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826).

Leon Dupuis joined the fur trade around 1816 from St. Constant and worked for the HBC in the Columbia District between 1822-1826. Around 1826 he was transferred to York Factory. In 1830 he signed a contract in York Factory which included a notice of his intention to leave the service.

PS: HBCA YFASA 2-5; FtVanAB 2a; HBCCont

Dupuis, Louis (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1842); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1842); Woodcutter, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1844).

Louis Dupuis joined the HBC in 1838 from Riviere du Loup. Around 1844, he returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 23; FtVanASA 6-7

Dupuy, Nicholas [variation: Nicolas Dupuis] (c. 1813 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Margarite or Blairfindie, Lower Canada - c. 1813

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1834 - 1835); Steersman, Snake Party (1835 - 1837); Middleman, Columbia Department (1837 - 1838).

Nicolas Dupuy, perhaps a brother of Bernardin Dupuis, also joined the HBC in 1834. Likewise, he may have decided to return home after his first contract as he is recorded as going over the Rockies in March of 1837. He picked up his wages in Montreal in outfit 1837-1838.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-17, 19; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4

See Also: Dupuis, Bernardin (possible Brother)

Duquette, Antoine (c. 1815 - c. 1850s) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1815

Death: possibly Fort Colville, Oregon Territory - c. 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1835 - 1836); Middleman, New Caledonia (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Colville (1837 - 1845); Middleman and bouite, Fort Colville (1845 - 1847); Bouite, Fort Colville (1847 - 1851).

Antoine Duquette joined the HBC in 1835 from Sault St. Louis and appears to have spent his career at Fort Colville. In 1841 he deserted but obviously had a change of heart and returned to work in the fur trade. He died sometime in the 1850s.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15, 19-21, 24-32; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-9; FtVicASA 9-12

During, Johannes (fl. 1857 - 1858) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1857 - 1858).

Johannes During joined the HBC in 1857 and worked for one outfit in New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5-7

Durval, Denis (c. 1820 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1820

Death: possibly Oregon Territory, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Snake Party (1841 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1844 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1847 - 1849).

Denis Durval entered the service of the HBC from Sorel in 1840. He began his career as a goer and comer with the Snake Party. When he retired in 1849, most likely before June 1, he remained in the area.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12; YFASA 20, 24-29

Dusseau, Joseph [variation: Dussault] (1825 - 1905) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - January 1825 (born to Nicholas Dussaux)

Death: at his Chimney Creek Ranch [B.C.] - November 1905

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1853); Middleman, Thompson River (1853 - 1856); Middleman and labourer, Thompson River (1859 - 1863); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1863 - 1864).

Joseph Dusseau joined the HBC in 1849. After reaching the Pacific slopes, he spent his entire career as a middleman/labourer on the Pacific slopes, largely, from 1853, at Thompson River/Fort Kamloops. He worked until 1856, and appeared to rejoin the HBC in 1859, eventually retiring from the service on January 15, 1864. When this "honest and faithful servant" (FtKamloops, Nov. 4, 1860) wasn't carrying mail between Alexandria and Kamloops, his duties included everything from the cutting of fence logs to the thrashing of grain. In the 1860s he was farming at Dog Creek and beginning to raise a large family. In 1884 Dusseau pre-empted 320 acres [129.5 ha] along the Fraser River six miles [9.7 km] below the mouth of Chimney Creek, a ranch on which he lived until his death.

Joseph Dusseau had one or more wives, and eleven children. On November 17, 1869, he formalized his marriage to Aline/Hellen/Helene (c.1843-1944), Shuswap, daughter of N Si-Ken of Canoe Creek at St. Paul's Church, Dog Creek. His children were David (1861-?), Angelica/Angelique (1867-?), Joseph (1870-1938), Rosalie/Rosa (1872-?), Louis (1875-?), Ellen (1878-?), Peter (1880-?), Julia (1882-1923), Felix (1886-1925) and Gertrude (1890-1964). Ellen Dusseau died on January 14, 1944 (1941?) at Squaw Lake, Cariboo, where she had lived since 1914.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-4, 7-11; FtAlexPJ 9; KamA FtKamloops; BCA Alexandria; StJosMiss; BCGR-Marriage; BCVS-RBDM; Marriage Certificate; AshM Ashcroft Journal, November 19, 1905; Van-PL 1901 Canada Census, District 5, Yale and Cariboo, Sub District A SS: Skelton, p. 20, 171-72; Dusseau descendant

Dutnall, George (c. 1830 - 1914) (British: English)

Birth: Sevenoaks, Kent, England (born to Abraham Dutnall and Charlotte Price)

Death: St. Joseph's Hospital, Victoria, British Columbia - December 1914

Maritime employee

HBC Labourer, Cowlitz (barque) (1849 - 1850); Passenger, Cowlitz (barque) (1849 - 1850); Stoker and Engineer's Servant, Beaver (steamer) (1850 - 1852); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1852 - 1854).

Before George Dutnall came to Vancouver Island on the Cowlitz as a HBC emigrant labourer, he worked on the estate of the Baring Bros., well-known bankers, where he was a farm hand and a game keeper. Brother John, who had been hired by the HBC as a farm bailiff, convinced George to accompany him and they both arrived in Victoria in March 1850. After working three months doing a variety of farm tasks including lassoing wild horses around Victoria, he joined the steamer Beaver visiting various coastal ports for the next four years as a stoker. From that point on, his work was land-based; he worked for a year with his brother and, in 1857, purchased sixty-five acres [26.3 ha] in the Esquimalt District. George subsequently worked in logging camps, sawmills, mines, and even pursued gold in the Caribou in 1861, always returning to his farm at Albert Head, Metchosin, where he raised a family and lived out the rest of his life.

George Dutnall's marriage records have not been traced but he had two daughters, one of whom was Sarah Ann (c.1862-?). His wife had died by 1881 and one unnamed daughter had died by 1909.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 5; YFASA 29-32; log of Beaver 1; FtVicASA 1-3; BCA AbstLnd; Mallandaine, p. 11; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver district, Esquimalt & Metchosin subdistrict PPS: Van-PL Colonist, Mar. 28, 1909, p. 2, Dec. 11, 1914, p. 7

Dutton, James (fl. 1840 - 1843) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1843).

James Dutton shipped with the HBC in London on August 24, 1840 and made a return voyage to the coast on the Cowlitz. He arrived back in London on May 8, 1843.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1

Duvall, William (fl. 1839 - 1840) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Liverpool, England

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1840).

William Duvall joined the HBC in London on September 17, 1839 for for what was to be a five-year contract. His career with the Company was very short, however, for, after sailing to Fort Vancouver and then to Honolulu on the barque Columbia, he was discharged at Honolulu for undisclosed reasons on June 26, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMisPap 14; YFASA 20; log of Columbia 4; FtVanASA 6

Dyke, Abraham (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849).

Abraham Dyke joined the HBC in London on September 6, 1849 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. After reaching the coast, he, with eight other members of the vessel, deserted on May 6, 1849 for the gold fields of California.

The gold fever must have been strong, as the crew had unsuccessfully asked for a discharge some days before.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; P. S. Ogden's May 16, 1849 Fort Vancouver letter to Archibald Barclay, Correspondence, A.11/70, [deserted to join American parties] fos. 368-69; YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1

Eagrall, George (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

George Eagrall made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Eales, William (fl. 1830 - 1838) (British: English)

Birth: probably Plymouth, EnglandDeath: probably EnglandMaritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); 1st mate, Vancouver (schooner) (1830 - 1832); 1st mate, Lama (brig) (1832 - 1833); 1st mate, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834); Captain, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

William Eales joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 as an officer of the Isabella, a vessel which came to grief at the mouth of the Columbia. No crew were lost, much of the cargo was saved and Eales then joined two coastal vessels.

However, as he refused to accept command of another coastal vessel, the Cadboro, Eales returned to England on the Ganymede in 1834 (FtVanCB 11, fo. 37d). Later that year, as ships had been detained in Hudson Bay during the winter of 1833-1834, Eales sailed on the Ganymede to Moose Factory and Ungava Bay. In December 1834, Eales was appointed commander of the Ganymede on her voyage to the Columbia and back in 1836-1837. In 1837, he sailed to Ungava Bay as supercargo on the HBC chartered Aurora. After delivering the goods in September, he returned to England from St. John's, Newfoundland, as a passenger on the Avalon. This was his final voyage for he retired from the HBC and took up residence in Mile End, Middlesex [London]. In 1838 he was last seen contemplating employment with the Clarence Railway Company (HBRS IV, p. 344).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella 1; ShMiscPap 7, 14; FtVanASA 2-3; YFDS 4b-5b, 6-7; YFASA 11-13, 15-16; FtVanCB 11, fo. 37d PPS: HBRS IV, [bio] p. 344

Ebbert, George Wood [variation: Ebberts, Ebbets] (1810 - 1890) (American)

Birth: Augusta, Kentucky, United States - June 1810Death: Hillsboro, Oregon, United States - October 1890Free trader*SJ & S Trapper, Pacific slopes (Spring 1829).

Also known as "Squire" Ebbert, George Wood Ebbert was a mountain man who ended up settling in the Willamette Valley. Early on Ebbert was apprenticed to a machinist; however, he broke contract three months shy of his seven years making his way to St. Louis, the result being his widowed mother had to pay for his forfeiture. In St. Louis he joined Smith, Jack & Sublette Company, and headed out in 1829 to the Rockies with William Sublette and fifty or so other men, including Robert Newell and Joseph L. Meek, who were to remain lifelong friends. During the winter of 1838-1839 he worked as a blacksmith for the Henry H. Spalding at the Lapwai mission; as well, he married a Nez Perces woman. The following year with the beginnings of a family, he headed for the Willamette Valley where he staked a claim, trapped, farmed and did blacksmith work. There he was joined by friends Newell, Meek and Caleb Wilkins. Selling his squatters rights to André Longtain for one hundred bushels [36.4 hl] of wheat, he went into partnership with Caleb Wilkins a few miles north of present day Hillsboro. He became politically active, being in on the formation of the Provisional Government as well as becoming a constable. In 1848 he accompanied Meek to Washington to obtain territorial status for Oregon.

George Ebbert's recorded wife was Fanny (?-?) and together they had three children.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 28, 31; PPS: Russell, Journal of a Trapper, 39, 162; Drury, The Diaries and Letters, p. 23; SS: Holman, "A Brief History," p. 114; Morgan, Jedediah Smith...303, 429-30; Tobie, Joseph L. Meek, 347, 350, 361; http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/George_W._Ebbert
See Also: Newell, Robert; Meek, Joseph LaFayette

Ebony (fl. 1844 - 1859) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian IslandsFur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1845); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1845 - 1846); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1846); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1846 - 1849); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Stoker, Otter (steamer) (1858); Woodcutter, Craigflower Farm (1859).

Ebony joined the HBC in 1844 and served on several company ships as a seaman. Like most, he did a variety of jobs. For example on November 23, 1849, he was sent ashore from the Cadboro for three days at Fort Nisqually to make candles. He appeared to do stop work in 1851 and join the colonial militia, the Voltigeurs. In June 1858, after the Voltigeurs were disbanded, he worked as a stoker on the steamer Otter and was in the Victoria area cutting wood in 1859.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; logs of Vancouver [2] 2; Columbia [2] 9; Cadboro 6; Otter 1; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1; PSACAB 38

Eddy, Thomas (fl. 1825) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of AmericaFree trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

Thomas Eddy appeared on the records as acquiring several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. Eddy probably attended other Rendezvous' as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains.

PS: MHS Ashley 1

Edgar, Magnus (c. 1826 - 1894) (British: Shetlander)

Birth: Tingwall, Shetland Islands, United Kingdom - c. October 1826 (born to George and Barbara E. Edgar)

Death: Gabriola Island, British Columbia - January 1894

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Victoria general charges (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Magnus Edgar joined the HBC in 1851. In late June 1851, the "quiet, decent, straight-forward man" (Bate, p. 6) left Stromness aboard the Moose Factory bound Prince Albert [Robert Royal] but on August 5, in Hudson's Strait, Edgar was one of fourteen passengers to transfer to the York Factory bound Prince of Wales. About a week later, he arrived at York Factory on August 13, 1851. In the summer of 1852, he made his way to the West coast, passing through Norway House on July 31. He appears to have left the HBC in 1853, after working for one outfit, and settled on Gabriola Island. When he was in the area, he worked in the Nanaimo coal mines as weighman at Park Head mine for a number of years and from about 1874 was a farmer on Gabriola Island where he had "a splendid piece of property" (Nanaimo Free Press, Jan. 4, 1894, p. 4) and where the family lived out their lives. Edgar, who was also a school trustee, returned once to the Shetland Islands around 1890 where he likely met his third wife. He died on Gabriola Island on January 4, 1894 at the age of sixty-seven.

The family of Magnus Edgar is unclear as he appears to have had several successive wives and several children. One wife, Susan Moody, may have been a Kitka'ka or Kitasu native, their child being George (c.1854-1931), born at Fort Simpson. Another wife was Ann (c.1844-1882) who was born in British Columbia apparently of native origin. Their recorded children were John (1864-1885), Mark (1866-1928), Magnus (1869-?), Ann (1869-?), William (1871-?), Catherine (1873-1874), Jane (1876-1894), Margaret (1878-), and Agnes (1880-1897). Ann died, and on October 8, 1891, he married the second time to Ann Swanson of the Shetland Islands. She may have brought some children into the marriage for at his death in 1894, he left a widow, one girl and four boys.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 2; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1; HBCA Magnus Edgar search file; Van-PL 1881 Census, Vancouver District, Nanaimo sub district; BCA Nanaimo Free Press: October 28, 1882, July 10, 1885, October 10, 1891, p. 1, January 4, 1894, p. 4, July 21, 1894, p. 1, September 27, 1897, p. 3; BCDVS-RBDM; BCCR: EbMCNan SS: Bate, p. 6

Edrick, Emanuel (? - 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Death: possibly Fort George [Astoria], Oregon Territory - September 1816

Fur trade employee

NWC Cook, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

Emanuel Edrick signed on with the schooner Columbia on July 19, 1815 as cook and was paid off seven months later on February 29, 1816 at which point he entered the Portuguese service (NWCAB 1, p. 20). The record is not clear, for Corney wrote that later in the fall on September 3, 1816, when the crew of the Columbia were living in tents at Fort Astoria, the cook of the vessel died "after four months of illness" (Barry, "Peter Corney's Voyages," p. 373). If Edrick had returned to the Columbia as cook, he would have died at that date.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1 PPS: Barry, "Peter Corney's", p. 355-58

Edwards, Edward [1] (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

Edward Edwards may have made one return voyage to the Coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison. He would have stopped at Fort Simpson and Sitka before returning to England. On the other hand, he may be the following Edward Edwards.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Edwards, Edward [2] (c. 1822 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably England - c. 1822

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1853); Sailmaker, Fort Vancouver depot (1853).

Edward Edwards, from England, worked for the HBC in the 1850s as a sail maker. He retired in the Columbia in 1853.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9-10; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Edwards, John (fl. 1830 - 1833) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1831); Apprentice, Cabin Boy, Steward, Vancouver (schooner) (1831 - 1832); Apprentice, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

John Edwards hired on with the HBC in London and left for the Northwest Coast in January 1830 on the Dryad. After arriving at Fort Vancouver on August 16, 1830, he began his work on coastal shipping. During the next two years he helped run supplies to coastal ports and left the Columbia for England aboard the brig Eagle on October 26, 1832, arriving back in London in 1833.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 14; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4a-5a

Edwards, Philip Leget (c. 1812 - 1869) (American)

Birth: Kentucky, United States - c. July 1812

Death: Sacramento, California, United States - May 1869

CRFTC Assistant, CRFTC Brigade (1834); HBC School teacher, Champoeg (1835); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1838).

Philip Leget Edwards, an active man throughout his life, was peripherally connected to the fur trade. He moved with his family to Missouri where he apparently acquired some experience as a school teacher. There, on April 24, 1834 he was hired by Daniel Lee to be a lay assistant (hired hand) to Methodist missionary Jason Lee on his trek with Nathaniel J. Wyeth to the Columbia. The expedition left the Independence, Missouri area on April 28, 1834 for the seven month trek to Fort Vancouver and the Willamette Valley. In 1835 at Champoeg, Edwards taught the sons and daughters of the fur traders at a school, and was paid by the HBC. In 1838, he took the trail east over the Rockies and retired to Missouri. There, he entered politics and was elected to the legislature and practised law until 1850, when he went west again to California. In 1855 he was elected to the California legislature as a representative of Sacramento. He died in California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15-16; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 4 PPS: Shephard, p. 115 SS: Eaton; Scott, "Jason Lee's Place", p. 23-24; Brosnan, Jason Lee; Brosnan, "The Signers", p. 178; Loewenberg, p. 81-82

Ehninger, George [variation: Ehnainger] (fl. 1811 - 1814) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

PFC Captain's Clerk, Beaver (ship) (1811 - 1814).

George Ehninger, nephew of John Jacob Astor, joined the crew of Astor's supply ship Beaver which left New York on October 17, 1811. On the voyage to the Columbia, he and the others tried to amuse themselves by listening to others play music, shooting birds from the deck, penguins from the shore, and fishing. Ashore in the Sandwich Islands [Hawaii], he could not eat the roast dog presented to him. He reached Fort Astoria on May 9, 1812. The Beaver sailed to Sitka but, fearing destruction by gales if he returned to Astoria, Captain Sowle had the vessel interned at Canton. Ehninger, who worked as assistant to Sowle and Nicholas G. Ogden, likely took another vessel from Canton to New York. In 1821, Ehninger was noted as travelling with John Astor and, on April 1, 1822, he formed a trading partnership with Benjamin Clapp selling buffalo robes, and other trade goods. John Jacob Astor had some doubts about the effectiveness of Ehninger in the business and eventually left him out of his will.

SS: MHS Chouteau PPS: R. F. Jones, p. 31, 32, 41, 54, 59, 73, 77; Cox, p. 25, 30; ChSoc XLV, p. 112 SS: Porter, John Jacob Astor, p. 200; Howay, A List of Trading Vessels; Irving, Astoria, p. 424-27

Ehu [variation: Ehiu, Na Enoka Ehu, Enid Ehu] (fl. 1845 - c. 1886) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Coal Harbour, Burrard Inlet, British Columbia - c. 1886

Fur trade employee

PSAC Labourer, Cowlitz Farm (1845 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1850); Miller, Burrard Inlet (1860s - 1886).

The records of Ehu, whose name denotes one of traditionally low rank in Hawaiian society, are not entirely clear. According to oral tradition, Ehu had a good education at a mission school and, in fact, trained to be a teacher. He joined the HBC on May 7, 1845, from Oahu and worked until 1850, when he returned to Hawaii. According to oral tradition, after his return to the Sandwich Islands in 1850-1851, he had three children. For unknown reasons, he returned to British North America around 1856 and may have gone to the Langley area where he became a native teacher. Apparently, he then moved to Burrard Inlet where he was employed at the Hastings Sawmill. In 1869, he and his family settled on three acres [1.2 ha] on Coal Harbor, built a cottage, and planted fruit trees; Nahanee and Keamo (and perhaps others) joined them to form an enclave known as Kanaka Ranch. In August, 1871, no doubt to secure his land rights, Ehu took out naturalization papers in New Westminster. He continued to live in the Coal Harbour area with his family until his death in about 1886, whereupon he was buried on nearby Deadman's Island, close to his Kanaka Ranch homestead. Ehu's Hawaiian language bible, printed in 1872, and one of the first bibles to reach the Gastown [Vancouver] area, now rests in the Vancouver museum.

Ehu appears to have had two successive wives. According to his descendants, his first wife was an unnamed Hawaiian woman ("Wahine Ehu") by whom he had Ioane (?-bap.1851-?), Samuela Ulumeheihei (?-bap.1852-?), and Noa Pikao (?-bap.1857-?). When he returned to the west coast, he married Mary See-em-ia (?-?), likely a Squamish woman, with whom he had Margaret (c.1857-1925).

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVanASA 9; YFDS 20; SandIsAB 3; HBCABio

Eldershaw, William (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

William Eldershaw made one return voyage to the Coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison as an ordinary seaman.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Eleahoy (fl. 1837 - 1845) (possibly Hawaiian)

Birth: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1840); Middleman, Snake Party (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1843); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1843 - 1844); Labourer, Willamette (1844 - 1845).

Eleahoy joined the HBC in July 1837 at the Honolulu office and began work at Fort Vancouver on August 10 of that year. He worked at various locations and helped to transport people in and out of the Snake Country. He worked until June 24, 1842, at which point he returned to Oahu. However, he was soon re-engaged. He retired again on July 18, 1845 and returned to Oahu. On his final return he received an extra gratuity, for he had gone almost blind.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1, 5; FtVanASA 4-8; YFDS 11, 13; YFASA 19-22, 24-25; SandIsAB 5

Ella, Henry Bailey (1826 - 1873) (British: English)

Birth: London, England - 1826

Death: Burrard Inlet, British Columbia - February 1873

Maritime officer

HBC Officer (2nd), Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1848); 2nd mate, Cowlitz (barque) (1848 - 1849); 2nd mate, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851); 1st mate, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852); 1st mate, Recovery (brig) (1852 - 1853); Mate, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Mate, Otter (steamer) (1854 - 1857); Mate, Recovery (brig) (1857 - 1858); Mate, Beaver (steamer) (1858 - 1860); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1860 - 1861); Clerk, Otter (steamer) (1861 - 1862); Clerk, Enterprise (steamer) (1862 - 1863); Pilot (maritime), Coastal waters (1870).

Henry Bailey Ella ran away to sea at the age of nine and apprenticed at the age of fourteen. He joined the HBC as a ship's officer on October 28, 1846 and spent the next seventeen years on Company ships, visiting the coast several times punctuated by Hudson Bay runs from London. Ella retired from service on October 20, 1863 in Victoria. In his later years he became a licensed pilot in Burrard Inlet and it was here, on February 16, 1873, that Ella left the Moody & Co. Mill [North Vancouver], attempting to cross the inlet in a canoe with a Chinese companion who was steering. When halfway across in heavy seas, the canoe tipped over and Ella sank immediately and drowned. His Chinese companion clung to the canoe and was saved. After Henry's death, Martha, his wife, ran a boarding house and continued to raise her family in Victoria.

Henry Ella married Martha Beeton Cheney (1839-1911) in Victoria on July 19, 1854. Ella had most likely met his future wife as a guest of Thomas Blinkhorn, with whom she was staying. He began to raise a family shortly after his marriage in 1854 and lived on Fort and Broad streets in Victoria. His wife, Martha, left a diary, three years of which survive. It chronicled the comings and goings of the very early settlers in the Victoria region. Their seven children were Elizabeth Ann (1857-1874), Louisa Martha Blinkhorn (1859-?), Thomas Richards (1861-?), Marion L. (c.1861-?), Henry Reece (1864-?), Frederick William (c.1866-?) and Mary (c.1867-?). Wife Martha died on April 9, 1911.

Ella Point in Broughton Strait is named after Henry B. Ella. His house still exists on Fort Street.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28, 32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-13; BCA BCCR CCCath; 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 29; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Victoria, Yates Street Ward PPS: Ella, p. 91-112, 257-270 SS: Lugrin, p. 124; Walbran, p. 167

Elliot, Robert (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

Robert Elliot joined the HBC naval department as a seaman on September 3, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. He arrived back at the London docks on February 13, 1829 and was discharged the following day.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1

Elliot, William Alfred [variation: Elliott] (c. 1828 - 1898) (British: English)

Birth: probably Marylebone, Middlesex, England

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - March 1898

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer, Labouchere (steamer) (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Engineer, Labouchere (steamer) (1861 - 1866).

William Alfred Elliot joined the HBC on August 31, 1858 as an engineer for five years on the Labouchere. He carried on transactions with the HBC until at least 1869 and by 1871 was still working as a steamboat engineer and living at James Bay. He died in 1898 in Victoria and was buried on March 2, 1898 by the Reformed Episcopal Church.

William Alfred Elliot had one wife, Elizabeth (c. 1828-?) who was born in England. They had one recorded child, William Alfred, Jr. (c.1856-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVicASA 6-16; Mallandaine, p. 12; BCCR RefEC; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Victoria, Yates Street Ward

Ellis, Robert W. (fl. 1851 - 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 3rd mate, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852); 2nd mate, Recovery (brig) (1852 - 1853); Mate, Recovery (brig) (1853 - 1854).

Robert Ellis shipped on with the HBC immigrant supply vessel Norman Morison on May 22, 1851 and sailed to the coast. While on the coast in 1852 he joined the newly purchased Orbit, renamed Recovery, as a ship's officer, until 1854. At that point, Ellis, along with Gilbert Hackland and others, refused to work unless they were paid more. Because of this, Ellis and the others were dismissed from the service.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA [1851-52] B.239/g/31, p. 67a; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-2; FtVanASA 9; FtVicCB 11

Emmet, Thomas (fl. 1849 - 1850) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850).

Thomas Emmet worked for the HBC for a short time on a contract that ended in 1852.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29

Emmons, James (fl. 1823 - 1824) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

James Emmons was a seaman aboard the Lively, a brig chartered by the HBC. On January 3, 1823, he sailed from Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope and rounded the Horn in March. In July he witnessed an altercation between the ship's owner and captain, Robert Ritchie, and the boy William Forbes; as a result he swore out a deposition on July 2, 1823. He further appeared at a court of inquiry held at Fort George on August 3, 1823 to discuss the drinking habits of the first mate. He sailed from Fort George three days later and arrived in England on March 25, 1824.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1; HBCA ship extract

Emptage, William Henry (c. 1829 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Kent, England - c. 1829 (born to William Emptage)

Death: probably Langley Prairie, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Recovery (brig) (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1853 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Langley (1856 - 1858).

William H. Emptage, whose father was a life-saving boat captain in coastal England, first joined the East India Company as a seaman on their ships between England and India. He then joined the HBC and came to the coast as a seaman on the HBC barque, Norman Morison and was soon sent off to investigate the gold discovered on the Queen Charlotte Islands. It was there that his left hand suffered an injury and had to be amputated. It was done so in a fashion that allowed him to carry a milk pail in the crook of his arm later when he looked after the cows at Langley; there he also cared for the horses and weeded the gardens. He worked until November 22, 1858 at Fort Langley and then retired to settle. On December 12, 1870, he pre-empted 160 acres [64.8 ha] at Langley Prairie. In 1873, as the settlement had grown around Langley, he and twenty-eight other landowners petitioned Victoria for Langley's incorporation as a municipality.

William H. Emptage had one wife and three recorded children. He took as a wife Louisa Pokia (c.1840-?), daughter of Moosum Pokia, Musqueam. Their children were William Jr. (c.1864-1944), Edwin (c.1869-?) and Stephen (c.1872-?). After they had begun to raise a family, they formalized their marriage on May 27, 1875.

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-6; BCA BCCR WesMeth; Van-PL 1881 and 1891 Canada Census, New Westminster SS: Waite, p. 52; Laing, p. 174

Engelbretten, Ole [variation: Engebretton, Engelbretson] (? - 1856) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Elvuim, Norway

Death: Fort Simpson [Nass] [British Columbia] - December 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1854 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1856).

Ole Engelbretton joined the HBC in 1853 on a five year contract and was one of the few to reach the coast on the tumultuous voyage of the HBC chartered vessel, Colinda. His work took him progressively up the coast and, by December 1856, Engelbretton was at Simpson, where rum was appearing from everywhere and flowing freely. For seven days after the steamer Otter arrived at Fort Simpson on December 12, Engelbretton was noted as having been drunk each night. On the seventh night, he boarded a canoe to come on shore but fell into the cold water and drowned. His drowning was only reported the following morning probably because of the condition of everyone who was with him and his body was not recovered.

PS: HBCA log of Colinda 1; FtSimp[N]PJ 8

Eno (Canada), Francois [standard: François] [variation: Enno, Eneau, Enos] (c. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, David Thompson (1810); Middleman, Thompson River (1813 - 1814).

François Eno (Canada) first joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on January 8, 1808 to work as a middleman at Fort Kaminstiquia [Fort William]. Thereon after he appears to have worked with David Thompson (as Canada) and signed contracts up to 1818, to work in the Northwest, Michillimackinac and Lesser Slave Lake. During this time, for the winter of 1813-1814, he found himself at Thompson River [Kamloops], a short term stay as he was due in Montreal in 1814. He may have been working on the Pacific slopes before and after this date as a member of a cross-country brigade.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10; UBC-Koer Thompson
See Also: Eno (Canada), Antoine (probable Relative)

Eno (Canada), Antoine (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near St. Genevieve de Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1827 - 1828); Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830).

Antoine Eno (Canada), most likely related to Francis Eno (Canada), came west to the Columbia with the returning Express in the fall of 1827. In 1830 he returned to Montreal and in 1831 he signed a further contract to work outside the area.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 1; YFASA 7-9; YFDS 3a, 3b; FtVanAB 26; HBCCont PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 105
See Also: Eno, Francois (Relative)

Ermatinger, Edward (1797 - 1876) (Mixed descent: Swiss German and Italian)

Birth: Island of Elba [Italy] - February 1797 (born to Lawrence Edward Ermatinger and an Italian woman)

Death: St. Thomas, Ontario - October 1876

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, Thompson River (1825 - 1826); Clerk, Coastal Trade or shipping out of Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Clerk, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828).

Born in Italy to a Swiss family who had roots in the Canadian fur trade from the 1760s, but at that time was employed by the British Army, Edward Ermatinger was, naturally, educated in England. Both he and his brother Francis, once in their late teens, signed on with the HBC as clerks on May 13, 1818 when they were living in St. Pancras, Middlesex and sailed to York Factory that year. Between 1818-1825 Edward served at Island Lake, Upper Red River, Lac La Pluie and York Factory and worked in the Columbia District for the remaining three years until his retirement in 1828. He then went to England for a year. The fur trade records reveal little of Ermatinger's character but the collected Ermatinger letters reveal a competent more complex character beyond his acquired Cockney characteristics. He formed no lasting attachments to the west and, in 1830 he settled in St. Thomas, Upper Canada (Ontario) becoming a merchant, banker and postmaster. He died at the age of seventy-nine in 1876 and was buried in St. Thomas, Ontario.

In the early 1830s he married Achsah Burnham (daughter of Zaceus Burnham of Coburg).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 1-2; YFASA 5-6, 8-9; YFDS 2a; HBCABio; UBC-SC Ermatinger PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 67-132; HBRS II, p. 211-12; F. Ermatinger SS: DCB Thomas
See Also: Ermatinger, Francis (Brother)

Ermatinger, Francis (1798 - 1858) (British: English and German)

Birth: Lisbon, Portugal - 1798 (born to Lawrence Edward Ermatinger)

Death: St. Thomas, Upper Canada - August 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, Thompson River (1825 - 1826); Clerk, Columbia Department (1826 - 1828); Clerk, Fort Okanagan (1826 - 1827); Clerk in charge, Thompson River (1828 - 1830); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Clerk, Fort Colville (1831 - 1834) (accompanied by Flathead Indians? To Snake Country); Clerk in charge, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1834 - 1838); Clerk, Fort Colville (1837 - 1838) (YF 1837-1838); Clerk, Snake Party (1838 - 1839); Clerk in charge, Fort Hall and Boise (1839 - 1840); Clerk in charge, Fort Hall (1840 - 1842); Chief Trader in charge, South Party (1842 - 1843); Chief Trader disposable in district, Fort McLoughlin (1843 - 1844); Chief Trader in charge, Fort Colville (1844 - 1846).

Francis Ermatinger spent much longer on the Pacific slopes than his brother, Edward. Educated in England, Francis Ermatinger joined the HBC on May 12, 1818, from the parish of St. Pancras, Middlesex and spent the first seven years of his fur trade career in Trout Lake, Severn District. In 1825, he came, along with Edward, to the Columbia District and was generally considered a valuable man. However, he gained notoriety for hiring HBC interpreter Jean Baptiste Leolo to cut off the ear of a native who had had an affair with Ermatinger's woman. In 1832 he led a party to the borders of the Snake Country and the headwaters of the Missouri. He left Fort Hall in 1842 when he became Chief Trader and, in 1845-1846, when not at his Fort Colville posting, acted as treasurer of the Oregon Provisional Government south of the Columbia. Leaving his wife and daughter temporarily with the John McLoughlins, he left the Columbia District in March 1846 with the Warre and Vavasour secret reconnaissance party for a job as head of the York Factory Fur Store. In August of that year, he conducted the first troop brigade to Old Rock Depot from York Factory. From 1847-1850 he was Chief Trader in charge of Fort Chipewyan, Athabasca and the following two years was on furlough and on leave of absence. He returned to duty in 1852, taking charge of Fort William. He retired on June 1, 1853 and settled on his farm "Multnomah" in St. Thomas and five years later died and was buried at St. Thomas.

Francis Ermatinger had a complex family life, having several children by four wives. The first relationship was to an unknown woman in Severn, a union which yielded one daughter whom he provided for when he went to the Columbia. The second was to "Cleopatra," a Shuswap woman with whom he lived between 1826-1831. Between them, they had one son Lawrence (1828) and a daughter (1831) who died shortly after birth. Lawrence was taken east by the Reverend William Gray to be educated. The third union was with Mary Three Dresses, a Flathead Woman, with whom he lived between 1834-1838. By this union he had one son around 1836 and a daughter, Mary in 1838. The fourth marriage, in 1842 at Fort George [Astoria], was with Catharine Sinclair [c.1824-?]. By this union, he had a daughter, Frances Maria (1843-?). However, after seven years of marriage, Francis Ermatinger in 1849 wished to obtain a divorce from her because of her indiscreet behaviour. Catherine died on November 11, 1876 in Winnipeg [Manitoba] and was buried there.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 5-6, 8-9, 11-15, 17-20, 24; YFDS 2a, 4a, 6; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; HBCABio PPS: F. Ermatinger; HBRS X, p. 12, 31n; HBRS II, [bio] p. 212-13; HBRS XXX, p. 206-07, 206n; CCR 1b SS: Stewart, p. 4, 166; Van Kirk, "Many Tender Ties", p. 167-69, 275 (75n); A. McDonald p. 77n8, 91, 97, 111, 119, 129
See Also: Ermatinger, Edward (Brother); Sinclair, William Jr. (Relative)

Esterby, Nathaniel (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

Nathaniel Esterby joined the HBC naval department as a ship's officer on September 1, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1

Ettue, Jean Baptiste [variation: Etue] (c. 1799 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near St. Supplice, Lower Canada - c. 1799

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1822 - 1824); Untraced vocation, Columbia District (1824 - 1825); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia District (1825 - 1826); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1828); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1829); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830).

When Jean Baptiste Ettue signed his HBC contract for one year on July 22, 1824, with an "X" he had already been working for the Company for two years. In outfits 1825-1826 and 1828-1830 he appears to have been a member of the brigade to Montreal and, in 1827-1828, was in on the construction of Fort Langley. In 1830 he was living in Lower Red River and, after 1834, he signed a further contract to work in Lac Des Laky (?).

PS: HBCA YFDS 1a, 2a, 3a; HBCCont; YFASA 2-9; FtVanAB 1, 10, 26

Evans, Edward H. (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC Surgeon, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Edward Evans made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison as a ship's surgeon.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Evans, Robert (fl. 1834 - 1835) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

SJ & S Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1826 - 1827); CRFTC Employee, Fort Hall (1834 - 1835).

Robert Evans was a member of Jedediah S. Smith's 1826 Southwest Expedition that he may have joined at the 1826 Willow Valley Rendezvous. He traveled into California and returned with Smith to the 1827 Sweet Lake Rendezvous but remained there while Smith continued his expedition. He could have been in the Rocky Mountain area when he joined the Nathaniel J. Wyeth expedition of 1834 as part of a group to establish the CRFTC on the Pacific slopes. Evans left the Wyeth expedition on the upper Snake River, near the mouth of the Portneuf River, to build a CRFTC trading post which they called Fort Hall. A stockade was built in the summer of 1834 and Evans was left in charge of eleven other men to winter over. Evans likely stayed at the post throughout the winter while the others went out on hunting parties and may have departed in the summer of 1835.

PS: OHS FtHallAB SS: O. Russell, p. 157

Evans, Thomas (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Thomas Evans made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Evererd, Pierre (c. 1808 - 1832) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: probably Lac Des Deux Montagnes [Lake of Two Mountains], Lower Canada - c. 1808

Death: Fraser River [British Columbia] - January 1832

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1831 - 1832).

Pierre Evererd, who may have been a member of the cross-country brigade, drowned on January 31, 1832 after one year in service with the HBC.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11; YFDS 4b

Faggater, Charles (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Landsman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

Charles Faggater made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Fahy, Patrick [variation: Fahey] (fl. 1860 - 1861) (possibly Irish)

Birth: possibly Ireland

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1861 - 1862).

Patrick Fahy may have been passing through for he worked for the HBC, receiving his 1860-1861 wages on the sundries account. He was discharged at Fort Simpson on September 3, 1861 and his movements after that are uncertain.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 8-11; BCA FtSimp[N]P]

Fairfoul, William (c. 1828 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Newborough, Anglesey, United Kingdom - c. 1828

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1846 - 1848); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1848 - 1849).

William Fairfoul joined the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and sailed to the coast on the Cowlitz. On November 25, 1848 at Fort Victoria, he left the vessel to join the steamer Beaver and less than a year later, on August 20 or 24, 1849, he deserted, probably for the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6; YFASA 27-29; YFDS 21

Faito, George (fl. 1830 - 1856) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Vancouver Island, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1833); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1844); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1847); Labourer and sawyer, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849); Sawyer, Fort Victoria (1849 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1853); Labourer, Colwood Farm (1856); Labourer, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1856).

George Faito joined the HBC from Hawaii April 1830 and spent much of his career in the fur trade at Fort Vancouver. After nineteen years he moved to Fort Victoria as a sawyer and, later, worked at various nearby HBC/PSAC farms as a labourer.

George Faito had one recorded wife, Josephine (1824-1849) and one recorded daughter, Catherine (1848-1849).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-8; YFASA 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 4a-7; ShMiscPap 14; FtVicASA 1-3; PSACAB 37, 38; BCA BCCR StAndC

Fallardeau, Louis [variation: Fallardeau, Falerdoo, Philardou] (c. 1817 - 1873) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Lachine or Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1817

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - April 1873

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1843 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, New Caledonia (1861 - 1862); Labourer, New Caledonia (1862 - 1863).

Louis Fallardeau joined the HBC in 1838 and for the first twelve years, spent most of his time in northern coastal posts. While in the north in early 1844 he gave a deposition which seemed to indicate that the Fort Stikine Company servants had plotted against the officers, thus supporting the conspiracy theory for the murder of John McLoughlin, Jr. From 1851 he didn't work for nine years but worked briefly from 1863 in the interior. In 1868 he was living in a milder climate on the disputed island of San Juan from which he would go by canoe to Victoria, twelve miles [19.3 km] away (Bellingham Herald), where he still worked for a time under James Douglas. By 1872, he may have been living in Sydney, B. C. as that is where a son was baptised. The following year, in April 1873, he died in the Victoria area and was buried on April 24.

Louis Fallardeau had two recorded successive wives and ten recorded children. He formalized his marriage to Agnes, (c.1825-1855) Stikine [Katoosh] on April 29, 1850. Their likely children were Eleanore (?-bap.1849-?), August Noel (c.1849-?) and Louis Camille (c.1855-55). Agnes died on July 25, 1855. Two years after Agnes' death, Fallardeau married Mary Louise, (1843-1908), Songhees or Tongas on February 18, 1857. Their further children were Pierre Hypolite (1862-?), Basile (aka Peter) (1865-?), John (1868-?), Thomas (1860-1909), Adelaide (1870-?), Daniel (c.1871-?) and Denis (?-bap.1872-?). Wife Louise died in Victoria, August 15, 1908.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; FtVanCB 32; FtVicASA 1-5, 8-12; BCA BCCR StAndC; BCCR StElizRC; BCGR-Deaths; BCVS-RBDM; Mallandaine, p. 73 SS: "Mrs. Carrie Ewing Recalls Events of 80 Years on San Juan Island," Bellingham Herald, Dec. 24, 1940

Fallardeau, Michel [variation: Falardeau] (c. 1806 - c. 1855) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1806

Death: c. 1855

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Nez Perces (1829 - 1830); Cook, Fort Nez Perces (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Thompson River (1831 - 1833); Servant, Thompson River (1833 - 1836); Middleman, Thompson River (1836 - 1837); Servant, Thompson River (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Thompson River (1838 - 1841); Middleman, Columbia Department (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Thompson River (1843 - 1845); Middleman and bouite, New Caledonia (1845 - 1846); Middleman, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Middleman or Bouite, Fort Alexandria (1847); Bouite, New Caledonia (1847 - 1851); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1851 - 1852).

Michel Fallardeau joined the service of the HBC in 1827 and came west with the returning York Factory Express in the fall. For the next twenty-four years, he worked at mainly interior posts as a middleman and likely spent most of his time at Thompson River. He appeared to have transactions with the Company until about 1854. The records are not clear but, around 1855, Michel Fallardeau may have been beaten so severely by Paul Fraser that he died two days later. Morice reports an apparent exchange between the builder of Fallardeau's coffin and Paul Fraser two days after the event when Fraser indicated that rough boards were good enough for the rascal Fallardeau. The coffin builder, Baptiste, the Iroquois, replied that rough boards would be too good for Fraser (Morice, p. 279-280). A short time later, as the story goes, Paul Fraser was killed by a falling tree. This does not square with the records, for Michel Fallardeau goes off the records around 1851 but continues on the Sundries Accounts which could mean that he may or may not have died. However, there is no mention of his death. Morice obviously got this information through oral tradition and the facts of the actual occurrence have yet to be sorted out.

Michel Fallardeau had one wife and one recorded child. Most likely when he was in the Thompson River area, he married Jenny Lucy (?-?), Shuswap. On June 30, 1856, when Jenny was at Fort Langley, daughter Angelique (c.1848-?) was baptised. Another son may have been Louis (?-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFASA 7-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 3a-8, 16; FtAlexPJ 7; FtVicASA 1; BCA Alexandria; BCCR-StAndC PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 105 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 279-80; "Vivid Link with Past," Kamloops Sentinel, Dec. 21, 1931 [Angelique b. 1848 to "Louis", but in Church records b. to Michel]

Fallardeau, Narcisse [variation: Falardeau, Falardo, Feledow] (c. 1818 - 1888) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. September 1818

Death: Fort Langley, British Columbia - November 1888

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Langley (1838 - 1862); Labourer, Fort Langley (1862 - 1863).

Narcisse Fallardeau joined the HBC in 1837 from the parish of Berthier, and for the next twenty-six years spent his entire career at Fort Langley. As James Murray Yale's cook or servant, he spent most of his time with his family in the kitchen of the Big House of the fort. He was there when the Fort burnt down on April 11, 1840 but did not appear to suffer any ill effects. In 1846 he tried unsuccessfully to claim land around Fort Nisqually. Like many, he could not write, as his February 15, 1850 contract was signed with an "X". Fallardeau pre-empted 160 acres of farmland on the south bank of the Fraser River above Fort Langley. According to one of his children, he may have varied his farming activities as a shoemaker. Narcisse Fallardeau died at Langley in 1888, and is buried in the Fort Langley cemetery with an empty plot beside him, possibly reserved for his wife.

Narcisse Fallardeau had one wife, Hélène, Thèpartenat [Kwantlan] (c.1816/23-1905) and nine or more children. Together, they had Harriot (c.1839-c.1918), Catherine, (c.1841-1874), Matilda (1844-1926), Louisa (c.1848-1902), Noel (c.1851-?), Narcisse (c.1852-?), Rose/Rosalie/Rosaline (c.1862-1944), George (c.1865-?) and Marie/Mary (1865-1948).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 4-8; FtVicASA 1-3; YFASA 19-20, 24-32; FtVicASA 1-11; HBCABio; BCA PSACFtNis; BCCR StAndC; BCDVS-RBDM; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, New Westminster District SS: Laing, p. 176; Fallardeau descendant

Fallen, Mr. [variation: Fallon] (fl. 1833) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of AmericaFree trader*U.A. Trader, Rendezvous (1833).

This contradictory entry may be Benjamin O'Fallen. The only mention of him comes from the writing of Warren Ferris on June 7, 1833 on the Green River in Wyoming when he was presumably travelling with "Vandeburgh" although William H. Vandeburgh had been killed the previous fall. According to Ferris, Fallen had been to "Teos" [Taos] the previous winter for supplies and two of his Spanish engages had frozen to death on their return. Fallen had also suffered considerably on his way back. He was probably working for Drips and Company. (This Fallen may be Benjamin O'Fallen [1793-1842] Indian Agent and a principal partner in the Missouri Fur Company that broke up in 1824). On the other hand, it may be William Fallon who was working in the Upper Missouri area from 1830 for an unspecified period of time.

PS: MHS Chouteau PPS: Ferris, p. 164

Fannons, Dominique [variation: Farron, Farrons] (c. 1798 - c. 1860) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Recollet, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1798Death: probably Cowlitz area, Lewis County, Washington Territory – after 1860*Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Western Caledonia (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Langley (1827 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1835 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1840); Settler, Cowlitz (1842 - 1843).

Dominique Fannons (Farrons, Farron) joined the HBC in 1815 from the Montreal area and served at Montreal and Athabasca before deserting to the NWC in 1817-1818. He then served in Athabasca (rejoining the HBC at coalition in 1821), Bow River and Middle Saskatchewan, before coming to New Caledonia in 1825. Fannon assisted in the construction of Fort Langley. After his retirement in 1840, he returned to Canada but came back to the Cowlitz as a settler in outfit 1842-1843. For some years he worked at the Cowlitz farm under George Roberts and and by 1850 had his own farm in Lewis County. He served as a Fourth Corporal in Peers' company of the Cowlitz Rangers in the Indian War of 1855-1856 along with his two sons Narcisse, and Dominique (CCR 1, A-25). Fannon appears as a tailor in the 1860 Lewis County census.

Dominique Fannons/Farron had one wife and six children. He formalized his marriage to Josephite, Clallam [Makak] (c.1813-Oct. 17, 1844) on February 11, 1839. The Fannon children were Narcisse (c.1831-?), Louise or Angélique (c.1832-?), Amable (c.1834-?), Dominique (c.1835-?), Elisabeth (1839-?) and Rachel (c.1846-?).

PS: HBCA Canadian Servants' Ledgers [1815-1819] A.16/52; [1815-1822] A.16/53; HBCCont; YFASA 5-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 2a-2b, 5a-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 2-7; HBCABio; BCA BCCR CCCath; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co. PS: CCR 1a

Faries, Hugh [variation: Ferris, Faries, Farris] (c. 1776 - 1852) (Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1776 or 1779(born to Hugh Faries and Mary Warfanger)Death: Berthier, Lower Canada - March 1852*Fur trade employee

NWC In charge, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1807 - 1812); HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver sundries accounts (1837 - 1839).

Montrealer Hugh Faries had the distinction of being one of the early land-based fur trade clerks to cross over to and work on the Pacific slopes. He joined the NWC in 1804 and for the next two years was at Rainy Lake. In the autumn of 1807, in the company of Jules Maurice Quesnel, he crossed the Rocky Mountains with supplies from Montreal and orders from Fort Chipewyan. At that point, Faries was put in charge of a new Fraser River post [Fort George]. In May 1808, when Simon Fraser, Quesnel and others explored the Fraser to its mouth, Faries was left at the post. In August, when the tired and harried group returned, Faries greeted them at his Fort George post. During the next four years, he appears to have stayed in the area for, in the spring of 1810, Faries and John Stuart took the New Caledonia returns to Rainy Lake. Also a portage from the Chilcotin River was named after him, indicating some possible travel in that area. Between 1812-1817, he was at Cumberland House and, at the time of the amalgamation with the HBC, he was appointed Chief Trader. Between 1821-1826, he was in the Peace River and in 1827 was proposed as a member of the Beaver Club in Montreal. He became Chief Factor in 1838 and retired in 1840.

Little is known of Hugh Faries' family but by 1826 he was traveling with his family. One son's name was Walter (?-?).

Hugh Faries 1828-1829 Kenogamissi District day book of thirty-five pages now rests in Special Collections, Milton S. Eisenhower Library at the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 3-5 PPS: Fraser, p. 128; Harmon, A Journal of Voyages, p. 151; FtAlexDR 1; HBRS II, p. 333 SS: ChSoc XXII, p. 439; HBRS I, p. 437

Farnham, Russell (1784 - 1832) (American)

Birth: Massachusetts, United States - 1784

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - October 1832

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); Clerk, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (October 13, 1813); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Russell Farnham spent three years at Fort Astoria but he is best known for having journeyed incredibly for almost three years through Siberia returning the PFC records to the Astoria's head office in New York. After receiving adequate education, he joined Astor's PFC on May 24, 1810 as a clerk. Arriving at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22, 1811 as a passenger aboard the Tonquin, he worked through the construction of Fort Astoria and the fur trade mainly as a clerk with different duties. For example, on October 12, 1811, he sailed on the maiden voyage of the Columbia-built Dolly. Between November 10-21, 1811, Farnham, Gabriel Franchere and W. W. Matthews pursued and ransomed two company employees who had deserted and were taken into slavery by Chief Cathlanaminimin on Sauvie Island. In April 1812, he was with the party that was attacked and robbed at the Dalles, but Farnham was not hurt and in 1814 was even trading sturgeon. After the Pacific Fur Company assets of Fort Astoria were bought out by the NWC, Farnham was given the job of returning the records to the head office. On April 2, 1814, he left sailing aboard the brig Pedlar, along with Wilson Price Hunt to Sitka, then aboard the Forester to Kamchatka, the point from which he travelled across Siberia by foot to St. Petersburg and Copenhagen. From there, he finally made his way to New York. Between 1817 and 1819 he managed the American Fur Company in the upper Mississippi, later settling and becoming a farmer in Missouri, but he never returned to Oregon. He died of cholera in 1832 in St. Louis, Missouri.

Russell Farnham married Susan Bosseran in 1829 in Missouri.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; MHS Chouteau PPS: ChSoc LVX, p. 48, 93-95, 112-13, 145, 194; ChSoc LVII, p. 636, 673, 695 SS: OHQ v. XXIV, 338-344; DAB Ghent; Porter, "The Cruise of the", p. 261-85

Farrient, Laurent Valier (fl. 1821) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Boute, Columbia Department (1821).

Laurent Valier Farrient transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821 while in the Columbia.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9

Favel, Charles (c. 1826 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1826 (born to Thomas Favel and Sally, a Cree native)

Death: possibly West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Thompson River (1843 - 1844); Boute, New Caledonia (1844 - 1849); Boute, New Caledonia (1849 - 1850); Guide, New Caledonia (1849 - 1850); Boute, New Caledonia (1850 - 1851); Boatbuilder, New Caledonia (1851 - 1853); Boute, New Caledonia (1851 - 1853); Boute, New Caledonia (1853 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1861); Labourer, New Caledonia (1861 - 1863).

Charles Favel, son of a Red River HBC servant, was baptised on August 3, 1826 at Red River. He joined the HBC in 1842 and worked for the next twenty-one years, largely in the New Caledonia area. After William Morwick, of Fort Babine, was killed in 1843 and replaced by an overly apprehensive Duncan Cameron, an experienced Charles Favel was asked in 1845 to temporarily replace Cameron when the neurotic post master could not take it any more. Favel retired in 1863 and was living in the Fort St. James area in 1866.

Charles Favel appears to have had one wife, Nellie Boucher (?-?). They had one recorded child, William (1854-?). In 1861 Fort Alexandria correspondence, her name was recorded as Nancy.

PS: Provincial Archives of Manitoba, St. John's Baptisms, 1813-1828, #591; HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFASA 22, 24-32; YFDS 10-18, 20, 22-23; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-13; FtAlexPJ 10; FtAlexCB 1; HBCABio; BCA OlofGH; SS: Morice, The History of, p. 220

Favel, John [a] (c. 1815 - ?) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1815Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, South Party (1828 - 1831); Trapper, South Party (1828 - 1831); Middleman, South Party (1831 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Trapper, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Snake Party (1835 - 1839); Trapper, Snake Party (1835 - 1839).

John Favel, who signed both his 1820 contract at Beaver Creek and his 1823 contract with an "X", worked in the southern reaches of the Columbia and deserted in June 1839.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-5a, 5c-7; FtVanASA 2-6

Fawden, E. R. [variation: Fowden] (fl. 1840) (British: English)

Birth: probably Liverpool, EnglandMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1840).

E. R. Fowden joined the HBC in London on September 17, 1839 on a contract that was to have lasted five years. He sailed to Fort Vancouver on the barque Columbia but when the vessel was on a supply mission to California, he took the ship's small boat ashore at Monterey and deserted on August 24, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Columbia 4; ShMisPap 14; YFASA 20; FtVanASA 6

Feckney, Robert (c. 1810 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Edinburgh, Scotland - c. 1810Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Nereide (barque) (1836); Carpenter, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Robert Feckney joined the HBC in London on February 13, 1836 for five years and sailed to the Coast on the Nereide. His work there was short for he returned to England aboard the barque Columbia.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 4a; FtVanASA 3; YFDS 7; YFASA 16

Felix (Palaquin), Antoine [variation: Palanquin] (c. 1798 - c. 1861) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1798Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - c. 1861*Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1826); Boute, Fort Colville (1826 - 1842); Boute, Fort Simpson (1842 - 1843); Boute, Thompson River & Fort Okanagan (1842 - 1844); Boute, Thompson River (1843 - 1844); Settler, Willamette (1843+); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1844 - 1845); Farmer, Oregon District (1845 - 1853).

Montrealer Antoine Felix joined the HBC on July 9, 1823 and spent a good part of his career as a bote at Fort Colville. He transported Governor Simpson on his visit to the Columbia but was not mentioned in Simpson's journal. In outfit 1842-1843 he was in charge of Fort Okanagan and in 1843 he appears to have settled in the Willamette taking out a claim near St. Louis. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the establishment of a Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon.

At Fort Colville in 1830, he coupled with (legitimized at St. Paul on July 2, 1845) Marguerite, Colville, des Chaudieres a.k.a. Bethsey, (?-c.1848) with whom he had children Narcisse (1830-1848), Emmanuel (c.1830-?), Antoine (c.1836-?), François (1837-1846), Guillaume (c.1839-?), Marguerite (c.1841-?), Pierre (1844-1846) and Marie (1847-1858), all dying young except Emmanuel and Marguerite. On June 20, 1848, six months after the death of wife Marguerite, he married Marie Archange Hubert, daughter of Joachim Hubert.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 3-9, 11-15, 20, 24-25; FtGeo[As]AB 12; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-7, 13-14; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA

Felix, Prisque [variation: Presque] (fl. 1813 - 1816) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Sorel, Province of Quebec/Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

PFC Steersman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Steersman, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Steersman, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Steersman, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813); Steersman, Thompson River (winter 1813 - 1814).

Prisque Felix joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition probably in St. Louis around September 15, 1810. He crossed over the Continental Divide in the summer of 1811 and arrived in Fort Astoria via canoe on January 18, 1812. By the winter of 1813-1814 he had not yet joined the NWC, the latter having taken over the former. However, he did sign on with the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on August 1, 1816 to work as a middleman at Fort William.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; SHdeSB Liste PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107

Felix, Thomas (fl. 1823 - 1830) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830).

Thomas Felix, who most likely joined the HBC in 1822, was a member of the cross-country brigade or Express for a number of years and sometimes spent his summers in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 3-6, 10; FtVanAB 1-2a, 6; FtGeo[Ast]AB 12

Felix, William (fl. 1843 - 1846) (Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1843 - 1846).

William Felix appears to have worked casually at Thompson River for three years.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24-26

Fenton, John (c. 1817 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Old Macher, Scotland - c. 1817

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Vancouver (barque) (1841 - 1842); PSAC Millwright, Puget Sound Agricultural Company (1842 - 1843); Millwright, Fort Vancouver (1843 - 1844); Millwright, Willamette (1844 - 1846); Millwright, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1848); Millwright, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1849).

John Fenton joined the PSAC/HBC in June 1841 from Scotland as a millwright to put together a flour and barley mill which had been purchased from a foundry in Aberdeen, Scotland. He had been recommended by the owners, the Abernathys, to do the job (HBRS VI, p. 160-161n). Because there was disagreement as to the appropriateness of the design for the area and as to where it would be set up, it was not erected until 1844 at Willamette Falls. Fenton appeared to work competently throughout and, in 1849 left the service. Throughout his service, he had said he was going to return to Scotland but it appears he may have stayed for an undetermined length of time in the Pacific Northwest area where he could draw on his considerable savings. He was last tracked in 1850 passing through Fort Nisqually.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-9; YFASA 24-30; YFDS 18; PSACAB 37; FtVanCB 33 PPS: Dickey; HBRS VI, p. 60-161n

Ferguson, Samuel (fl. 1830 - 1836) (American or British)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lama (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1835); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1836).

Samuel Ferguson may have joined the brig Lama [William Henry McNeill] just before it sailed from Boston for the Northwest Coast on October 7, 1830 or when it stopped in Oahu en route in March 1831. On July 18, 1831 at Kygany harbor, in a moment of drunken bravado, he and several others tried to take over the vessel and, when it was apparently not succeeding, jumped overboard and swam ashore. He was brought back, tied to the rigging and given two dozen lashes. Nonetheless, he continued with the Lama until Oahu where it was sold to the HBC; he was re-engaged there by the HBC on September 4, 1832 and returned to the coast, continuing to serve under McNeill. For the next four years he worked on vessels servicing coastal posts and finally sailed from the coast for England on January 27, 1836 aboard the barque Ganymede. Ferguson deserted at Valparaiso on the return voyage.

PS: BCA log of Lama 1; HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 12-17; YFDS 5a-6; FtVanASA 3

Ferrier, John (fl. 1849 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Una (brigantine) (1849 - 1852).

John Ferrier came to the coast on the HBC brigantine Una which he had joined in London on December 31, 1849. He worked on the vessel until it was grounded and abandoned at Neah Bay in December 1851. From that point he made his way to Oahu where he was discharged on February 5, 1852.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 10; YFASA 30-31; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-2

Ferris, Warren Angus (1810 - 1873) (American)

Birth: Glens Falls, New York State, United States - December 20, 1810

Death: Reinhardt, Texas, United States - February 08, 1873

Fur trade employee

AFC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1830 - 1835); Fur trader, Pacific slopes (1830 - 1835); Clerk, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1833); Fur trader, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1833).

Educated as a civil engineer, twenty year old Warren A. Ferris entered the service of the American Fur Company in 1830 as a clerk. He spent the next five years wandering over fur trading territory on both sides of the Continental Divide. During this time he kept a journal that revealed much information on the comings and goings of the early fur traders in the area. For example, he wrote of the death of Henry Vanderburgh, the building of Fort Bonneville, and the massacre of Etienne Provost's party by the Snake natives. After his fur trade career, he moved to Texas where he carried on as a civil engineer. He continued as an engineer until his death.

Published manuscript: Ferris turned his journal into an article series entitled Life in the Rocky Mountains, published in the Western Literary Messenger of Buffalo, N. Y. It was republished in 1940 in Colorado. However, according to Chittenden, although it is valuable as an authoritative source for many details, it is labouriously overwritten and some of the dates are in error.

PS: MHS Chouteau PPS: Ferris SS: Chittenden, p. 395; Phillips, p. 466

Ferron, Adolphus [variation: Jean Feyron] (fl. 1849 - 1856) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Trois Rivières, Quebec

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1855? - 1856); Labourer, Fort Shepherd (1856).

Adolphus Ferron joined the HBC around 1849 and worked mainly in the Fort Rupert area. In 1854 he retired but may have gone to San Juan at that time. By 1856, he was back in Victoria complaining of difficulty feeding his family - an enticement by the HBC giving him salmon to dry and helping him break up the land did not appear to work. By May 1856, he was off to the interior and assisted with the construction of a new post near the traditional territory of his native wife.

Adolphus Ferron, who also went by the name Jean Ferron, married Suzanne Grant (?-?), daughter of Peter Grant and Anne of the Chaudières [Kettle Falls] tribe, on September 19, 1853 possibly in the Fort Victoria area. Together they had a daughter Helene Marie (?-bap.1855-?). Suzanne brought a son, Frederic Griffin (?-bap.1853-?), son of Suzanne and Frederic Griffin Sr., into the marriage.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-2; BCA BCCR StAndC
See Also: Grant, Peter (Father-in-Law)

Ferrow, George (c. 1791 - ?) (British)

Birth: "Barwick" (Berwickshire, England?), United Kingdom - c. 1791

Death: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1836); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

George Ferrow joined the HBC in London and was on the Coast by 1836. He worked in coastal shipping, sailing as far south as the coast of California. After joining the Columbia at Fort George he was discharged in London on May 12, 1837.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; FtVanASA 3; YFDS 7; YFASA 16

Fevrier (Laramie), Benjamin (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1842 - 1847).

Benjamin Fevrier (Laramie) joined the HBC from Yamaska in 1841 and worked for the Company for six years.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-27

Fight, John (fl. 1831 - 1834) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1831); Untraced vocation, Naval Department (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833 - 1834); Passenger, Eagle (brig) (1834).

John Fight was engaged by the HBC on June 13, 1831 at Oahu to work as a seaman in the Columbia. He worked largely in the Vancouver area until December 1, 1834, when he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 11-15; YFDS 4b-5c; SandIsM 1

Fillier, George (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

George Fillier joined the HBC on September 3, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. His vessel sailed from London on September 14, 1827 and arrived at Fort Vancouver on May 28, 1828. After unloading supplies, picking up furs and taking on ballast at Fort George, it crossed the bar on August 20, 1828 and arrived at the London docks on February 13, 1829 and Fillier was discharged a week later.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle 1

Finigan, James or Thomas (fl. 1841 - 1845) (probably British: English)

Birth: possibly London (Strangford), England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842); Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1845).

James Finigan, who also appears to have gone by the name of Thomas, joined the HBC on September 17, 1839 for five years. He spent his entire career servicing the Columbia Department on the barque Columbia from 1841-1845 on two return voyages.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Columbia 4, 6; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 20-21, 24

Finlay, Augustin Yoostah [variation: Finley] (c. 1800 - 1883) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Rocky Mountain House, Alberta - c. 1800 (born to Jacques Raphael "Jocko" Finlay and an unnamed Chippewa woman)

Death: probably on the Flathead Reservation, Montana - 1883

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1828 - 1832); Trapper, Fort Colville (1832 - 1839); Untraced vocation, Flatheads (1841 - 1842).

Third generation fur trader and son of Jacques "Jacko" Finlay, Augustin Yoostah Finlay probably travelled with his father before settling at Spokane House in 1810. His name Yoostah was a Flathead corruption of Augustin. He did not appear on NWC records and, into the 1820s likely assisted his freeman father and brothers trapping for furs. After his father's death in May 1828, Augustin was invited by McLoughlin to join the Snake Party as a freeman. From that point on, he infrequently made the HBC journals but was considered a leading man amongst the freemen. Like all freemen, he had some obligation to look after himself. For example, on October 24, 1831 he temporarily left Work's Snake party to spend the winter with the Indians. He reappeared in February and continued on for the rest of the expedition, sometimes separating to trap beaver, hunt buffalo or even pursue Blackfoot Indians. According to his biographer, D. C. Courchane, in 1842 and 1844 he was probably at Port d'Enfer [Hellgate], Montana along with his brothers and their families and, by 1847, was living in the Colville Valley, near Fort Colville. In 1849, he and his family likely went to California for the Gold Rush, and by 1854, they were back in the Colville Valley. By 1860, he was living in the Bitterroot Valley of Montana and he likely died on the Flathead Reservation, Montana in 1883. His wife, Clemence, died on the reservation on March 6, 1909.

Augustin Finlay had one wife and at least thirteen children. In August 1840, he married Clemence Cah-Le-Moss (1816/20-1909), Flathead, daughter of Thérèse. Their children were Susanne (?-?), Louis (?-?), David (?-?), Thérèse (?-?), Marie LaRose (c.1851-?), LaLouise (?-?), Felicite (?-?), Vincent (?-?), Marie (?-?), Agatha (1849?-?), Philomene (c.1853-?), Rose (?-?) and Margaret (c.1858-?).

PS: HBCA 9, 11-15; YFDS 3b, 4b, 5b-7, 11; FtVanASA 2-6; FtVanCB 4, 6; SnkCoPJ 11; WSA 1860 U.S. Census, Washington Territory, Spokane County, Bitterroot Valley SS: Courchane, p. 245-47

See Also: Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Brother); St. Germain, Saulteux (Relative); Finlay, Keyackie (Brother); Finlay, Raphael Jr (Brother); Finlay, Miaquam (Brother); Finlay, Nicholas (Brother)

Finlay, Bonhomme (fl. 1813 - 1823) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Interpreter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); HBC Interpreter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); NWC Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); HBC Freeman interpreter, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); NWC Freeman interpreter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823).

Bonhomme Finlay may have first joined the NWC in 1812, working with them until at least 1821 when he joined the HBC.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10

Finlay, Christopher (c. 1833 - 1879) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orphir, Orkney, United Kingdom - c. December 30, 1832 (born to Christopher Finlay and Margaret Sinclair)

Death: Nanaimo, British Columbia - August 23, 1879

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1851 - 1853); Clerk, Nanaimo (1853 - 1879); Store assistant, Nanaimo (1853 - 1879); Teacher, Nanaimo (1853 - 1879).

Christopher Finlay appears to have had some education before he came to the Pacific Northwest as an immigrant on the Tory. He worked for a short time at Fort Rupert and went to Nanaimo around 1853. There, he was an assistant in the store and office and when Charles A. Bayley resigned as teacher, Finlay took over as teacher until he was replaced by Rev. C. Bryant. He was known as a hard taskmaster who did not hesitate to use the strap. The stern pedagogue, who was known as an upright citizen, died suddenly at the age of forty-six, falling on the door step of his house on Mill Street, Nanaimo in 1879.

Christopher Finlay partnered with a Haida native and had a daughter, Mary (1854-?). In the 1860s Christopher's Haida wife returned to the Queen Charlotte Islands, while he retained the child. In 1869, Mary went on to marry William Cartwright.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA [1853-54] B.226/g/l, fo. 13d SS: Bate, p. 2; Finlay relation

Finlay, David (? - 1849) (Mixed descent)

Death: killed by Blackfeet Indians probably in the Fort Colville/Flatheads area - October 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Colville (1843 - 1847); Interpreter, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1847 - 1848); Apprentice, Fort Colville (1848 - 1849); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1848 - 1849); Carpenter, Fort Colville (1849).

David Finlay joined the HBC in 1843 and worked in the Fort Colville area. His contract was to have ended in 1850 but on October 1, 1849 he was killed by the Blackfeet Indians when returning to the camp after being out hunting.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8-9; YFASA 24-29; YFDS 18, 20; BCA Lowe 1

Finlay, François Benetsee [standard: François] [variation: Pinista, Pinetse, Pinasta, Penache Finley] (c. 1805 - before 1873) (Mixed descent)

Birth: near Fort Edmonton [Alberta] or Red River- c. 1805 (born to Jacques Raphael “Jocko” Finlay and an unnamed Chippewa woman)

Death: possibly Flathead Reservation, Montana – before 1873

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1828 - 1832); Trapper, Fort Colville (1832 - 1838); Trapper, Flatheads (1841 - 1842).

François Benetsee Finlay is most remembered for having discovered gold in Montana. Son of Jacques "Jacko" Finlay (and grand nephew of Soteau St. Germain), Benetsee likely spent part of his growing up years with his father and brothers at Fort Spokane, and trapped beaver as a freeman. When his father died in May 1828, he was invited, along with his brothers Augustine and Miaquam to join the Snake party. He worked until 1842, at which point he left the employ of the HBC and continued to raise a family, who that year were at the Finley Camp at Porte d'Enfer [Hellgate, Montana]. François Benetsee was a resourceful, enterprising man for, in 1847, he helped Neil McLean McArthur to build the HBC post, Fort Connah [Montana]. He also became an independent trader, trading everything from beads and cloth, to powder and lead with the native peoples and through this, gained a certain independence. He took horses to California and so knew the area when he joined the Gold Rush with his brothers and family in 1849. Prior to this, he had settled on a piece of land, with a creek, appropriately called Benetsee Creek [Gold Creek, Powell Co., Montana]. It was here that he discovered the gold in 1851 or 1852. There are many versions of his discovery but it appears that he took gold dust that he obtained from his creek to Angus McDonald at Fort Connah; it was sent away and pronounced pure. The Montana Gold Rush got under way ten years after that. François' activities during his later years have not been traced but it is assumed that he continued living in the area and died before 1873.

François Benetsee Finlay had one wife and possibly fifteen children, according to descendants. One wife was Susan/Dew-see-mah/Pen-na-ma (c.1835-?) daughter of Old Ignatius Chaves and Louise Ta-yoo-sah-mah. Four children, according to the 1860 Census were Sophia (c.1842-?), Isadore (c.1847-?), Caroline (c.1854-?), and Rosette (c.1857-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 4; YFASA 9, 11-15; YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-6; WSA 1860 U.S. Census, Washington Territory, Spokane County, Bitterroot Valley SS: Courchane, p. 2-6; O. W. Johnson, p. 314, 314-15; Langford, p. 78; Bell, p. 20-21; Chalfant, p. 256-57; Peltier, Antoine Plant p. 14

See Also: Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Brother); St. Germain, Saulteux (Relative); Finlay, Keyackie (Brother); Finlay, Raphael Jr (Brother); Finlay, Miaquam (Brother); Finlay, Nicholas (Brother)

Finlay, Jacques Raphael [variation: Jacko, Jacka, Jocko, Jacco, Jaco, Jaccot, Jacquot, Jackie Finley] (c. 1768 - 1828) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Fort Finlay, Saskatchewan River - c. 1768 (born to James Finlay and an unnamed Saulteux [Chippewa] woman)

Death: Spokane House, Columbia District - May 1828

Fur trade employee

NWC Independent Trapper and Fur Trader cutting trails for David Thompson, Kootenay and Flathead area (1806 - 1810); Freeman, Kootenae House (1807 - 1808); Freeman (possibly with Joseph Howse [HBC]), Kootenay's (1808 - 1810); Builder, Kullyspell House (Kalispel Post) (1809); Builder, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (Summer 1810); Clerk in charge, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1810 - 1812); Clerk, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Interpreter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Trapper, Snake Party (1819); HBC Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1824); Untraced vocation, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1824 - 1828); Untraced vocation, Rocky Mountain Portage (1824).

Son of fur-trading pioneer James Finlay, one of the Scottish-born founders of the NWC, Jacques Finlay had a long career in the fur trade with the NWC. Unlike his fur-trading half-brothers, James (1766-1830) and John (1774-1833), who chose to spend their latter years in Montreal, Jacques lived his entire life in the country. Jocko was possibly educated by his father and became a good linguist although, in his later years, he did not (or would not) speak English to botanist David Douglas (Douglas, p. 171). He was a competent strategist, for in June 1794, when natives attacked the neighbouring HBC post [South Branch House] killing all but one (the clerk) and then attacked the NWC post of Upper Bow Fort [nr. Banff, Alta.], Finlay led the counter-attack and rescued the HBC clerk before fleeing downriver. For the next few years, he managed other posts and between 1800-1808 he was with David Thompson. In 1807, Finlay did not appear to be with Thompson when he built Kootenae House [near Lake Windermere]; he was likely in the area as a free trader and the following year was hunting with James McMillan in the vicinity. Later, he entered the Flathead River country area and helped to build Kullyspell House (October, 1809), Saleesh House (1809) and Spokane House (1810) for the NWC, where he was a clerk for three or more years. In 1809-1810 he was at some point with HBC man Joseph Howse, who built a HBC wintering post on the Pacific slopes that winter. Finlay and his family continued their lives as freemen and, when the HBC abandoned Spokane House on April 7, 1826, the Finlay family remained there. The next two years of his life were a mixture of famine and feast. For example, when he fixed botanist David Douglas's gun and showed Douglas the various plants with which he was familiar, he was down to his last six weeks supply of camas roots; however, when Douglas later returned, Finlay was able to supply him with an abundance of salmon from his fish barrier. "Jacko" died at about the age of sixty at Spokane House and at his request his body was buried under one of the bastions. In 1951 his bones, along with five pipes, a hunting knife, spectacles and an iron cup were unearthed at the site and taken to the Cheney Cowles Memorial Museum, Spokane, Washington. At the request of his descendants, his body was reinterred in a field at the Spokane House site on July 25, 1976.

Jacques Finlay had a number of wives and nineteen or more children. Three wives were an unnamed Chippewa woman (?-?), Teshwentichina, (?-?) [Spokane] and an unnamed Pend D'Oreille woman (?-?). The children were Xavier (c.1779-?), James (1794-1853), possibly John (c.1800-?), Augustin Yoostah (c.1800-83), Patrick "Pichina/Bishnah/Bish-ca-nath/Pishot/Jocko Patrick" (1802-1879), François Benetsee/Penetzi/Penache/Penasta (1805-1873), Jacques Miaquam (?-?), Maria Josephite "Josette" (c. 1810-1869), Suzette (?-?), Joatte (?-?), Keyackie (?-?), Isabella (?-?), Baptiste (?-?) Basil (?-?) Josette (?-?), an unnamed child (?-?), Nicholas "Nicolai" (c. 1816), Rosette He-Hi-Ta (c.1823-1908) and Margaret "Maggie" (c.1828-?).

Jocko River, a branch of the Flat Head River, Jocko Valley, Jocko Prairie and Jocko Mountain Range, all on the Flathead Reservation [Montana], were named after Jacques Finlay.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA SnkCoPJ 3; FtVanCB 4; HBCABio; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Belyea, p. 40-170; ChSoc XL, p. xci, p. 301; G. Simpson, Fur Trade, p. 31; D. Douglas, Journal, p. 63, 169, 171, 203 SS: Meyers, "Jacques Raphael", p. 163-67; M. W. Campbell, p. 178, 182; DCB Holmgren; Courchane, p. 6-23

See Also: Dumond, Alexander (possible Son-in-Law); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Son); Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Son); Finlay, Raphael Jr (probable Son); Finlay, Keyackie (Son); Finlay, Miaquam (Son); Finlay, Nicholas (Son)

Finlay, John [1] (fl. 1817 - 1821) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lachine, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1821?); Clerk, Columbia Department (1821).

John Finlay [1] joined the NWC on May 7, 1817 as a clerk for seven years and crossed the Rockies onto the Pacific slopes that same year as part of Joseph LaRocque's group. He most likely worked continuously in the area for he is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2; HBCA NWCAB 9

Finlay, John [2] [variation: Jean] (c. 1800 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1800

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Member, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Middleman, South Party (1836 - 1839); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Carpenter, Fort Langley (1840 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Langley (1840 - 1842); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1843); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844); Carpenter, Fort Victoria (1844 - 1845); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1847); Settler, Willamette (1846+).

John Finlay joined the HBC in 1833, probably as a middleman. He entered the Columbia in 1833 from the Athabasca River area, for it was noted that he received extra pay from that area as a boute. (However, a J. B. Finly at the 1825 Rendezvous may have been this John Finlay.) For the next fourteen years he worked at various locations in the Columbia Department before retiring to the Willamette Valley on September 30, 1846.

John Finlay had one wife and no recorded children. Four years before retiring, on November 10, 1842, he married Catherine Chinook (c.1814-1849) who died at Chinook on November 20, 1849. She was most likely buried in the old Chinook cemetery, long since been abandoned and obliterated, on Bakers Bay.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-15, 20, 24-26; YFDS 5b-5c, 7, 17; FtVanASA 3-8 PS: CCR 1b, 1c

Finlay, Keyackie [variation: Kiahkick, Kiakik, Keyakik Finley] (fl. 1822 - 1830s) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly East of the Rocky Mountains (born to Jacques Raphael "Jocko" Finlay and a Chippewa woman) Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Country (1822 - 1825); Freeman trapper, Snake Country (1826).

Another son of "Jacko" Finlay, and therefore a third generation fur trader, Keyackie appeared on the fur trade records in the Columbia in the fall of 1822 having come from the Saskatchewan, where he was apparently working as a freeman. In the spring of 1823, he accompanied Finan McDonald into the Snake Country. Even though on February 10, 1824, he was deemed "not worth equipping" (SnkCoPJ 1, fo. 2) by Alexander Ross, he went on the Snake Expedition of that spring but, on April 12, threatened to leave the group as Ross would not advance him ammunition to trade with the Nez Percés. (George Simpson, on his way through in 1824, discovered that freemen were intercepting the Salish furs thus driving up the prices. As a result, Simpson ordered the HBC not to supply freemen any longer.) He likely continued on the expedition but was not further noted by Ross. In the autumn of 1824, Keyackie Finlay left Flathead Post for the Ogden's Snake Country with one gun, three horses, and six traps. He may have worked as a freeman with other expeditions but did not appear on further records until the Snake Expedition of 1830 when he appears to have been too ill and lame to accompany the Snake Party. He did not appear on additional fur trade records and circumstances of his death have not been traced.

Keyackie Finlay had one unnamed wife and three children, David (?-?), Susanne (?-?) and an unnamed child.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[As]AB 10; FtSpokRD 1; SnkCoPJ 1, 2; FtVanCB 6 SS: Courchane, p. 350

See Also: Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Brother); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Brother); Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Raphael Jr (Brother); St. Germain, Saulteux (Relative); Finlay, Miaquam (Brother); Finlay, Nicholas (Brother)

Finlay, Miaquam [variation: Miquam, Mi'Kwam, Jacob, Malcom, Nequam, Michquam, Misquotham, Migwam, Wikwam, Wikuam Finely] (c. 1820 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably before 1821 (born to Jacques Raphael "Jocko" Finlay and a Chippewa woman)

Death: probably on the Flathead Reservation, Montana

Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1828 - 1832); Trapper, Fort Colville (1832 - 1839); Trapper, Flatheads (1842).

Son of Jacques "Jacko" Finlay, Miaquam Finlay, another third generation Finlay fur trader/trapper, gave his birth date in the 1860 Census as c.1821, an improbably late date. Miaquam likely got his name from his father's friend, Miaquin Martin, who travelled with his father and David Thompson. Miaquam's early life was most certainly spent travelling with his father and brothers and, when his father died in May 1828, Miaquam and Augustin were invited to join the Snake Expedition of 1828. He, like his large number of brothers, spent his career in the Colville, Flatheads, Bitterroot, and Snake Country areas as a freeman trapper and was seldom mentioned in the fur trade journals. In 1849, Miaquam and his family, like many others, travelled to California for the 1849 Gold Rush, returning a year or two later, stopping briefly in the Oregon Territory. In 1857-1858, Miaquam Finlay and his family were already settled north of the Flathead Lake, on the future Flathead Reservation. There he raised a large family and the date and place of his death have not been traced but he died after 1860, probably on the Flathead Reservation.

Miaquam Finlay had two or more wives and twelve or more children. His first wife was Agnes Paul (1820-?), daughter of Aeneas "Big Knife" (Iroquois) Paul and Mary "Ukupa" One Hoof. Their children were John (1844-?), Julia (1844-?), Joseph (1847-?), David (1849-?), Augustin (1852-?), Adolph "Corto" (1856-?), Eleanor/Leonore (?-?), Mary Elizabeth/Betsy (?-?) and Angelic/Caroline (?-?). Another wife was Betsey Ashley/Asselin, daughter of Jean Pierre Asselin and Rosalie. Their daughter was Jane/Jeanette. Two other children who can't be placed with their mothers are Tinum (Tanum-Anthony) (1830-?) and Cecille.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 4; YFASA 9, 11-15; YFDS 3b, 4b-7, 11; FtVanASA 2-6 PS: CCR 3a SS: Courchane, p. 139-142

See Also: Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Brother); St. Germain, Saulteux (Relative); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Brother); Finlay, Raphael Jr (Brother); Finlay, Keyackie (Brother); Finlay, Nicholas (Brother)

Finlay, Nicholas [variation: Nicolai Finley] (c. 1820 - c. 1887) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Pacific Northwest - c. 1820 (born to Jacques Raphael "Jocko" Finlay and Teshwentichina [Spokane])

Death: probably on the Flathead Reservation, Montana – after 1886

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1834); Apprentice, Thomas McKay's Trapping Party (1834 - 1835); Apprentice, Snake Party (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Snake Party (1836 - 1837); Apprentice, Snake Party (1837 - 1839); Middleman, Snake Party (1839 - 1841); Trapper, Flatheads (1841 - 1843); Trapper, Columbia Department (1843 - 1844).

Nicholas Finlay, son of "Jacko" Finlay, is remembered in Washington history for his association with the Whitman massacre of 1847 and the fear his subsequent activities evoked. Nicholas, also a third generation fur trader who grew up in the Spokane House area where his father worked for the North West Company, began work with the HBC at Fort Vancouver on February 1, 1834 as an apprentice, at the young age of thirteen or fourteen. He worked for about ten years, largely in the Snake Country/Flatheads area, and appeared to finish employment around 1844-1845. At that time he lived near the Tshimakain Mission. What has been written about Nicholas' association with the November 29, 1847 massacre of those at the Whitman Waiilatpu Mission is fairly consistent. Around 1847, Finlay moved south to work at the Waiilatpu Mission, a site not far from the HBC post of Nez Perces/Walla Walla and the later U.S. military base of Fort Walla Walla, and set up his lodge a few hundred feet from the mission house. At the height of a then measles epidemic, a false rumour was spread among the Cayuse by Joe Lewis, a mixed-descent malcontent who had arrived with the wagons in 1847, that Whitman had intended to poison the Cayuse and take their land. Since the subsequent plot to kill Whitman was hatched in Nicholas' nearby lodge, Nicholas had full knowledge of it but failed to warn Whitman, perhaps fearing for his and his Cayuse wife's life or maybe he believed that such an event would never happen. On the day of the killings while Nicholas and Joseph Stanfield, another employee, were casually milking the cows, three mixed descent children, including John and Stephen (two sons of John Manson) escaped the carnage to Finlay's lodge; Nicholas spirited them to Fort Nez Percés the next day and told William McBean the news. Finlay, who never was an active member of the slaughter, went north to the Colville Valley and in February evoked fear in the local missionary population when he tried to enlist members of his families to join the Cayuses in the war against the Americans. In the 1850s, having not been punished for his apparent involvement, Nicholas lived in the Colville Valley, near brothers Patrick, Miaquam, Augustin and down the valley from brother James. In the 1860s, he and his family had moved to the Bitterroot Valley. Nicholas eventually settled in the Jocko Valley in Flathead country [Montana], joining Joe Lewis (who was eventually killed in an attempted stagecoach robbery in 1862) from his Waillaipu days. Nicholas died after 1886, probably on the Flathead Indian Reservation where he had been living with his family.

Nicholas Finlay appears to have had at least two wives. One wife was Marie, Iroquois. A son was François (1850-?). Another wife was Suzette/Josette Cayuse/Palouse. Children from one or both wives were Angele (1842-?), Josette Mary (1856-?), John (?-?), Timothy (c.1858-?), Rosalie (?-?), Nicholas (?-?) and Dominique (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-15, 19-20, 24-25; YFDS 5b-7, 11; FtVanASA 3-8 PS: J. V. Campbell, p. 196 SS: Courchane, p. 352-359; Drury, Marcus and Narcissa; Thompson, Whitman Mission, p. 87-88; Thompson, Shallow Grave, p. 87-88
See Also: Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Raphael Jr (Brother); Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Brother); Finlay, Keyackie (Brother); Finlay, Miaquam (Brother); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Brother)

Finlay, Raphael Jr [variation: James Finlay] (1794 - c. 1854) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Upper Bow Fort [Alberta] - 1794 (born to Jacques Raphael Finlay)

Death: Colville Valley, Pacific Northwest - c. 1854

Fur trade employee

NWC Interpreter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Hunter, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814).

The person listed as Raphael Finlay Junior in the North West Company Records of 1813-1814, is possibly James Finlay, the nineteen year old son of Jacques "Jocko" Finlay. However, he may be the first of Jocko's children, the thirty-four year old Xavier, who later appeared at Fort Colville in 1859. A case for the above being James is that he appears to have first joined the NWC in 1812 as an interpreter and hunter. Little can be traced of his career in the fur trade but James and his brother Patrick Pachina (1802-1879) were active at Jasper House during the 1820s and 1830s doing odd jobs about the post. Over the winter and spring, they trapped furs. James moved to the Colville Valley in the 1840s and was still living there by 1854 when he appears to have died.

James' family life, not entirely clear, is from D. C. Courchane, the Finlay Family biographer. James appeared to have one wife, Susanna Matilda/Susan Bryere/Susan Dupuis. On May 17, 1844, James and Susan were married at La Port d'Enfer [Hellgate, Montana]. Fifteen of their children were Abraham (1819-1912), Catherine (1823/1834?-?), Elizabeth (1824-?), Louise/Aloysia/Ludavica (c.1826-?), Nancy/Anna (c.1827-?), Pierre/Pial/Peter (1828-?), Mary Ann (1832-?), John (1832-?), Jeanne (c.1833-?), Sophie (1834-?), Josephine/Josette/Suzette (1839-?) James/Jemmi (1840-?), William (c.1841-?), Nazaire/Nazon (1845-?), and Joseph (?-?).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 SS: Courchane, p. 24-27
See Also: Finlay, Augustin Yoostah (Brother); Finlay, Francois Benetsee (Brother); Finlay, Jacques Raphael (Father); Finlay, Keyackie (Brother); St. Germain, Saulteux (Relative); Finlay, Miaquam (Brother); Finlay, Nicholas (Brother)

Finlay, Thorburn (fl. 1813 - 1816) (probably Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Thorburn Finlay may have been one of the Spokane House Finlays. He joined the NWC on January 3, 1814 for two years as a milieu and hunter and soon headed up river with the express to Kootenae House and over the Rockies to Fort des Prairies. He returned and joined the large ten-canoe brigade to Fort William/Montreal. He was to be free in 1816 at Spokane.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 632

Finlayson, Duncan (c. 1796 - 1862) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly Dingwall, Scotland - c. 1796

Death: London, England - July 1862

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Factor, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1834); Chief Factor in charge with John McLoughlin, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1837).

Duncan Finlayson joined the HBC as an apprentice clerk in 1815. An accidental gunshot wound in 1825 saw him going to England for medical treatment; consequently, from 1826-1831 he acted as clerk at an easier posting at Red River. He became Chief Factor in 1831 and was appointed to the Columbia where he stayed almost continuously until 1837. During this time, he purchased the Lama from William Henry McNeill, took several trips to the Sandwich Islands and along the North Pacific Coast and supervised the Beaver's trip to the coast. As well, he negotiated sending supplies to the Russians and founded Fort McLoughlin. After leaving the Columbia he went to Scotland where he married George Simpson's sister-in-law. Between 1839-1844 he was Governor of Assiniboia and in 1841 he recruited settlers for the proposed Puget Sound/HBC colony, sending out twenty-three families under James Sinclair. In 1844, he and his wife left Red River for Lachine, Canada East where he spent the rest of his Canadian career working with George Simpson, who made him the executor of his will. During this time he and Simpson negotiated land claims in Washington. When visiting England, he assisted in the publication of two books by Alexander Ross. Finlayson retired on June 1, 1859 and moved to London, spending the rest of his career serving on the London Committee.

Duncan Finlayson had one wife, Isobel Graham Simpson (the sister of Frances Simpson) whom he married on Nov. 10, 1838 in Bromley-by-Bow, Middlesex. No children have been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4b-5b, 6-7; FtVanASA 3-4; SimpsonCB; HBCABio SS: HBRS I, p. 437-38, HBRS XXII, p. 441; DCB Friesen

Finlayson, Roderick (1818 - 1892) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Durnish, Balmacara, Lochalsh, Ross, Scotland - March 1818 (born to Alexander Finlayson and Mary Morrison)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - January 1892

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk, Fort Vancouver/Columbia Department General Charges (1839 - 1840); Manager, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1841) (took over from Russians); Apprentice clerk/assistant to Kennedy in construction, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1841); Assistant to John McLoughlin Jr., Fort Stikine (1841 - 1842); Apprentice clerk, Fort Simpson (1842 - 1843); Clerk, Fort Victoria (Straits of Juan de Fuca) (1843 - 1844); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1844 - 1848); Clerk in charge, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1850); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1859); Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1859 - 1861); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1861 - 1862); Chief Factor, Columbia Department [Interior] (1862 - 1867); Chief Factor, Fort Victoria (1867 - 1869); Chief Factor, Columbia Department [Interior] (1871 - 1872).

Roderick Finlayson had a long career with the HBC. In 1837, he sailed to New York, and through the influence of a relative that he met accidentally, landed an appointment as clerk with the HBC. In the summer of 1838 he was appointed to Fort William where he was badly injured trying to keep thieves out of the store (Finlayson, Biography, p. 2). In 1839, he headed west with Dr. John McLoughlin to Fort Vancouver and on his arrival was placed in charge of the nearby saw and grist-mill where lumber and spars were prepared for the Sandwich Islands. In 1840 he went north to leased Russian territory and built Fort Taku [Durham]. There the local natives were determined to take revenge for a previous incident in which a boatload of Boston men had killed a large number of local Aborigines. Finlayson was once again injured and the fort was besieged for several days. Because they were unable to trade, the natives agreed to a cease fire and a potlatch of reconciliation was held in which ten native slaves were killed as a demonstration of power. As the chiefs were of too high a class to bury them, the Company men had to bury all ten (Finlayson, History, p. 75-76). In the autumn of 1841 he was attached to the party which assumed control of Fort Stikine from the Russians; Finlayson himself took over the trade shop. In the spring of 1842, he took over the Fort Simpson trade shop. From there he travelled south, saw the dismantling of Fort McLoughlin, and on June 1, 1843 commenced with the building of Fort Victoria. Horses and cattle were imported from Fort Nisqually and a farm begun. Upon the death of Charles Ross in 1844, Finlayson took charge of Fort Victoria with Charles's son, John as his assistant. He had problems with the natives stealing cattle and robbing other trading natives, and had to take a firm hand at the fort to assert his jurisdiction. The natives became angry at being rebuked and fired fusillades of lead into the palisades and rooftops. After getting an interpreter to empty one of the native houses, Finlayson unloaded a nine-pound cannon of its grapeshot into the house, splintering it into many pieces. In this way, he was able to negotiate a peaceful settlement. When Douglas took charge in 1849, Finlayson was made head accountant. He was promoted to Chief Trader in 1850, and appeared on the books without wages for outfit 1850-1851. He purchased extensive acreage in the Victoria District in 1852 and in the South Saanich area in 1858 and was a member of the Legislative Council for Vancouver Island's dependencies, and appointed Chief Factor in 1859. After a year's furlough in 1861-1862, he took over the superintendence of the company's affairs in the interior of B.C. Retiring on June 1, 1872, he settled in Victoria to manage his estates and became mayor of that city in 1878 (Finlayson, Biography, p. 1-28).

The Finlayson farm was originally part of the Work estate and included part of Douglas Street in Victoria.

Roderick Finlayson had one wife and eleven children. On December 14, 1849, he married Sarah Work (1829-1906), daughter of John Work. Together they had Mary (1850-1894), Sarah Jane (1852-1853), Catherine (1854-1855), Ann Jane (1856-1937), John Work (1858-1895), Sarah Susette (1860-1935), Duncan Nicol (1862-1910), Letitia Agnes (1864-1945), Roderick David (1867-1916), Cecilia Margaret (1870-1955) and William Henry (1873-1908).

Roderick Finlayson's unpublished "History of Vanocuver Island and the Northwest Coast" is in the BCARS in Victoria. His Biograpahy of Roderick Finlayson was published in Victoria in 1891.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-32; FtVanASA 6-9; FtVicASA 1-14, 16; HBCABio; BCA AbstLnd; Finlayson 2; Mallandaine, p. 69; BCCR CCCath; RossBayCem; Van-PL Colonist, Nov. 24, 1894 PPS: Finlayson; HBRS VI, p. 388-89 SS: Lugin, p. 66-70; Walbran, p. 178
See Also: Work, John (Father-in-Law)

Finlayson, Roderick Jr. (fl. 1854 - 1858) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1854 - 1856); Apprentice clerk, New Caledonia (1857 - 1858).

Although he bears the same name as the above Roderick Finlayson, it is uncertain who the parents of Roderick Jr. were. He first appeared to work for PSAC/HBC interests in December 1854 and for the next two years did everything from scraping hides, to dipping sheep, building roads, sorting potatoes, etc. He also may have doubled as a clerk in training. By June of 1856, alcohol was beginning to interfere with his work and around August of that year, he left Nisqually for New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 10-13; FtVicASA 5; Dickey

Firth, Robert (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Robert First joined the supply ship Princess Royal in Victoria on March 5, 1857 for his return voyage to the British Isles. Just how he got to Victoria has not been traced.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3

Fiset, Charles [variation: Fisette, Fisete, Fizet] (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Arpentigny, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1823 (born to Charles Fisette and Françoise Rivet)

Death: probably Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Umpqua (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Umpqua (1844 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1847 - 1849).

According to the Catholic Records, Charles Fisette came to Oregon in 1837, but according to HBCA records he joined the HBC around 1840 from Montreal. On December 13, 1847, Fisette's seventeen year old slave, Marie, Umpqua, died. In 1849 he retired and remained in the area; and, in 1852, settled in Clark County, Washington. By 1861, he may have thought of settling north of the international border for, on July 7, 1861, he pre-empted 160 acres [64.8 ha] in the Okanagan District, Kelowna and Mission Creek area. However, as there was no Certificate of Improvement or Crown Grant, he likely did not follow through on his claim.

On May 1, 1848, he married Marie Louise Crosby, apparently also known as Ann Eliza Crosby, daughter of John Crosby and Rachel Brown of Johnston, Upper Canada at the Fort Vancouver Catholic Church. Both her parents were present at the wedding. No recorded children have been located.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 24-30; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 16-17; PPS: CCR 1b SS: Laing, p. 475

Fisher, Adam [variation: Fictor, Ficher] (c. 1791 - 1811) (American)

Birth: possibly New Jersey, United States - c. 1791

Death: Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island - June 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Seaman, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

Nineteen year old Adam Fisher joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as an ordinary seaman some time before September 3, 1810 for its voyage to the Northwest Coast. Fisher arrived at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22, 1811 and stayed on the vessel as it proceeded north to Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island. There, in June, the vessel was attacked and all crew members, except the interpreter, died when the ship was blown up.

PS: USNA Tonquin PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 49; Franchère, p. 12

Fisher, Alexander (c. 1783 - 1847) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Kingston, Upper Canada or Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1783

Death: probably Montreal, Canada East - April 1847

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Alexandria (1829 - 1839).

Flamboyant Alexander Fisher first served with the NWC before joining the HBC as a clerk at the time of coalition. Between 1822-1829 he served at Ile a la Crosse in the Nelson/Severn District, and was in charge of the Montreal Department until 1829. That year he replaced George McDougall at New Caledonia's Fort Alexandria and, being an ambitious man of style, went to some length to encroach on other posts' territories. To impress the natives with the necessity of bringing furs only to Alexandria, or face the prospect of being swallowed up in a fiery furnace, he would fill a wash-basin full of "holy water", have it carried around by a dressed up cook, and, with the aid of a whitewash brush, beneficently sprinkle it on the purified and somewhat awestruck locals (Morice, p. 155). George Simpson wrote acerbically of him and complained about his drinking (HBRs XXX p. 192). Perhaps some of this was justified as, in June 1837 when he was also in charge of nearby Fort Chilcotin, Fisher showed very little understanding of the perilousness of the Chilcotin situation by chastising a justifiably worried John McIntosh for his implied overreaction to the very real dangers that lay there at that time. After ten years at Fort Alexandria, Fisher returned east of the Rockies managing other posts (Trout Lake, Fort Good Hope) until he went on two year's furlough in 1843. He retired on June 1, 1845. Fisher died almost two years later, in 1847, one year after he wrote his will in Montreal.

The name of Fisher's wife has not been traced but his children were: Charlotte (?-?), John (?-?), Innrace [?] (?-?), Jauco (?-?), Mary (?-?) and Donald (?-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 9, 11-12, 17-18; FtAlexAB 1; SimpsonCB; Wills PPS: HBRs III, p. 440; HBRs XXII, p. 441; HBRs XXX, p. 191-92 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 154-57, 168, 181-83

Fisher, Caesar (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

Caesar Fisher shipped aboard the Convoy [W. H. McNeill] at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast as a labourer, Fisher and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels.

Fitzpatrick, Thomas (1799 - 1854) (American: Irish)

Birth: County Cavan, Ireland - 1799

Death: Washington D.C., United States – February 7, 1854

Free trader

SJ & S Untraced vocation, Rendezvous (1827 - 1830); RMFC Trader, Snake Country (1832 - 1837).

According to his biographers, Thomas Fitzpatrick came to the United States before he was seventeen and was soon involved in the Indian trade in the Middle West. He was with William H. Ashley early on and was with William Sublette in 1826-1827 attending most of the Rendezvous' from 1827. By 1828 successful HBC trapping of the Flatheads area forced Fitzpatrick the following year to trap in other areas along with David Jackson, Sublette and Joseph Meek. At the 1830 Rendezvous, Smith, Jackson and Sublette sold their mountain trapping interests to Fitzpatrick and his partners James Bridger, Milton Sublette, Henry Fraeb and Jean B. Gervais, known under the name Rocky Mountain Fur Company. His inability to get trade goods to the 1831(?) Rendezvous cost him dearly and so the following year he rushed in supplies but losses of his goods to pursuing Gros Ventres left him in a semi-starved condition. He continued trapping on both sides of the Continental Divide and in 1834 contracted Nathaniel J. Wyeth to bring out supplies for Rendezvous of that year. His American Fur Company competitors bettered him, however, when they convinced his RMFC to dissolve their partnership; this forced Wyeth to move on and build his own outlet, Fort Hall. Consequently, in August, Fitzpatrick regrouped with Bridger, M. Sublette, Lucien B. Fontenelle and Andrew Drips as Fontenelle, Drips & Co. which, at the 1836 Rendezvous, was bought out by Joshua Pilcher of the AFC. From 1841, Fitzpatrick used his experience and diplomatic talent to guide wagon trains into California and the Oregon Territory and in 1846 was appointed Indian Agent. With this new position, Fitzpatrick was responsible for negotiating major Indian treaties. He died in a Washington D.C. hotel in 1854 while he was discussing a treaty.

Thomas Fitzpatrick had one wife and two children. He married Margaret Poisal (?-?), daughter of French Canadian trapper, John Poisal (?-?). Their children were Andrew Jackson (?-?) and Virginia Thomasine (?-?).

SS: Hafen & Ghent; Hafen & A. W., p. 236-51

Flanagan, Moses (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

NWC Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); PFC Bookbinder, Fort Okanagan (October 13, 1813); Bookbinder, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814).

Moses Flanagan, a bookbinder working for the PFC, was first found at Fort Astoria in August 1812. He may have come on the ship Beaver [Cornelius Sowle] in May of that year. At Astoria, he functioned as a tailor, making trousers and shirts, occasionally hunting or sailing in the Dolly. In October, 1813, after the PFC had been taken over by the NWC, Flanagan appears to have signed on with the latter and left with a party a few days later to the Willamette Post where he was to trap for the winter of 1813-1814.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10

Flathead, Julia (Mrs. Peter Skene Ogden) (c. 1800 - 1886) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1800 (born to Thérèse Flathead)

Death: Lac La Hache, British Columbia - 1886

Other

U.A. Wife, Peter Skene Ogden (? - ?).

Daughter of Thérèse Flathead and step-daughter of François Rivet, Julia Flathead is best known as the wife of Peter Skene Ogden, in her role of helpmate during which, for example, she swam the icy rivers to retrieve stolen packs. She died at the home of her daughter, Sarah Julia McKinlay at an age much less than her reputed ninety-eight years (CCR 1, A-26). She was not mentioned in Ogden's journals.

One recorded son was Isaac (1839-?).

PS: CCR 1a

See Also: Rivet, Francois (Step-Father); Ogden, Peter Skene (Husband); Hamilton, Gavin (Son-in-Law); McKinlay, Archibald (Son-in-Law); Ogden, Isaac (Son)

Fleming, Thomas [variation: Flemming] (c. 1803 - ?) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: c. 1803

Death: possibly Canada, British North America

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Fraser Lake (wintered) (1820 - 1821); HBC Clerk, New Caledonia (1821 - 1823); Clerk, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1823 - 1824).

Thomas Fleming joined the NWC around 1818 and worked as a clerk for the HBC in New Caledonia in 1821-1824. He was deemed to have "considerable talents" (FtStJmsRd 1, fo. 4) and in 1824, after leaving Babine post in a very emaciated state, frozen and without snowshoes during an exceptionally cold winter, was appointed with Donald McKenzie, also a clerk, in charge of Oxford House in the Island Lake District. At the end of his apprenticeship in 1825, he retired to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2; FtStJmsRD 1; McLlkCB 1 SS: HBRS III, p. 441-42

Flett, David (c. 1813 - 1842) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1813 (born to David Flett and Jannet Borwick)

Death: Okanagan Falls [British Columbia] - May 1842

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1835); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1835); Labourer and Personal Servant, Fort Colville (1836 - 1842).

David Flett's father, David, had worked for the HBC at York Factory between 1806-1812. Young David, of Harray, Orkney, followed his father's footsteps and signed on with the HBC on April 3, 1835 as a labourer for five years. He sailed in June from Stromness on the Prince of Wales to Moose River, thence on the Prince Rupert to York Factory where he may have spent the winter. He made his way overland and, for the next four years, he was servant to Chief Factor Archibald McDonald at Fort Colville. In May 1842, he drowned at Okanagan Falls along with Canote Umphreville, Pierre Martineau, Louison Boucher and André Areuhonianté. After his death, his balance was paid to his father in Harray.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 12; log of Prince Rupert IV 8; FtVanASA 3-7; YFDS 7, 9-12; YFASA 19-20, 22; FtVanCB 29; HBCABio SS: Flett family researcher

Flett, John [c] (? - 1853) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Firth, Orkney

Death: probably Pacific Northwest - February 1853

Maritime employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales IV (ship) (1838); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1841); Blacksmith, Beaver (steamer) (1841 - 1843); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1844); Blacksmith, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1853).

John Flett joined the HBC in Orkney on March 21, 1838 as a blacksmith, and sailed for York Factory. After making his way overland, he spent most of his time working as a blacksmith on the steamer Beaver. Flett died in 1853 of unstated causes.

John Flett left a wife named Margaret. No children have been traced.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 11; YFASA 19, 24-32; FtVanASA 6-8; FtVicASA 1-2; Wills; BCA BCCR
CCCath SS: Flett family researcher

Flett, John (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

John Flett made one return voyage from London to the Northwest Coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal, 3; PortB 1

Flett, Joseph (c. 1825 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1825

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Victoria general charges (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Middleman and labourer, New Caledonia (1854 - 1876).

Joseph Flett worked for the HBC as a labourer until 1876, when he deserted. No family has been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1, 3-5, 7-16

Flett, Magnus (c. 1821 - 1899) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably in or near Birsay, Orkney - c. 1821

Death: Stranger Creek, [Colville, Washington] - January 13, 1899

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1844); Labourer, Thompson River (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Colville (1846 - 1851).

Magnus Flett joined the HBC in 1844, sailed to York Factory and later, worked on the Pacific slopes, mainly as a labourer. He retired in 1851 but stayed in the Colville area and in his later years developed cancer. When he was seventy-eight years of age, he cut his hand, which would not heal for months and finally died of blood poisoning. He died in 1899 at his home on Stranger Creek at the age of seventy-eight.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 4; YFASA 25-32; FtVanASA 9; OHS Statesman, Jan. 15, 1899, as in SB #56, p. 155

Flett, Robert (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Robert Flett made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Flett, Thomas (c. 1814 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Harray, Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1814 (born to James Flett and Margaret Flett)

Death: probably Colville Valley, Washington Territory

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1833); Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1833); Labourer, Fort Colville (1834 - 1838); In charge, Fort Colville (1837 - 1839) (in charge of Kootenais Post during winters); Middleman, Fort Colville (1838 - 1839); Post master, Fort Colville (1839 - 1840); Post master, Fort Colville (1840 - 1842); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1842 - 1845); Indian trader, Fort Colville (1845 - 1849); Interpreter, Fort Colville (1849 - 1851).

Thomas Flett entered the service of the HBC April 16, 1833 in Orkney and sailed that June from Stromness to York Factory and then went overland to the coast. He worked largely in and around Fort Colville and retired in the area in 1851. By 1865 he resided in the Colville Valley and was a citizen of the United States.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 10; log of Prince Rupert IV 7; YFASA 14-15, 19-20, 24-30, 32; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-7, 9; HBCABio SS: Flett family researcher

Fleurie, Antoine (fl. 1813 - 1818) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Antoine Fleurie was engaged by the NWC in Rainy Lake in 1813 for three years and wintered in Fort George [Astoria] in 1813-1814. In the spring of 1814, as part of the brigade heading to Fort William and Montreal, he was a middleman of a canoe headed by Alexander Stewart and Thomas McKay. He signed a further contract on January 23, 1818 to work in the Northwest.

PS: HBCA NWC 10; SHdeSB Liste PPS: Coues, p.872

Fleury, Benone (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1834); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1840); Temporary Steward, Vancouver (barque) (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Columbia Department (1842 - 1844).

Benone Fleury joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1830 and made his way west over the Rockies and assisted in the construction of forts Simpson and Taku. At Taku, Fleury, like many of the other servants of the area, did not venture much beyond the site as the local natives were hostile given that they had been fired upon by Boston traders a few years previous. After the initial construction of the Fort, he was moved in August, 1840 by the steamer Beaver, to Fort Stikine where, to his misfortune, he eventually became caught up in that post's events. At first all was peaceful, for on October 12, 1840 he took a wife, likely a local native Stikine. By September 1841, he was caught stealing alcohol from the post's supply; his reason was that if John McLoughlin Jr. was able to give alcohol to the natives, then the whites should also be able to enjoy themselves too. For this he was severely beaten by the post manager, McLoughlin, and a month later, was replaced as steward. By November he was doing light duties such as making candles. By the spring of 1842, the discipline of the fort began to break down, the alcohol flowed more freely and McLoughlin had become more punitive in his floggings. In a move of self-preservation, the men of the fort pledged in a written document that if McLoughlin were not transferred, they would leave. On the evening of April 20, 1842, many members of the fort (including McLoughlin) were drinking heavily when threats were exchanged, bullets fired and McLoughlin was shot dead. After the event, Fleury gave a deposition as to his version of the events which, like the others, varied as to how often John Jr. had become intoxicated. Because of the beatings he had received the previous fall and the fact that the fatal bullet had come from Fleury's house, Fleury was both a material witness to the events as well as a suspect in the plot. For the next months, those involved in the events at Fort Stikine were held in semi-confinement at various coastal forts until 1844, when John McLoughlin Sr. sent them all from Fort Vancouver to York Factory to be dealt with there. John McLoughlin Sr. said Benone was "drunken, soft & timid."

Benone Fleury's family life is difficult to trace. When he was at Fort Stikine he had a Haida wife with whom he had a daughter, Anzuelth (?-?). The wife and daughter were abandoned after the murder of John McLoughlin Jr.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-8; YFDS 4a-7, 11; YFASA 11-15, 19, 23; FtStikPJ 1-3; FtVanCB 29-3 SS: Wrangel Museum correspondence, Robert Suratt's Mar. 1, 1946 Wrangell letter to Willard E. Ireland, [Haida wife and name of child]

Fleury, Jean Baptiste [variation: Fleurie] (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1831); Middleman, Thompson River (1831 - 1832).

Jean Baptiste Fleury joined the HBC from St. Francis in 1828. He worked in New Caledonia until 1832, at which point he returned to Montreal, where he was paid.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-12; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b; FtVanASA 2

Fleury, Joseph (c. 1805 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1805

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1833).

Joseph Fleury joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1829 and is on record as having left Michel Laframboise's party in November 1833 - he probably returned east at that time.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11, 13; YFDS 3b, 4b-5a; FtVanASA 2

Fleury, Michel (1803 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Columbia District (1832 - 1833).

Michel Fleury joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1830 and is on record as having returned east over the Rockies to Canada in 1833.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-4b; YFASA 11-12

Flewin, Thomas [variation: Tom Fluen] (1832 - 1901) (British: English)

Birth: Wilmington, Kent, England - October 13, 1832 (born to John Flewin and Phillis [Shaves] Flewin)

Death: Fort Victoria (Victoria), British Columbia - June 2, 1901

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1855 - 1858); Sponsored settler, Columbia Department (1859 - 1860).

Thomas Flewin's farming experience in England likely influenced him coming to Vancouver Island with his new wife on the Norman Morison. After his arrival in January 1853, he worked in Fort Victoria and on the steamer Otter until the end of his contract around 1858 when he purchased thirty-two acres [13 ha] in the Esquimalt District. In 1862, as a severe winter killed off his cattle and left the Flewins broke, the family moved into Victoria where Thomas took control of the rather large Fort Victoria Company garden. He went on to spend twenty years at the Victoria wharfs as a porter, warehouseman and customs' agent, and with financing from friend Jarvis Longhurst, ran two saloons. He raised a large family and died at his residence at No. 35 South Park Street in Victoria in 1901.

Thomas Flewin had one wife, Jane Theodosia Castleton (1833-1894), sister to Richard Castleton and whom he married July 12, 1852 in Wilmington in a double wedding ceremony with Richard and wife, Sarah Williams, just before their departure. The Flewins had seven recorded children: George, (1853-1854), John (1857-1942), Rosana Jane (1859-1886), Thomas (1860-1863), William Henry (1863-1899), Albert Charles (1866-1902), and Isabell May (1871-1891). Wife Jane, who was born May 12, 1833, died November 19, 1894 in Victoria.

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison, 3; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-7; log of Otter, 1; BCA AbstLnd; Mallandain, First Victoria Directory, Victoria, 1960, 1871; VPL The British Colonist, Victoria, B. C., December 25, 1863, p. 3, June 4, 1901, p. 2; 1881 Canada Census, Victoria; PPS: Helmcken, John Sebastian, The Reminiscences of, p. 134; SS: "The Flewin Family History Centre" <http://users.powernet.co.uk/flewin/index.htm>

Flinn, John (fl. 1830 - 1833) (Irish)

Birth: possibly Waterford, Ireland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1830); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1831); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

John Flinn joined the HBC in London on September 28, 1829 and the following month sailed from Blackwall on the HBC brig Isabella for the Northwest Coast. On May 2, 1830, the Isabella came to grief on a spit at the mouth of the Columbia River, forcing the crew to abandon ship. Flinn and others tried unsuccessfully to get it off the spit but managed, with the assistance of the local Clatsop natives, to save a greater part of the cargo. After this Flinn began his work in coastal shipping, left the Columbia for England on the Eagle on October 26, 1832 and arrived in London May 30, 1833.

Little is known of the family life of John Flinn, but an undelivered letter at the HBCA reveals that his uncle William had returned to Ireland from Newfoundland and had died in 1832. His father and brother Nick had both died of cholera in 1832, around the time John was on the coast.

Floriario, Juan (fl. 1815) (probably Portuguese)

Birth: probably Portugal

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

Juan Floriario signed on as a seaman with the NWC schooner Columbia on May 1, 1815. He was paid off on February 11, 1816 and entered the Portuguese service.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Fogeraas, Johan (fl. 1853 - 1854) (possibly Norwegian)

Birth: possibly Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Johan Fogeraas's name appeared on the 1853-1854 Fort Victoria abstracts with no further information. He may have been a Norwegian from the Colinda or was just passing through.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-2

Folster, George (c. 1803 - 1850) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Birsay, Orkney - c. 1803

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1833); Blacksmith, Fort Simpson (1833 - 1834); Blacksmith, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1835); Blacksmith, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1848).

George Folster [b] joined the HBC on October 21, 1830 as a blacksmith, and kept a low profile during his career in the Columbia. Deemed an "ingenious Orkneyman" by Tolmie on May 21, 1834, Folster was brought over from nearby Fort McLoughlin where he was working as a blacksmith to somewhere between Boston's Point and Munsquam Bay where Tolmie's small badly caulked boat, which had been filled with clay for the fort, had sunk into the mire. At low tide Folster secured two canoes together with an oar and ran a rope under the sunken boat. The rising tide almost pulled the two canoes under but successfully buoyed Tolmie's boat out of the mire (Tolmie, p. 279). After leaving Fort McLoughlin around 1835, he carried on as a blacksmith turning out nails and other such items at Fort Vancouver for another eleven years; his relatively high wage was cut in half in 1842, probably for some unrecorded misdemeanour. He died at Fort Vancouver in 1850 and was most likely buried in its graveyard. Movements on his accounts, most likely from his wife Marguerite, continued on his Company account until 1853.

The records of George Folster's family life are somewhat unclear but he appears to have had three successive wives and three recorded children. On January 15, 1837, his daughter Jean (?-?) was baptised by the Reverend Beaver, the mother being recorded as a native Julia. He then appears to have lived with He'lene (1820-44), Chinook who died on August 14, 1844 and was buried the following day. He then chose Marguerite (?-?), Wascopam of the Dalles as a wife and together they had Alexander (1847-?) and William (1849-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; FtSim[N]PJ 3; FtVanASA 2-10; YFDS 4a-5b, 6-7; BCA BCCR-CCCath
PPS: CCR 1b; W. F. Tolmie, p. 279

Fontenelle, Lucien B. (1807 - 1840) (American and French)

Birth: New Orleans, Louisiana - 1807 (born to François and Mareonise Fontenelle)

Death: Bellevue [Nebraska, United States] - 1840

Fur trade employee

AFC Brigade leader, Pacific slopes (1831).

Lucien B. Fontenelle's life was short and colourful. Fontenelle's parents emigrated from Marseilles, France to New Orleans where, around 1807, both Lucien and his sister, Amelia, were born. A few years later, while Lucien and his sister were away at school, parents François and Mareonise drowned in a flood caused by a hurricane. At the age of fifteen, while Lucien was working as a clerk at a bank, he left for St. Louis to get away from the harsh treatment he had been receiving from his aunt. That same year in St. Louis he joined the fur trade (the Missouri Fur Company in partnership with Andrew Drips, William H. Vanderburgh, Joshua Pilcher and Moses Carson) and eventually became a brigade leader for the American Fur Company. On December 22, 1831, for example, it was noted that he had led a party of forty men to the junction of the Salmon and Lemhi rivers to winter over in close proximity of the HBC and RMFC camps, no doubt staying close to them so he could see where the good trapping lay. In partnership with Drips, he built a post at Bellevue, near the present city of Omaha. In 1835, he went into partnership with Thomas Fitzpatrick, Milton Sublette and James Bridger. He traced down his sister, Amelia, who by this time had married well but she rejected her newly found, and for her, rough-hewn, brother. He returned to Bellevue rejected. Although rumours persist that he committed suicide in a drunken rage at Fort Laramie, he appears to have died in 1840, quite sober, in bed at Bellevue.

Lucien Fontenelle had one wife, a woman from Omaha, and four children.

Fontenelle Creek, Wyoming was named after Lucien Fontenelle.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 11; MHS Chouteau PPS: O. Russell, p. 3, 60, 61, 62, 68, 70, 76, 77, 79,80,81,156,168; SS: Chittenden, p. 391

Fooina [variation: Fo-o-ina, Foinal] (fl. c. 1830? - c. 1836?) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands

Death: Pacific Northwest – 1836-1837

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1831 - 1835); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1836 - 1837).

Fooina, who was originally engaged from Oahu in 1830, spent part of his time working at the Fort Vancouver sawmill. In 1835 he returned to Oahu but was re-engaged there late that year or in January 1836. He died some time in the 1836-1837 outfit but as no wages were credited to his name he may have died early in the outfit or been too ill to work.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-6; FtVanCB 9; YFASA 11-16

Foot, William [variation: Footel] (1833 - 1897) (British)

Birth: Dorsetshire, England - 1833

Death: the Lake District, near Victoria, British Columbia - November 8, 1897

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1852); Apprentice engineer, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Simpson (1852 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1854 - 1855); Sundries account, Fort Simpson (1855 - 1856).

William Foot came to Vancouver Island as a HBC sponsored settler on the Norman Morison. On March 19, 1851, Foot joined the HBC steamer Beaver where he worked as a woodcutter and engineer's servant; however, on July 16, 1852 he refused to do duty and was ordered ashore. Two weeks prior to that he had joined three others in a work stoppage ashore. He appears to have spent the next four years ashore at Fort Simpson, probably paying off his debts to HBC and establishing himself. Between 1856-1858, he purchased ninety-two acres [37.2 ha] in the Victoria District and one hundred acres [40.5 ha] in 1858 in the Lake District where he carried on farming for many years. He died on November 8, 1897 at his residence in the Lake District (near Victoria) at the age of sixty-six years and four months.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; log of Beaver 1; FtSimp[N]PJ 7; FtVicASA 1-3; Van-PL Colonist, November 8, 1897, p. 3; BCA AbstLnd SS: Mouat, p. 213

Forbes, James Alexander (c. 1804 - 1881) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scotland - c. 1804

Death: Oakland, California, United States - 1881

Fur trade officer

HBC Occasional acting HBC Agent/British Vice-Consul, San Francisco (1833 - 1845); British Vice-Consul, San Francisco (1833 - 1845).

James Alexander Forbes is more associated with California history than the fur trade of the Pacific Northwest. The circumstances of this Scot's early life are uncertain but he appears to have lived in either Chile or Peru where he learned Spanish. He was shipwrecked on the coast of South America, picked up by the ship Nelson at or near the Galapagos Islands and transferred to the whaler Fanny which brought him to the San Francisco Bay area around 1830 or 1831. In 1832 he was living in Santa Clara, in April 1834, he was naturalized and, in July that same year, married a local California woman. In 1833-1834 the now San Jose trader and a farmer first became associated with the HBC when his services were used by Duncan Finlayson. Around 1836, he appears to have been taken on as agent for, on January 3, 1842 in the Yerba Buena [San Francisco] area, a touring George Simpson found Forbes, then acting as local HBC agent, to be living near the mission of San José de Guadalupe. As Simpson was impressed by Forbes' politeness and his skill as an interpreter, (Simpson, Narrative, p. 304) nine days later he instructed William Glen Rae to further employ Forbes "as an Agent for the sale of goods & purchase of Hides throughout the Bay and along the Coast..." (Simpson letter, p. 160).

That same year, when he was appointed by the British Government as British Vice Consul to reside as Monterey, the story becomes clouded for, according to Forbes, within months he was told by Rae that the California HBC operation would be discontinued; consequently, Forbes considered his contract null and void. He likely ceased working at that time and, inexplicably, by May of the following year McLoughlin asked Rae to dismiss Forbes. Nevertheless, there appears to have been continuous contact with Rae for, when Rae began to drink, mix with the wrong crowd of California insurgents opposing General Micheltorena and accumulate a large $48,000 Company debt, Forbes many times tried to counsel Rae as to the error of his ways (Forbes letter, FtVanCB 33, fo. 188-188d). As a result, more than one and a half years later, on January 19, 1845, when Rae committed suicide, Forbes, then Vice-Consul at the British Consulate for Upper and Lower California took charge of operations according to the wishes of Rae's suicide note (FtVanCB 33, fo. 196bd). During 1845-1846, while Forbes oversaw the movement and sale of HBC goods and the dismissal of servants, he lived in the HBC buildings to prevent their being looted and was relieved of this task in March 1846, when Dugald McTavish arrived on the Condit. In 1846 Forbes acquired a modest amount of property and in 1847 retained his position as British Vice Consul. After the U.S. occupation of the area, he became interested in the New Almaden mines, which eventually involved him in complicated, frustrating litigation and considerable financial loss. In 1881, a still embittered Forbes died in Oakland at the age of seventy-seven.

James Alexander Forbes had one wife and twelve children. In July, 1834, he married Ana Maria, daughter of Juan C. Galindo. Their children were Carlos H. (1837-?), Martha (?-?), James Alexander/Alajandro Jr. (1839-?), Michael (?-?), Frederick (?-?), James Alonzo (?-?), Luis Felipe (?-?), Maria Clara (?-?), Juan Teleford (?-?), Margaret (?-?), Francis H. (?-?) and Alfred O. (?-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4; Simpson's Jan. 12, 1842 letter to W. G. Rae, D.4/59 [employ as agent along the coast] p. 160; FtVanCB 33 PPS: G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 303-04 SS: Bancroft, History of California, p. 743

Forbes, William (fl. 1823 - 1824) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

As a boy, William Forbes sailed on the brig Lively [Robert Ritchie] which had been chartered by the HBC to run to the Columbia. On July 1, 1823, he ran afoul of the owner and pipe-smoking captain of the ship. That day William Forbes decided to smoke a pipe in the galley. When Ritchie discovered him, the captain told him that the crew was not to smoke, ripped the pipe out of the lad's mouth and threw it overboard. When Forbes became abusive, Ritchie struck him; consequently, Forbes struck back. An angry Forbes went forward and obtained the cook's axe, held it above his head and threatened the now bloodied captain. Ritchie diplomatically retired to clean up. Forbes was still on deck, this time with an open knife when the captain re-emerged from his cabin. He was knocked to the deck by the captain and put under arrest. When the ship arrived at the Columbia on July 15, 1823, Forbes was confined in Fort George, likely in the bastion, a traditional place of imprisonment. The incident must have chastened Forbes, for between the time the Lively departed Fort George on August 6th and when it arrived back in London on March 25, 1824 Forbes was not mentioned.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1; HBCA extract of ship Lively

Forcier, Etienne (fl. 1804 - 1818) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Yamaska, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, bout and bowsman, Pacific slopes (1809 - 1811).

In 1804 Etienne Forcier was listed as being at Fort des Prairies and two years later, on October 26, 1806, was at Rocky Mountain House. Between 1809-1811 he was with David Thompson. In June 1810, he came out of the mountains and down the Saskatchewan with Thompson and returned with him from Boggy Hill to the mountains again. In October of that year, he was at the source of the Athabasca and in January 1811, was at the source of the Canoe River, a tributary river to the Columbia. He probably continued the rest of his career at Fort William and worked on the brigade routes.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Coues, p. 292

Forcier, Louis (fl. 1828 - 1843) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Hyacinthe, Lower Canada

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1832 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1842+).

Louis Forcier joined the HBC from St. Hyacinthe in 1829 and came west. After working with the HBC, he settled in the Willamette in 1836 and continued to supply the HBC with furs and grain. Forcier voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon, on May 2, 1843.

Louis Forcier has two wives and children. His first wife was an unnamed woman by whom he had Louis (c.1832-?), Olive (c.1834-1863) and Dominique (c.1836-?). On January 28, 1839 he married Catherine, Canaman (?-1848) a Chinook woman. With Catherine he had five children: Rose (1840-1850), Alexis (1843-?) Gedeon (1844-?), an unnamed daughter (1845-1847) and François (1847-1848). Wife Catherine appears to have died of the measles and was buried on January 12, 1848.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15; YFDS 3a-4a, 5a-6, 8, 10-11; FtVanASA 2-6 PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 3a SS: Holman, p.116

Forcier, Narcisse (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near St. Michel de Garnate(?), Lower Canada - c. 1821Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Snake Party (1843 - 1844).

Narcisse Forcier joined the HBC in 1841 from St. Michel de Garnate. He spent the first two outfits around the Fort Vancouver area and, in 1842, was found splitting shingles at the Cowlitz Farm. While he was there, he took seriously the threat fellow worker Narcisse Mousette made to kill the Cowlitz Farm clerk, Charles Forrest, just as John McLoughlin Jr. had been killed at Fort Stikine, and reported the incident to James Douglas on July 30th. In outfit 1843-1844, he transported trappers to and from the Snake Country. He left the Columbia for east of the Rockies to Canada in 1844.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; CowFMI 1; YFASA 23; YFDS 14

Ford, George (c. 1821 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Dorset, England - c. 1821Maritime employee*HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1849).

George Ford shipped on with the HBC in London on October 2, 1846 and made one return voyage to the Northwest coast on the barque Cowlitz. The voyage was uneventful for Ford other than one incident in which he got into a fight with the cook, who quarrelled with just about everyone else on the voyage. Ford arrived back in England on May 24, 1849.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 5; YFASA 27-28

Foreman, Anthony (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Anthony Foreman made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Forrest, Charles (1810 - 1851) (Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - 1810Death: Fort Nisqually, Oregon Territory - November 1851*Fur trade employee*HBC Post master, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1840); Post master, Puget Sound Agricultural Company (1840 - 1841); Untraced vocation, Cowlitz Farm (1841 - 1842); Clerk, Cowlitz Farm (1842 - 1846); Post master, Cowlitz Farm (1842 - 1846); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1846 - 1847); Clerk, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1847 - 1848); Clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1848 - 1850); Clerk, Fort Nisqually (1849 - 1851); Clerk, York Factory (1849 - 1850); Clerk, Columbia Department general charges (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Beaver (steamer) (1851).

Charles Forrest joined the HBC from Montreal as a middleman in 1825 and for ten years served at various posts in the Northern Department until 1835 when he retired to the Red River Settlement. He rejoined the following year, serving at Lac La Pluie as a post master until he was transferred to the Columbia District in 1838. In 1841, while working on the Cowlitz farm, Forrest boasted to the travelling Commander Charles Wilkes, U.S.N., that he could don a deerskin suit twenty-four hours after it had been shot. When the ever-helpful Forrest located Wilkes' lost watch in June of that year, he reset it to Cowlitz time, which unfortunately interfered with Wilkes' observations which had to be based on Greenwich time. That he otherwise did his job well there is no doubt, for in 1839, at the Fort Vancouver mill, Forrest had to physically intervene and pummel Urbaine Heroux, who was bullying another employee, William Crate. In July 1842, one of the employees, Narcisse Moussette, in a moment of anger, threatened to kill Forrest as the clerk had scolded him for not working hard enough. From 1840 to 1846 he was in charge of the Cowlitz Farm until replaced by George B. Roberts. On October 12, 1846, he arrived at Fort Vancouver to put himself under the care of Dr. Forbes Barclay and left December 17, considerably recovered to take over Fort George. In 1848 his health broke down and so he was made clerk disposable. On October 27, 1851 dysentery began to effect Nisqually personnel and, on November 16th, Forrest caught it. Realizing that he was dying, the forty-one year-old clerk requested before his death on November 24th, that he be buried outside the garden fence on the southeast side of the fort. His grave was enclosed with a small fence by the other fort employees.

Charles Forrest's family life is not entirely clear for he appears to have had at least two wives and five children. On April 19, 1837, a Julia, daughter of Charles Forrest and Nancy Sutherland, was baptised in the Red River Register (E.4/1). According to the Catholic Records from Fort Vancouver, a daughter Ann was born to him and a Lower Chinook woman, Wiltamst. As well, a son was born to a Cowlitz woman, according to Rolls of Certain Tribes, 1906. However, according to two wills that Forrest wrote (on April 8, 1848 and November 18, 1851), he had three daughters, Thérèse (?-?), Mary Jane (?-?) and Anne (?-?), the latter two being his eventual beneficiaries from the later will.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-9; YFASA 18-20, 24-32; FtVanCB 29; YFDS 17, 19; FtVicASA 2-3; Wills; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co.; BCA Lowe 1 PPS: Dickey; CCR 1a, 1b; HBRV VI, p. 389-90; Wilkes, "The Diary of Wilkes", vol. XVI, p. 212; vol. XVII, p. 129

Fortier, Etienne (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Lachine or Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Fort Vancouver general charges (1838 - 1839); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1841).

Etienne Fortier joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838 and returned to Canada three years later.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-6; YFASA 19-20

Fortier, Jean Baptiste (fl. 1849 - 1854) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Riviere du Loup, Lower Canada (born to Antoine Fortier and Marguerite Vivier)

Death: probably Nanaimo, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Nanaimo (1853 - 1854).

Jean Baptiste Fortier joined the HBC from Riviere du Loup in 1848 and worked in the Fort Rupert area before moving to Nanaimo. There he worked as a "first class" (Bates, p. 2) axeman in Nanaimo squaring timber, barking and edging slabs which were used for fencing, etc. His work was so good that he claimed one could draw his bare body across a timber that he had finished with a broad axe. In 1860, he left for Fort Langley where he probably continued to raise a family. He returned to Nanaimo nineteen years later in 1879 an old and feeble man to look once again at his work which was evident in many of the early houses.

Jean Baptiste Fortier had one wife and two children. In Nanaimo on August 5, 1856 he married Marie (?-?), Kwagiulth. His two children were Julie (?-bap.1853-?) and Marguerite (1855-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-3; FtVicCB 10; BCA BCCR StAndC SS: Bate, "Reminiscences", The Nanaimo Free Press, Mar. 9, 1907, p. 2

Foubister, Archibald (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near St. Andrews, Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852).

Archibald Foubister worked for the HBC from 1851 to 1852 before quitting his job. He appears to have joined in 1850, sailed to Hudson Bay and made his way overland to the Fort Vancouver area.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9

Foubister, Thomas (1826 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably St. Ola, Orkney, United Kingdom - 1826

Death: possibly Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver depot (1853 - 1854).

After Thomas Foubister joined the HBC from Orkney in 1850 on a contract ending in 1855, he sailed to Hudson Bay and made his way overland. After arriving at Fort Vancouver on November 20, 1851, he worked at the depot, retiring in the area two years later. The following year, on April 2, he settled on a claim of 160 acres [64.8 ha] in Clark County. He appears to have sold the claim in 1885 and has not been traced after that.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-11 PPS: Washington Territory Donation Land Claim, p. 242

Found, William (fl. 1857 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1859).

William Found made two return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Princess Royal 4

Fox, John [variation: Foy] (fl. 1841 - 1843) (British: English)

Birth: probably Suffolk, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1843).

John Fox joined the HBC on August 24, 1840 for five years as an ordinary seaman, made one return voyage to the coast, and returned to London on May 8, 1843.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 22

Fraeb, Henry [variation: Frap, Frapp] (? - 1841) (Undetermined origin)

Death: on a fork of the Yampah River, Wyoming, United States - August 1841

RMFC Expedition leader, Pacific slopes (1830 - 1840).

Henry Fraeb joined a partnership (Thomas Fitzpatrick, James Bridger, Milton Sublette and Jean Baptiste Gervais) as a member of the Rocky Mountain Fur Company in August 1830 at the summer Rendezvous near South Pass. The following year on December 22, 1831, when he was found in Snake Country (near the junction of the Salmon and Lemhi rivers), he was attached to a group of seventy men headed by himself and his partners Gervais, Sublette and Bridger. In the summer of 1834, he sold his partnership in the RMFC for "forty head of horse beast," forty beaver traps, eight guns, and one thousand dollars' worth of merchandise (Chittenden, p. 304). He was likely killed in a battle between sixty whites and a war party of Sioux [Lakota] and Cheyennes. Fraeb and four companions were killed. This took place near a fort built by Fraeb and James. The fort was destroyed at that time or soon after.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 11; OHS FtHallAB SS: Chittenden, p. 260, 304

Frame, Thomas G. or C. (fl. 1853) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1853 - 1854).

Thomas G. Frame worked for the HBC for about one year.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1, fo. 14d; 2, fo. 24d

Franchere, Gabriel [variation: Franchère] (1786 - 1863) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Montreal, Lower Canada - November 3, 1786 (born to Gabriel Franchere and Félicité Miron)

Death: St. Paul, Minnesota, United States - April 12, 1863

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1811 - 1813); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Gabriel Franchère was an observant chronicler of the Pacific Northwest fur trade for more than three years. He was a reasonably well educated and most likely competent merchants' apprentice when, on May 24, 1810, he signed a contract with Alexander McKay to join John Jacob Astor's PFC as a clerk for five years. Two months later, on July 26, this cheerful, shorter-than-average man took a canoe with McKay and a crew of eight or nine men from Montreal via Richelieu River-Lake Champlain-Hudson River to New York, where he arrived on August 3. After spending the next month as a bedazzled tourist in New York, then a bustling city of ninety thousand people - ten thousand of whom were French, he, twenty-one crewmen and thirty-two other passengers crammed into the 290 tons burthen Tonquin on September 6, 1810 for its journey around the Horn to the Pacific Northwest. After a perilous journey under a thoroughly cantankerous Captain Jonathan Thorn to the Falkland Islands, then around the Horn stopping at the Sandwich Islands, he arrived at the mouth of the Columbia River on March 22, 1811. From that point on he chronicled the short lifespan of the PFC on the Northwest Coast, from the construction of Fort Astoria to its eventual demise at the hands of the Northwest Company. He travelled throughout the Columbia River area keeping a journal of his many adventures, punitive expeditions and the like while he carried out the varied duties of clerk - all the while learning the Chinook language. Refusing to join the North West Company in 1813 when it took over Fort Astoria, he left the following year in April. In 1814, he re-joined Astor's American Fur Company as their Montreal agent, later going to Sault St. Marie and other posts where he worked between 1834-1842. In 1842 he was brought to the New York offices until the company failed six years later in 1848. He was invited to Washington by Thomas Benton in 1846 for consultation on the matter of ownership of the Oregon Territory. There he met such people as Henry Clay and Daniel Webster. After the liquidation of the American Fur Co., he entered the employ of Pierre Choteau of St. Louis. Later, in 1857, he went to New York where he set up business for himself. On April 12, 1863 he died in St. Paul, Minnesota at the home of his stepson, John Prince.

Gabriel Franchère had two successive wives, ten children and one stepson. In 1815, he married Sophie Routhier (?-1837) in Montreal. They had ten children, five of whom were Evariste (?-1892), Henriette (?-m.1836-?). Matilda (?-?) Sophia (?-?) and Celina (?-?). After Sophie's death in 1837 in Sault Saint Marie, he married Charlotte (Osborn) Prince of Detroit by whom he inherited a stepson, John.

His original journal was published in French in 1820. The English edition, titled Narrative of a Voyage to the Northwest Coast of America in the years 1811, 1812, 1813, and 1814 or The First American Settlement on the Pacific, was published in New York in 1854.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: HBRS v. XXII, p. 443; ChSoc XLV; Franchère; MHS Chouteau SS: DAB Skinner

Francis, Louis (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

Louis Francis made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Francis, Thomas (fl. 1831 - 1837) (British: English)

Birth: probably the Isle of Fyfe, British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Eagle (brig) (1831 - 1832); Cook, Ganymede (barque) (1832); Cook, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1834); Cook, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1836); Passenger or Cook, Columbia (barque) (1836); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1837).

Thomas Francis joined the HBC from London, where he appeared to be living, as a cook in September 1831 and arrived on the coast May 19, 1832. He returned to his home in Poplar, London on the Eagle and was back on the coast on September 20, 1834 at which time he was drafted for work at Fort Vancouver. His work at the post posed a problem, for he was not allowed his ration of spirits as ship's cook. After his arrival back in England aboard the Columbia in May 1837, however, he petitioned for compensation for the spirits due him at the Columbia post. It is uncertain whether he received compensation.

Thomas Francis had a family for an 1836 letter, which rests in the HBCA, refers to a son, Joseph, who requested through the writer of the letter that his father bring him home a bird. From the tone of the letter, the family appears to have drifted apart and some appear to have died.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 14-15; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4; PortB 1; ShMiscPap 5-6; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 77-79

Frank, William (fl. 1814 - 1815) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1815).

William Frank, part of the NWC schooner Columbia, worked in the Columbia area but by 1815 had left.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Franklin, James (fl. 1843 - 1845) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Diamond (barque) (1842 - 1843); Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1845).

James Franklin joined the HBC in London as an apprentice seaman. He came to the coast on the ship Diamond and transferred to the barque Columbia on July 1, 1843. He stayed on the coast for approximately two outfits and returned to the British Isles on the Columbia in 1844-1845.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFDS 14; YFASA 24

Franklin, William (fl. 1828) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Whitby, York, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia Department (1828).

William Franklin joined the HBC in London as a cook and seaman on September 6, 1828 for three years but did not appear on the Columbia abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Fraser, Alexander (fl. 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Maritime employee

NWC Clerk, Isaac Todd (ship) (1814).

Alexander Fraser made an appearance in the records on April 24, 1814 aboard the Isaac Todd as it was anchored near Fort Astoria. He appears to have been a NWC clerk and may have been involved in the Seven Oaks affair in Red River two years later in 1816. A February 22, 1813 contract shows a person by the same name from Montreal, hired into McTavish, McGillivray & Co. as a blacksmith for three years.

PS: SHdeSB Liste PPS: ChSoc LVII, p. 730

Fraser, Charles or Samuel (fl. 1830 - 1834) (probably British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

Charles Fraser joined the HBC on October 1, 1829 as a "boy" but was entered as a seaman when he came to the Northwest Coast aboard the brig Eagle. Fraser, who was entered as either Charles or Samuel, then worked on coastal shipping for three years servicing the various HBC coastal posts. On September 11, 1833, he sailed on the Ganymede to London where he arrived on February 24, 1834.

An undelivered 1833 letter written by his cousin, also called Charles Fraser, from the George & Vulture Tavern, 39 Ratcliff Highway [London] and co-signed by his friends Thomas Wood, John Flinn and William Curtis, rests at the HBCA. It mentioned that all his Fraser relations were well, that the economy of London was doing poorly and that James Sterling had visited cousin Charles when he was in the city.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-13; YFDS 4a, 5a-5b; log of Dryad 1; MiscI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 39-40

Fraser, Colin (c. 1806 - 1867) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near Assint, Sutherlandshire, Scotland - c. 1807

Death: probably Lac Ste Anne [Saskatchewan] - April 1867

Fur trade employee

HBC Piper, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829).

Originally hired as a piper for George Simpson, Colin Fraser went on to spend forty years in the fur trade with the HBC. Around March 1827, Fraser was engaged by George Simpson's father, possibly in Ullapool, Ross and Cromarty, and, on June 19, 1827, joined the Prince of Wales for the voyage to York Factory. For eleven months he worked at York Factory before joining George Simpson on July 12, 1828 for his voyage to the Columbia - a task unfamiliar to the piper who, according to Simpson's July 16th note to J. G. McTavish, could not "find sufficient wind to fill his bag" (Simpson letter). The party took a northerly route up the Peace River and arrived at McLeod Lake [New Caledonia] on September 11th and at Fort St. James on the 17th. Just short of the post, they organized into an imposing parade of costume, flags, gunfire, pipes, bugles, all meant to impress - scenes repeated at various posts and re-enacted today at various restored posts. After going to forts Alexandria, Thompson River, Langley and, from Puget Sound taking the Cowlitz Portage to the Columbia, they arrived at Fort Vancouver on October 25th and wintered over until March 25, 1829, when they began the final leg of their journey up the Columbia and over the Continental Divide. This was Fraser's last service west of the Rockies and for the next thirty-eight years he worked at a variety of posts east of the Rockies until he died of a heart attack in April 1867. His remains were brought to Edmonton and buried in the church yard.

Colin Fraser had one wife and children. His children were Colin (?-?), Simon (?-?), Norquay (?-?) and John (?-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 8; George Simpson's July 16, 1828 Trout Portage letter to John George McTavish, B.239/c/l; HBCABio PPS: HBRS X, p. 248-49; Kane, p. xxvii-xxviii, 242 SS: The Beaver, September 1934, p. 55; September 1935, p. 46-47; December 1937, p. 55, Winter 1959, p. 39-43, Spring 1974, p. 46-52

Fraser, John [a] (fl. 1848 - 1852) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly in or near Walls, Shetland Islands, Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Umpqua (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1850 - 1852).

John Fraser joined the HBC in 1847. From 1848 to 1852 he worked mainly in the Fort Umpqua and Fort Vancouver areas as a labourer and, in 1852, deserted.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; FtVanASA 9

Fraser, John [b] (1835 - 1863) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably McLeod Lake, New Caledonia - 1835 (born to Paul Fraser and Angélique Harnois)

Death: Chinook Point, Washington Territory, United States – Fall 1863

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice post master, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Apprentice post master, Fort Vancouver sales shop (1850 - 1852); Apprentice post master, Chinook Store (1852 - 1853); Apprentice post master, Fort Vancouver (1853 - 1854).

A fourteen year old John Fraser was taken on by the HBC in 1849 on a five-year apprentice contract. While training at Fort Vancouver and Chinook Point, he also washed clothes for which he received extra money. However, he failed to complete his contract for, by 1853 his work habits became "very careless and dissipated" (FtVanCB 41, fo. 23) and, in September 1853, when Mr. Ogden asked him to go into the Interior to be stationed there, he refused and was dismissed from employment. He stayed in the Chinook point area where he died in the late summer or fall of 1863, apparently poisoned [October 16, 1863 Fort Victoria Dugald McTavish letter].

John Fraser's family has not been traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; YFDS 22-23; FtVanASA 9-10; FtVanCB 41, fo. 23; FtVicCB 23,
See Also: Fraser, Paul (Father)

Fraser, Paul (c. 1797 - 1855) (Canadian: Scottish)

Birth: Glengary, Upper Canada - c. 1797

Death: HBC Brigade [between Hope and Tulameen, British Columbia] - July 18, 1855

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk, McLeod Lake Post (1832 - 1842); Clerk, Fort Umpqua (1842 - 1844); Chief Trader, Columbia Department (1845 - 1846); Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1846); Chief Trader, Columbia Department (1846 - 1855).

Paul Fraser joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray Co.] on May 7, 1819 for six years as an apprentice clerk. He worked at a variety of posts east of the Rockies and was managing Fort Vermilion when he was transferred to the McLeod Lake post in 1832. Becoming Chief Trader in 1844, he was the originator and subject of much correspondence and in 1846 temporarily found himself in charge of New Caledonia when Donald Manson was temporarily relieved of his post and a sick Chief Factor Lewis couldn't make it from Colville to replace him. He used Waccan as his enforcer at Fraser Lake and appears to have become somewhat excessive in his own enforcement. He was under a cloud due to his drinking habits in 1850 and led a group of twenty-four men from York Factory to Edmonton. He then resumed control of Thompson River [Kamloops] and it was here around 1855 that Fraser's disciplinary excess appear to have led to the death of Michel Fallardeau, although records supporting this are difficult to track. On July 28, 1855, while he was reading correspondence in his tent on Manson's mountain (on the HBC brigade trail between Fort Hope and Campement des Femmes [Tulameen, B.C.]) a tree fell on him killing him. He was buried on the trail the next day. Because he died soon after Fallardeau, an air of suspicion has hung over the circumstances of his own death but it appears to have been an accident. His estate was administered to his descendants until at least the mid 1860s.

Paul Fraser was married to Angélique Harnois (?-?) and had children John (c.1835-1863), Marguerite (c.1837-?) Alexandre (c.1839-?) and Peter (c.1842-?).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2-8, 12; YFASA 12-15, 17-20, 24, 27, 29-32; YFDS 7; FtVicASA 1-3, 6, 8-13, 15; SimpsonCB PPS: HBRS X, p. 249-50; HBRS XXX, p. 208 PPS: CCR 1a SS: Morice, The History of, p. 276; Hatfield, "Chief Trader Paul" p. 23-24
See Also: Fraser, John (Son)

Fraser, Simon (1776 - 1862) (American: English)

Birth: Mapletown, near Bennington, Vermont, United States - May 20, 1776 (born to a loyalist officer and his wife)

Death: St. Andrews, Canada West - August 18, 1862

Fur trade officer

NWC Founder, Fort McLeod (1805); Founder, Fort St. James/Fort Fraser (1806); Founder, Fort George [New Caledonia] (1807); Cartographer, Fraser River (1807).

Simon Fraser was born to a Loyalist officer who was captured and died while in prison. After being brought by his widowed mother to Montreal, he was educated by his uncle, Judge John Fraser. In 1792 he joined the NWC as a clerk, becoming a partner in 1801. Four years later he was placed in charge of the company's thrust west of the Rockies; and, not only gave the name New Caledonia to the area (as the area reminded him of Scotland), but he also established a series of posts throughout the interior. He took the perilous thirty-six day journey down the Fraser River (thinking it was the Columbia) to its mouth accompanied by nineteen company employees, two natives, as well as John Stuart and Jules Marice Quesnel. At the Fraser's mouth the Musqueam/Cowichan natives made him reverse his course as native canoes had been stolen by Fraser's group upriver. Upriver (in the vicinity of present-day Hope, BC.) natives tried unsuccessfully to upset the expedition's canoes but, exhausted, the group returned to Fort George in thirty-seven days. Fraser left New Caledonia in 1809 for east of the Rockies and by 1815 he wanted to retire from the hard life but was persuaded to serve in Athabaska. In 1816 he was one of the North West Company officers arrested at Fort William by Lord Selkirk for his complicity in the Seven Oaks incident, where the HBC colony's governor Robert Semple and twenty of his men were killed. He was acquitted and retired to Glengarry County, Upper Canada, where many Scots tended to gather. After that he tended to lead an uneventful life.

On June 7, 1820, Simon Fraser married Catherine MacDonnell and together they had several children - five sons and three daughters lived to maturity. Catherine died one day after Simon and both were buried in a single grave at St. Andrews.

PPS: HBRS vol. XXII, [bio] p. 445-46 SS: Fraser, p. 2-59; DCB Lamb; Barbara Rogers, Vancouver researcher [birthdate]
See Also: McLoughlin, John Jr. (Relative); McLoughlin, David (Relative); McLoughlin, Joseph (Relative)

Fraser, William (fl. 1856 - 1857) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Simpson (1856 - 1857).

William Fraser, who had been released from prison on a "ticket of leave" (FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 95d-96), arrived by boat at Fort Simpson on December 11, 1856. (He may have arrived as early as 1849 with the independent settler Walter Calquhoun Grant, quit and stayed around Fort Victoria.) On May 23, 1857 he took a ladder and smashed a second story window of the Fort Simpson Indian shop, taking one bale of fifty blankets. He stored them in a box and began trading them off for rum (FtSimp[N]PJ 8, fo. 95d). Fraser, who was suffering from venereal disease, was incapable of telling a straight story and was sent south to Victoria on May 30th with instructions that he be put back in irons.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 4-5; FtSimp[N]PJ 8

Freimann, Nicholas von [variation: Freymann] (fl. 1841 - 1842) (German)

Birth: probably Germany

Fur trade officer

RAC Interpreter, Pacific slopes (1841 - 1842).

Nicholas von Freimann, one of the many Baltic Germans hired to run the Russian American Company, was RAC agent in London when he joined George Simpson for his round the world journey in March 1841. Nephew to Frederick von Wrangell's mother, young Nicholas travelled overland with Simpson's party to Fort Vancouver where the group arrived August 24, 1841 and then continued on to Sitka. Freimann, Alexander Rowand and Simpson departed Sitka on the RAC steamer Aleksandr for Otkhotsk and continued overland until St. Petersburg. During the whole voyage, Simpson referred to Freimann only as "gentleman in the service of the Russian American Company" in his published version of the voyage.

PPS: G. Simpson, Narrative, p. 1; ChSoc VI, p. 40 SS: R. A. Pierce, Russian America

Friend, Francis (fl. 1829) (German)

Birth: probably in or near Leipzig, Saxony, Germany

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia Department (1829); Cook, Columbia Department (1829).

Francis Friend joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 as a cook and seaman for three years. He was supposed to have sailed for the Columbia River but did not appear on the Columbia abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Friend, Thomas (fl. 1835) (German)

Birth: Leipzig, Saxony, Germany

Fur trade employee

HBC Cook, Columbia Department (1835).

Thomas Friend joined the HBC on August 29, 1835 as a cook for five years. He was supposed to sail to the Columbia River but did not appear on the Columbia abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Frobisher, Thomas Jr. (fl. 1829 - 1835) (British or Mixed descent)

Birth: probably British Isles

HBC Apprentice, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830); Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1832 - 1835).

Thomas Frobisher worked his apprenticeship on the Northwest Coast for the HBC as an apprentice seaman. During this time, he sailed between Monterey and the Nass area.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-14; YFDS 3b, 4b-5c; FtVanASA 2; log of Dryad 1

Gabourie, Joseph [variation: Gabourey] (c. 1836 - c. 1893?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1836 (born to Jean Baptiste Gabourie and Genevieve Las)

Death: probably Victoria, British Columbia - c. September 1893

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1852).

Joseph Gabourie joined the HBC in 1849 and spent most of his short three-year career with the company at Fort Rupert. From 1852 he appears to have left the Company and quite likely headed south to Victoria where he carried on transactions with the company until 1854. In 1859 he purchased one hundred acres [40.5 ha] in the Shawnigan District. At the time of the 1891 census, he was living in the Yates Street ward in Victoria. He died in 1893 in Victoria.

Joseph Gabourie had two successive wives and eight or more children. On April 18, 1853, he married Marguerite (?-?), Cowichan, likely in the Victoria area. Together they had one son, Louis (1853-1936). On December 8, 1876, Joseph Gabourie was listed as being the father to Clare (?-?) by a native, Melanie (c.1861-?) Kimpale. Other children by either wife were Joseph (c.1874-?), Albert (c.1880-?), Agatha (c.1882-?), Agnes (c.1885-?), Marion (c.1886-?) and Lucille (c.1888-?). A Paul Gaborey (?-1894) may also have been a son.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1; BCA AbstLnd; BCCR CCCath; BCA StElizRC; Van-PL 1891 Canada Census, Victoria, Yates Street Ward

Gabriellet, Cosmo (fl. 1852 - 1853) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1852 - 1853).

Cosmo Gabriellet received a cash advance in England in outfit 1852-1853 from the HBC for the journey to Vancouver Island. His work status is unclear.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-2

Gadbrie, William L. (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

William L. Gadbrrie worked for the HBC but his work status is unclear.

Gadoua, Charles [variation: Gaduais, Gadaira] (fl. 1855 - 1856) (Mixed descent)

Birth: 1836 (born to Jean Baptiste Gadoua and Marguarite Deschamps)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Colville (1855 - 1856).

Charles Gadoua joined the HBC in 1854 and worked for them for two years.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 11-13; FtVicASA 3-4

See Also: Gadoua, Jean Baptiste (Father)

Gadoua, Jean Baptiste [variation: Gaudreau] (c. 1790 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Sorel or Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1790

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Freeman

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia District (1823 - 1824); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia District (1825 - 1826).

Jean Baptiste Gadoua joined the fur trade around 1816, signing his 1820 contract at Norway House with an "X". He worked on the Pacific slopes for four years and continued to sign contracts for work east of the Rockies until 1841, working until at least 1843.

In 1838, Gadoua was in the Saskatchewan with one wife, Marguerite Deschamps, and three children, Jean Baptiste II (c.1834-?), Charles (c.1836-?) and Louis (c.1837-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1-2 PPS: CCR 1a

See Also: Gadoua, Charles (probable Son)

Gagnier, Jean Baptiste (c. 1802 - c. 1890) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada - c. 1802

Death: c. February 1890

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman or Post master, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Post master, Fort Umpqua (1836 - 1851); Interpreter, Fort Umpqua (1836 - 1851); Coureur de rouine, Fort Umpqua (1836 - 1851).

Jean Baptiste Gagnier joined the HBC from Lachine in 1830 and worked largely in the Fort Umpqua area. There he married a daughter of an Umpqua Chief, in spite of the fact that he had a wife in Montreal. He never rose through the ranks higher than a post master but as such ran Fort Umpqua on the Umpqua River as a genial host to all those passing through. After leaving his employer, he moved with his wife and family to the coast and farmed in the Siuslaw estuary/Yaquina area on the Oregon Coast while continuing to carry on transactions with the HBC.

Aside from his Montreal wife, Jean Baptiste Gagnier had at least one native wife, who appeared to go by several names, Nancy/Julienne/Angelique (c.1819-?), the daughter of an Umpqua chief. She was baptised under Angelique in the Yaquina area of Oregon in 1869. The size of his family is problematic for there appeared to be at least three sons Antoine (1836-?), John (c.1858-1911) and Francis (?-?) (CCR 6, A-4).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2-9; YFDS 4a-7, 10, 16-17; YFASA 11-14, 19-20, 24-32; HBCABio PPS: CCR 1b, 6a; SS: Schlesser; Québécois in Orégon, p. 267

Gagnon, Antoine (c. 1805 - 1865) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1805

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - April 1865

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1831 - 1834); Trader, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1843); Middleman, Fort McLoughlin (1834 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Victoria sales shop (1850 - 1852); Middleman, Fort Victoria sales shop (1853 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, Fort Victoria sales shop (1861 - 1862); Labourer, Fort Victoria sales shop (1862 - 1865).

Antoine Gagnon joined the HBC from St. François in 1829 as a middleman and spent the next thirty-six years working for the Company, mainly at Fort Victoria. While he worked quietly and efficiently he managed to save a considerable sum of money. In 1852, he took a leave and withdrew two of his children who were at the Catholic Mission in the Willamette. He died at Victoria in 1865.

His family record is somewhat confusing and as such it is not certain how many wives or children he had over three decades. On April 1, 1850 at Victoria, he married native Rosalie (?-?), "Tsamus" and together they had André (c.1853-53), Moise (?-bap.1854-?) and Catherine (?-bap.1863). A daughter Marie (?-bap.1861-?) is attributed to Antoine, as well as a "Julie", of unknown origin. Also, a "François Gagnon" (Antoine?) and Rosalie had a child, Charles (?-bap.1858-?) and "François Gagnon" and a "Marie" had a daughter Agace (?-bap.1851-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 3b-8; FtVanASA 3-8; FtVicASA 1-16; FtVicCB 4; BCA BCCR StAndC

Gagnon, Jean Baptiste (c. 1809 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Francois, Lower Canada - c. 1809

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1831); Middleman, Thompson River (1831 - 1832).

Jean Baptiste Gagnon joined the HBC from St. François in 1828 and worked in the New Caledonia area until 1832.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-12; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b; FtVanASA 2

Gagnon, Joseph (c. 1797 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Cuthbert, Lower Canada - c. 1797 (born to Louison Gagnon and Bebe Caron)

Death: California, United States - September 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1844+)

Joseph Gagnon joined the HBC in Berthier in 1828 as a middleman and spent his working career in New Caledonia. When he reached Fort Vancouver in 1842, the forty-five year old middleman married and, in the following year, settled in the Willamette valley of present-day Oregon. There, he began to raise a family and, like many from the Willamette, went in a large group from the Willamette Valley to the California gold fields to try his luck. He was unlucky and died there and was buried on September 13, 1849.

Joseph Gagnon had one recorded wife and three recorded children. On July 18, 1842, at the St. Paul Church in the Willamette, he married Marguerite Desjarlais (c.1824-?), daughter of Thomas Desjarlais and Marguerite Maskgonne. Together, they had an unnamed daughter (Felicite?) (1845-?), Joseph (1847-?) and Emerance (1849-1850).

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19-20, 23; YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8 PPS: CCR 2a, 3a

Gagnon, Louis (c. 1798 - 1861) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Roche, L'Assomption, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - April 4, 1861

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1826 - 1827); Middleman, New Caledonia (1827 - 1831); Labourer, Fort McLeod (1829); Middleman, New Caledonia (1830 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Columbia Department (1842 - 1844); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1844).

Louis Gagnon joined the fur trade on January 22, 1820 and he spent the summer of 1829 as a labourer with John Tod and Joseph Letendre at McLeod Lake. In 1842 he moved to the Fort Vancouver area and eventually settled in the Willamette.

Louis Gagnon's family life is unclear. He appears to have had one wife, Marie (?-?) and one recorded son, Antoine Joseph (c.1840-?).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 6-9, 11-15, 19-20, 23; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFDS 3a-7 PPS: HBRS X, p. 18; CCR 2b, 3a

Gagnon, Luc (c. 1805 - 1872) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1805

Death: probably Willamette Valley, Oregon - 1872

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829); Middleman, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1829 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1830 - 1831); Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1841); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842).

Luc Gagnon joined the HBC from Berthier in 1828 as a middleman and worked his entire career in New Caledonia. He eventually retired to the Willamette in 1841 and took out a claim north of St. Louis, Oregon. On May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon.

Luc Gagnon had one wife, Julie Gregoire, and seven children. The Gagnon children were Eme'rence (c.1836-?), Marguerite (1838-?), Helene Emelie (1840-?), Marie Olive (1856-?) and Sophie (1853-1855). Antoine (?-?) and Ann (?-?) were reportedly his children, but they were not recorded in the Catholic Records. Luc and Julie were buried in the St. Louis cemetery.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19-21; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtAlexAB 1; FtVanASA 2-6; PPS: CCR 1a, 3a; SS: Holman, "A Brief History of the Oregon Provisional Government", p. 116
See Also: Gregoire, Etienne (Father-in-Law)

Gailloux, Joseph (fl. 1811 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Hunter, Columbia River (1811); Steersman, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814); Steersman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Joseph Gailloux was first found on record in 1811 with David Thompson. After re-engaging with the NWC at Fort William in 1813, Joseph Gailloux went to the Columbia and spent the 1813-1814 winter at the Willamette post. On April 4, 1814, he left Fort George as steersman of one of ten canoes going to Fort William and then Montreal on the brigade.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson; HBCA NWCAB 10

Gairdner, Meredith (1809 - 1837) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Edinburgh, Scotland - November 1809 (born to Ebenezer and Harriet Gardiner)

Death: Oahu, Hawaiian Islands - March 1837

Fur trade officer

HBC Passenger, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); Clerk, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833 - 1834); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1835); Surgeon, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833 - 1834); Surgeon, Fort Vancouver (1833 - 1835); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (1835).

Meredith Gairdner had a short life in the fur trade. Gairdner appears to have graduated at twenty-two years of age from Edinburgh University, his thesis being a long study on hot springs. He must have practised in the area for, before September 12, 1832 (when he was living on Cannon Street, St. Martin's, Middlesex) he answered, along with William F. Tolmie, Dr. John McLoughlin's call for two surgeons at Fort Vancouver. On September 15, 1832, he embarked on the Ganymede arriving at the Columbia River in May 1833. He served at Fort Vancouver for two years, during which time he appears to have worked diligently. However, being interested in botany and native customs he stole the skull of Chinook Chief Concomly which he sent to England. (This act was rectified when the skull was returned in 1972 and reburied in the Ilwaco Community Cemetery.) However, in the spring of 1835 he was diagnosed with tuberculosis and was sent to the dry Walla Walla area that summer in the hopes of recuperation. As he did not improve, he sailed for Oahu on October 1, 1835 on the Dryad and, at the age of twenty-seven, died there on March 26, 1837. (Gairdner's headstone can still be seen at the Kawaiahoa Church, Honolulu).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 12-15, 17; log of Ganymede 1; YFDS 5b-6; FtVanASA 3-5; ShMiscPap 14; headstone, Kawaiahoa Church, Honolulu, Hawaii; HHS Mission; HHS SandwichIs, April 1, 1837, p. 3; HMCS SReynoldsJ PPS: Townsend, p. 334; Larsell; OHQ, XL: 160-67 SS: HBRS IV, p. 344; Ruby & Brown, The Chinook Indians, p. 195; W. F. Tolmie

Gaiter, John (? - 1828) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: Umpqua River region [Smith River], Oregon Territory - July 14, 1828

Fur trade employee

U.A. Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1826 - 1828).

John Gaiter was a trapper on Jedediah Smith's Southwest Expedition of 1826-1828. He first appeared on record at the 1826 Rendezvous and left with Smith in August, heading south, crossing to the Colorado River and west into California. After a great deal of difficulty with Spanish authorities in California, the expedition headed north. In an area just north of the Umpqua River [Oregon], just after Smith set out to scout out a route to travel, the natives killed all the expedition members, including Gaiter, in camp except one, who managed to escape.

PPS: HBRS X, p. 61 SS: Carter, "Jedediah Smith," p. 97-104

Galbraith, Isaac [variation: Gilbreth, Gilbredth] (fl. 1825) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825 - 1826); SJ & S Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1826 - 1827).

Isaac Galbraith first appeared acquiring several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. He joined the Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition after attending the 1826 Rendezvous and headed south into California. Galbraith liked the country around the San Francisco area so much that in 1827 he left the expedition and may have settled for he has not been traced further.

PS: MHS Ashley 1 SS: Carter, "Jedediah Smith", p. 97-103

Gale, Charles (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Charles Gale made two return voyages to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal. Little is known of him other than that he wrote the log for the voyage. At one point he had words with his captain, David Wishart, and was ordered to his cabin, but otherwise, he was a competent officer.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 1; PortB 1

Gale, Joseph (1800 - 1881) (American)

Birth: near Washington D.C., United States - 1800

Death: Baker Co., Oregon State, United States - December 13, 1881

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Trapper, Fort Hall (1835 - 1840); Member, Willamette Valley cattle drive (1841).

Joseph Gale was a trapper who later became active in business and politics. He came to the Oregon Territory with Ewing Young and Hall Kelly in October 1834 and then joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's CRFTC for five years. During part of this time, Osborne Russell, who worked under him in the upper Snake River and Rocky Mountains, found him authoritarian and less than honest. Gale returned to the Willamette and settled on the Tualatin Plains. In 1841, with the help of Felix Hathaway, he built the ship The Star of Oregon, and sailed it to Yerba Buena [San Francisco] trading it for 350 cows. After wintering in California he drove twelve hundred head of cattle, six hundred horses and mules and three thousand sheep back to Oregon, thus breaking the monopoly of the HBC. By 1842, however, he himself had only two cattle and two horses to his name. Later he became active in the Provisional Government, serving from 1843-1844. He farmed and trapped in Baker County after moving there in 1850 and died on his farm.

Joseph Gale had one wife and five children. He married Eliza (?-?), Nez Perce/Walla Walla and had five children with her.

PS: OHS 1842 Census; Oregonian, July 6, 1830; Portland Oregon Journal, May 17, 1836, p. 8; PPS: O. Russell, p. 6, 9, 14, 29, 34, 35 SS: Dobbs, p. 135-46; Eells, 1880, p. 10; Eells, 1891, p. 180; OHQ v. XIII, p. 114; Oregon Native Son, I, p. 434; Hafen, Mountain Men and the Fur, vol. II SS: Holman, p. 114

Gale, Richard (c. 1825 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Birdport, Dorset, England - c. 1825

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1847 - 1848); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1848 - 1849).

Richard Gale joined the HBC in London on October 28, 1846 and sailed to the coast on the Mary Dare. He worked on supplying coastal posts and Honolulu until March 23, 1848 when he joined the Cowlitz and returned to England.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28; log of Cowlitz 6

Gallerneau, Antoine [variation: Gallarneau] (fl. 1859 - 1872) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1859 - 1872).

Antoine Gallerneau worked for the HBC for thirteen years in the New Caledonia area.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 7-16, 19

Garant, Augustin (c. 1814 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1814

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1841);

Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1841 - 1842).

Augustin Garant joined the HBC from Yamaska in 1839 and appears to have spent only one three-year contract under the employ of the Company. He left the Columbia passing eastward over the Rockies for Canada in 1842 but he returned to marry and raise a family in the Willamette valley, Oregon area.

Augustin Garant had a wife, Lucie Cowlitz, and six children. The Garant children were Paul (1846-1846), Zoe (1849-1850), Louis Marie Françoise (1851-?), Pierre (1853-?) and Thomas (1855-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-21; FtVanASA 5-6 PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 2a, 2b, 4a

Gardepied, Jean Baptiste [variation: Jack Gardepie, Gardapie, Gardpie, Gardpie, Gariepy] (fl. 1813 - 1823)
(Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

PFC Hunter, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); Hunter, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1812 - 1813); Trapper, Fort George [Astoria] (1812); NWC Devant, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Steersman, Brigade to Fort William (1814); HBC Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Freeman trapper, Snake Country (1822).

Jean Baptiste Gardepied joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition at Nodaway River around November 30, 1810 and likely crossed the Continental Divide with the main party in late summer 1811. After travelling down the Snake and Columbia Rivers, he arrived at Fort Astoria on February 19, 1812 and soon set about trying to trap beaver in the area. He served some time in the Flatheads in 1812-1813 and Fort George in the winter of 1813-1814 before joining the North West company on January 27, 1814 after it took over the Pacific Fur Company. Also appearing as "Jack" in the records and "François" to Cox, Jean Baptiste then acted as steersman in one of ten canoes leaving April 4, 1814 for Fort William and Montreal. He likely soon returned to the area and was working as a freeman on the Pacific slopes in 1822 when he deserted that fall. He has not been traced after that but he may have been killed by the Sioux when he was an old man.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; NWCAB 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; FtSpokRD 1 PPS: Cox, p. 98; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107; McDougall, p. 82

Gardepied (Lucier), Jean Baptiste [variation: Gardepie, Gadipre] (c. 1815 - 1850) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1815 (born to Joseph Lucier and Wewepahawisk, Cree)

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - August 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1832); Middleman, Snake Party (1838 - 1839); Hunter, Snake Party (1838 - 1839); Trapper, South Party (1839 - 1840); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842).

Son of an old time NWC employee, Jean Baptiste Gardepied took on the name of a stepfather, Gardepied. He first appeared on record in John Work's Snake party on December 1, 1830 and various other times. On January 30, 1832, when John Work's Snake party was attacked by three-hundred Blackfoot Indians, Gardepied was wounded but not seriously. He worked for the Snake Party in 1838-1839 probably as a freeman. He spent many active years in the fur trade and became well known as a scout and guide in the territory. Later he became a settler in the Willamette and there raised a family. He died at St. Louis, Oregon.

Jean Baptiste Gardepied (Lucier) had one wife and five recorded children. On July 19, 1841, he legitimized his marriage to Catherine Delard (c.1821-1858), daughter of Joseph Delard and Lisette Souhouabe. Their children were Paul (c.1837-?), David (1843-1852), Louis (1845-1874), Pierre (1846-1847) and Joseph (1849-?). After the death of husband Jean Baptiste, Catherine married William Lassarte on November 10, 1851 and raised another four children. She died on December 18, 1858 at St. Louis [Oregon].

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 10-11; FtVanASA 5-6; YFASA 19; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 2a, 3a, 3b

See Also: Delard, Joseph (Father-in-Law)

Gardner, Johnson (fl. 1825) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Untraced vocation, Ogden Hole altercation (1825).

On May 24, 1825, with American flags flying, American fur trader Johnson Gardner, along with twenty-five Americans and fourteen trappers who had deserted the HBC, rode up to P.S. Ogden's Snake Expedition camp, camping with one hundred yards of the Ogden Camp. Gardner claimed inside Ogden's tent the next day that the area was American and that all Bay employees being on American soil were no longer bound by their contracts and were thus free to desert. Twelve more deserted. Over the next few days, and while Ogden was beating a hasty retreat to the Snake, many more trappers deserted, some leaving their wives, horses, traps and furs behind. By 1831-1832, Gardner was a free hunter east of the Rockies acquiring his goods from the American Fur Company.

PS: MHS Ashley; Chouteau PPS: HBRS XXVIII, p. 39n, 170

Gardupuis, Alexis (fl. 1844 - 1846) (possibly Mixed descent)Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Middleman, Fort Colville (1845 - 1846); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1846 - 1847).

Alexis Gardupuis joined the HBC in 1844 on a five-year contract but deserted in 1846 owing £25 to the Company.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-27

Garguepy, Pierre (c. 1811 - 1830) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - October 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830).

Pierre Garguepy joined the HBC from Maskinongé in 1830 but drowned in the Columbia River October 25, 1830.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; FtVanAB 28; YFDS 4a; YFASA 10

Gariepy, Casimir [variation: Cassimir Garepie] (c. 1825 - ?) (American and Canadian: French)

Birth: probably New York State, United States - c. 1825

Death: possibly Oregon, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1846); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1846 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1849).

Casimir Gariepy, who joined the HBC from Sorel in 1840, had a reputation for being violent, especially with native people, one of whom he maimed severely in 1844. In February 1845, when Roderick Finlayson tried to intervene in a subsequent beating of a young native who was helping Gariepy plough a field, Finlayson was in turn beaten. Gariepy was given three and a half dozen lashes on the back and sent to Vancouver in handcuffs leaving behind a wife and child (FtVicCB 1, fo. 19-19d). At Fort Vancouver John McLoughlin took pity on him and sent him to Fort Langley, (FtVicCB 1, fo. 22d-23) and it is not known if he took his wife and child with him. In spite of his reputation, however, Gariepy remained under HBC employ until 1849 at Fort Victoria at which point he appears to have gone to the Willamette where he started a new life and married the following year. With this marriage, he inherited the Bellique children and some time after 1862 he and his blended family moved to eastern Oregon near Athena [Umatilla Co.].

Casimir Gariepy had two wives and an unknown number of children. The name of his Fort Vancouver wife and child is unknown. On November 25, 1850 at St. Paul, he married Genevieve, widow of Pierre Bellique. Along with the children he inherited from the Bellique marriage, the Casimir and Genevieve went on together to have five more children, four of whom are known: Edouard (1851-?), Luce (1853-56), Caroline (1855-57) and Hilaire (c1860-61).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 24-30; YFDS 17; FtVicCB 1, [Roderick Finlayson's Mar. 11, 1845 Fort Victoria letter to John McLoughlin explaining record of Gariepy's cruelty and subsequent punishment] B.226/b/1 fo. 19-19d; ibid [John McLoughlin felt Gariepy to be penitent and sent him to Fort Langley in McLoughlin's May 3, 1845 Ft. Vancouver letter to Roderick Finlayson] B.226/b/1 fo. 22d-23; FtVicASA 1-2; PPS: CCR 2b

Garret, John (fl. 1841 - 1843) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1841 - 1843).

John Garret signed on with the HBC on July 14, 1841 in Honolulu as a seaman. Two months later in San Francisco, he and Edwin Roberts were caught in the act of stealing a bag of sugar as part of the cargo belonging to the missionaries. Shortly after Roberts made an attempt to desert but Garret, who made no such attempt, stayed with the Cowlitz and arrived back in England on May 10, 1843.

PS: HBCA log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12; YFASA 22

Garrick, John (c. 1832 - 1893) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near Whiteness, Scotland - c. 1832

Death: near Chewelah, Steven's County, Washington, United States – February, 1893

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Colville general charges (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Colville (1852 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1855).

John Garrick joined the HBC probably in 1850 or 1851 and came to Fort Colville in 1852. During his time there, he appears to have carried dispatches from Colville to Vancouver and, in the early 1850s, he took part in the Rogue War. Apparently he couldn't wait for the end of his contract in 1855 for he deserted that year. He still may have had a casual association with the HBC in 1858-1859 but did not appear to be working for them. From 1873, he resided in and around nearby Chewelah, and in February 1893, at the age of sixty-one, he was killed.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-12; FtVicASA 6 PPS: OHS SB #21, p. 46

Garrioch, William L. (fl. 1850 - 1858) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Carpenter, Fort Colville (1856 - 1858).

William L. Garrioch came to Vancouver Island aboard the Tory as a HBC servant settler but did not appear to be prepared for the difficulties of the fur trade. After reaching Fort Victoria, Orcadians Garrioch, James Leask and Peter Sabiston ran away from their jobs to Fort Simpson forfeiting their wages for outfit 1851-1852. At Fort Simpson, on November 20, 1852, Garrioch and his two friends, all of whom had settled into a pattern of doing as little work as possible, threatened to strike if their provisions of flour and pork weren't doubled. Also, during this period, Garrioch developed a severe case of venereal disease that became so bad that, much to the joy of his bosses at Fort Simpson, he was sent to Nanaimo for medical advice. On May 27, 1853, when he boarded the canoe for his southern voyage the exasperated writer of the Fort Simpson journal noted that Garrioch was "a bad and dangerous character and requires to be looked after with an iron rod over his head" (FtSimp[N]PJ 7, fo. 69d). Nonetheless, after a few years at Fort Victoria, he was hired on to build the interior post of Fort Shepherd, the replacement for Fort Colville. He stayed there until about 1858 after which he may have continued to do odd jobs until 1859 but has not been subsequently traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-2, 4-5; FtSimp[N]PJ 7; FtVanASA 12-14; FtVicCB 12

See Also: Leask, James; Sabiston, Peter

Garson, David (fl. 1853 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Vancouver (brigantine) (1852 - 1853); Carpenter, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1855); Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1855).

David Garson joined the HBC vessel Vancouver in London on June 24, 1852 and sailed to the coast and was aboard it when it was wrecked on Rose Point [Queen Charlotte Islands] on August 20, 1853. He stayed on the coast for two more years and joined the Princess Royal on January 4, 1855 for its voyage back to the British Isles.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1-2; log of Princess Royal 1; BCA log of Vancouver [4]

Garson, James (fl. 1839 - 1843) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Sandwich, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1838); Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1843); Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843).

James Garson joined the HBC from Sandwich, Orkney, on May 4, 1838 for five years as a cooper and sailed to York Factory. After making his way overland, he spent the five years at Fort Vancouver working in the cooper's shed southeast of the walls of the fort or in the cooper's shop near the river. In the spring of 1843, he returned east of the Rockies and thence to the British Isles aboard the Prince Rupert.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 11; YFASA 19-20, 22-23; FtVanASA 6-8

Gauthier, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

François Gauthier probably joined the Michillimacinac Company on March 12, 1811 to work in Michillimacinac. It appears that by 1812, he was at Fort des Prairies where he signed on again. That year or the following year he crossed the Rockies and spent the 1813-1814 winter at Fort George [Astoria]. On April 4, 1814 at Fort George [Astoria], Gauthier joined the brigade for Fort William and Montreal. He may have returned periodically to the area and, by 1821, his status was unclear as, according to the Fort George records, "Francis Gaultier" was "unknown at York Factory".

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 7

Gauthier (Iatesse), Francois [standard: François] (c. 1803 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Remi, Lower Canada - c. 1803

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1836); Steersman, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Middleman on Montreal Pay List, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838).

François Gauthier (Iatesse) joined the HBC from St. Remi in 1834 or 1835. He appears to have served one contract and returned to Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-17; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-4

Gauthier, Laurent (c. 1811 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Phillipe, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Colvile (1834 - 1835); Steersman's wages, Fort Colvile (1835 - 1837); Middleman on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1837 - 1838).

Laurent Gauthier joined the HBC in 1834 or 1835 and appears to have served only one contract in the Columbia District as he returned east over the Rockies in March 1837.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-17; YFDS 5c, 7; FtVanASA 3-4

Gay, George Kirby (1797 - 1882) (British: English)

Birth: Gloucestershire, England - 1797

Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - October 1882

Fur trade employee

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812).

Sailor and Astorian overlander George Kirby Gay did a little of everything in his lifetime. Born in Gloucestershire, England in 1797, Gay spent some years at sea before joining the Wilson Price Hunt Overland Expedition in 1810. He then left Oregon, sailing the seas for twelve years before returning to Oregon with the John Turner party in 1835 via California. He left Oregon in 1837 returning as a member of the Ewing Young cattle company. Settling in the Willamette, he built a house of hand-made bricks in 1841-1842, a place which became a stopping place for travellers. By 1842 he had a productive farm on sixty enclosed acres [24.3 ha]. He became active in the Provisional Government but was pulled away by the lure of the California Gold Rush of 1848. The large sum he accumulated in the 1840s was entirely dissipated by the time he died on his property on October 7, 1882, where he lies buried in an unmarked grave.

During his life he married three times, fathering eight children.

PS: OHS 1842 Census; Charles, Narrative of U.S. Exploring Expedition, p. 357; OHS 1849 Census, Yamhill Co. SS: Dobbs, p. 25-29; H. W. Scott, History of the Oregon, II. p. 227; Lyman, History of Oregon, p. 595
See Also: Toupin, Jean (possible Father-in-Law)

Gay, Robert (fl. 1839) (British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1840); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1840 - 1841).

Robert Gay signed on with the HBC on September 17, 1839 and sailed to the Northwest Coast on the Columbia. While on the coast he made a side trip to the Sandwich Islands and probably saw several trading posts before he boarded the Vancouver in November and sailed back to England.

Geaudreau, Jean Baptiste Jr. [variation: Gendreau] (fl. 1824 - 1825) (Mixed descent)

Birth: (born to Jean Baptiste Sr. Geaudreau)

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825).

Young Geaudreau likely first travelled with his father on Ross' Snake Party for the nine month 1824 trek; however, he was not mentioned by name in Geaudreau Sr's lodge (under the name Cadia or Cadien). Jean Baptiste and another unnamed brother both joined Ogden's Snake expedition on December 20, 1824 and both got into trouble on February 17, 1825:

about 2 P.M. the call of Black feet all turned out armed to see hear & fight when two of old Cadias Sons informed that in tranching [sic] Beaver a short distance from this they were attacked by some Blackfeet Indians who fired 7 Shots at them which they returned by 11 & wounded one when they all took to flight it was so far fortunate for our party that the enemy had but 2 Guns amongst them otherwise they would have falled never more to rise (SnkCoPJ 2, fo. 9d).

The Blackfoot party was not caught and the young Geaudreaus continued with Ogden's party.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 2, 3a

See Also: Geaudreau, Jean Baptiste Sr. (Father)

Geaudreau (Cardien), Jean Baptiste Sr. [variation: Gendreau, Cadia, Cadien] (fl. 1824 - 1835) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Freeman

HBC Freeman trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Freeman trapper, Columbia Department (1824 - 1830); Freeman trapper, Columbia Department (1831 - 1835).

Jean Baptiste Geaudreau appears to have worked on and off for the HBC as a freeman trapper in the Columbia Department during the 1820s and 30s. He joined Ross' Snake Party on February 10, 1824, and headed a lodge of four people under the name Cadia dit Geaudreau. The four were likely his wife and two sons, or just three sons. One son was on the payroll. Geaudreau was rarely mentioned but was listed as a good trapper. After nine months with Ross, Geaudreau, along with his son of the same name, joined Ogden's Snake Expedition on December 20, 1824. He was rarely mentioned in the journals but on February 7, 1825 his horse, mistaken for a wolf, was shot and the old man was not compensated.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 4-9, 11-14; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3a; FtVanASA 1

See Also: Geaudreau, Jean Baptiste Jr. (Son)

Gendron, Alexis [variation: Alexander] (c. 1811 - 1888) (Canadian: French)

Birth: in or near St. Michel de Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1811

Death: Colville/Colville area, Washington - 1888

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, New Caledonia (1832 - 1835); Middleman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1836); Blacksmith, New Caledonia (1836 - 1839); Middleman, New Caledonia (1839 - 1846); Miller, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Blacksmith, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1847 - 1848); Middleman, Thompson River (1848 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Colville (1850 - 1851); Miller, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Boatbuilder, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Miller, Fort Colville (1852 - 1853).

Alexis Gendron joined the HBC in 1832 and appears to have spent most of his career in the New Caledonia District. He retired in 1853, moved to the Colville area and died there in 1888.

Alexis Gendron married Esther Morrow/Moureau who was born in Washington. Two of their children were Alexander (1864-?) and Anthony (1868-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 5a-7, 9, 17, 19, 22; FtAlexPJ 7; FtVanASA 3-10 SS: Hines, The History of North Washington, p. 461

Gendron, Joseph (fl. 1837 - 1844) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Chateauguay (Pres Eglise), Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1839); Middleman, South Party (1839 - 1840); Middleman, South Party (1841 - 1844); Settler/Farmer, French Prairie [Willamette] (1843 - 1844).

As early as 1830, Joseph Gendron may have been a working for Chouteau at Fort Union in the Upper Missouri area.

This was followed by work with Nathaniel J. Wyeth and the HBC. According to Meek, in River of the West, Gendron ardently prayed for his supper at the Lee Mission at the Dalles reciting Arabian Nights in French - which no one understood. McLoughlin asked Gendron for a repeat performance but he was so amused that he couldn't follow it through. In 1843, he became a settler at French Prairie.

Joseph Gendron had three wives and a total of seven recorded children. He and an unnamed woman had Louise (c.1834-?) and Pierre (c.1837-?). On February 11, 1839 he married Louise Chinook and had the following children: Catherine I (1840-?) and Catherine II (1844-?), Edouard (1841-?) and Jean Baptiste (1846-88). With Pauly of the Dalles, he had a daughter, Rose (1850-?).

PS: MHS Chouteau; HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; YFASA 19-20, 23; YFDS 14; PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 5b SS: Meek, River of the West

George [1] (fl. 1843 - 1845) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1846).

George joined the HBC from Oahu around 1843 on a contact that ended in 1846. He worked at Fort Vancouver until July 18, 1845, at which point he returned to O'ahu.

George had one wife and one recorded child. He and an unnamed Chehalis woman had Louis Mari (1844-1844).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8; YFASA 24-25; YFDS 16; SandIsAB 5 PPS: CCR 1b; p. 42, 44

George [2] (fl. 1853) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

George shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

George, James (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

James George made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

George, Thomas (fl. 1837 - 1844) (probably Mixed descent)

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1837 - 1844); Settler, Willamette (1844+).

Thomas George, who joined the HBC in 1837 or 1838, worked with the Snake Party until November 30, 1844, at which point he settled in the Willamette Valley of Oregon.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; YFASA 19, 24; YFDS 15

George, William (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

William George made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

George (Coleman), Jean Baptiste (c. 1805 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lanoraie, Lower Canada - c. 1805

Death: possibly Willamette Valley, Oregon

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1829 - 1831); Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1832); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1841); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1844).

Jean Baptiste George (Coleman) joined the HBC in either 1827 or 1829 - the records are not clear. After working in the Colville/Caledonia area he moved to Fort Vancouver, where, in outfit 1833-1834, he lost his eyesight as a result of an explosion of gunpowder at the Willamette sawmill. He appeared to recover for he continued working until outfit 1841-1842, when he eventually settled in the Willamette.

PS: HBCA YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8; YFASA 9, 11-16, 19-21

Gerrard, George (fl. 1846 - c. 1848) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Conlitz (barque) (1846 - 1848?).

George Gerrard joined the HBC vessel Conlitz in London on October 2, 1846 and sailed to the coast. In September 1847 after servicing several posts, Gerrard found himself in Fort Vancouver where he and two others attempted to lower a top gallant mast when it slipped and killed the popular boatswain, George Bigmore. On Christmas day of that year while on shore leave and riding a horse in Honolulu, he fell from a horse, severely injuring his head and had to be hospitalized two weeks later as his condition was not improving. He appears to have been paid off in Honolulu and the ship likely left on January 14, 1848 for Fort Vancouver without him.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 6; YFASA 27-29

Gervais, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1830) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Goer and comer, Columbia Department (1830).

François Gervais was a comer and goer to the Columbia from Montreal in the summer of 1830.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 26

Gervais, Jean Baptiste [variation: John Baptiste] (c. 1798 - 1870) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly St. Phillipe, Lower Canada - c. 1798

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - November 1870

Fur trade employee

HBC Member, Columbia Express (HBC) (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Bowsmen, Snake Party (1824 - 1826); Freeman, Snake Party (1825 - 1826); Freeman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); RMFC Partner, Snake Country (1831).

Jean Baptiste Gervais' career spanned three fur trade companies. Brother to Joseph Gervais, Jean Baptiste entered the NWC around 1815 and was employed in the Red River District until 1817 or 1819. He appears as a HBC employee in outfit 1820-1821 and in 1823, went to the Columbia. Gervais was with Ogden on his infamous 1825 Snake expedition when he deserted May 29, 1825 thus forfeiting his wages. However, Gervais rejoined Ogden for his 1825-1826 expedition as a freeman but had rather bad luck with his horses. Gervais found better luck with the Rocky Mountain Fur Company, of which he became a partner, along with Thomas Fitzpatrick, Milton G. Sublette and Henry Fraeb, on August 4, 1830 when the group met near South Pass. This partnership lasted until the summer of 1834 when he sold out his partnership for twenty horses, thirty beaver traps and five hundred dollars worth of merchandise. Between 1834 and 1850, it is likely he continued to trade furs as a freeman and in November, 1850, took out a land claim near Fairfield on the Willamette River and sold it in 1858. Jean Baptiste Gervais died on November 27, 1870 in St. Louis, Oregon.

Jean Baptiste Gervais had one wife, a Mary/Marie Lucier (?-1851), with whom he united in the Flathead Country, and who was likely the daughter of Basile Lucier. Together they had five recorded children before she died in the Willamette area on January 7, 1851. She left behind Celestine (c.1833-?), Euphrasie/Felicite/Fresine (c.1838-?), Rosalie (c.1840-?), Abraham (c.1844-?) and Lizette/Elise (1847-?).

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 20; 28; YFASA 2-5; FtVanAB 10; YFDS 2b; OHS FtHallAB; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: HBRS vol. XXIII, p. 2, 8; vol. XIII, p. 131, 236; CCR 2b, 3b; Genealogical Material in Oregon Donation Land Claims, entry #926, p. 37 SS: Chittenden, p. 304

See Also: Gervais, Joseph (Brother); Lucier, Basile (probable Father-in-Law)

Gervais, Joseph [variation: Jerve, Jervais] (1777 - 1861) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in the Berthier-Maskinongé area, Lower Canada - 1777

Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - July 13, 1861

Fur trade employee

PFC Trapper, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812); Trapper, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); Hunter, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814); HBC Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Trapper, Columbia Department (1827 - 1828); Trapper, South Party (1828 - 1830); Trapper, South Party (1830 - 1831); Settler, Willamette (1830 - 1830); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836+).

Joseph Gervais, brother to Jean Baptiste Gervais, had a career that extended beyond that of a simple trapper. In August, 1810, at Mackinac, perhaps after hunting buffalo on the Great Plains, he became a member of the Astor overland party led by William Price Hunt, and by February 19, 1812, after a very difficult journey, was in Fort Astoria. On May 1, 1814, he left with the express for Fort William. He returned and became a freeman before the HBC took it over in 1821. He married and took up farming in the Willamette Valley permanently in 1830-1831 (having previously staked it out in 1827-1828). Seven years later he was one who signed a petition asking Congress to gain control of Oregon. In 1834 his home was the site of the first school in Oregon, the teacher being Solomon Howard Smith. By 1842 he was running a very productive farm on 125 enclosed acres [50.6 ha]. However, on May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon. He lost his farm through mortgages and died at the home of David Mongrain on July 13, 1861.

Joseph Gervais had three or more wives and eight children. In 1813, he was noted as having a wife. The same or another wife was an unnamed Chinook woman with whom he had daughter Julie (c.1820-1845) and son, David (c.1823-1853). On January 22, 1838 at the Willamette mission and, on January 28, 1839 at Vancouver, he married Marguerite Yiamist (Telex) (c.1814-1840), a daughter of Clatsop Chief Coboway. This Gervais family consisted of Isaac (1829-1908), Xavier (c.1831-c.1870), François (1832-1842), Edouard (c.1835-1912+), and Adelaide (1838-?). On July 6, 1840, about six months after the death of Marguerite Clatsop, he married Marie Angelique, Chinook (?-1853) with whom he had Rosalie (?-?).

The Oregon town of Gervais (founded 1871) is named after Joseph Gervais.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtVanASA 1-6; YFASA 4, 8-9, 11-15; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7, 10-11; OHS 1842 Census PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b; Carey, "Introduction to the Mission," p. 264; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 108; Genealogical Material in Oregon Donation Land Claims, p. 37 SS: Gaston, p. 167; Bancroft, History of Oregon, p. 301; Clark, History of the Willamette, p. 567; Scott, History of Portland, I, p. 32; Powers, p. 133; OHQ vol. XXVII, p. 233; McArthur, Oregon Geographic Names, 258; Hussey, Champoege: Place of, p. 53-54; Hafen, Mountain Men and Fur, vol. VII; Holman, p. 116

See Also: Gervais, Jean Baptiste (Brother)

Giasson, Ignace (fl. 1818 - 1820) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Clerk, New Caledonia (1820).

Ignace Giasson, probably related to the much older French and NWC fur trading families from Montreal of the same name, was one of the few HBC employees to actually cross the Rockies and trade furs with the natives before the official amalgamation of the NWC and the HBC in 1821. Giasson was engaged by Colin Robertson in Montreal in the spring of 1818 as a clerk for two years. He arrived in the Peace River that fall and by February 1819 was to have taken a band of free Iroquois across the Rockies into New Caledonia. Instead, Jose Gaubin became responsible for a group of free Iroquois who, in the spring, sent five of their members from the Rockies to roam around New Caledonia. In October of that year, Giasson was sent out to intercept this small band as they returned across the Rockies but missed them; as a result, the Iroquois sold their twenty-four packs of beaver to the NWC at Peace River Portage. To ensure that this wouldn't happen again, Giasson was re-engaged by Robertson for a further year and, in December, started with a band of free Iroquois across the Rockies into New Caledonia. In the spring of 1820, Giasson was found, much to the surprise of the NWC, trading at the forks of the Fraser River. By October, he had returned east over the Rockies with his furs. From that point on, the NWC was doubly on guard for any further intrusions by the HBC but they were overtaken by events when the two companies merged on March 26, 1821. Giasson has not been traced after that and may have been a victim of downsizing.

PPS: HBRS II, [bio] p. 213-14

Gibbs, Benjamin (c. 1813 - 1886) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Death: possibly Nanaimo, British Columbia - October 1886

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1850).

Benjamin Gibbs shipped on with the HBC vessel Columbia in London on September 6, 1848 and made a return voyage to the coast on the Columbia. At Fort Victoria on September 28, 1849, he witnessed Robert Dockery stab Charles Paul. After arriving back in the British Isles, he made at least one further voyage to Hudson Bay. (He may have returned for a Benjamin Gibbs is noted as dying at the Nanaimo Hospital on October 3, 1886 at the age of seventy-three but this may be another person.)

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 30-31; log of Prince Rupert V 11; BCA Nanaimo Free, October 4, 1886

Gibbs, Elisha (c. 1781 - ?) (American)

Birth: probably Rhode Island, United States - c. 1772

Maritime employee

PFC Seaman, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

Nineteen year old Rhode Island native Elisha Gibbs joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] in New York as a seaman some time before September 3, 1810 for its voyage to the Northwest Coast but did not appear on Gabriel Franchère's list of crew members. He may have departed September 8 on the New York vessel for its tempestuous journey around the Horn arriving at the mouth of the Columbia March 22, 1811 and suffered the fate of the other crew members in July. On the other hand, he may have had a change of heart and left the Tonquin in New York harbour before it sailed.

PS: USNA Tonquin

Gignagne, Jean [variation: John Geganie, Gegagnier] (fl. 1849 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1850 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1852 - 1853); Middleman, New Caledonia (1853 - 1854).

Jean Gignagne joined the HBC in 1849, worked at two posts in the interior until about 1853, and may have stayed in the area a year or two more.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-2; FtAlexPJ 9; BCA FtAlex

Gilbeault, Hilaire [variation: Hilard Guilbault, Guilbeau] (c. 1818 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Lachine or St. Paul, Lower Canada - c. 1818

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - June 24, 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1838 - 1839); Servant, Thompson River (1839 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1842 - 1845); Seedsman, Cowlitz Farm (1845 - 1847); Farmer & Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1847 - 1848).

Hilard Gilbeault joined the HBC from Lachine in 1838 and almost didn't have a career with the Company - he narrowly escaped death in the 1838 Dalles des Morts accident involving Fathers Blanchet and Demers. In 1841, he worked briefly for the Catholic mission in the Cowlitz as a farmer. While he was working on the Cowlitz Farm in 1842 he took seriously the threat by Narcisse Mousette that he would kill Cowlitz Clerk Charles Forrest, just as John McLoughlin Jr. had been killed at Stikine, and reported him. As a result, Mousette was sent on his way. Gilbeault appears to have worked on the Cowlitz farm until 1848 where he had a house on a hill (that was taken down the hill in September 1847). He probably retired at this time. Gilbeault died in 1849 at St. Paul.

On April 21, 1842 Gilbeault married Louise Walla, who brought four children with her to the marriage. He most likely had children with Louise, but their names are not known for certain. On December 29, 1847, the "wife of Guilbeau" was buried, likely a victim of the measles.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 5-8; YFDS 10-11; YFASA 19-20, 24-28; CowFMI 1 PPS: CCR 1a, 2a 2b

Gilbert, Charles (fl. 1815 - 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

Charles Gilbert signed on as a seaman the NWC schooner Columbia on July 19, 1815 and worked in the Columbia area. He was paid off on February 29, 1816 but chose to stay with the schooner.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

Gilbert, James (fl. 1838 - 1844) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1840); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1840 - 1841); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1841); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1841 - 1842); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844).

James Gilbert joined the HBC in London on November 5, 1838. He sailed to the coast and for five years he serviced the Columbia posts on a variety of ships. He arrived back in London on June 1, 1844.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 11, 14; log of Columbia 4; YFASA 19-20, 23; YFDS 10, 12; FtVanASA 6-8

Gilbot, Pierre [variation: Guilbeault, Guilbeau] (c. 1802 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Saint Charles-de-Lachenaie, Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1802

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, York Factory Express (HBC) (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Middleman, Fort Colville (1828 - 1829); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1848); Dairyman or Cowherder, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1848).

Pierre Gilbot joined the HBC from Mascouche in 1821 and was at Lac La Pluie before coming to Fort Vancouver on the returning York Factory Express in the fall of 1827. In 1828 while on the express, he assisted George Simpson to cross the mountains. His life became more sedentary at Fort Vancouver where he married. However, both he and his wife disappear from record in 1847-1848.

Pierre Gilbot had one wife and no recorded children. On February 11, 1839 he married Emélie Cathlamet (c.1821-?) at Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFASA 4, 7-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-29; YFDS 3a-7, 12 PPS: E. Ermatinger, p. 105, 113; CCR 1a

Gillan, Frederick (fl. 1856 - 1857) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Frederick Gillan joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Gilley, John (fl. 1838 - 1841) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1839); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1839 - 1841).

John Gilley joined the HBC in London in late 1837 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. For over two years after his arrival on the coast in May 1838, he serviced most of the coastal posts from the Columbia, Nereide and Cadboro, and arrived back in London in the spring of 1841.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 3; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 5-6; YFDS 9, 11; YFASA 19-20

Gingras, Antoine (c. 1771 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near St. Cuthbert de Bertheir, Lower Canada - c. 1771 (born to Jean Baptiste Gingras and Angelique Hamel)

Death: probably East of the Rocky Mountains

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1811 - 1818).

Antoine Gingras spent seven years on the Pacific slopes working for the NWC. In 1818 he went to Red River and in 1821, joined the HBC. In 1822 he returned to Montreal.

Antoine Gingras had one wife and two recorded children. In 1822, he married Marguerite Trottier in Rigaud, Quebec. Their children were Angelique (c.1820), and Antoine (1824-?).

Gingras, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Michel de. Yamaska, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1829 - 1830).

François Gingras, who joined the HBC in 1829, was likely a member of the cross-country brigade or express for a he made a brief appearance in the Columbia and, in outfit 1830-1831 he was paid in Montreal.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9-10

Gingras, Jean [variation: Gingrais] (1802 - 1856) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Yamaska, Lower Canada - April 1802

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - October 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Thompson River (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Fort Okanagan (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1826); Middleman, Thompson River (1826 - 1835); Boute, Thompson River (1835 - 1839); Boute, Thompson River (1839 - 1840); Interpreter, Thompson River (1839 - 1840); Interpreter, Thompson River (1840 - 1841); Post master, Fort Okanagan (1841); Settler, Willamette (1841+).

On January 5, 1820, seventeen year old Jean Gingras joined the NWC from St. Michel. Just when he crossed the Rockies has not been determined but he was on the Pacific slopes by 1821. He went on to spend the majority of his career in the Thompson River Districts before eventually retiring in the Willamette Valley. He appeared to be a quiet competent worker fulfilling a variety of tasks. Around 1841 he settled in the Willamette River Valley, on French Prairie west of the Mission of St. Paul. By 1842 he was running a productive farm on ninety enclosed acres [36.4 ha] and, on May 2, 1843, he voted against the organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon.

Jean Gingras had two successive wives and eleven children. He legitimized his marriage to his first wife, Charlotte Ske'alks, Okanogan (?-1845) on August 2, 1841, their children being Joseph (c.1828-?), Jean (c.1831-?), Narcisse (c.1833-?), Angele (c.1835-?), Louise (?-?), Marguerite (c.1837-1846) and Lizette (c.1841-?). After Charlotte's death in 1845, he married Olive Forcier (c.1834-?) on July 28, 1845. Their children were Louis (c.1847-?), François (c.1848-?), Calliste (1854-?) and Charles (1856-1858).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA YFASA 1, 4-9, 11-15, 19-21; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtKamPJ 1, 2; YFDS 2, 7, 11-13; 2a, 4b, 6-8; FtVanASA 1-6; Northern Department District Statement, 1828-29, B.239/1/3, [at Thompson River] fo. 12; HBCABio; OHS 1842 Census; 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: HBRX X, p. 229; CCR 1a, 2a, 2b SS: Holman, p. 116

See Also: Bastien, Joseph (Relative)

Gisser, John [b] (fl. 1815) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

Seaman John Gisser signed on with the NWC schooner Columbia on July 21, 1815 and worked on the Northwest Coast. He was paid off February 29, 1816, but chose to stay with the schooner.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

Gladman, William (fl. 1849 - 1856) (Undetermined origin)

Death: possibly Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - March 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853).

William Gladman worked off and on for the HBC. He died in 1856 at an unspecified location.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-30; FtVanASA 9-10 PPS: CCR 1b

Glide, Henry [variation: Glyde] (c. 1835 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Chizzelhurst, England - c. 1835 (born to Frederick Glide and Jane Glide)

Death: probably Victoria, British Columbia

Maritime officer

HBC Boatswain & Apprentice, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1857); 2nd mate, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1857); 1st mate, Otter (steamer) (1857 - 1858).

Henry Glide began his apprenticeship with for the HBC in 1850 on the Prince of Wales and in 1852 was transferred to the Otter, on which he came to the Pacific. On the voyage out, as there was a lot of drinking on board, and because almost everyone else came down with scurvy, Glide found himself doing additional duties. The Otter narrowly escaped destruction, being caught by a strong tide and swept through between Tatoosh Island and the mainland, fortunately without injury, and on August 4th it reached Victoria. Glide worked on the Otter until June 18, 1858, when he was discharged to resume his career as a pilot, being the first to receive a pilot's licence in British Columbia. In 1881 while living in the Victoria area, he was still listed as a seaman and by 1898, while residing on Erie Street, became the local knowledgeable historian.

On December 6, 1861, Henry Glide married St. Andrews, Scotland born Helen/Ellen Liang (c.1845-1897), daughter of Robert and Jane Laing. Helen's funeral was January 31, 1897 in Victoria. Their children were Mary Helen (c.1865-?), Elizabeth (c.1867-?) and Andrew Henry (c. 1870-?).

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Prince of Wales II 1; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-6; BCA VICSMarriageL; BCCR RefEC; BCCR WesMeth; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver District, James Bay Ward sub-district SS: Lewis & Dryden, p. 46-47

Glynn, John (? - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - March 1850

Fur trade employee

HBC Steward, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1846); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1846 - 1850).

John Glynn shipped on with the HBC in London on September 29, 1845 on the Columbia. However, as he was unable to perform his duty as a steward, he was discharged on May 30, 1846 at Fort Vancouver shortly after the vessel arrived. He continued to work at the fort for the next four years until March 14, 1850 when he died there. He was likely buried in the fort's graveyard.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 26-29; YFDS 17, 20

Goddin, Thiery [variation: Thyery Godin] (c. 1779 - c. 1830) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1779 (probably to a French Canadian father and Iroquois mother)

Death: probably Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - c. 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Pacific slopes (1820 - 1821); Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Trapper, American Party (1825 - 1828).

Nineteen year-old Thiery Goddin joined the NWC [Parker, Gerrard & Co.] from Maskinongé on December 28, 1798 to work in the Northwest. His NWC activities for the next two decades are difficult to follow as NWC records of Goddin are sparse but, in 1820, Goddin's River, now called Big Lost River (as the river sinks into the porous soil of the Snake River Plains), was named after Goddin. Goddin continued with the HBC after the merger and deserted from Peter Skene Ogden's Snake expedition on May 29, 1825 in a mass desertion at Deserter Point on Weber River. His young son left the HBC Camp almost a year later on April 11, 1826, with Ogden's permission to join his father. Ogden met Thiery Sr. two and a half years later on Thursday, 25 October, 1827, at which point, while being a member of the American expedition, paid Ogden thirty-five large beaver in payment for his debt with the HBC. By February 1828, Goddin had sold out his assets in the American camp at a considerable profit and probably headed for St. Louis. Had he continued with the HBC it would have taken him at least ten years of scrupulous saving to acquire what he acquired in less than three years with the Americans. Thiery Goddin was killed by Blackfoot Indians around 1830.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; YFASA 1-5; SnkCoPJ 1, 3a, 7 SS: HBRS XIII, p. 87n; Karamanski, "The Iroquois and", p. 11

See Also: Godin, Antoine (Son)

Godfrey, John (fl. 1838) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838).

John Godfrey appeared on the HBC barque Columbia on June 22, 1838 when it was at Fort Vancouver, ready to sail to Forts McLoughlin and Simpson. He may have left London on it in November 1837 and arrived on the Coast in May 1838. However, he did not appear to return on it to London when it sailed in November.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14

Godin, Amable [variation: Godon] (c. 1796 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably the Montreal suburb of St. Laurent, Lower Canada - c. 1796

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825).

Amable Godon joined the HBC from St. Laurent on December 16, 1820 and worked in New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 1a; YFASA 4; FtStJmsLS 1

Godin, Antoine [variation: Goddin] (? - c. 1835) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably East of the Rocky Mountains (born to Thiery Goddin)

Death: Fort Hall, Oregon Territory - c. 1835

Freeman

HBC Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1826); Trapper, American Party (1826 - 1828?); Wyeth Fur trader, Fort Hall (1835); HBC Trapper, Fort Hall (1835).

Antoine Godin first came on record on the Pacific slopes as a freeman at Spokane House in outfit 1822-1823, but he may have joined the NWC in 1816 to work at Fort William. He then took part in three Snake Country expeditions. On the second expedition, on May 24, 1825, he watched his father, Thiery, desert to the Americans at Weber River. Antoine joined his third Snake Country expedition, likely at Fort Nez Percés, but was only able to restrain himself until April 11, 1826, when he deserted to join his father who had left the HBC employ the year before. He was given permission to leave by Ogden, who called him "a worthless useless scamp", after Antoine had paid his debts, which had to be supplemented by three beaver pelts from the Americans, to Ogden and the HBC. Antoine Godin has not been traced after that but he may have travelled with the American Party until 1828, as did his father. Around 1830, the death of Thiery at Godin's River at the hands of the Blackfeet led to revenge killings. At the 1832 Rendezvous at Pierre's Hole Antoine Godin shot dead a Blackfoot Chief. A battle ensued with immediate casualties on both sides amounting to twelve dead and twelve wounded. The Blackfoot got their revenge on Godin between September 1834 and September 1835 on a riverbank opposite Fort Hall. Led by a former HBC employee by the name of Bird, Godin was lured to the other side of the river. While sitting down to smoke with the group, he was shot in the back. While Godin was still alive, Bird tore off his scalp and, in a touch of bitter irony, cut the initials of Nathaniel J. Wyeth into his head. And so ended the life of Antoine Godin.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 4; OHS FtHallAB SS: Chittenden, p. 663
See Also: Goddin, Thiery (Father)

Godin, Joseph (c. 1830 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Rupert (1849 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1856 - 1858).

Joseph Godin joined the HBC from Trois Rivières in 1848 and came west into the Columbia that year. The nineteen year-old took a wife at Fort Rupert, working there until 1853. After a gap of three years he was back working with the HBC in 1858 on San Juan Island and thence disappears from record.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; FtVicASA 1-2, 4-5; FtRupPJ 1, fo. 26d;

Godwin, William [variation: Goodwin] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

William Godwin made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Golledge, Richard [variation: Gollege] (c. 1832 - 1887) (British: English)

Birth: Stratford, West Ham, Essex, England - c. 1832 (born to Richard Golledge and Maryann Barber)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - September 1887

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Apprentice clerk, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1856); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1856 - 1860); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1860).

Richard Golledge was well educated, connected and placed but died an alcoholic vagrant. After he joined the HBC in England as an apprentice clerk in 1850, he arrived at Fort Victoria on May 14, 1851 on the barque Tory. At Fort Victoria he became private secretary to James Douglas, and upon 1852 reports of coal deposits along the east coast of Vancouver Island (at Nanaimo), travelled with Douglas, Pemberton and John Muir Sr. to verify them. He remained a private secretary until 1859 all the while writing "in a beautiful hand" (Macdonald, p. 4) and purchased more than 125 acres in the Esquimalt District and two hundred acres [80.9 ha] in the Lake District before taking passage back to the British Isles on the Princess Royal. (He returned to the Pacific Northwest on an untraced vessel.) He worked in the government office as gold commissioner and justice of the peace until 1864, when he was suspended for his past and then-current drunk and disorderly habits. From that time on, Gollege lived in the Songhees village and was periodically excoriated by the Daily Colonist for his alcoholism, petty thievery, and vagrancy. He died in abject poverty in 1887.

On September 26, 1871, he married Julia Charbonneau (?-?), widow of Joseph Charbonneau.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-10; logs Princess Royal 6; BCGR-AbstLnd; BCCR-StAndC; Van-PL Colonist, July 31, 1884, p. 3, September 7, 1887 p. 3 PPS: HBRs XXXII, p. lxxxixn, xcivn 182, 182n; Helmcken, p. 131n SS: Sen. W. J. Macdonald, p. 4

Goodfellow, John (fl. 1845 - 1846) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Conlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846).

John Goodfellow joined the HBC in 1845 and appeared in the Columbia in that outfit. He left for the British Isles on the Conlitz that fall.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25

Goodriche, Bache [variation: John Goodrich, Gadrache, Gaudriche] (? - 1830) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: The Dalles, Columbia River - 1830

Freeman

SJ & S Employee, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1827); Employee, Snake Party (1827 - 1828); Employee, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1828); HBC Trader, Snake Party (1828 - 1829); U.A. Freeman, Snake Party (1829 - 1830); B & S Trader, Captain Dominis (1830); HBC Trader, HBC (1830).

Bache (aka John Goodriche) first appeared on records as a Smith, Jackson & Sublette trapper leaving Bear River on July 9, 1827. He was part of a small group comprising Robert Campbell's SJ&S party of forty-six men when he encountered Peter Skene Ogden's HBC expedition on September 25 on the Weizer River [Idaho]. Goodriche and fellow American, SJ&S trapper John Johnson, joined the HBC group although the American group were never very far away. He rejoined the American Party in February. By August 29, 1829, he was married to the sister of the Chief at the Dalles [Lower Columbia] where he lived in a cabin below the Dalles. He had become an established trader there in opposition to the HBC as he intercepted the furs, ran them down to the mouth of the Columbia and exchanged them for goods supplied by Captain John Dominis of the brig Owyhee. In late winter 1829-1830, Dominis sent some of his men up-river to support Goodriche. However, James Birnie and eight HBAC men were more persuasive and signed up Goodriche as an HBC servant. This new relationship did not last long for, in July 1830, Goodriche fatefully offered to take the place of HBC trapper Alexander Carson on the perilous ride through the Dalles. Goodriche and eleven others drowned; as well, three hundred beaver pelts and Ogden's papers were lost in the accident. Goodriche's body was recovered and he was buried on a bench above the present day town of The Dalles under an oak tree.

Bache Goodriche had one recorded wife, Nancy (?-c.1850) of the Dalles (Nancy Twinishe of Winakshe?) and one child, Susanne (c.1830-1912) who was baptised on July 15, 1838 at Fort Vancouver by Reverend Beaver. After the death of Goodriche, his widow Nancy married John Baptiste Dobin (formalized January 7, 1839).

PS: CHS Owhyhee; HBCA SnkCoPJ 8-9; FtVanCB 5, 6; YFASA 9, 11; D.4/125, fo 50; BCA BCCR-CCCath; William Kittson's August 12, 1830 letter to John Rowand, D.4/125, fo. 50 PPS: McLoughlin, Letters of, p. 52, 62, 69, 89, 92, 103-04, 119; N. J. Wyeth, p. 175; CCR 1a; Nancy of the Dalles descendant

Goodridge, A. (fl. 1825) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

A. Goodridge (who could quite possibly be the following Goodriche) appeared on the records as acquiring several goods at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] from William Ashley, who had brought them overland from St. Louis. Nothing else is known of Goodridge and he probably attended other Rendezvous' as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains.

PS: MHS Ashley 2

Gordon, George [variation: Gaddarn] (fl. 1836 - 1839) (British: Welsh)

Birth: probably in or near Milford, Stainton, Pembroke, Wales (born to William Gordon and Mrs. Gordon)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1838); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1838 - 1839).

George Gordon joined the HBC on August 29, 1835 for five years and came to the coast on the Beaver. In May 1837, he joined William Wilson and William Phillips at Fort Simpson refusing to load wood on the Beaver, possibly as a ploy to achieve higher pay. As well, in January 1838, he became a mutineer aboard the Beaver, went off duty on March 24, 1838 and left for the British Isles on the barque Columbia, on November 7, 1838, arriving May 21, 1839. In England, he appealed for the six months of pay that had been withheld because of his activities but it is uncertain whether he received it.

A letter from George's father, which carried the news of a brother's death, implied that George had a short temper and a sharp tongue. His concerned father offered to help him when he returned to get training to be a shipwright. It is not known if George followed this up but his brothers did and eventually owned a shipyard and became famous shipbuilders at Neyland [Pembrokeshire]. A letter from a friend, A. Randall, implies that George had previously let his friends in the British Isles know how unhappy he was, particularly with the heavy hand of his captain, William Henry McNeill. Both letters rest at the HBCA.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 7, 9; FtSimp[N]PJ 3; FtVanASA 3-5; YFASA 18; PortB 1; mutiny information from A.10/8, fo. 298, 309; ShMiscPap 14; log of Columbia 3; MiscI 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 133-38

Goselin, Charles (fl. 1832 - 1833) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1832 - 1833).

Charles Goselin appeared as a trapper in the Snake Country in outfit 1832-1833.

PS: HBCA YFDS 5a

Goselin, Louis [variation: Gossin, Gosselin, Gausselein] (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, New Caledonia (1820); HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1830); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman and boue, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Cook, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Columbia Department (1831 - 1832).

Louis Goselin joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] from Sorel on January 4, 1820 to work as a middleman in New Caledonia. He helped to construct a new post at the end of Babine Lake and, on January 15, 1823, while he was at Fort Babine, he signed a contract (with an "X") for two years to be a voyager between New Caledonia and the Hudson Bay. With this contract, he received the usual two point blanket, a communal cloth, two shirts and six pounds [2.7 kg] of tobacco. In outfit 1829-1830 he also acted as a cook and in 1832 was back in Montreal.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7; HBCACont; FtGeo[Ast]AB 7; YFASA 1-2, 4-7, 9, 11; FtBabPJ 1; YFDS 1a, 3a-4a; FtVanAB 10; FtStJmsRD 3; FtStJmsLS 1; FtVanASA 2

Goudie, James [variation: Goudy] (1809 - 1887) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Stromness, Orkney - 1809

Death: at his residence on Blanshard St., Victoria, British Columbia - April 23, 1887

Fur trade employee

HBC Blacksmith, Fort Colville (1830 - 1851); Miller, Fort Colville (1830 - 1851).

As the Goudies of Stromness had been blacksmiths for generations, James Goudie probably found himself working at the forge from an early age. However, that did not prevent a nineteen year old James from seeking adventure by joining a seasonal whaling vessel which took him to the Davis Straits in 1828. Nonetheless, back in Stromness, necessity dictated that he return to his inherited profession and so, on May 6, 1829, he joined the HBC as a blacksmith for five years. Leaving behind a widowed mother, two sisters and a married brother for the last time, he sailed to York Factory, made his way across the continent and spent the winter of 1829 at a Peace River fort. That winter, the new working environment dictated that he learn French; additionally, that winter he learned to play the violin which he built himself. (His violin playing was to last for many years as, for example, in 1849, he asked John Charles who was passing through Fort Colville on the Columbia Express, to obtain a fiddle or strings for him.) In 1830, after reaching Fort Colville, he began a twenty-year career as a blacksmith at the HBC's grist mill. Naturally, the mill became synonymous with Goudie's name because of his years as the fort's miller grinding grain from not only the fort's extensive farms but also local farmer's fields. In 1843 he constructed a new two-story mill which was rebuilt in 1872 and finally burned in 1914 (the stones are in the Cheney-Cowles Memorial Museum in Spokane.)

Before 1835, James chose a wife from the village of Schwenetekoo ["Keep Sounding Water" or Kettle Falls] and began raising a family in 1835. He retired in 1851 and in December of that year visited Fort Victoria no doubt to see his daughter, Sarah, and son-in-law, George McKenzie, a millwright by trade. The following year, 1852, the forty-three year old retired blacksmith decided to move the remainder of his family to Victoria. The journey, according to son-in-law McKenzie, was of epic proportions and took a year. Forty pack horses carried their goods south to Walla Walla and then to Vancouver where they picked up goods they had ordered from England a year earlier. They then followed the Cowlitz route to Fort Nisqually where he was persuaded to stay for three or four months to do much needed blacksmith work, and finally crossed the strait in three canoes to Fort Victoria. James carried on transactions with the Company until 1853, the same year his wife died and continued to live with McKenzie on Rowe's Stream [Mill Stream] possibly until after the death of son James who had been killed in an event known as the "Waddington Massacre" at the head of Bute Inlet. From 1868 James Goudie was listed mainly as a saw sharpener at various locations in Victoria and by 1882 had settled on Blanchard Street where he died in 1887. He, along with his second wife who died the following year, were buried in Ross Bay Cemetery.

James Goudie had two successive wives and seven children. Before 1835, he chose as his wife, Catherine, Schwayips [Kettle Falls] (c.1819-1853). Their children were Margaret (1835-1919), John (1836-1914), James (1837-1864), Sarah (?-?), Mirabelle (1846-?), Jane (1847-?) and Mary (1848-?). Catherine died November 29, 1853 in Victoria not long after their arrival. On August 31, 1861, he married Stromness widow Jane Fiddlar or Fydler (c.1815-1888) at Fort Victoria. Jane died in Victoria on July 16, 1888.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2-9; YFASA 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 4a-7, 18-20; FtVicASA 1-3; PSACAB 37; HBCABio; BCA ordering violin in John Charles, Journal of the Columbia Express Party, 1849, BCA A/B/20.4/c38; death of Catherine in Melrose Diary, Tuesday, November 29, 1853; BCCR CCCath; 1868-1882, Victoria Directories; TacP-FtNis Huggins, April 28, 1904; SookeRM MacKenzie; Van-PL Colonist, April 26, 1887, p. 3 PPS: Dickey SS: James Goudie family genealogy
See Also: Greig, John (Son-in-Law)

Goudie, John (fl. 1844 - 1849) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Birsay, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Labourer, Thompson River (1844 - 1846); Labourer, Columbia Department (1846 - 1847); Fisherman, Fort McLeod (1847 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Fraser (1848 - 1849) (in charge 3 months); Labourer, Fort Alexandria (1849); Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1849).

John Goudie joined the HBC from Birsay in 1843 on a five-year contract, sailed to York Factory on the Prince Rupert and made his way overland to Thompson River. He spent the next five years at various posts in New Caledonia before returning to Orkney on the same vessel.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3, 10; YFASA 24-29; YFDS 18-19; FtVicASA 1; FtAlexPJ 8

Gouin, Pierre [variation: Guein] (c. 1807 - 1859) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1807

Death: Colville/Colville area, Washington Territory - 1859

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1846); Middleman, Thompson River (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Alexandria (1847 - 1848); Middleman, New Caledonia (1848 - 1849); Middleman, Fort Colville (1849 - 1850); Boute, Fort Colville (1850 - 1851).

Pierre Gouin joined the HBC from Sorel in 1828. He retired in 1851 in the Fort Colville area and died there in 1859.

The specifics of his family have not been traced but his widow was still living in 1904.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24-32; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7, 21; FtAlexPJ 7; FtVanASA 2-8, 10 SS: Hines, The History of North Washington, p. 294

Goulais, Jacques [b] [variation: Goulait, Goulet, Goule] (c. 1794 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Assomption, Lower Canada - c. 1794

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Express (HBC) (1822 - 1823); Middleman, York Factory Express (HBC) (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1825); on Montreal Pay List, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826).

Jacques Goulais [b], from L'Assomption, likely joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on May 1, 1816 as a middleman for three years at Fort William but may have joined as early as 1810. He worked for the HBC until 1825 when he returned to Montreal.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 2-5; FtVanAB 1

Goulait, Jean Baptiste [variation: Goulet] (fl. 1818) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly L'Achigan, Lower CanadaFur trade employee*NWC Milieu, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1820); Menuisier, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1820).

Jean Baptiste Goulait joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray] on February 13, 1818 as a middleman and carpenter for three years. That same year, he crossed the Rockies onto the Pacific slopes in the NWC group lead by Angus Bethune and James McMillan. West of the Rockies, he worked at an undetermined fort site or sites until around 1821, when he returned to Montreal.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 6; FtGeo[Ast]AB 1

Gower, John (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee*HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

John Gower made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Grahame, James Allen [variation: Graham] (1825 - 1905) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Raeburn Place, Edinburgh, Scotland - December 22, 1825Death: Victoria, British Columbia - June 19, 1905Fur trade officer

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver general charges (1844 - 1845); Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver sales shop (1845 - 1848); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1852); Clerk, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1854); Chief Trader/Manager, Fort Vancouver depot (1854 - 1859); Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1859 - 1860); Chief Factor, New Caledonia and Caribou District (1867 - 1869); In charge of HBC affairs, Pacific slopes (1870 - 1874).

Son of a well-known Writer to the Signet (a clerk who prepared writs for the royal signet) and a nephew of HBC officer and businessman, George Traill Allan, James Allen Grahame grew up in Edinburgh and was educated at the Academy. In 1843, he joined the HBC as an apprentice clerk and crossed the Rockies with Joseph McKay to Fort Vancouver 1844. A decade later he was appointed Chief Trader and in this capacity in the late 1850s while living in the decaying priest's house and acting as the last administrator at Fort Vancouver, he tried his best to keep the U.S. Army off what had been HBC property but finally turned the keys over to the Army in June, 1860. In 1858, he purchased land in the North Saanich and Cowichan Districts. In 1860, after winding up the affairs, he went north to Fort Victoria and went to England returning to British Columbia in 1867 for two years before returning to London again. In May 1870, he left England for the Pacific Slopes to take charge only to be recalled in January 1872 to London once again. This trip to London was short and he returned as sub commissioner in the spring just in time to pass through the smoldering ashes of the great Chicago fire. Two years later, in 1874, he was appointed Chief Commissioner in charge of the Western Department and left British Columbia to take up his post at Fort Garry. After retiring in 1884, he moved to Montreal for three years and then to Victoria. He died June 19, 1905 at the family home, "Allendale", on Hillside Avenue, Victoria.

James Allen Grahame had two successive wives and possibly seven children. On September 5, 1848, he married Susanne Birnie (c.1819-1854), daughter of James Birnie. Their children were James Ogden (1850-?), quite likely William (?-?) and Alexander Lowe (1851-?). In Victoria on September 5, 1860, he married Mary Work (1837-1919), a daughter of John Work about a week after the issuance of their marriage licence on August 31, 1860. Another possible son, according to Helmcken, was Harry (?-?). The Grahame/8Work children were Lilian (c.1869-?), Margaret (c.177-?) and Montrose (c.1859-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-32; FtVanASA 9-16; FtVicASA 9-10, 15-16; G. T. Allan's January 25, 1851 Oregon City letter to George Simpson, A.11/62 fo. 567; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.; BCA AbstLnd; VICSMarriageL; BCCR-CCCat; 1891 Census; Van-PL Colonist, June 20, 1905, p. 2 PPS: CCR 1b; Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 250 SS: Hussey, A History of Fort Vancouver, p. 110; Hussey, Fort Vancouver, Historic Structures Report, Historical Data, Volume 1, p. 196-97; ChSoc VII, p. 107n3
See Also: Birnie, James (Father-in-Law); Work, John (Father-in-Law); Grahame, Jeffrey C. (Brother); Allan, George Traill (Relative)

Grahame, Jeffrey C. [variation: Graham] (c. 1831 - 1860) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Scotland - c. 1831

Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - January 1860

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver sales shop (1852 - 1853).

Jeffrey C. Grahame, a younger brother of James A. Graham and nephew of George Traill Allan, first appeared in 1850 living in the same house as merchant Thomas Lowe, Allan's business partner, in Clackamas County. He was then hired on by the HBC around March 1852 for three years as an apprentice clerk. He left his employment, however, in the following year and died in 1860 in Vancouver [Washington Territory] at the young age of twenty-nine.

In 1850, he appeared to have a wife, Mary Ann (c.1830-?) living with him.

PS: OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clackamas Co.; Weekly Oregon Press, January 14, 1860, Jan. 9, 1860 p. 3; HBCA FtVanCB 39; YFASA 32; FtVanASA 9

See Also: Grahame, James Allen (Brother); Allan, George Traill (Relative)

Grandmaison, Louis (fl. 1849 - 1853) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Snake Country (1850 - 1852); Labourer, Snake Country (1852 - 1853).

Louis Grandmaison joined the HBC in 1849 and deserted in 1853.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVanASA 9-10

Grant, John (fl. 1852 - 1853) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1852 - 1853).

John Grant received a cash advance in England in outfit 1852-53 from the HBC and worked briefly on Vancouver Island.

PS: HBCA YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1

Grant, Peter (c. 1806 - c. 1849) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1806

Death: between 1844 and 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1830); Boute, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1831 - 1833); Boute, New Caledonia (1833 - 1842); Boute, Fort Colville (1842 - 1844).

Peter Grant was hired on by the HBC as a middleman in 1825. In outfit 1825-1826, he deserted along with Ignace McDonell at Fort Laloche (?) on September 1, 1825. He re-enlisted as he was back on the books the following outfit. He died between 1844 and October 1849, leaving a widow.

Peter Grant married Anne, of the Chaudières and together they had one recorded daughter, Suzanne (?-?). Daughter Suzanne later married a Frederick Griffin and then Adolphus Ferron.

PS: HBCA YFASA 5-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24; YFDS 1b, 3b-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 2-8; FtAlexPJ 8; BCA BCCR StAndC
See Also: Ferron, Adolphus (Son-in-Law); Leclaire, Aime (possible Son-in-Law)

Grant, Richard (1794 - 1862) (Canadian: Scottish and French)

Birth: Notre Dame, Montreal, Lower Canada - 1794 (born to William Grant and Margaret Laframboise)

Death: Mill Creek, near Walla Walla, Washington - June 21 or 22, 1862

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Columbia Department (1841); Chief Trader, Fort Hall (1842 - 1851).

In 1816, a nineteen year old Richard Grant joined the NWC and then the HBC serving at seven posts east of the Continental Divide until 1841. In 1835, a year before being appointed Chief Trader, his wife died and so he took the children to Montreal to be raised by his mother and sister, then took a year's furlough. In 1842, he replaced Francis Ermatinger at Fort Hall and, as the post was strategically located on the busy Oregon Trail, Grant provisioned a large number of migrants heading for Oregon and California. An astute businessman, he traded flour for the lame and exhausted migrants' short-horned cattle, fattened them up and traded the healthier cattle to following groups. In 1851, because of rheumatoid arthritis, the fifty-seven year old took a one year leave of absence and extended it to 1853, at which point he retired to an abandoned military site near Fort Hall carrying on his trading operations with emigrants and natives. Richard joined forces with his son John Francis and continued the trading business; they drove cattle over the Continental Divide into Beaverhead Country in Montana for fattening and back again for trading. The 1857-1858 Mormon-US Army conflict saw Richard, in an act of self-preservation, retreat from his base north of Dillon [Montana] to just north of Hell Gate, [near Missoula]. Both he and his sixteen year old Helene died in a teepee on Mill Creek, near Walla Walla, while returning from The Dalles with a year's supply of provisions for the ranch. For the next several years his estate was administered by the HBC. Later his grave was moved to Mountain View Cemetery, Walla Walla and marked in 1923 with a simple stone, "Richard Grant, Chief Trader, H.B.Co."

Richard Grant had two successive wives and five children. He first married Mary Anne Berland (c. 1824-1835) and together they had at least three boys, Richard (?-?), Charles William (?-?) and John Francis (?-?); Mary Anne died in Montreal in 1834 or 1835. On March 29, 1845, Grant married Helen Kittson (c.1810-63), the widow of William Kittson. Three of their children were Hélène Wilhelmine (1846-1862), Julia Priscilla (1848-?) and Adelina (1850-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-9; YFASA 21, 24, 27-31; FtVanCB 36; FtVicASA 1-3, 12-16; SimpsonCB; Wills; FtVicCB 26; HBCABio; 1860 US Census, Washington Territory, Spokane Co., Bitter Root Valley PPS: HBRIS III, [bio] p. 442, HBRIS XXII, p. 451; CCR 1b SS: T. C. Elliott, "Richard (Captain Johnny) Grant", p. 1-13; Mountain View Cemetery grave marker
See Also: Kittson, William (Relative); McDonald, Finan (Father-in-Law)

Grave, Alexander [variation: Graves] (c. 1815 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Stepney, Middlesex, England - c. 1815

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1837); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1838); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1840).

Alexander Grave signed on with the HBC in London on February 13, 1836 as a seaman for five years and joined the Nereide for its voyage to the coast. He worked on coastal shipping and in December 1837 was temporarily left at Fort McLoughlin as he was ill. He was discharged in London April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtSimp[N]PJ 3; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7, 10; YFASA 19; ShMiscPap 14; log of Nereide 2

Gravelle, Francois [standard: François] [variation: Francis, Frank Gravel] (c. 1817 - 1876) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Terrebonne, Lower Canada - c. 1817

Death: Deschutes River, Oregon State, United States - March 1876

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1843 - 1847); Middleman, Fort Langley (1847 - 1849).

François Gravelle joined the HBC in 1839 from Terrebonne and arrived in the area on September 1 of that year. He worked at a variety of coastal forts and was in on the construction of Fort Taku. He retired from Fort Langley in 1849 and set his sights south. In March 1849 he settled on a claim of 637 acres [257.8 ha] in Pierce County [Washington] and declared his intention to become a U.S. citizen in October, 1850. That same year he was given a warning by PSAC that his claim was trespassing on their land. Ten years later, on November 24, 1860, he ceded some land to Charles Wren. Later he moved to the Michell Valley of Saanich, possibly to be in the vicinity of the wife's family. There, he lived on for a number of years raising a family. Later, he appears to have moved back to the United States for, around March 1876, he died at the residence of John Birch on the Deschutes River, in Oregon, east of the Dalles.

François Gravelle had one recorded wife and five recorded children. On February 28, 1849, he formalized his marriage to Henriette/Harriet (?-1866), Saanich. Joseph (c.1841-1862) and Narcisse (?-?) may have been their children. Other children were Paschal (1851-1865), Mary (1852-?), Frank (c.1856-?) and Isidore (?-bap.1861-?). Henriette died in Saanich and was buried on May 26, 1866.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-20, 24-30; FtVanASA 6-8; BCA BCCR StAndC; BCCR StElizRC; OHS Oregonian, March 16, 1876, p. 1; WSA Tacoma, March 4, 1892, p. 4 PPS: Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 149; Dickey
See Also: Harvey, George (Son-in-Law)

Gravelle, Gideon (c. 1827 - 1883) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada (born to Vincent Gravelle and Adelaide Bellaire)

Death: Walla Walla, Washington Territory - October 1883

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1842 - 1844).

Gideon Gravelle joined the HBC in 1841 and worked a three year contract on the Pacific slopes. He returned to Canada but was quickly back, settling in French Prairie, Oregon as a settler. In 1848, during the Cayuse War, he appeared on the Muster Rolls as a Private in D, 7th Company. He settled a claim on March 20, 1850.

On February 1, 1847 he took Nancy Pin (daughter of Joseph Pin and Marguerite, Chaudiere) as his wife. There they had children Marie Anne (c.1848-?), Aloys (1849-?), Celestin (1851-?), Julie (1854-?) and Gedeon (1855-?). Sometime before 1870 they moved with daughter Julie to the Frenchtown (Lowden), Washington area. He died in 1883 and was buried October 19, 1883 in the Walla Walla(?) cemetery.

The Gravelle name is on a large marble monolith on the site of the old St. Rose Mission Cemetery of Frenchtown. Accompanied by a large wooden cross, it is all that remains of the old St. Rose site.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-7 PPS: CCR 2a, 2b, 7c; Genealogical Material in Oregon Donation Land Claims, p. 11; Victor, The Early Indian Wars, p. 509

See Also: Pin, Joseph (Father-in-Law)

Gray, Lewis (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Sailmaker, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Lewis Gray made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Gray, William [variation: Grey] (fl. 1833 - 1842) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Limehouse, Middlesex, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1838); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1838 - 1839); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840).

William Gray joined the the HBC on December 7, 1833 and came to the coast on the brig Eagle. He then worked on coastal trade servicing coastal posts. He was a participant in the mutiny of January 1838 aboard the steamer Beaver. Gray left for the British Isles on the barque Nereide in October 1839 and was discharged in London April 22, 1840 but appears to have made one more run to Hudson Bay in 1842.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFASA 14-15, 19; YFDS 5c-7, 10; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Nereide 2; log of Prince Albert 1

Green, James [2] (fl. 1833 - 1834) (British: English)

Birth: probably Portsmouth, Hampshire, England

Death: Pacific Ocean - 1834

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1834).

James Green joined the HBC on May 4, 1833 as a seaman for three years to be served on coastal shipping on the Northwest Coast. He sailed on the Nereide on May 4, 1833 on an arduous almost year-long voyage to the Northwest Coast but drowned just before he reached the Northwest Coast when he fell overboard from the main rigging. (In an apparent record oversight, he was listed as being on the Nereide when it left Fort Vancouver for its return journey in May, 1834.)

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Nereide 1; ShMiscPap 14

Green, Richard (fl. 1826 - 1828) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, William & Ann (brig) (1826 - 1828).

Young Richard Green shipped on with the HBC in London in September 1826 and sailed to the coast on a supply voyage of the William & Ann. The vessel did no coastal trading and it was an uneventful voyage for Green, except that one of the two ship's boys (unnamed) accidentally broke the ship's barometer. He arrived back in London with the vessel in February 1828.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann 1

Green, Thomas (fl. 1853 - 1856) (British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer (2nd), Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1854); Engineer, Nanaimo (1854 - 1856); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1856).

Thomas Green [3] came to the coast on the HBC steamer Otter as assistant engineer. Around December 1854, he was taken from the Otter because of his drinking habits and placed in Colville Town [Nanaimo] where he had less access to alcohol. He didn't reform his drinking habits and so on February 12, 1856, he, along with his wife and child, boarded the Princess Royal for their voyage back to the British Isles where they arrived in June.

The names of his wife and child have not been traced.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-4; FtVicCB 11, 13

Green, William (fl. 1834 - 1846) (British: English)

Birth: probably Northampton, England

Death: possibly England

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Dryad (brig) (1834 - 1836); Steward, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1842); Steward, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1843); Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1843 - 1845); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846).

William Green joined the HBC at Fort Vancouver on March 30, 1834 as a seaman although it appears that he reached there from Oahu where, according to the District Statements of 1834-1835, he was engaged. He made return voyages to England as well as serviced HBC coastal posts for the next twelve years. He was last tracked returning on the barque Cowlitz to London, where he arrived on June 27, 1846. Green appears to have lost contact with the HBC for a credit of £5 remained on his account for two more years.

An undelivered 1838 letter from his friend, George Jones, a cooper living by the London docks, rests at the HBCA. It provided the latest news and gossip about family and friends.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 14-15, 20, 24-25, 27; YFDS 5c-6, 11-12; FtVanASA 3, 5-8; log of Columbia 3; MiscI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 145-47

Greenberry, John (fl. 1835 - 1839) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Other

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1835 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836+); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1838 - 1839).

John Greenberry had an association with the HBC, perhaps selling goods to the Company in outfit 1835-1836. In outfit 1838-1839 he appeared only on the Fort Vancouver sundries account - indicating transactions rather than employment. If he were the John Greenburg who appeared in the Fort Hall Accounts, he may have been an American settler.

PS: HBCA YFASA 21; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 5; OHS FtHallAB

Greenwood, Caleb (fl. 1811 - 1825) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

PFC Trapper, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1811); U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1825).

Caleb Greenwood, later known as "Old Greenwood", first appeared on records as a member of Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition. He got as far as the mouth of the Nodaway River [Kansas, Nebraska & Missouri borders] where he left the expedition. He was at the 1825 Rendezvous at Henry's Fork [Wyoming] and probably attended other Rendezvous' as well as continued trapping in the Rocky Mountains. As a joke, he told the Crow nation that James J. Beckwourth, actually a mulatto, was a long lost member of the Crow Nation who had returned from the dead. According to Beckwourth, this elevated him to chief's position for a number of years. Greenwood was married to a Crow woman and spoke the language fluently, indicating that he spent some time in the Crow area.

PS: MHS Ashley 1 PPS: Beckwourth, p. 127-133

Greenwood, George [variation: Thomas] (? - 1869) (Irish)

Birth: Ireland (born to Patrick Greenwood and Sara Kriston)

Death: between Esquimalt and Nanaimo, Colony of Vancouver Island - July 12, 1869

Fur trade employee

HBC Crew member, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853); Sailmaker, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853); PSAC Sailmaker, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1855); Sailor, Craigflower Farm (1855 - 1859).

George (also called Thomas) Greenwood sailed from England on August 17, 1852 as sail maker and crew member of the Norman Morison, arriving at Fort Victoria in January 1853. He was discharged on arrival, the reason possibly being Isabella Russell, a passenger who was destined to work at Craigflower and a woman whom he married the following month. He may have worked at Fort Victoria until July 1855, when he was "removed to the Farm" (Melrose 1, July 30, 1855). Kenneth McKenzie had purchased a schooner, renamed it Jessie and used it in his farm-related work. He appeared to work at Craigflower until 1859 when, according to the baptismal records of that year, he was registered as a farmer at Burnside. That same year he purchased one hundred acres [40.5 ha] in the Lake District. He may have continued to live at the farm but it is not clear. By 1869, he was running the steamer Emily Harris between Nanaimo and Esquimalt. In 1869, he died, probably of heart failure, while steering the steamer Emily Harris toward Esquimalt harbour from Nanaimo. As he left a wife and eight children, a plea went out in the newspaper, The Colonist for assistance.

On February 8, 1853 at Victoria, George Greenwood married a Scot, Isabella Russell, who travelled in steerage on the same ship. She was the daughter of Robert and Mary Russell of Haddington, Scotland. They eventually had eight children, five of whom were Mary Crangle (1853-?), a son (?-bap.1855-?), Sarah Crangle (1857-?), Isabella (?-bap.1859-?) and Catherine (?-1863).

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison 3; FtVicASA 1-3; BCA AbstLnd; BCCR StAndC; BCCR CCCath; Diar-Rem Melrose 1; Van-PL Colonist, p. 3; July 17, 1869, p. 3

Gregg, William [variation: Cregg] (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

William Gregg joined the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856 and made one return voyage to the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3

Gregoire, Antoine (c. 1823 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably New Caledonia [British Columbia] - c. 1823 (born to Etienne Gregoire and Marguarite Shuswap)

Death: probably Oregon State, United States

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1840 - 1841); Interpreter, New Caledonia (1840 - 1841); Middleman, New Caledonia (1841 - 1843); Settler, Willamette (1843 - 1844+).

Antoine Gregoire was born into the fur trade, raised in the Fort Alexandria area, and began working with the HBC as a seventeen year old in New Caledonia as an interpreter. Not having a contract at that time, he was paid through his father, a horse keeper of the large number of Company horses in the area. Antoine went on contract the following outfit and had a short career (1841-1843) as a middleman. In outfit 1842-1843 he with his parents and siblings moved south to become settlers in the Willamette Valley, and in that same year young Antoine was engaged to the Catholic Mission. He married and raised a family in the St. Louis, Oregon area and has not been traced after 1857.

By 1857, Antoine Gregoire had one wife and three recorded children. On September 17, 1849, in St. Louis, Oregon, he married Thérèse Ouvre (c.1836-?), daughter of J. B. and Genevieve (Jany) Ouvre. Their children were Maxime (1853-?), Medard (1855-?) and Marie Louise Selina (1857-1857).

PS: HBCA YFDS 11, 13; FtVanASA 6-8 PPS: CCR 2a, 3a, 4a
See Also: Ouvre, Jean Baptiste (Father-in-Law)

Gregoire, Etienne (c. 1791 - 1867) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Maskinongé, Lower Canada - c. 1791 (born to Etienne Gregoire and Marie Savigny)

Death: St. Louis, Oregon - December 1867

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Columbia District (1814 - 1815); HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Thompson River (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1826); Middleman, New Caledonia (1823 - 1826); Middleman, New Caledonia (1826 - 1827); Horsekeeper, Fort Alexandria (1827 - 1842); Settler, Willamette (1842 - 1842).

Etienne Gregoire probably joined the NWC in 1813 and served in the Athabasca Department until he came to the Columbia in the following year. In 1827 at Fort Alexandria, now a family man with a son and daughter, he was found to be a "steady" and "good horsekeeper" (HBRX X, p. 200). He retired on July 31, 1842, settling in the Willamette Valley north of St. Louis and on May 2, 1843, being fresh out of the service of the HBC, voted against the establishment of a Provisional Government at Champoeg, Oregon. He died on in 1867 at the parish of St. Louis.

Etienne Gregoire had one wife and seven children. At Fort Vancouver on June 24, 1842, he formalized his marriage to Marguerite, Kamloops (Shuswap [Shouchauabel]) (1790-1860). Their children were Julie (c.1819-?), Antoine (c.1823-?), Sophie (c.1826-1900), David (c.1828-?), Felix (c.1830-?), Thérèse (c.1832-?) and Simon Etienne (c.1833-?).

PS: HBCA FtGeo[As]AB 10; YFASA 1, 4-9, 11-15, 19-20, 22; FtAlexAB 1; FtAlexPJ 5; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-8; YFDS 1b-4a, 5a-7, 11; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co. PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 3a, 3b; HBRX X, p. 200
SS: Holman, p. 116
See Also: Gagnon, Luc (Son-in-Law)

Gregoire, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1810 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Freeman

NWC Freeman, Flathead District (February, 1810); Member, Columbia River (Summer 1811) (with David Thompson); Freeman interpreter, Fort Okanagan (winter 1813 - 1814); Clerk, Fort Okanagan (winter 1813 - 1814).

François Gregoire was a person with some literacy skills. He was first found on February 24, 1810 in the Columbia in as a freeman in the Flathead area where he was paid by David Thompson for a Mr. Courter's furs, a kind of payment for having buried the unfortunate Mr. Courter, who had been killed by the Blackfeet Indians. Gregoire's subsequent movements are hard to trace but, a year later on July 3, 1811, he joined Thompson at Kettle Falls for his trip to the lower Columbia. He appeared to have stayed on with the North West Company and he signed a contract with the NWC on January 5, 1813 for one year to be free in the Columbia District on July 1, 1814. In 1813-1814 he wintered at Fort Okanagan where he functioned as a clerk. He may have returned to the Flathead area after that.

PS: UBC-Koer Thompson; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: Belyeah, p. 142; ChSoc XL, p. 339

Greig, John (c. 1825 - 1892) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Kirkwall, Orkney - c. December 1822 (born to Francis Greig and Amelia [Gaudie] Greig)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - October 1892

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1844); Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Colville (1846 - 1851).

The early life of John Greig, a tall, thin, wiry Orcadian is obscure but he was likely born in Kirkwall and, as a nineteen-year-old worked on Lingro farm, near Kirkwall. As the name "Burness" figures in family oral tradition, he may have transferred to the nearby Burness farm to work before he joined the HBC in 1844 from St. Ola, on a five-year contract. He sailed to York Factory and, after making his way to the Columbia, he began work at Fort Colville as a labourer in 1845. Very little is on record of Greig at Fort Colville but, no doubt working with blacksmith/miller James Goudie, John came to know the Goudie family and eventually his daughter, Margaret, whom he married. An engaging character, described by an anonymous writer as being humorous, an avid reader and fiddle player, and very religious while liking his "nip", Greig retired in 1851 from his work at the Kettle Falls fort. (John's musical ability ran in the family for a lateral distant cousin, Edvard Grieg, who composed music in Norway.) Like others at the time, he then moved north to Fort Victoria where he carried on transactions with the company until outfit 1853-1854. In 1853, he set up a lime producing operation on land he purchased in the Esquimalt/Craigflower area in 1852. At the same time, he grazed cattle in the Craigflower Creek Valley and, in 1855, he began to raise a family in the area. He purchased thirty-six acres [14.6 ha] in the Esquimalt District in 1859. By 1870, being dissatisfied with the quality of lime in the Thetis Lake area, he purchased land on Tod Inlet in Saanich. Part of his quarry was subsequently converted into now the well-known Butchart Gardens. John died October 14, 1892 and he was buried in St. Stephen's Churchyard, Saanich.

John Greig had one wife, Margaret Goudie (1835-1914) and twelve children. Their children were John (1853-1922), Robert Wesley (1856-1940), Margaret (1858-1940), William (c.1861-1910), Alice Amelia (c.1863-?), James (1865-1948), Mary Elizabeth (c.1866-1936), Thomas (c.1868-1890), Emily Jane (1871-1946), George (c.1873-1900), Francis (1876-1951) and Donald (1879-1928). Margaret [Goudie] Greig died December 30, 1914 in St. Joseph's Hospital in Victoria.

An avenue in Brentwood and an Island off Sydney, B.C., have been named after John Greig.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 4; YFASA 25-32; FtVanASA 9; HBCABio; BCA BCGR-AbstLnd; BCCR CCCath; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver district, North & South Saanich subdistrict; SookeRM anonymous; James Goudie family genealogy; John Greig descendant
See Also: Goudie, James (Father-in-Law)

Grenier, Charles (fl. 1821) (possibly Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Columbia Department (1821).

Charles Grenier, who may have entered service with the NWC as early as December 29, 1810 from Maskinongé, is on record as having transferred from the NWC to the HBC in 1821.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9

Grenier (Massa), Joseph (1796 - 1830) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Maskinongé, Lower Canada - 1796 (born to Joseph Grenier and Marie Sicard)

Death: Dalles, The, Columbia Department - July 1830

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Columbia Department (1815 - 1822); HBC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Middleman, Snake Party (1827 - 1830).

Joseph Grenier joined the NWC from Maskinongé on January 3, 1815 and that year began work in the Columbia. As a freeman in 1821, he transferred to the HBC and worked when required, participating in several of Peter Skene Ogden's Snake expeditions. Otherwise, he had a wife but had little communication with his parents in Ruisseau des Chênes, although Henri or Joseph Lacharité may have conveyed news of Grenier back to Maskinongé in the summer of 1830. Joseph worked quietly and competently until July 1830, when, as part of Ogden's party, he drowned with eleven others at the Dalles.

He left behind wife Thérèse (?-?), Spokane/Quilquil/Sehan and child, Marie Ann (1830-?). His widow married Joseph Cornoyer on July 11, 1839.

Two undelivered 1831 letters from his concerned father rest in the HBCA. He wanted his son to return as his grandmother was then eighty-nine years old and parents Joseph and Marie wanted him to care for them in their advancing years. The 16.11.0 he had saved probably went to Thérèse, his wife.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 1-11; YFDS 3a; FtVanASA 1-2; D.4/125, p. 50; SnkCoP] 2; MiscI 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 286-93; CCR 1a, 1b

See Also: Cornoyer, Joseph (Relative)

Grennell, Francis (fl. 1830 - 1832) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

U.A. Seaman, Lama (brig) (1830 - 1832).

Francis Grennell, any captain's nightmare, joined the Boston brig Lama [William Henry McNeill] in Boston before October 6th to sail to the Coast. Not long into the voyage, he fell ill for a couple of weeks and, on January 4, 1831, near the Falkland Islands, fell from the mast, hurting himself badly. On July 18, 1831 at Kaigane harbour in a moment of drunken bravado, he tried with several of the crew to take over the vessel, which earned him two dozen lashes. Three weeks later, on August 9th at Sitka, Grennell, Milton Hurst and William Robinson, took all their belongings, stolen muskets and cartridges as well as a small boat, and deserted. Local natives, however, brought them back. He appears to have continued with the Lama until August 1832 when McNeill sold the vessel to the HBC in Oahu. Grennell appears to have been left in Oahu.

PS: BCA Lama 1

Grey, John (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

John Grey appeared on the 1853-1854 Fort Victoria abstracts with no other information.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1

Griffin, Charles John (? - 1874) (Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada

Death: Ottawa [Bytown], Ontario - July 1874

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice clerk disposable in district, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850); Apprentice clerk, Fort Langley (1850)

- 1851); Clerk, Fort Langley (1850 - 1851); Clerk in charge, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1851 - 1852); Clerk, Fort Langley (1852 - 1853); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1853); Clerk, Fort Simpson (1853); Clerk in charge, San Juan Island (1853 - December, 1857); Chief Trader, Belle Vue Sheep Farm (1857 - 1862).

Charles John Griffin joined the HBC from Montreal around 1846 and spent his first three years in two posts (Fort Coulouge, York Factory) east of the Rockies. On June 9, 1849, he took passage to Norway House on his way to the Columbia. For the next thirteen years he worked in the Columbia/New Caledonia Districts as a clerk and, latterly, Chief Trader. In August 1853, he was temporarily second in command of Fort Simpson. In December 1853, he established the Company sheep farm on San Juan Island and was in charge of it during the San Juan dispute in 1859. He asked the Americans to withdraw their troops from British territory; the territorial dispute was not settled until arbitrator Emperor William I of Germany awarded it to the United States of America in 1872. Griffin's friend, Doctor John Sebastian Helmcken described him as a: splendid fellow--a rushing active spirited lithesome and blithesome fellow—a Canadian, at home with a canoe and horses--a sort of typical Canadian young man--with a French dash in him (Helmcken, p. 131).

Griffin went on furlough in outfit 1863-1863 and headed three more posts (Red River, Island Lake and Churchill) east of the Rockies until 1874. He died that year in Ottawa, Ontario.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; YFDS 23; FtVicASA 1-10; FtVicCB 6; HBCABio PPS: Helmcken, p. 130, 283
See Also: Helmcken, John Sebastian

Griffith, William [a] [variation: Griffiths] (fl. 1834 - 1840) (British: English)

Birth: probably Sussex, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1834 - 1836); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1836 - 1839); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840).

William Griffith joined the HBC in London on December 13, 1834 and came to the Northwest Coast on the Ganymede. He returned to the British Isles on the barque Nereide in the fall of 1839 at the end of his contract and was discharged in London, April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 7, 14; YFASA 15, 19; YFDS 6-7, 10; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Nereide 2

Griffith, William [b] [variation: Griffiths] (c. 1786 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Plymouth, Devonshire, England - c. 1786

Death: possibly England

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Forty-nine year old William Griffith [b] worked on the American merchant vessel Diana before he joined the HBC in Honolulu on February 13, 1836 on the outward voyage of the Columbia. After arriving at Fort Vancouver on April 10, 1836 he made a side trip on the vessel to Honolulu before sailing from the coast and arriving back in England in the spring of 1837.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; FtVanASA 3; YFASA 16

Griffiths, Thomas J. (c. 1830 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England - c. 1830

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1850); Apprentice, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1851 - 1852).

Thomas J. Griffiths joined the HBC in London on September 19, 1846, came to the coast on the Mary Dare and deserted on August 1, 1852.

PS: HBCA Portledge Book [1844-60] C.3/7, [joined Mary Dare, Sept. 19, 1846] fo. 23; YFASA 27—32; FtVicASA 1; FtVicDS 1; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark Co.

Groat, Malcolm (fl. 1834 - 1839) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly in or near Widewall, South Ronaldsay, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department (1834 - 1835); Middleman or labourer, Fort Nez Percés (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1836 - 1839).

Malcolm Groat joined the HBC on May 10, 1834 as a labourer for five years. He left the area for the British Isles at the end of his contract in 1839 and sailed home via the Prince Rupert.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 14-15, 18-19; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-5

Groom, George (c. 1826 - ?) (Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1826

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1845 - 1846); Steward, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1847); Middleman, Willamette Falls (1847 - 1848); Assistant salesman, Willamette Falls (1848 - 1849); Salesman, Champoege (1849 - 1850).

George Groom joined the HBC from Montreal in 1845. In 1850, the same year he retired, he was listed on the U.S. Census as a miller. He carried on transactions with the company until 1853.

George Groom had one wife and a daughter by 1850. His wife was Morieh (c.1838-?) from Calle or California. Their daughter was Marguerite (c.1849-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-31; YFDS 17, 19; FtVanASA 9; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion Co.

Groslin, Charles [variation: Grosliu, GrosLouis, Gros Louis, Groslui] (? - 1833) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lorette, Lower Canada

Death: "McLeod's" [McCloud] River, California, United States - September 17, 1833

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1818); HBC Trapper, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Freeman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman trapper, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Trapper, Snake Party (1831 - 1832); Trapper, South Party (1832 - 1833).

Charles Groslin, from Lorette or Loretteville, signed on with the NWC on January 28, 1817 as a winterer for three years in the Northwest. That same year he crossed the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque's party and likely continued to work in the area for he was in the Columbia when he transferred to the HBC at the time of coalition in 1821. He spent most of his years working in Snake Expeditions and died of the fever in California in 1833 while on a southern expedition.

Charles Groslin married Thérèse (?-?), a Flat Head or Pend d'Oreille woman, their children being Ursule (c.1821-c.1841), Henriette (c.1826-1844), Joseph (c.1829-?), Pierre (c.1827-?), Jean Baptiste (John) (c.1831-?) and Charles II (c.1832-?).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2, 9; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4, 10; SnkCoP] 1, 2; YFASA 11-13; YFDS 4b, 5b; Wills; BCA BCCR-CCCath PPS: CCR 1a, 1b, 2a

Guerin, Morise [variation: Marice] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: La Prairie de la Madeleine, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Milieu, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1813 - 1814).

Morise Guerin travelled to the Columbia either overland or on a ship. When the NWC took over the assets of the PFC in 1813, he joined the NWC on October 10, 1813 and wintered in 1813-1814 at Flatheads post. He appears to have continued his career elsewhere with the HBC in 1818 on a contract that ended on February 12, 1820.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10; SHdeSB Liste

Guerin, Solimine [variation: Solimene] (c. 1813 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably St. Constant, Lower Canada - c. 1813

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and bouté, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Simpson (1834 - 1836).

Solimine Guerin joined the HBC from St. Constant around 1833 and spent the next three years on the Pacific slopes. He returned to Montreal in 1836 and picked up his pay there.

PS: HBCA YFASA 13-16; FtSimp[NJP] 3; YFDS 5b-6; FtVanASA 3

Guibache, Martin [variation: Guibauche] (c. 1800 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Berthier, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1832).

Martin Guibache joined the Hudson's Bay Company from Berthier. He spent the majority of his career in New Caledonia and the last two years at Fort Vancouver. He may have left New Caledonia in 1832 because of sickness as on December 30, 1829, John Tod reported him as being "rather sickly."

PS: HBCA FtStJmsLs 1; YFASA 4-9, 11; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 3a-4b; FtStJmsCB 8

Guibeauche, Joseph [variation: Giboche] (fl. 1818 - 1819) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Berthier, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1819).

Joseph Guibeauche joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on December 28, 1816 and the following year came across the Rockies onto the Pacific slopes with a NWC group led by Angus Bethune and James McMillan. He spent the following winter on the slopes.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 3, 4

Guier, John (fl. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

John Guier worked as a seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Guilbeau, Paul (c. 1800 - 1849) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably L'Assomption, Lower Canada - c. 1800

Death: probably California, United States - 1849

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1821 - 1824); Middleman, Fort St. James (1824 - 1825); Labourer, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1825); Middleman, New Caledonia (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Columbia Department (1826 - 1828); Middleman, New Caledonia (1828 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Snake Party (1831 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1833 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1830); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1840); Settler, Cowlitz (1840 - 1841); Settler, Willamette (1841 - 1842+).

Paul Guilbeau joined the fur trade in 1819 from L'Assomption and appears to have spent a good deal of time at Fort Vancouver before becoming a settler in the Willamette in the early 1840s. He settled in the Willamette and died around 1849 (possibly in the gold fields of California). He did not live to patent his claim under the Donation Land Claim Act.

He had two successive wives and six children. On December 29, 1838 he formalized his marriage to Caty/Catherine Sakaian, Walla Walla (?-1848). Their children were François (1833-1855), Louis (1837-?), Paul (1838-?), Marie (1841-?), Vincent Abraham (1844-?) and Joseph (?-?). After the death of Catherine in 1848 he married Françoise, Cayuse, Walla Walla, the widow of his Iroquois friend, Thomas Tawatcon, on November 5, 1848. After Guilbeau's death in 1849 his widow married Laurent Sauve on April 9, 1850.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-2, 5-9, 11-15, 19-20; YFDS 1a, 3a-7; FtStJmsLS 1; FtStJmsRD 3; FtVanASA 1-6; BCA BCCR CCCath
PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 2b, 3a

See Also: Tawatcon, Thomas (Relative)

Guille, Simon (c. 1822 - ?) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1822

Death: possibly Washington Territory, United States

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Snake Party (1844 - 1845); Goer and comer, Snake Party (1845 - 1846); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1849).

Simon Guille joined the HBC from Sault St. Louis in 1842 and worked at various locations throughout the Columbia Department. In 1848-1849, he received a gratuity for trading wheat. He retired in 1849, probably around June and by 1850 was living in the Lewis Co. area [Washington].

By 1850, Simon Guille had one wife, Mary (c.1834-?), born in the Oregon Territory and one child, Simon (c.1844-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-8; YFASA 24-30; YFDS 16, 19; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis Co.

Guillemette, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1846 - 1848) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1846 - 1848).

François Guillemette appeared in the Columbia in outfit 1846-1847 and was probably a member of the cross-country brigade.

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-27

Guillion, William [variation: Gullion] (c. 1816 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Westray, Orkney - c. 1816 (probably born to George and Marrion Thomson)

Death: probably British Isles

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Middleman or labourer, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Beaver (steamer) (1837 - 1839).

William Guillion joined the HBC from Westray, Orkney in 1833 or 1834 and made his way to the Pacific Northwest where he hoped to stay. He appeared to work competently for the first five years, but in January 1838 when he was sent aboard the steamer Beaver as a stoker to assist in bringing in wood, he refused and consequently, along with Donald McDonald, was flogged by Captain Wm. H. McNeill. As a result, in 1839 he was sent overland and returned to the British Isles on the Prince Rupert but indicated, before he left, that he intended to return to the Columbia via the Missouri to settle. However, William's plan did not materialize. He returned to Westray and in 1841 was founding living at "Sanguay" with his parents and several others who were likely a brother and sisters. The following year he was married and by 1861, he was found at "Cowgate" raising his family. He has not been traced after that.

William Gullion appears to have had one wife and five children. On January 22, 1842, he married Elizabeth Scott. Their traceable children were Helen (1843-?), George (1845-?), James (c.1847-?), Thomas (1854-?) and John (c.1860-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 15, 18-19; FtSimp[N]PJ 4; YFDS 6-7; FtVanASA 3-5; FtVanCB 24; OrkA 1841 and 1861 U.K. Census, Orkney-Westray

Guinette, Antoine (fl. 1814 - 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Gunner, Columbia (schooner) (1814 - 1815).

Antoine Guinette worked as a gunner aboard the schooner Columbia on the Northwest Coast in 1814-1815. He rejoined on March 26, 1815 as gunner, but, on July 4, misbehaved and was demoted to seaman. On February 29, 1816, he left the Columbia and entered the Portuguese service.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

Gullickson, Johan [variation: John Gallicksen, Gulbretson, Gibertson, Gibertson] (c. 1823 - 1893) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Sanfoard/Sandford, Norway - c. 1823

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - April 1893

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1854); Carpenter, Beaver (steamer) (1854 - 1855); Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1854).

Johan Gullickson was one of the Norwegian labourers who came to the coast to work for the HBC. On the voyage out on the Princess Royal he was pulled from the ranks of the passengers and put to work as a carpenter. He was one of the few crew who worked consistently without protest and when he left the vessel to work on the Beaver, he was sorely missed. He appears to have sought gold in the Caribou and then became a proprietor of a fruit store on Johnson Street in Victoria.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 1; FtVicASA 1-2; Van-PL Colonist, April 2, 1893, p. 7

Gullion, Charles Fraser [variation: Guillion] (c. 1828 - 1911) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1828 (born to William Gillon and Isabella Drever)

Death: Nanaimo, British Columbia - April 1911

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Nisqually farms (1852 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1854); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1855 - 1856); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1856 - 1857); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1858 - 1859); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1867 - 1868); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1867).

Charles Gullion received an advance from the HBC in 1849 for his 1849-1850 voyage on the Norman Morison to Vancouver Island. After his arrival on March 24, 1850, he worked at Fort Victoria until July 1, 1852 when he quit. He soon re-enlisted for, on December 2 1852, he was noted as being sent out to take charge of the sheep at Sastuc farm outside Fort Nisqually. On March 30, 1853, however, he reappeared at the Nisqually gates having been sent back by Thomas Dean, the Tithlow farm manager claiming that Gullion was "worthless and lazy" (Dickey, Mar. 30, 1853). Gullion's subsequent work at Nisqually until October did not bear out this assessment, for the next five months he worked in the gardens, slaughter house, swamps etc., without any complaint. On October 20, 1853, he sailed back to Victoria on the Alice to complete his contract there. From that point on his record is not clear and he appears to have worked off and on. He reappeared at Nisqually in March 1855 delivering mail from Fort Victoria. He appeared to work again in outfit 1855-1856. He worked at Fort Simpson in 1867-1868 but by 1871 was in Nanaimo. Charles and his wife both died in 1911 in Nanaimo and were buried in the Nanaimo Cemetery, Bowen Park.

On April 2, 1860, Charles F. Gullion married Irish-born Margaret Sullivan (c.1830-1911), daughter of John & Ellen Sullivan of Sandon (?), Ireland. She had arrived in Victoria before October, 1851 and died November 18, 1911. Their children were Mary (1853-1915), William (1856-1882), Isabella (1858-1932) and Charles Stockand Gullion [adopted] (1867-1887).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-6, 14-16; BCA BCGR-VICSMarriageL; BCA Nanaimo Free, March 29, 1882, January 22, 1887, p. 1 PPS: Dickey SS: Mouat, p. 213; "Pioneer Registry", vol. 27, No. I, March, 1998, p. 7-9; family information from family relation, 1997

Gunn, Adam (c. 1814 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: "Naversdeal", Orphir, Orkney - c. April 24, 1814 (born to George Gunn and Margaret [Leask])

Death: probably Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1835); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1835); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Passenger, Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840).

Adam Gunn's intention to use the fur trade to acquire capital did not go according to plan. Born into a crofter family in Orphir and baptised on April 24, 1814, by 1821 seven-year-old Adam was likely assisting his father and older brother tend their twenty-four black cattle, four sheep, twenty-four geese, and six swine within their allotted acreage. As the single family plough and cart was not enough to wrest a living from the soil, at twenty-one Adam joined the HBC on April 6, 1835 as a labourer for five years. He sailed to Moose River on the Prince of Wales and thence on the Prince Rupert to York Factory where he began his overland journey to the Columbia. While in the Columbia, he worked most of his time at Fort Vancouver, likely doing a variety of tasks, but around September 1838, Gunn developed a disease in his ankle which laid him up for the next fourteen months. As a result, James Douglas sent him home on the Nereide on September 30, 1839 and followed it up with an October 24, 1839 note to Company secretary, William Smith:

You may possibly procure him admission into one of the London hospitals where he will obtain the best medical treatment, and should his recovery not follow, he may still earn a living, at any Sedentary trade, in his native place, instead of remaining a burden upon us here, and receiving food and pay, while really unfit for duty (FtVanCB 24, fo. 42-42d).

Adam recovered from his ankle problems in Britain (possibly at a hospital) and returned to Orphir, Orkney where, on December 23, 1841, he married Shetlander Inga Johnston. He returned to farming and by 1851 he and Inga were raising a family at "Bournside", Orphir and by 1861, they were farming four acres [1.6 ha] at "Lochend", Orphir. He has not subsequently been traced.

Adam Gunn and Inga Johnston had seven or eight recorded children in Orkney. Their children were James (1843-?), William (1844-?), George (1848-?), Morison (1851-?), John (1854-?), William [cannot confirm 1861 census] (1856-?), Jessie (1859-?), and Robina (1861-?).

PS: OrkA OPR; 1821, 1851, 1861 Censuses, Orkney-Orphir; HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 12; log of Prince Rupert IV 8; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7, 10; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 19; FtVanCB 24, James Douglas Oct. 24, 1839 letter to William Smith, B.223/b/24, fo. 42-42d

Gunn, Donald (1830 - 1913) (British: Scottish)

Birth: North Tolsta, Stornoway, Lewis, Scotland - 1830 (born to John Gunn and Ann Martin)

Death: North Tolsta, Scotland - June 26, 1913

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1853 - 1854); Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1854 - 1856); Labourer, New Caledonia (1856 - 1858); Labourer, Fort Langley (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861).

Donald Gunn joined the HBC from Lewis in 1852 to work on the Pacific slopes as a labourer. He appears to have spent the majority of his time in New Caledonia as a labourer. It is not certain when he returned to Lewis but it was likely in the early 1860s for his HBC accounts showed movement until 1863. In 1869, back on the Isle of Lewis, Donald married Kirsty MacIver (?-1913), and in 1871, they had the tenancy of the croft at 70 Tolsta. Donald and Kirsty had no children but they must have been close as Donald died on June 26, 1913, and Kirsty died seven days later, on July 3, 1913.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-10 SS: genealogical researcher, Northton, Harris

Gunn, John (fl. 1833 - 1842) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near Stornoway, Ross, Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Boatbuilder, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1835); Boatbuilder, Fort Vancouver (1835 - 1842).

John Gunn joined the HBC from Stornoway June 17, 1832 as a boat builder, originally for five years. The eighteen-year old boat builder boarded the Prince Rupert IV on June 23, at Stornoway, sailing June 26. After a two-month voyage, he disembarked at York Factory on August 24 and began work in the Columbia in 1834. He worked at various locations in the Columbia and must have carried on quietly and competently as he did not appear in extant records. In 1842 he left the area overland for east of the Rockies and eventually to the British Isles sailing via the Prince Rupert.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 13-14, 19-22; YFDS 5c-7; FtVanASA 3-7

Gunnell, George (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

George Gunnell made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Guoin, Francois [standard: François] (fl. 1810) (probably Canadian: French)

Freeman

U.A. Trapper with American Party, Columbia River (1810).

François Guoin appears on the records only once, on March 4, 1810, as a member of Mr. Courter's party. He was paid off by David Thompson for looking after Mr. Courter and his belongings after the death of Courter. As such, Guoin, spelled Goin by Thompson, was probably with a group of traders who had drifted into the upper Missouri, where he joined Courter's party.

PS: OA Thompson's Journals

Guthrie, Daniel (fl. 1826 - 1828) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, William & Ann (brig) (1826 - 1828).

Daniel Guthrie, who may be the following Guthrie, shipped on with the HBC in London in September 1826 and sailed to the coast on the second supply voyage of the William & Ann. It was strictly a supply voyage and the vessel did no coastal trading; hence, it was likely an uneventful voyage for Guthrie. He arrived back in London with the vessel in February 1828.

PS: HBCA log of William & Ann 1

Guthrie, David (fl. 1828) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Kirkwall, Orkney

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Columbia Department (1828).

David Guthrie joined the HBC from Kirkwall, Orkney on September 6, 1828 as a boatswain for three years. He was assigned to the Columbia River but did not appear on those abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Guthrie, William Logie (1831 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Kirkwall, Orkney - October 1831 (born to Thomas Guthrie and Elizabeth Swany)

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1853); Cook, Otter (steamer) (1853 - 1854);

Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1855).

William Logie Guthrie had a peripheral attachment to the fur trade. In his youth, he lived with his father, a labourer, and mother, along with at least six brothers and sisters at "Strynd", Kirkwall. When he was approaching twenty years of age he decided to leave the Orcadian city and join a group of HBC settlers destined for Vancouver Island. For this, he received a cash advance in England in 1850 and reached Vancouver Island on the chartered barque Tory on May 9, 1851. After his arrival, he worked on and off for three to four years with the Company, likely to pay off debts, before retiring and purchasing a town lot in Victoria. He joined the HBC steamer Otter in September 1853 for three months as a cook. There was movement on his account until 1856 and he has not been traced further.

On April 14, 1853, he married Ellen Fisher (?-?) at Victoria.

PS: OrkA OPR; 1841 Census, Orkney-Kirkwall; HBCA YFASA 30-32; YFDS 23; FtVicDS 1; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-3; BCA BCGR-Land; BCCR CCCath

Gwynn, Rhys [variation: Ryth Gwynn, Gwyon, Gidyn] (fl. 1857 - 1858) (probably British: Welsh)

Birth: probably Wales

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Rhys Gwynn sailed to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal. Shortly after his arrival at Victoria he deserted and has not been traced further.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Hackland, Gilbert Spence (1828 - 1901) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Birsay, Orkney - January 1828 (born to William Hackland and Catherine [Firth] Hackland)

Death: probably Manitoba, Canada - 1901

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Vancouver (brigantine) (1852); 2nd mate, Recovery (brig) (1853 - 1854).

Two of thirty years of Gilbert Spence Hackland's career with the HBC were spent on the Pacific Northwest coast. After signing on with the HBC on May 25, 1852 in Stromness, Hackland sailed as a second mate on the HBC brigantine Vancouver to the Pacific Northwest coast where, after it was wrecked at Rose Point, he was transferred to the schooner Recovery. He then sailed the coast for approximately two more years until 1854, when he was discharged along with the other mate, Robert Ellis, and crew of the Recovery when they refused to sail to the Hawaiian Islands without a raise in pay. From that point he disappeared from the coast and, in 1858, he was found as chief officer of the Lady of the Lake at Port Natal, S. E. Africa. He rejoined the HBC on January 3, 1862 and served until 1874 as sloopmaster of the schooner Fox in the Eastmain District. During this time, he arranged passage for his wife and two children to Moose Factory. In outfit 1873-1874 he was a freeman and in 1874 was a clerk temporarily in charge of Rat Portage at Lac La Pluie. From 1875-1876 he was clerk in charge of the North West Angle post on Lac La Pluie [Rainy Lake]. From 1876 to 1882 he was master of the steamer Colville at Red River and between 1882 and 1890 was a clerk at Red River. Hackland died in 1901 and his sea chest is in the Reston & District Museum, Reston, Manitoba.

Hackland appears to have had one wife and nine children. His wife was Anne Sharpe (?-1902) whom he married September 30, 1856 in London, England. The children were Margaret Jane (1858-?), Mary Helen Polly (?-c.1926), Annie Marie (1862-1941), James Gilbert (1864-1915), Hector Dalrymple (1867-70), Maxwell (?-1874), Winnifred (1870-1905), Alfred Ernest (1872-1955), and Beatrice [Birdie] Ann Hamilton (1875-?).

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA initial appointment C.2/7, fo. 64d-65; FtVicASA 1-3; FtVicCB 11; discharge C.3/15, fos. 99d, 100; South African information in notebook E.52/1; HBCCont; HBCABio; BCA Vancouver SS: Hackland descendant

Hadley, James (fl. 1828) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Blackwall, All Saints, Poplar, Middlesex, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Columbia Department (1828).

James Hadley joined the HBC from Poplar on September 6, 1828 as a carpenter for three years. He was assigned to the Columbia River but did not appear on the abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Hadley, Jesse (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1853).

Jesse Hadley joined the HBC in London on December 24, 1852 as a cook on the Otter and sailed on February 4, 1853. Shortly after arriving in Victoria in August, Hadley deserted.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1

Hadley, Ruben (fl. 1814) (possibly British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Crew member, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

Ruben Hadley worked as on the NWC schooner Columbia in 1814 on the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

Haft, George (fl. 1814) (possibly British)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime employee

NWC Crew member, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

George Haft was a crew member on the NWC schooner Columbia when it was on the coast in 1814.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

Hainault (Dechamp), Henri (c. 1825 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lachine, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1846 - 1848); Middleman, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1849).

Henri Hainault was probably in the Columbia during outfit 1846-1847, for he drew wages for that outfit, but he was caught up in the fever of the California gold rush and deserted, probably in early 1849.

PS: HBCA YFASA 26-29

Hains, Charles (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

Charles Hains made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Halcrow, Gideon Gifford [variation: Halcro] (? - 1870) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - July 1870

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Carpenter, Columbia Department general charges (1851 - 1852); Carpenter, Fort Victoria depot (1852 - 1853); Sponsored settler, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Gideon Halcrow arrived at Fort Victoria on the Norman Morison on October 30, 1851 as a HBC sponsored settler. There he was to work on contract until 1853 as a carpenter and purchased a Victoria town lot in 1854. A former crofter doing carpentry work, plastering, and anything connected with housebuilding, Halcrow constructed the house of the local medical doctor, John Sebastian Helmcken and his wife Cecilia, the daughter of James Douglas. Also, in 1859, he was contractor for one of the early "birdcage" parliament buildings in Victoria and that same year, purchased almost two hundred acres [80.9 ha] in the Lake District. He was not a man to be trifled with - from 1860, the now resident of Government Street became involved in more than one assault case, although, he did not appear to be the instigator. Halcrow appeared to carry on transactions with the Company until 1862 and his name remained on the books until 1867. He died around July 11, 1870 in Victoria of heart disease.

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; FtVicASA 1-4, 9-14; PSACAB 23; BCA BCGR-CrtR-Land; 1860 Victoria Directory, p. 30; Van-PL Colonist, Dec. 5, 1860, p. 2, Nov. 18, 1862, p. 3, Jan. 12, 1870, p. 3; PPS: Helmcken, p. 128, 133

Haldane, John (? - 1857) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Scotland

Death: Edinburgh, Scotland - October 1857

Fur trade officer

NWC Officer, Pacific slopes (1817 - 1819); Officer, Fort George [Astoria] (1819 - 1820); HBC Chief Factor, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822).

John Haldane's five years on the Pacific slopes represented the end of a long fur trade career. He entered the service of the XY Company in 1798 and, in 1804, he was one of the six wintering partners to sign an agreement for amalgamation with the NWC. From 1806-1817 Haldane was at various locations east of the Rockies and around 1817 was appointed to the Columbia. At the time of amalgamation in 1821, Haldane, now Chief Factor, was one of four commissioned officers appointed to the Columbia by the HBC; two others were former fellow NWC officers, John Dugald Cameron and James McMillan, and HBC Chief Trader John Lee Lewes. In 1822 after he was granted further furlough and succeeded by C. F. Alexander Kennedy, he left the Pacific slopes and arrived in England in November, 1822. In 1823, he returned to east of the Rockies, retired in 1827, sold his fur trade interests to the HBC, and lived out the rest of his life in Haddington, Scotland.

John Haldane had a wife and family during the fur trade but their names have not been traced.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 SS: HBRS XXII, p. 443; HBRS II, p. 215-216

Hale, Albert F. (? - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Shushartie (near Fort Rupert), Colony of Vancouver Island - July 7, 1850

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Deserter, Fort Rupert (July, 1850).

Albert F. Hale sailed from England to Vancouver Island on the Hudson's Bay Company supply and immigrant ship, the Norman Morison, which arrived at Fort Victoria on March 24, 1850. On May 11, while the ship was still in the harbour, and, no doubt motivated by the stories of California gold, Hale, along with Charles Lobb and brothers James and George Wishart, deserted to be secreted aboard a coal carrier, the barque England, then at anchor in the Offing. The England then sailed to Fort Rupert with the four deserters on board. When the small group heard that the Fort Rupert magistrate, John Sebastian Helmcken, was about to apprehend them aboard the England, three or four of them left the ship in a canoe, paddled north to hide themselves in some woods at Shushartie, near the north end of Vancouver Island. When the three, Hale, Lobb and George Wishart, were in a canoe, they encountered some Newitsee natives who, wishing to tell them where the other deserters were, approached them. Misreading the Newitsee intentions, the three frightened sailors landed and, not having weapons, brandished an axe. Another flung a stone and smashed the Newitsee canoe, sinking it. The infuriated Newitsees shot and killed the three, sinking Hale's body into the ocean. Wishart was stripped and placed upright in a hollow tree while Lobb was placed at the foot of the tree and covered with brush. After the two stripped bodies were discovered, they were brought back to Fort Rupert, where, on July 16, Hale and the others were buried in the garden at the back of the fort.

Some months later, on Governor Blanshard's insistence, magistrate Helmcken went to the Newitsee village with an interpreter and constable and asked for the surrender of the murderers of the three. Upon hearing Helmcken's demand, the chief offered a traditional compensation of blankets, furs, and any other goods. Helmcken refused the offer but did not press the issue further. Shortly afterwards, in October, punitive action for the murders was exacted by the corvette, HMS Daedalus (Captain Wellesley), from which three armed boats were sent to the then deserted Newitsee village. Finding no one there, they torched the cedar houses, thus forcing a relocation of the Newitsee. Not having caught the perpetrators, the Daedalus sailed for San Francisco. Less than a year later, in July, 1851, and again on Blanshard's insistence on retribution, the eighteen gun sloop HMS Daphne (Captain Fanshawe) went to the area and torched the new Newitsee village during an exchange of gunfire in which some of Daphne sailors were injured. Newitsee chief Lookinglass and three of his men were also killed. Because of such punishment on their village and possibly because of further inducement of an award, the Newitsees produced the mangled bodies of two murderers who were killed while being "captured". Both bodies, one of which was rumoured to be a substitute slave, were taken to Fort Rupert and buried in the garden. For all their efforts, the Newitsees were not given their reward, but were given a letter and told to collect in Victoria.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Norman Morison 1; YFASA 30-31 PPS: HBRS XXXII, p. lxxii-lxxviii, 124-127; Helmcken, p. 312-318

See Also: Lobb, Charles; Wishart, James; Wishart, George (Friend)

Hall, Albert F. B. (fl. 1825) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly United States of America

Maritime employee

MW 3rd mate, Convoy (brig) (1825).

Albert F. B. Hall shipped aboard the Convoy [William Henry McNeill] at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After trading for a season on the coast, he returned to Honolulu November 2. It is not known whether he continued to sail with the Convoy.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Hall, Joseph (fl. 1842 - 1843) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Maritime employee

HBC Crew member, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843).

Joseph Hall was a crew member of the barque Columbia in outfit 1842-1843.

PS: HBCA YFASA 22

Hall, Richard (fl. 1845 - 1848) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Vancouver (barque) (1844 - 1848).

Richard Hall joined the HBC in London on September 2, 1844 and, in October, 1846, left the Columbia for the British Isles on the barque Vancouver. He rejoined the vessel for its return to the coast but the vessel was wrecked at the mouth of the Columbia when it arrived on May 7, 1848. He was subsequently employed elsewhere by the HBC.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 25-26; YFDS 17

Hall, William Henry (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

William Henry Hall made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Halls, George (fl. 1853 - 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Vancouver (brigantine) (1852 - 1853).

George Halls served out part of his apprenticeship on the HBC vessel Vancouver which left London in June 1852, sailed for the coast, but came to grief on Rose Spit, Queen Charlotte Island in August 1853. Halls made his way back to London on an unidentified vessel.

PS: HBCA PortB 1 FtVicASA 1-2

Halsey, John Cook (? - c. 1837) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: possibly New York State, United States

Fur trade employee

PFC Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1812 - 1813); Untraced vocation, Willamette or Wallace House (1812); Clerk, Fort George [Astoria] (1813 - 1814).

John C. Halsey first came to the coast on the Beaver [Cornelius Sowle], arriving at Fort Astoria on May 11, 1812. He left shortly thereafter with a party of fourteen men on November 23, 1812 to establish a post (Wallace House) and winter in the Willamette. He did not join the North West Company when it purchased Fort Astoria and left on the Pedlar, April 2, 1814 and was left by Wilson Price Hunt at Sitka, Alaska. He appears to have made his way back to New York where he established a company and continued doing business with the American Fur Trading Company. He emerged as the subject of AFC correspondence in the 1830s. (A letter dated April 20, 1837 from John B. Whettene of the AFC in New York announced Halsey's business failure to Pierre Chouteau.)

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10; MHS Chouteau PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 114, 116, 118-19, 131, 145, 194; ChSoc LVII, p. 615, 619, 620, 662, 697, 698

Halvorsen, Christian (fl. 1853 - 1859) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Jeanages, Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer passenger, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Uplands Farm (1854 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1857 - 1859).

Christian Halvorsen was likely one of the few who arrived on the HBC charter vessel, Colinda, at Fort Victoria on April 17, 1854. He worked for the HBC until 1859 when he retired.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-7

Ham (? - c. 1851) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: probably Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - c. 1851

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1850).

Ham joined the HBC from Oahu in 1845. He worked for five years at Fort Vancouver until he died around 1851.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32

Hamel, Charles (fl. 1849 - 1853) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850); Middleman, New Caledonia (1850 - 1852);

Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1852 - 1853).

Charles Hamel joined the HBC in 1849 and appears to have worked at least to the end of his contract in 1852. He may have stayed in the area for transactions continued on his account until 1856.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-3; FtAlexPJ 9

Hamelin (fl. 1811) (possibly Canadian: French)

Fur trade employee

NWC Member, Columbia River (1811) (with David Thompson).

(The Hamlin of the David Thompson journals is possibly Jacques or Joseph Hamelin.) Thompson's Hamelin is first on record with Thompson as a freeman arriving at Ilthkoyape [Kettle Falls] on August 21, 1811 when Thompson was returning up the Columbia. Hamelin travelled with the group up the Canoe River as a hunter but has not been traced after September 21, 1811.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; UBC-Koer Thompson PPS: Belyea, p. 170, 173, 177

Hamer, John (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

John Hamer made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Hamilton, Gavin (1835 - 1909) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Stromness, Orkney - January 1835 (born to John MacAulay Hamilton and Marion [Rae] Hamilton [sister of John Rae, the explorer])

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - July 1909

Fur trade employee

HBC Cabin class passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853); Apprentice clerk, Fort Langley (1853 - 1857); Clerk disposable in Department, Western Department (1857 - 1859); Clerk, New Caledonia (1859 - 1860); Clerk, Fort Babine [Fort Kilmaurs] (1860 - 1866); Clerk, McLeod Lake Post (1866 - 1870); Clerk in charge, Fort St. James (1870 - 1872); Chief Factor, Fort St. James (1872 - 1878).

After Gavin Hamilton ran away to sea for a year, his magistrate father, whose wife had HBC connections, secured a clerkship position for the young lad in the London company. The privileged youth (his grandmother was a near relative of Lord Macaulay, the historian, while a cousin was Sir Robert Hamilton, at one time Governor of Tasmania) sailed for North America on the Norman Morison on August 17, 1852, arriving the following January. Hamilton worked at Fort Langley under J. M. Yale until 1857, when he resigned; however, P. S. Ogden persuaded him to remain in the service and so Hamilton accompanied Ogden to Stuart Lake [Fort St. James], where he was to stay for the rest of his career. Hamilton was obviously competent and popular with his future father-in-law Ogden; for example, in 1855, he saved seventy or one-hundred barrels of gunpowder from a burning store-house, and received a premium of £100 for his efforts. As he had some knowledge of medicine he practised surgery, which held him in good stead with the natives. On the other hand, according to Morice, he may have used liquor in his trade with the natives in his efforts to drive out non-HBC competition. Hamilton succeeded Ogden at Fort St. James, reaching the rank of Factor and, in 1878, went on furlough for six months. Similarly the following year, he went on furlough for six months from Quesnel. In 1872, Hamilton had pre-empted 320 acres [129.5 ha] at Stuart's Lake but, in 1878, moved south to 150 Mile House where he obtained a crown grant. There, on the Caribou Road, Hamilton erected saw and grist mills but a combination of bad luck and bad management forced him to sell 150 Mile House in 1886. Son Peter saw his parent's plight and built 114 Mile House, and had them move in with him there in 1891. Hamilton and his wife spent some time there, but spent most of their time at 122 Mile House, travelling between the two locations by sail boat or ice boat on Lac la Hache. In November 1908 Gavin became ill with pneumonia after a rough day on the lake and was taken to Victoria for medical care but died the following year.

Gavin Hamilton had one wife and eighteen children. At Fort St. James, he married Margaret Juliana Ogden (1844-1918), daughter of Peter Skene Ogden and Julie (1788-1886), Flathead. Together, they had: Peter Ogden (c.1863-?), John Rae (c.1864-?), Thomas McAulay (1865-1955), Colin Alexander (c.1866-?), Charlie Ogden (1868-1954), Richard Rae (c.1870-?), Gavin James (c.1873-?), Moffat Hamilton (1873-1971), Margaret Jessie (c.1874-1958), John Alexander (?-bap.1877-?), Robert Tibbet (?-bap.1877-?), William Rae (1875-1953), Rae (1877-1953), Christine M. (1879-?), Isaac Ogden (1881-1963), Ellen/Helen Kate Rae (1883-?), Mary S. R. (?-?) and Theodore Henry (1892-1967). After the death of Gavin, Margaret [Ogden] Hamilton married Ewen Duncan McKinlay, son of Archibald McKinlay and Sarah Jane Ogden, in Kamloops, B.C. on November 6, 1917.

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison 3; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-16; FtVicCB 18, 22, 23, 27; HBCABio; BCA Lac La Hache, B. C. cemetery readings; BCCR StPetStLk; BCCR Kincolith; BCGR-BCVS-RBDM: Van-PL Colonist, July 31, 1909 p. 7 SS: Morice, The History of, p. 307, 310-11, 326, 327; Laing, p. 515; Forbes
See Also: Ogden, Peter Skene (Father-in-Law); Flathead, Julia (Mother-in-Law); McKinlay, Archibald (Relative)

Hamilton, William (fl. 1836) (probably British: English)

Fur trade officer

HBC 1st mate, Ganymede (barque) (1836 - 1837).

William Hamilton joined the HBC at an unspecified location on August 29, 1835 as a first officer for five years. He returned to England on the Ganymede in 1836.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 3; YFDS 7; log of Ganymede 4; YFASA 16

Hamlyn, Dr. Richard Julian (fl. 1824 - 1832) (British: English)

Birth: probably Plymouth, England

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1830); Surgeon, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1830).

Dr. Richard Julian Hamlyn, a genial perfectionist, was not entirely suited to the fur trade. He likely trained or practised at Guy's Hospital in Southwark, England and was quite possibly middle-aged when he joined the HBC March 10, 1824 to be a surgeon at the Red River Settlement. In the summer of 1824, he sailed to York Factory on the Prince of Wales [John Davison] and arrived at the Red River settlement in October to look after active and retired employees within the area. For the next three years he practised medicine, dispensing concoctions, for example to a satisfied David Douglas, and boarding with the Bishop [J. N. Provenchner]. However, in 1827 George Simpson wanted him either returned to England or fully engaged in the fur trade. As a result, he was appointed clerk and surgeon at York Factory in 1827-1828 but after travelling there found he was not needed. Consequently, Hamlyn set out with Simpson from York Factory on July 12, 1828 to make the journey to the Columbia where he would be clerk and surgeon at Fort Vancouver. During the journey, he was the object of ridicule by the tougher fur traders who noted that he slept on his watch, complained endlessly of the portages, and yearned for the days at York Factory. At another point in the journey he wanted a war party to strike at the Babines as one of them had offended him. Eventually, on October 25, 1828, the party arrived at Fort Vancouver where Hamlyn took up his post. There he stayed for a year and a half but quarrelled with McLoughlin, who felt that Hamlyn wasn't doing his job properly. By 1830, Hamlyn received permission to return to the Red River Settlement, and left in the spring of 1830. He spent the next outfit there but Simpson had little confidence in him. Before Hamlyn could collect his debts, he sailed to England in the autumn of 1831 on the chartered ship Camden [Robert Royal]. In England he tried unsuccessfully to collect his debts and by 1832, was in Sydney, Australia.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9; D. Douglas, Journal, p. 78, 287, 289; HBRS III, p. 124, 159; HBRS X, p. 250-252; ChSoc XXIV, p. 18, 23; ChSoc III, p. 124-25, 159; ChSoc IV, p. xcix; HBRS X, [bio] p. 250-52

Hammond, Edward (fl. 1853 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Stoker, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1854); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1855); Crew member, Princess Royal (barque) (1855).

Edward Hammond joined the HBC in London on December 23, 1852 as a stoker and came to Vancouver Island on the Otter. However, he was ill for many weeks prior to the arrival, and on August 4, 1853 had to leave the vessel to recover on shore. He appears to have worked at Fort Victoria until January 12, 1855 when he joined the Princess Royal for its voyage back to the British Isles.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-2; FtVanASA 9; log of Princess Royal 1

Hammond, Thomas William (c. 1829 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Plymouth, England

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1846 - 1848); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1848 - 1850).

Thomas Hammond was apprenticing with the HBC from 1844-1846 on runs to Hudson Bay on the Prince Albert. When he came to the Columbia he was still serving his apprenticeship and by 1848 had become a seaman. He worked until 1850 and may have remained in the area.

PS: HBCA log of the Prince Albert 3-5; PortB 1; YFASA 27-32

Handley, William [variation: Handly, Hanley] (fl. 1833 - 1835) (British: English)

Birth: probably Portsmouth, Hampshire, England

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Eagle (brig) (1833 - 1834); Mate, Fort Simpson naval service (1834 - 1835); Passenger, Dryad (brig) (1835).

William Handley joined the HBC on December 7, 1833, as a 2nd mate for five years. He sailed to the Columbia on the brig Eagle, and arrived on the coast in October, 1834 whereupon, on November 10, 1834, he was drafted to the Columbia services working out of Fort Simpson. He worked out of Fort Simpson for one month until December 10, 1834 when he was put off duty for syphoning off a keg of HBC "bright Varnish" (HBRS IV, p. 135-36) from the Eagle cargo for the aging Captain Peter Corney of the Columbia. He was asked to give a statement in writing by Dr. John McLoughlin. When he refused to put it in writing, he was put off duty and, being made an example of by McLoughlin, was subsequently sent to Oahu as a passenger on the Eagle in the spring of 1835. Handly appears to have taken on the job of captain of the English brig Clementine out of Oahu. In April, 1837, the Clementine landed two Catholic priests at Oahu who had been banned from the Sandwich Islands in 1831 by King Kamehameha I, who had felt threatened by them. After the ship was seized and no loading or unloading could take place, Handly boarded the priests and took them back to California. Handley may also have gone by the name of James Hanley and may have commanded the Loriot in 1837.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 5c; YFASA 14; ShMiscPap 14; USNA DespHon PPS: HBRS IV, John McLoughlin's March 14, 1835 letter to Governor and Committee, p. 135-36

Hanihowa (fl. 1822) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Employee, Columbia Department (1822).

Hanihowa worked for the HBC until the summer of 1822, when he returned to the Sandwich Islands.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFASA 2

Hanna, John (? - 1828) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: Umpqua River region [Smith River], Oregon Territory - July 14, 1828

Fur trade employee

S & C Trapper, Jedediah Smith Southwest Expedition (1826 - 1828).

John Hanna was a trapper on Jedediah Smith's southwest expedition of 1826-1828. He first appeared on record at the 1826 Rendezvous and left with Smith in August, heading south to the Colorado River and west into California. After a great deal of difficulty with Spanish authorities in California, the expedition headed north. In an area just north of the Umpqua River [Oregon], just after Smith set out to scout out a route to travel, the natives killed all the expedition members (including Hanna) in camp except one, who managed to escape the attack.

PPS: HBRS X, p. 61 SS: Carter, "Jedediah Smith," p. 97-104

Hansen, Anders [variation: Hanson] (fl. 1853 - 1855) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Sigdal, Norway

Death: probably Fort Simpson [Nass] [British Columbia] - November 3, 1855

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1855).

Anders Hansen appears to have come to the coast on the HBC chartered vessel, Colinda, arriving April 17, 1854 on a five year contract. He worked for one year before going to Fort Simpson. Two days after his arrival he was struck by a falling tree and died the following day.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-2; FtSimp[N]PJ 8

Hansen, Martin (fl. 1858 - 1860) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1858 - 1860).

Martin Hansen worked for the HBC for two seasons in New Caledonia.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 6, 8

Hansill, Charles (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Charles Hansill made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Hanson, Ephraim (fl. 1832 - 1835) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Lama (brig) (1830 - 1831); 1st mate, Lama (brig) (1831 - 1832); 2nd mate, Fort Simpson naval service (1832); 2nd mate, Dryad (brig) (1832 - 1833); 2nd mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1833); 2nd mate, Lama (brig) (1834); Passenger, Eagle (brig) (1834).

Ephraim Hanson joined the Lama [William Henry McNeill] as second mate before October 7th 1830, when the brig sailed from Boston for the Northwest Coast. Hanson, a competent ship's officer who came to know the coast well, traded on the coast for two seasons. On October 16, 1831, with the departure at Sitka of the first mate, Mr. Selman, Hanson took on the former's duties until the vessel was sold to the HBC in Oahu in August 1832. Hanson (along with fellow mate William Ulderich and crewmen Samuel Ferguson, Joseph Hursey and William Robinson/Robertson) was re-engaged by the HBC at Oahu by Duncan Finlayson as second mate on September 1, 1832. Under the HBC, Hanson worked on coastal shipping out of Fort Simpson for two years to November 15, 1834, when he was discharged and shipped as passenger to Oahu aboard the brig Eagle.

PS: BCA log of Lama 1; HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c; FtVanCB 8, 10; log of Dryad 1

Hanson, Johan (fl. 1858 - 1859) (probably Scandinavian)

Birth: probably Scandinavia

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1858 - 1859).

Johan Hanson appeared to work for the HBC for one outfit although his contract was to go until 1862.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 6, 9

Hanwell, Henry Jr. (1791 - 1834) (British: English)

Birth: London, England - September 1791 (born to long time Hudson Bay Company Captain Henry Hanwell and wife Ann)

Death: probably Hudson Bay, Rupert's Land - 1834

Maritime officer

HBC Captain, William & Ann (brig) (1824 - 1828).

Henry Hanwell's four year period in the Pacific Northwest region did not leave a favourable impression. After spending most of his career on the Hudson Bay route on a variety of vessels he rose from boy to gunner, mate, and finally captain in 1824. That year his first assignment was on the newly-purchased William & Ann and on April 16, 1825, he arrived in the Columbia with a ship in need of repair. He eventually left on a northern exploratory cruise on June 2. Even though Hanwell had instructions to proceed as far north as Sitka to gather information on what furs were available and what the natives would take in trade, the captain stopped at very few locations; he did stop at Friendly Cove, one of the few vessels to do so. He was terrified of the unfamiliar coastal sailing conditions, traded very few furs, but managed to trade liquor with the Indians, contrary to Company policy. When an American Captain Kelly of the Owhyee offered to show Hanwell how to properly outfit for the coast, Hanwell didn't bother to take him up on his offer. After journeying north he returned to the mouth of the Columbia but refused to come up the river to Fort Vancouver. He returned to England and found his way back to the coast as master (once again) of the William & Ann in the spring of 1827, along with the schooner Cadboro. Once again he refused to cooperate with the Cadboro to help establish Fort Langley and gather furs, thus putting a dent in company plans. In 1828 Hanwell was transferred back to Hudson's Bay runs as master of the Prince of Wales but the ship was unable to return from the 1833 voyage to Moose Factory and Hanwell and first mate Thomas Terry died in April 1834 before the ship was able to return.

Henry Hanwell, Jr., had one wife, Elizabeth Anne, and three children. One son's name was Henry (1823-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanPJ 1, Alexander McKenzie's remarks, B.223/a/1, fo. 2-39; log of William & Ann 1-2, 4 PPS: HBRV IV p. 2, 16-17, 345

Haona [variation: Houna] (fl. 1845 - 1847) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Hall, Oregon Territory - April 1847

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Snake Party (1846 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Hall (1847).

Haona joined the HBC from Oahu on May 7, 1845 for three years. He died two years later at Fort Hall on April 24, 1847.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-26; YFDS 18; SandIsAB 3

Happy, John (fl. 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Boatswain, Columbia (schooner) (1814).

John Happy was part of a planned mutiny on June 22, 1814 on a ship heading for the Northwest Coast. It started when the schooner Columbia, of which he was a crew member, was rounding Cape Horn on June 14, 1814, and the plan of Happy and seamen John Decruz, John Peterson and boatswain Joseph Carpenter to kill the first mate captain and officers was exposed by fellow crew member Thomas Smoke. As the officers had been warned, the mutiny didn't materialize and the four were put in irons. As Carpenter confessed, he was put in irons separate from the rest who had threatened to murder him for his confession. He presumably disembarked at Fort Astoria where he disappears from record. (His friend, Carpenter, on the other hand, continued to make a nuisance of himself).

PPS: Barry, "Peter Corney's", p. 356-57

Haquet, Marie Louis [variation: Hacquet] (c. 1817 - c. 1860) (French)

Birth: probably France (born to Louis Haquet and Jeanne Lemoine)

Death: Chinook, Washington Territory - c. 1860

Fur trade employee

HBC Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1849); Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1853 - 1854).

Marie Haquet joined the HBC in 1841, probably in Montreal, and spent his entire career as a cooper at Fort Vancouver both at the shed, southeast of the fort, and at the cooper's shop near the river. He quit on March 1, 1849 and went to California, presumably to the gold fields. He may have come back for one outfit and served as Mario Hoguet under Captain Maxon in the Indian War of 1855-1856. In October 1860 he was in Chinook and was drowned, possibly in the area, that same year.

On February 16, 1844 he married Helene Poirier, daughter of Louise Moatwas, wife of Basile Poirier and had five children. Their children were Luis Mari (c.1845-?), Jeanne (1847-1847), Jeanne Ce'cile (1848-?), Pierre Etienne (1851-?) and Julie (1855-?). His widow married Ramsey (son of Jack Ramsey).

Harber, George (fl. 1850 - 1855) (British: English)

Birth: probably England

Fur trade employee

HBC Immigrant passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1853 - 1855).

George Harber came to Vancouver Island as a servant settler for the HBC. Several months after he arrived on May 9, 1851, he began work as a stoker on the steamer Beaver from which he likely deserted two years later. At that time, on August 30, 1853 at Fort Nisqually, Dr. Tolmie engaged Harber, whom it was noted was a deserter, as a gardener and general labourer. Here he performed a whole range of tasks, from gardening to dipping sheep to taking logs out of swamps. He was last on record in the journals on November 8, 1854 when he was off to attend court as a witness in the case of Richard Fiander (who was a fellow passenger on the Tory) and Varner, who were squatters on the Muck PSAC farm. He appears to have retired shortly after.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; log of Beaver 1; FtVanASA 9-11; FtVicASA 1-2 PPS: Dickey

Hardisty, Joseph Wordsworth (1823 - 1906) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably Fort Albany, Northwest Territories - March 16, 1823 (born to Richard Hardisty and Margaret Sutherland)

Death: Westmount, Quebec, Canada - December 4, 1906

Fur trade officer

HBC Apprentice post master, Fort Simpson (1847 - 1848); Apprentice post master, Fort Walla Walla/Champoeg (1848 - 1849); Apprentice post master, Champoeg (1849 - 1850); Clerk, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1853); Clerk, Honolulu (1853 - 1858); Clerk in charge, Honolulu (1858 - 1859); Clerk, Honolulu (1859 - 1860); Chief Trader, Honolulu (1860 - 1861); Chief Trader in charge, Fort Victoria (1861 - 1864); Chief Trader in charge, Fort Shepherd (1864 - 1869); Untraced vocation, Kootenae House (1869 - 1872).

Joseph Wordsworth Hardisty joined the HBC in 1847 as an apprentice post master but did a variety of tasks, including washing clothes. Upon the very favourable recommendations of his superiors, he rose through the ranks in a variety of posts in the Columbia and Sandwich Island areas to become a Chief Factor in 1872. He then served at four more posts east of the Rockies until 1879 at which point he went on furlough and retired in 1884. He died in 1906 at Westmount.

Joseph Wordsworth Hardisty had one wife and three children. On November 4, 1873, he married Elizabeth Kate Dance. Their children were Alfred Charles Wordworth (1876-1956), Richard Henry Moore (1877-1946) and James (1890-1896).

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-32; FtVanASA 9-12; FtVicASA 9-16; (left for Victoria cited in Joseph Hardisty March 14, 1861 Honolulu letter to Thomas Fraser, secretary HBC, Inward Correspondence, A.11/63, fo. 595) ; Wills; HBCABio and search file

Hardy, Francis Joseph (c. 1811 - ?) (Irish)

Birth: possibly Ireland or in Limehouse, London - c. 1811 (born to Henry William and Mrs. Hardy)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1836 - 1837); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1837).

Francis Hardy, or "Frank" to his family, served on the Dunkin Gibbs [Thomas Wheeler] before he signed on with the HBC from Limehouse, Middlesex, England on August 29, 1835 for five years. He sailed to the Pacific Northwest on the Columbia, but on the way showed rebellious behaviour in Oahu. After his arrival in the Northwest on March 22, 1836, he served on two more ships which were in coastal service. He was likely partial to alcohol - on February 18, 1836 he was noted as being drunk. He was discharged after he deserted in Oahu from the brig Lama in August 1837.

Two undelivered letters now in the HBCA and written from Ireland, one in 1836 from a sister Louisa A. in Inishgort, Co. Galway and one in 1838 from his father, Henry William, a lighthouse keeper near Kinsale, Co. Cork, reflect inculcated middle class values which Francis would have shared with his family (Beattie & Buss, p. 86).

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; Servants' Accounts A.32/32, fo. 71; log of Columbia 1; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 17; MiscI 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 84-89

Haries, Gilbert (fl. 1848 - 1849) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Cowlitz (barque) (1848 - 1849).

Gilbert Haries worked for the HBC and returned to England in outfit 1848-1849.

Harkness, Andre [standard: André] (fl. 1838 - 1839) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1838 - 1839).

Nothing is known of André Harkness. (He may have been the same André Harkness from L'Assomption who signed on with the HBC on August 24, 1823 at Montreal as a middleman).

A June 15, 1837 will indicated that André Harkness's family had but two sons, one in the Southern Department and one named William (?-?), as well as several daughters.

PS: HBCA Servants' Accounts A.32/32, fo. 73; FtVanASA 5; Wills

Harkness, William [b] (c. 1835 - 1857) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1835

Death: probably Fort Langley, British Columbia - January 1857

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Columbia Department general charges (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Langley (1852 - 1854); Cooper, Fort Langley (1854 - 1857).

William Harkness [b] worked for the HBC and around January, 1857, he died in a fatal accident.

In 1856 he appears to have had a daughter, Rosalie by an unnamed woman of the "Quyslen" (Kwantlen?) tribe. Rosalie was baptised on June 29, 1856 at Fort Langley.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-5; FtLangCB 2; BCA BCCR StAndC

Harmes, John (fl. 1830 - 1833) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Apprentice, Eagle (brig) (1832 - 1833).

John Harmes began his work with the HBC in the Columbia area on August 18, 1830 and served his apprenticeship working out of Fort Simpson. He left the Columbia for England aboard the Eagle on October 26, 1832 and arrived back in England the following year.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 11-12; YFDS 4a-5a; log of Dryad 1

Harmon, Daniel Williams (1778 - 1845) (American)

Birth: Bennington, Vermont, United States - February 19, 1778 (born to Daniel Harmon and Lucrecia Dewey)

Death: Montreal, Canada East - March 26, 1845

Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Fraser Lake (1810 - 1811); Clerk, Stuart's Lake [Fort St. James] (1811 - 1814); Clerk, Fraser Lake (1814 - 1816); Clerk, Stuart's Lake [Fort St. James] (1816 - 1819); Clerk, Fort McLeod (1819).

The serious and sober Daniel Williams Harmon, an astute observer of native life, languages, flora and fauna, is largely remembered for his journals, published in 1820 in his native Vermont. He did not have a classical education in Vermont but, in April, 1800 the twenty-two year old Daniel went to Montreal and contracted with the NWC as a clerk for a period of seven years. For ten years he served at various posts east of the Rockies and during this time took a wife. In 1810, he crossed the Rockies into New Caledonia where he spent eight and a half years working in three forts, Fraser Lake, Stuart Lake [Fort St. James] and McLeod Lake. In 1812, he visited the Babines and found that they were getting goods from the maritime traders at the coast and in 1814, Harmon went back to re-establish the Fraser Lake post after it had been closed down. In 1816 he returned to work at Stuart Lake, and three years later returned to the east with his wife and children, arriving in Vermont in early 1820. Earlier journals had been sent to friends in 1815 but all the journals were given to the Rev. Daniel Haskell who rewrote them, making them more readable but somewhat more pious; however, they were still a reflection of Harmon's character (DAB Ghent, p. 276). Harmon likely returned to the Northwest for Colin Robertson records in September 1820 that Harmon, quite out of character, goaded the arrested Robertson with news of Lord Selkirk's then recent death (HBRS II, p. 125). Harmon retired on June 1, 1821, three months after being awarded a Chief Trader rank upon the amalgamation of the NWC and HBC, (HBRS II, p. 333, 339) and sometime after that he apparently lived on the shores of Lake Champlain. He died in Montreal, where, it is assumed, his family remained.

On October 10, 1805 Daniel Williams Harmon took a mixed descent wife (Cree and French), Elizabeth (Lizzette) Laval and later formalized his marriage to her in Burlington, Vermont. Some of their fourteen children were: George (1807-13), unnamed premature twin boys (1810-10), Polly (1811-?), and Sally (1817-?).

Published Manuscript: Harmon, Daniel Williams, A Journal of Voyages and Travels in the Interior of North America Between the 47th and 58th Degrees of North Latitude, Extending From Montreal, Nearly to the Pacific, A Distance of About 5,000 Miles, Including an Account of the Principal Occurrences During a Residence of Nineteen Years In Different Parts of the Country, Burlington, Vermont, 1820 (1911 Courier Press Ltd reprint);
PPS: Harmon, A Journal of Voyages, p. 129, 150, 166; HBRS II, p. 125, 275-76, 333, 339 SS: HBRS XXII, p. 455; DAB Ghent

Harmsworth, Henry William (c. 1816 - 1906) (British: English)

Birth: probably Havant, Hantsire, England - c. 1816 (born to Henry Harmsworth and Elizabeth Ann Burney)

Death: England - July 22, 1906

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Ganymede (barque) (1830 – August 11, 1831); Apprentice, Naval Department (1831 - 1833); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1832); Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1832); Apprentice, Lama (brig) (1832 - 1833); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1834 - 1835); Apprentice, Esquimaux (ship) (1835); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1835 - 1837); Apprentice, Sumatra (barque) (1837 - 1838).

Around 1826, because of his father's misfortunes in the Royal Navy, a young Henry Harmsworth was placed in the Royal Hospital School in Greenwich to be trained. In 1830, the fourteen year old pupil joined the HBC for apprentice training. He came to the coast on the Ganymede, was discharged at the Columbia River on August 11, 1831, and served the next three years on the coast before returning home on the Nereide in May 1834. In 1833 his father died. From June-November 1835 he was on the Esquimaux on the Ungava Bay run. In November, he joined the Nereide, which didn't leave Gravesend until February and so was able to purchase a large number of clothing items for his voyage. In spite of growing family poverty, they seem to have sent him boxes of goods. Henry stayed on the Pacific Northwest coast until October 26, 1837 when he left for England on the Sumatra. After completing his apprenticeship in 1838 and becoming a full seaman, he worked on such vessels as the Mayflower, William Broderick and Waverley and achieved the rank of master in 1848. He raised a family and died in England in 1906.

In 1856, Henry Harmsworth married Ann Brooke (1827-1917) and together they had seven children, three boys and four daughters.

Six undelivered letters, 1835-1837, now resting in the HBCA, chronicle the family's saga and descent into poverty. A privately published family history fleshes out the Harmsworth story.

PS: HBCA YFASA 11-15; YFDS 4b, 5b-5c, 7-8; log of Dryad 1; ShMiscPap 14; log of Nereide 1; FtVanASA 3-5; log of Sumatra 1; Misc 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 49-58 SS: Glegg

Harper, John (c. 1799 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: possibly Kilmaurs, Ayrshire, Scotland

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, New Caledonia (1820); Middleman, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822).

John Harper was one of the few HBC employees to actually trade furs west of the Rockies before 1821. He was engaged by the HBC as a labourer in 1818 and was stationed in the Manitoba area. In 1819, he became involved in the HBC/NWC dispute when he and fellow HBC employees attempted to arrest NWC officer William McIntosh at Kettle Falls, near Frog Portage. In December, 1819, when he was working in the Athabasca area, he started with a band of free Iroquois led by clerk Ignace Guissan across the Rockies into new Caledonia. In the spring of 1820, the small group was trading at the forks of the Fraser River. By October, he had returned east over the Rockies with his furs. After the amalgamation of 1821, he returned west of the Rockies again for one outfit but has not been subsequently traced.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1 PPS: HBRS I, p. 441; HBRS II, p. 107, 261, 274

Harper, Mr. [variation: Young W.] (fl. 1841 - c. 1844?) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Vancouver (barque) (1841 - 1844).

Mr. Harper, also referred to as "young Mr. Harper", joined the HBC in London on August 30, 1841 and sailed to the coast on the Vancouver. For unstated reasons, sometime in 1841-1842 Harper was replaced by William Pitt as cook and on August 15, 1842, Harper became violent, chasing the captain and throwing tea and hot water over him. The next day, the rest of the crew stated that he was so dangerous that they wanted him off the ship (log of Vancouver [3], 1, fo. 126-126d). Just what happened after that is unclear. As he was found on no further record, he may have been discharged and may not have returned with the vessel, which arrived back in London on June 11, 1844.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 11; log of Vancouver [3] 1

Harper, William (fl. 1855 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1855 - 1856).

William Harper made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Harrier, John (fl. 1844 - 1846) (British: English)

Birth: probably Portsmouth, Hampshire, England

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Cowlitz (barque) (1841 - 1842); Steward, Cadboro (schooner) (1844); Steward, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Steward, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846).

John Harrier joined the HBC in London in September 1843 as a steward and arrived on the coast in the Cowlitz. In September 1844, on the way to Sitka, Captain William Henry McNeill of the Cowlitz found rotten food and damaged tinware (log of Cowlitz 2, fo. 119d) and as a consequence asked Captain James Scarborough of the Cadboro to take Harrier to Fort Vancouver. On September 12, 1844 aboard the Cadboro, John Harrier was given the option of working for pay or remaining idle without pay as he travelled between Fort Victoria and Fort Vancouver (log of Cadboro 5, fo. 81d). He began to receive pay from November 1, 1844 and arrived back in London on the Cowlitz on June 27, 1846.

An undelivered 1845 letter from his wife, Mary Anne, then in Brixton [London] and longing for the return of her husband, lies in the HBCA. She enclosed a lock of her hair.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-25; YFDS 15; log of Cowlitz 2; log of Cadboro 5; MiscI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 208-11

Harrington, John (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

John Harrington joined the HBC supply vessel Princess Royal in London on August 19, 1856. After reaching Victoria, he deserted on February 27, 1857.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 3; PortB 1

Harriott, John Edward (c. 1797 - 1866) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England - c. 1797

Death: Montreal, Canada East - February 1866

Fur trade officer

HBC Clerk, Columbia Department (1828); Chief Trader, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829); Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (September, 1829); Chief Trader, New Caledonia (1829 - 1830); Chief Trader, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1832).

John Edward Harriot spent forty-six years in the fur trade, four years of which were spent on the Pacific slopes. In 1809 and at the young age of twelve this nephew of Peter Pruden joined the HBC, sailing for York Factory. He spent the next nineteen years east of the Rockies during which time he was made clerk. In 1828 both Harriot and John Warren Dease mistimed their canoe travel west over the Rockies and jeopardized the flow of provisions to the posts (HBRS X, p. 238-39). As well, in late 1828 or early 1829, Harriot's wife had gone "raging mad" at Fort Alexandria and had to be taken north with the assistance of two others; on July 31, 1830, his wife and family were sent east of the Rockies (HBRS X, p. 239). On October 25, 1830, he missed disaster in the rapids below the Okanagan Dalles when seven of his men in one of four canoes drowned. As he spoke fluent Cree, George Simpson (who had considerable admiration for Harriot's qualities) felt Harriot was wasting his time at Fort Vancouver and sent him east of the Rockies where he spent the rest of his career. He went on to become Chief Factor in 1846 and retired from the service on June 1, 1855 to live in the Red River Settlement. On February 7, 1866, he died in Montreal and was buried two days later.

John Edward Harriot appears to have had three successive wives and seven or more children. The names of his first wife and children have not been traced. On September 18, 1838, while the Catholic priests were at Fort Edmonton, Harriott and Nancy Rowand (1818?-51), daughter of Chief Factor John Rowand and Louise Umphreville, had their marriage formalized. Two of their daughters were Christine (1836-?) and Flora (1837-?). After Nancy/Anne's death in 1851, Harriot married Francis Bunn of the Red River Settlement. According to a will dated June 25, 1858 his children by Frances were Margaret (?-?), Rachel (?-?), John Edward (?-?), Victoria (?-?) and Alexander (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9; YFDS 3b, 4b; FtVanASA 2; FtColPJ 1; FtVanCB 6; SimpsonCB; Wills PPS: HBRS II, [bio] p. 216-17; HBRS III p. 233, 252; HBRS X, p. 238-39; HBRS XXX, p. 197; CCR 1a

See Also: Rowand, John Sr. (Father-in-Law)

Harris, Harry (fl. 1832 - 1834) (possibly Hawaiian or Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lama (brig) (1832 - 1834); Passenger, Eagle (brig) (1834).

Harry Harris, who may have been a Hawaiian, was engaged by the HBC in Oahu on September 5, 1832 and appears to have come to the Northwest Coast aboard the Lama. He worked as a seaman on coastal shipping until November 1834, when he was sent back to Oahu on the Eagle.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c; SanIsAB 1

Harris, Moses "Black" (fl. 1826 - 1847) (American)

Birth: probably Union County, South Carolina, United States

Free trader

Ash. Trapper, Pacific slopes (1826 - 1847).

Moses "Black" Harris, who joined William Ashley before or in 1824, was already an experienced mountain man who could travel great distances and live under conditions of great privation when he came on record. His weather beaten face had acquired a blue-black tint, hence the name "Black." He trapped for many years along the Continental Divide but spent much of his time east of it. He was travelling companion to many trappers such as James P. Beckwourth, William Sublette and Andrew Drips. In 1826 he was sent out by Ashley for that Rendezvous and returned to St. Louis after an extremely arduous journey in March 1827 with Sublette to confirm the agreement in supplying the 1827 Rendezvous. He stayed with Sublette as a travelling companion until at least 1834. In 1839 he was working for Chouteau Pratte & Co. and probably attended the last Rendezvous in 1840. Moses "Black" Harris was still in the mountains as late as 1847.

Black's Fork in southeastern Wyoming may have been named after Moses "Black" Harris.

PS: St. Louis Democrat, June 12, 1844 [from Union County, S. C.] PPS: Beckwourth, p. 38; M. C. Ross, p. 67 SS: D. L. Morgan, Jedediah Smith, p. 218-220; Gowans, p. 24, 31, 50, 185, 198; Ferris, p. 46; Audubon, p. 35

Harris, Mr. (fl. 1834 - 1836) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

U.A. Supercargo, La Grange (barque) (1834 - 1836).

Mr. Harris, who does not appear to be one of the following Harris's, worked as a supercargo along the Northwest Coast in 1836, in opposition to the HBC. He may have been on the first voyage of the Salem or Boston based barque La Grange [B. F. Snow] in 1834 to the Northwest Coast but does not appear on the records as such. He sailed to Oahu from Boston, and would have arrived in Oahu on La Grange on March 21, 1836. He left on April 11 to trade its merchandise on the Northwest Coast. This time, when he traded at Sitka, Fort Simpson and Fort McLoughlin, Mr. Harris, appeared to be the major spokesman for its aggressive trading. He was still trading on the coast in the fall and soon after the vessel sailed back to Boston via the usual route, presumably with Mr. Harris on board.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 12; USNA DespHon PPS: W. F. Tolmie, p. 281

Harris, William (c. 1803 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Hantsire, England - c. 1803

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1848).

William Harris joined the HBC October 2, 1846 in London and sailed to the coast on the tumultuous voyage of the Cowlitz. He was one of the few of the crew that did not desert after catching gold fever and completed the return voyage.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 27-28

Harrison, Benjamin (fl. 1833) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America (born to William H. Harrison)

Free trader

U.A. Fur trader, Rendezvous (1833).

Attending the Green River Rendezvous of 1833 was Benjamin Harrison, the son of future US President William H. Harrison [1841] who had been sent west by his father in the hopes of curing his drinking problem. The young Harrison left Lexington, Missouri with supplies in early May of that year with Robert Campbell bound for the Green River. For his return, Harrison was charged with conveying a Thomas Fitzpatrick letter back to St. Louis to Milton Sublette and contained the Fitzpatrick-Nathaniel J. Wyeth agreement for supplies for the next Rendezvous. It appears that Harrison opened the letters and revealed the contents to William Sublette who found that Wyeth was now a threat as a supplier of goods. Harrison's career in the fur trade appears to have ended around this time for he has not been traced further.

PPS: Larpenteur, p. 17-18 SS: Gowans, p. 103-04

Harrison, Joseph (fl. 1827 - 1829) (probably British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1827 - 1829).

Joseph Harrison joined the HBC on September 3, 1827 and made the round trip from London to Fort Vancouver and back again on a supply trip. He arrived back at the London docks on February 13, 1829.

PS: HBCA log of Eagle, 1

Harrold, John (fl. 1831) (British: English)

Birth: probably Deptford, Kent, England

Fur trade employee

HBC Carpenter, Columbia Department (1831).

John Harrold joined the HBC on September 24, 1831 as a carpenter for three years. He was assigned to the Columbia River but did not appear on those abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Harrow, James [variation: Harran] (fl. 1852 - 1856) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Carpenter, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1856).

James Harrow came to Vancouver Island as carpenter for the HBC steamer Otter in 1853. He stayed with the vessel on its many journeys from Fort Simpson to San Francisco until about 1856 when he appears to have left the ship.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-4

Harry [1] (fl. 1814) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

PFC Labourer, Tonquin (ship) (1811); Employee, Fort George [Astoria] (1811 - 1813); NWC Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1814).

Sandwich Islander Harry joined the crew of the Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as a seaman in February, 1811 when the Astor vessel stopped at Hawaii and picked up twelve locals to work for the PFC. After arriving at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22, 1811, and two days of efforts to establish a safe passage across the bar, the captain sent out Harry, fellow Sandwich Islander Peter, Stephen Weeks, Job Aiken and John Coles in the pinnace to take soundings. However, when the vessel filled with water, Aiken and Coles were lost but Weeks, Harry and Peter stripped off their shirts and managed to right the pinnace, bailing it out with their hands. The cold, however, was too much for Peter, and he succumbed to the cold after the pinnace made it to shore. Harry threw himself on Peter's body probably as much in grief as to get what body heat he could. Weeks and Harry were rescued and, on March 28, six Sandwich Islanders along with PFC clerks Gabriel Franchere and François Benjamin Pillet returned and interred Peter's body at the beach. Harry took some time to recover and appears to have continued working at Fort Astoria during the takeover by the NWC. He was on record on April 4, 1814 as being prepared to work for the NWC through the summer at Fort George [Astoria].

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria PPS: ChSoc LVX, p. 73-74; LVII, p. 711

Harry [2] (fl. 1853) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

Harry [2] shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu probably in the summer of 1853 during the height of the smallpox epidemic, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Harry [3] (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

Harry, who may be the same as the above two, shipped aboard the Josiah Marshall brig, Convoy [William Henry McNeill], at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast as a labourer, Harry and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2. He may have continued to sail with the Convoy.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Harry, George (fl. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Gunner, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

George Harry worked as a gunner on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast. He may be the same as the above Harry.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Harry, Jack (fl. 1831 - 1835) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1831); Seaman, Naval Department (1831 - 1832); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1832 - 1834); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1835); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1835).

Jack Harry was engaged by the HBC on June 16, 1831 in Oahu as a seaman to work in Columbia shipping. When he was in Oahu in January 1834, he took a few days off, without liberty, to stay ashore, probably visiting friends or relatives. He returned to the Northwest Coast and worked on coastal shipping as a seaman and landsman until October 3, 1835, when he embarked on the barque Ganymede for his final return voyage to Oahu where he was paid his final HBC wage.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 11; YFDS 4b, 5b-6; FtVanASA 3; SandIsLonIC 1

Harry, William [variation: Harray] (1828 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Harray, Orkney, United Kingdom - November 1828 (born to Thomas Harray and Mary [Flett] Harray)

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Carpenter, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1856); Steerage passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1856).

William Harry came to the Pacific Coast on the immigrant ship Norman Morison as a HBC sponsored settler. For the next five years, he worked largely as a carpenter accumulating a credit of £72.17.8 whereupon he boarded the Princess Royal February 12, 1856 and arrived back in England on June 21, ostensibly to gather his wife and family to come out to the coast. As there is no further record of him on Vancouver Island, it can only be assumed that Mrs. Harry may not have been pleased with the idea.

PS: OrkA OPR; HBCA log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-4; log of Princess Royal 2

Hart, Edwin (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

Edwin Hart made one return voyage to the Coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Harteau, Jacques [variation: Hurteau] (fl. 1813 - 1814) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

PFC Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); Middleman, Willamette Post (winter 1813 - 1814); Middleman, Brigade to Fort William (1814).

Jacques Harteau came to the Columbia possibly overland in 1810-1812 with Wilson Price Hunt. On May 25, 1814, on his return with the brigade to Fort William and Montreal, he was rescued from the Athabasca River when the group's boat capsized. Olivier Roy Lapensée and André Bélanger both drowned and were buried by Franchère; Harteau finished the voyage unscathed.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: HBRS XLV, p. 164

Hartridge, H. M. (fl. 1823 - 1824) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC Mate, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

One of the few things known about H. M. Hartridge, who was a seaman aboard the Lively, a brig chartered by the HBC, was that he liked to drink. On January 3, 1823, he sailed from Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope and rounded the Horn in March. In July he witnessed an altercation between the ship's owner and captain, Robert Ritchie and the boy William Forbes; as a result he swore out a deposition on July 2, 1823. The Lively arrived at Fort George on July 15, 1823 and loaded HBC furs bound for London. A few days before he was about to sail, Hartridge became very intoxicated and verbally abusive to the captain. As a result of this, a court of enquiry, attended by the officers and crew, was held at Fort George August 3, 1823. The following day, Hartridge was replaced by the ship's carpenter and the ship got underway August 6 and arrived in England on March 25, 1824.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1; ShipExt

Harvey, Andrew (c. 1823 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Birsay, Orkney - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Labourer, Fort Umpqua (1844 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1846 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1847 - 1849); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1850 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Snake Country (1853 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Colville (1855 - 1856); Shepherd, Fort Victoria (1856 - 1857).

Andrew Harvey joined the HBC from Orkney in 1843 on a five-year contract, sailed to York Factory and made his way overland to the Pacific Northwest. On September 1, 1849 he went to California, likely lured by the gold fields, but returned within the year as he appeared in September, 1850 back in Clark County (Fort Vancouver) where he began work again on October 22, 1850. He worked on and off for the HBC and was last seen in Victoria.

Andrew Harvey appears to have had one wife, an unnamed native, and unnamed child (?-1858) which was buried in the vicinity of Victoria on October 24, 1858.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; YFASA 24-31; YFDS 16-17, 20-22; FtVanASA 9-12; FtVicASA 4-6; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark County; BCA BCCR StAndC

Harvey, Daniel (c. 1812 - 1867) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Deptford, Kent, England - c. 1812

Death: Portland, Oregon - 1867

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1841); Miller, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1846); Farmer, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1846); Farmer, Fort Vancouver (1846 - 1848); Superintendent, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1849); Post master, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850); Miller, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1849 - 1850).

Daniel Harvey joined the HBC in London on August 17, 1840 as a miller largely because McLoughlin, who was in London at the time, felt the need for a miller for a grist mill in the Columbia District. Harvey brought with him on the Cowlitz his own draining plough and proof staff (used in preparing mill stones) both of which were to be used as models for copying in the area. He became superintendent of the Company's 640 acre [259 ha] farm until 1846 and retired in March, 1850. Generally a peaceful man, he was beaten in 1843 by one of his own men, Joseph Dupre, when he ordered him to do something. In 1850 he was found living in the house of Dr. J. McLoughlin and Eloise Rae, his daughter. Later he became one of the first directors of the Oregon City Woolen Mills owned by Dr. John McLoughlin. He moved to Portland in 1867, died the following year, and was buried in Lone Fir Cemetery.

In 1850 he married Eloisa, the widow of William Glenn Rae (who fathered three children by her) and had three additional children from the marriage. Eloisa died in Portland in 1884.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-9; FtVanCB 30; YFDS 19-20; HBCA Daniel Harvey search file; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clackamas County; Oregonian, Oct. 25, 1884, p. 5; Rae Harvey PPS: HBRS VI, p. 390-91
SS: H. W. Scott, History of the Oregon, vol. III, p. 180, vol. V, p. 313; OHQ, vol. I, p. 195; vol. III, p. 220
See Also: McLoughlin, Dr. John (probable Father-in-Law); Rae, William Glen (Relative)

Harvey, George (c. 1822 - 1879) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Birsay, Orkney - c. 1822 (born to Christopher Harvey and Catherine Johnson)

Death: possibly Fort Langley, British Columbia - March 1879

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1848 - 1849); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver depot (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1849 - 1850); Storekeeper, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1853); Storekeeper, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Bailiff, Uplands Farm (1861 - 1874); Bailiff, Fort Langley (1874 - 1877).

George Harvey joined the HBC from Orkney in 1843, sailed to York Factory and made his way overland to the Coast. On September 1, 1849, after working uneventfully for five years, he went to California, probably for the gold there but was soon back at work. In 1853 three months after the marriage to his first wife, he left for the British Isles on March 8 aboard the Norman Morison as a passenger in intermediate class, reflecting his new status. By the following outfit, however, he was working as a storekeeper and later manager at the Uplands farm. While in Victoria, he lived in the Cadboro Bay area. He spent his last years working for the HBC at Fort Langley, retired in 1877 and died two years later.

George Harvey had two successive wives and five recorded children. On December 30, 1852, he married Sophie Jolibois and they together had an unnamed infant (c.1858-1858). The fate of Sophie is unknown. On March 5, 1867, he married Mary Gravelle (?-?), daughter of Francois Gravelle (?-?) and Henriette, native (?-?). Their children were George Jr. (1869-?), Charles Edward (?-bap.1871-?), Edward (?-bap.1872-?) and Alexander (?-bap.1874-?).

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3; YFASA 24-32; log of Norman Morison 3; FtVicASA 1-16; YFDS 16-18, 20, 25-26; BCA BCCR CCCath; BCCR StAndC
See Also: Gravelle, Francois (Father-in-Law)

Harvey, Robert (fl. 1847 - 1849) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Stromness, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1845); Boatbuilder, Columbia Department (1847 - 1848); Boatbuilder, Fort Victoria (1848 - 1850).

Robert Harvey joined the HBC in 1845 from Stromness on a five year contract, sailing to York Factory. He appears to have quit before the end of his contract, perhaps lured by the gold of California.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 6; YFASA 27-32; FtVicASA 1

Harvey, Thomas (fl. 1852 - 1856) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Birsay, Orkney

Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - September 1856

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1851); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1852 - 1856).

Thomas Harvey joined the HBC in 1851, sailed to Hudson Bay and worked his way overland to Fort Victoria. He worked as a labourer for four years but died of an inflammation of the lungs in 1856 and was buried in Victoria.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 2; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-5; FtVicCB , 13, 15; BCA BCCR CCCath

Hatchiorauquasha (Gray), Ignace [variation: John Hatcheorauquasha, Grey] (c. 1795 - 1843) (Mixed descent)

Birth: St. Regis/Akwesasne, Lower Canada - c. 1795 (born to William L. Gray and a Mohawk woman)

Death: Westport, Missouri, United States - c. 1843

Freeman

HBC Freeman on sundries account, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Freeman, Snake Party (1824); U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1832); Trapper, Rendezvous (1833).

The Jesuit educated Ignace Hatchiorauquasha, or John Grey (to Alexander Ross)/Gray (to descendants, et al) appears to have come onto the Pacific slopes in 1816 with his sixteen year old wife. He made his early base camp in an area in Idaho near the Wyoming border, known as "Gray's Hole." When he appeared in fur trade records at Fort Spokane in outfit 1822-1823, he was a freeman. At that point, he was noted as being part of Miaquin Martin's band of independent trappers working out of Spokane. He did not take well to HBC paternalism for, at the beginning of one expedition with the HBC, Grey wanted to see the HBC books, not trusting the whites. On February 10, 1824, when Gray was camped at Prairie de Cheveau, eight miles [12.9 km] from Flat Head House waiting to join Alexander Ross on his Snake Country expedition, an equally truculent and suspicious Ross felt that Grey was not worth equipping for the expedition. Mutual suspicion lingered and a month later Grey did not co-operate with Ross when asked to build a path or road for the party saying that he was "neither a soldier nor engage nor was he a slave." However, a month later, his temper cooled when he made a fiddle and helped give a "concert" to his fellow trappers and he continued the journey without incident. On December 20, 1824, he set out with Ogden's Snake expedition, returning two days later to Flat Head post to pick up his wife and children. William Kittson had little faith in Gray as he questioned the authenticity of some of Gray's stories. Finally, on May, 23, 1825 when Ogden was actually deep in Snake Country south of the forty-second parallel (and technically in Mexican territory), independent-minded Grey and eleven others, tired of their near-indentured status, deserted to Johnson Gardner's American party. He trapped in the mountains until the 1830s when the fur trade began to wane and eventually retired in the fall of 1835 to Missouri to a small French community of Westport, now part of Kansas City. He brought with him a group of twelve Iroquois families to settle in the area. In 1841, as part of the Bidwell Bartleson California Overland Party, he was the main hunter for Fathers Pierre de Smet and Nicolas Point who were to establish Catholic missions in the Flathead area. In July of that year in what is now central Wyoming, he carved his name on Independence Rock and in August, nostalgically visited his base camp at Gray's Hole, a place which he preferred over the flatlands of the Midwest. Around 1843 in Missouri he was stabbed by a neighbour, a Shoshone woman who had been on bad terms with the family.

John Gray had one wife, Maryanne/Marienne Naketchon/Neketichon [Mary Ann Charles] (c.1800-1862), a Caughnawaga Mohawk, and several children. Four of their children were Peter (1818-?), Mitchell (c.1823-?), Cecile (c.1827-?) and Thomas (c.1832-?). After John's death, Marianne was flooded out in 1844 and in 1850 moved to Fort Scott, Kansas.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Asst]AB 10; SnkCoPJ 1, 2, 3a; 1850 US Census, Missouri, Jacson Co. PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 211
SS: Wells, "Ignace Hatchiorauquasha" p. 161-175; http://www.hunterbear.org/family_stuff.htm

Hathawiton (Thaawitha), Pierre (1819 - 1820) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Freeman

HBC Trapper, New Caledonia (1819 - 1820).

Pierre Hathawiton, one of the many free Iroquois who roamed the west and occasionally worked for either the NWC or HBC, actually trapped and traded for the HBC prior to 1821. In December 1819, he was a member of the HBC party of free Iroquois which went from Smoky River into New Caledonia to trap. Throughout 1820, they trapped and traded, much to the surprise of the NWC. They returned east of the Rockies in October, 1820 with a great quantity of furs, much to the consternation of the NWC.

PPS: HBRS II, p. 214, 261

Hauxhurst, Webley John (1809 - 1874) (American)

Birth: probably Long Island, New York - January 1809

Death: Willamette Valley, Oregon - January 1874

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1837); Settler, Willamette (1843+).

Webley Hauxhurst, from Brooklyn, New York, had a fleeting association with the Hudson's Bay Company. His life took a distinct turn when he went to sea, reached California, and deserted to see the country. After spending three years in Monterey as a furniture maker and carpenter, and becoming imbued with Hall J. Kelly's enthusiasm for Oregon, he joined Ewing Young on his trek north into Oregon in 1834. The following year he built, along with the possible assistance of Dr. John McLoughlin, a grist mill on Champoege Creek and in 1836 may have done some work for the HBC. It was at this time, at the depth of his intemperate ways and his rough handling of the native girl that he was living with, that he changed his life by converting to the Methodist faith and becoming a community leader. In 1838 he even signed a petition against the distilling activities of Ewing Young. At the end of 1839 it appears that Hauxhurst sold out his interest in the mill to Thomas McKay and moved to Mill Creek where he settled on a claim the following year. On May 2, 1843, he voted in favour of the Organization of the Provisional Government at Champoege, Oregon and was a Trustee of Willamette University when it was established in 1853. He died in 1874.

Webley Hauxhurst had one wife. On February 25 or March 16, 1837 he was married by Jason Lee to Mary, Yamhill (1820-1907) at the Mission House.

PS: HBCA YFDS 7 PPS: Genealogical Material in Oregon Donation Land Claims, vol. I, entry #1096; vol V, p. 44; Carey,

Hawaapai (fl. 1850) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1850).

Hawaapai served on the HBC vessel Cowlitz from February 3 to September 17, 1850 from Oahu to the Northwest Coast and back again. On August 27, at Honolulu he and the other Kanaka crewmen refused to work, claiming their contract was up, but nonetheless returned to work for another month while the ship was in harbour. After that he has not been traced.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 10, 11; log of Cowlitz 8

Hawaii (fl. 1841 - 1843) (Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaii

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department general charges (1842 - 1843).

Hawaii joined the HBC from Oahu in 1841 and began receiving wages on July 9 of that year. He spent the next two outfits likely at Fort Vancouver where he worked until October 31, 1843. At that point he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12-14; YFASA 23

Hawell, Thomas (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Thomas Hawell made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Hawkins, George Frederick (c. 1829 - ?) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: probably Victoria, British Columbia

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1852).

In 1849, George Hawkins, a bachelor apprentice gardener working in Kent, England, noticed that the HBC was recruiting married couples to settle on Vancouver Island. He convinced his sweetheart, Sarah Kingsley to go with him and so they received an advance from the HBC for their voyage on the Norman Morison to Vancouver Island. After their arrival, he worked at Fort Victoria until September 17, 1850 at which point he was transferred to Governor Blanshard's party. As such, he was considered a freeman and was eventually discharged on September 2, 1852. They first settled at the Gorge but a native expecting hospitality was given the boot when he was found in the buff warming himself in front of their fireplace. This spooked Sarah and they took up land at Happy Valley. (They purchased land in the Victoria and Esquimalt Districts between 1854-1859.) According to family tradition, in 1858 a trip to England for the family was unfortunate as both a son and daughter died on the trip. In 1860 the family, George, Sarah and Emma, returned to the British Isles aboard the Princess Royal for a visit before returning to Victoria. Six years after their return to Vancouver Island, Sarah died.

George F. Hawkins had one wife, Sarah Kingsley (?-1866) and four children: Emma Sophia (c.1851-?), Ellen (1856-?), George (?-c.1858) and Annie (1859-?). Sarah Hawkins died in 1866 and was buried in the Quadra Street Cemetery.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicDS 1; YFDS 21; FtVicASA 1-2; log of Princess Royal 6; BCA BCGR-CrtRF-Land; Mallandaine, p. 70; BCCR CCCath; Diar-Rem Hawkins SS: Mouat, p. 213

Hawkins, Thomas (fl. 1852 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853?); PSAC Labourer, Puget Sound Agricultural Company (1859).

Thomas Hawkins sailed to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison. While on the coast, he would have visited several coastal posts and it was likely here that he deserted. A Thomas Hawkins appeared to be working at PSAC farms in 1859 and is assumed to be the same person.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; PSACAB 38

Haws, Jasper [variation: Hawse] (fl. 1818) (Undetermined origin)Fur trade employee

NWC Clerk, Pacific slopes (1818 - 1821).

Little is known of Jasper Haws, who disappeared into obscurity, but his name is carried today by a Canadian National Park, named after Jasper House, a post he took charge of as a NWC clerk in 1817. When Ross Cox arrived at Rocky Mountain House, as Jasper House was called in 1817, he described it as follows:

a miserable concern of rough logs, with only three apartments, but scrupulously clean inside. An old clerk, Mr. Jasper Hawes, was in charge, and had under his command two Canadians, two Iroquois, and three hunters (Cox p. 254).

The following year, Haws crossed over the Rockies to the Pacific side where he stayed for the next three years at an unknown location. He appears not to have joined the HBC after 1821.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 3, 6, 7 PPS: Cox, p. 254

Haycock, William (fl. 1833 - 1835) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835).

William Haycock joined the Nereide on December 18, 1833 in Valparaiso, Chile on its voyage to the Northwest Coast, replacing a mutinous crew member. After his arrival at Fort Vancouver on April 21, 1834 and a quick turnaround, Haycock left the Columbia River post on May 28, 1834 for the return voyage. After stopping at Valparaiso, the vessel eventually arrived back in London May 28, 1835.

PS: HBCA log of Nereide 1; ShMiscPap 14

Hayne, Leonard John (fl. 1829) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime officer

HBC Captain, Ganymede (barque) (1828 - 1830).

Leonard John Hayne was probably the captain of the barque Ganymede, owned by Richard Drew, when it was chartered by the HBC. On September 16, 1828, he sailed from Plymouth in company with the William & Ann for the Columbia. Eight days later they parted company in a gale and the Ganymede sailed on to the Columbia. When the "obliging and accommodating" (FtVanCB 5, fo. 12d) yet habitually drunk captain entered the Columbia River on May 8, 1829, he mistook Chinook Bay for the Columbia and would have wrecked the boat had it not been for the presence of mind of his first mate, Mr. Hall (FtVanCB fo. 9, 12d). In July or August of that year, Hayne traded a gun for a beaver pelt, an action strictly against the exclusive HBC trading rights (FtVanCB 5, fo. 13d-14). Although his personality was pleasant enough, Hayne's drinking appeared to get worse, for after arriving in Hobartstown, Van Diemens Land [Tasmania], his conduct became so bad and his behaviour so deranged that he had to be replaced and the vessel sent home under another captain.

PS: HBCA FtVanAB 23; FtVanCB 5, McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, Aug. 5, 1829, B.223/b/5, fo. 8-13 & McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, Aug. 13, 1829, B.223/b/5, fo. 13d-14d; London Correspondence Outward, Governor and Committee's November 10, 1830 letter to John McLoughlin, A.6/22, fo. 78

Hays, John (fl. 1833 - 1835) (British)Birth: probably British Isles*Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1833 - 1835).

John Hays was a seaman with the HBC when he sailed on the Nereide [J. M. Langtry] on May 4, 1833 on an arduous, frustrating almost year long voyage to the Northwest Coast. The voyage was delayed months after stopping at Plymouth and Lisbon for repairs. During a mutinous stopover at Valparaiso, Chile, Hays was arrested along with James McKay, James Moore and John Thoms and had to be bailed out of jail by the captain. He subsequently stole a cutter and threatened officers and could have lost his job but carried on with the ship. After his arrival at Fort Vancouver on April 21, 1834 and a quick turnaround as the ship was not needed for coastal trading, Hays left the Columbia River post on May 28, 1834 for an equally long return voyage. After stopping at Valparaiso, the vessel eventually arrived back in London May 28, 1835.

PS: HBCA log of Nereide 1; ShMiscPap 14

Heald, Edward (fl. 1838 - 1843) (British: English)

Birth: probably Springfield, EnglandMaritime officer

HBC Officer (2nd), Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1839); Officer (2nd), Nereide (barque) (1839 - 1840); 2nd mate, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1843).

Edward Heald joined the HBC in London on November 5, 1838 as a second officer for five years. He served on two vessels before shipping on the barque Cowlitz August 24, 1840. However, to Governor George Simpson, Heald's alcoholism symbolized all that was wrong with European ships' officers. He wanted him replaced as, for example, Heald's log writing was so inaccurate that no notice had been taken "in the Log book of the Cowlitz of the drunkenness & misconduct of Heald at Monterey, Santa Barbara & the Sandwich Islands" (HBR VI, p. 292). In the fall of 1842, Heald returned to England on the Cowlitz.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; log of Nereide 2; log of Cowlitz 1; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 13; YFASA 22; HBCA Edward Heald search file PPS: HBR VI, p. 292 (Simpson to McLoughlin, Sitka, May 18, 1842, D.4/27, fos. 47d-52d)

Heath, Thomas (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Boy, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

Thomas Heath made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Heath, William (1810 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Marlow, Buckinghamshire, England - May 15, 1810 (born to Joseph Heath and Mrs. Heath)Death: probably Buckinghamshire, England*Maritime officer

HBC 2nd mate, Ganymede (barque) (1832 - 1833); 1st mate, Vancouver (schooner) (1833 - 1835); 1st mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); 1st mate, Ganymede (barque) (1835 - 1836); 1st mate, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1840); 1st mate, Beaver (steamer) (1840 - 1842); 1st mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1840); 1st mate, Cadboro (schooner) (1842); 1st mate, Cowlitz (barque) (1842 - 1843); Master, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1846).

William Heath, brother to Joseph Thomas Heath, spent his career with the HBC on supply and coastal ships. Heath initially joined the HBC on September 15, 1832 as a second mate on the Ganymede and in April 1833, narrowly escaped drowning when he fell from a rope ladder (Tolmie, p. 152-155). After four years of coastal shipping, he left for England on the Columbia November 30, 1836. Because on the way back he refused duty in Oahu, he petitioned to get back into the Columbia and returned to the coast on May 24, 1838. On the coast he had disputes with Captain Charles Humphries and William Brothie but otherwise appeared to be a competent officer. However, the head office did not appear to think so. When he arrived back in London on June 27, 1846, he was dismissed for intoxication and soon after wrote to Sir Henry Pelly asking for passage to the coast to join his brother. He was refused and when he asked the company to certify his abilities as a navigator and seaman he did not get a response (Beattie & Buss, p. 132). As a result of this he took up farming at the family farm at Mill End Farm, West Wycomb, Buckinghamshire.

Undelivered family letters to William from 1838-1839 from a brother and sisters, reveals an educated middle class family replete with humour, dysfunction and a zest for life life. The four family letters as well as one from Captain William Darby requesting payment of a debt, rest at the HBCA.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Ganymede 1, 3; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 13-16, 20, 22, 24-25; YFDS 5b-7, 11; FtVanASA 3, 6-9; FtVanCB 29; log of Columbia 4; MiscI 5; HBCABio PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 123-133; W. F. Tolmie, p. 152-55; ChSoc IV, [bio] p. 345-46

Hebert, Cadmin [variation: Cassimir] (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Lower Canada - c. 1823Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1844).

Cadmin or Cassimir Hebert joined the HBC from LaPrairie in 1841 and returned to Canada east of the Rockies at the end of his contract in 1844.

Hellerand, Martin Larson [variation: Helbernd] (fl. 1853 - 1860) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1854 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Simpson (1857 - 1860).

Martin L. Hellerand appears to have been one of the seventeen Norwegians who continued on with the HBC chartered vessel, Colinda to Vancouver Island, when most everyone else left it in Chile. He worked until 1860.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 1-7, 9

Helmckin, John Sebastian (1824 - 1920) (British: English and German)

Birth: Brick Lane, Whitechapel, Stepney, Middlesex, England - June 5, 1824 (born to Claus Helmcken and Catherine [Mittler] Helmcken)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - September 1, 1920

Fur trade officer

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Surgeon, Fort Rupert (1850); Clerk, Fort Rupert (1850); Clerk, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1854); Surgeon, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1854); Surgeon, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1863); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1863 - 1865); Chief Trader, Fort Victoria (1865 - 1869); Surgeon, Fort Victoria (1865 - 1869).

John Sebastian Helmckin was born in East London; his South German grandparents and father had emigrated there during the Napoleonic Wars. At first running errands for and then apprenticing under family physician, Dr. William Henry Graves, Helmcken went on to study at Guy's Hospital where he won several awards. The experience had made him restless and so he sailed to York Factory as surgeon aboard the Prince Rupert before returning to London and passing his examinations in 1848. After eighteen months of sailing to Asian ports as surgeon on the Malacca, Helmcken was offered the post of surgeon at Fort Vancouver to replace the retiring Dr. Forbes Barclay. He arrived at Esquimalt on March 24, 1850 aboard the Norman Morison and in May was sent by James Douglas to Fort Rupert where a miner's dispute was taking place. He was made magistrate; however, after three deserting seamen were murdered by the natives, Helmcken offered his resignation, which Douglas refused to accept. In December, 1850, Helmcken returned to Victoria to take care of the ailing then Vancouver Island governor Richard Blanchard, and from that point on, Helmcken's career was centred in Victoria, rather than Fort Vancouver. The next seventy years of Helmcken's life were more settled and he became an active participant in the fledgling colony. His first appointment in Victoria was in 1851, when he became surgeon to the jail in the bastion of Fort Victoria and on July 2, 1856 was elected as a member of the Legislative Assembly of Vancouver Island for Esquimalt and Victoria District being elected Speaker, a position which he held until 1866. He was one of three delegates to Ottawa in pre-Confederation talks with Ottawa. After British Columbia entered Confederation in 1871, he retired from politics but continued to work as a surgeon and, in 1885, became the first elected president of the British Columbia Medical Society. He wrote articles, including his Reminiscences and finally in 1910, retired as physician to the Provincial jail in Victoria. In 1920 he died in Victoria and his body was cremated in Vancouver. Two weeks later his ashes were placed alongside his wife's in Pioneer Square. John Sebastian Helmcken's house is now open in Victoria as a museum.

John Sebastian Helmcken had one wife and seven children. On December 27, 1852, he married Cecilia Douglas (c.1835-1865) daughter of James Douglas. Their children were Claude Douglas (1853-1854), Catherine Amelia (1855-1922), Margaret Jane (1856-1858), James Douglas (1858-1919), Henry [Harry] Dallas (1859-1912), Edith Louisa [Dolly] (1862-1939), and Cecil Roderick (1865-65). Cecilia died a few short weeks after the birth of their last child. J. S. Helmcken never remarried.

Helmcken Island, Johnstone Strait, B. C. and Helmcken Fall, Well's Gray Provincial Park, B. C. were named after John Sebastian Helmcken.

PS: HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 8; PortB 1; YFASA 29-31; FtVicASA 1-16; BCA BCCR CCCath PPS: Helmcken
See Also: Douglas, Sir James (Father-in-Law); Benson, Dr. Alfred Robson (Friend); Griffin, Charles John

Henderson, Alexander York (c. 1813 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Portsmouth, Hampshire, England - c. 1813

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Apprentice, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); Apprentice, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1834); Apprentice, Columbia Department (1834 - 1835); Apprentice, Prince of Wales (ship) (1835); Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1836); Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Alexander York Henderson, a Greenwich Hospital apprentice hired on in the British Isles January 1, 1830, came to the Northwest Coast on the Dryad. For the next six years, he served his apprenticeship on vessels that serviced coastal posts and, in May 1834, he returned to the British Isles on the barque Nereide. In 1835 he made one return run to Hudson Bay before returning to the coast. Henderson left Fort Vancouver on the barque Columbia on November 15, 1836 and arrived in London in the spring of 1837.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 4a, 14; FtVanASA 2-3; YFASA 11-14; log of Prince of Wales I 11; YFDS 4a-5c

Hendricksen, Andreas (fl. 1854 - 1855) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Strang, Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Victoria general charges (1854 - 1855).

It is not certain how Andreas Hendricksen came to the coast. It is possible that he was a stray from the Colinda who found his way to Fort Victoria on his own. He worked for the HBC at Fort Victoria for one year before returning to Norway in May 1855.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 2-3

Henly, Hugh [variation: Henley] (fl. 1846 - 1854) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1848); Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852); Seaman, Otter (steamer) (1853 - 1854).

Hugh Henly first made a return voyage to the coast on the HBC barque Columbia, then in 1849, made a Hudson Bay run on the Prince Rupert. He returned to the Coast again as seaman on the Norman Morison filled with colonists and their families. Henly decided to stay and worked for the HBC for six months the following year.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 26-27, 31-32; log of Norman Morison 2; YFDS 22; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-2

Henri, Francois [standard: François] (c. 1807 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Trois Rivieres, Lower Canada - c. 1807

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1830 - 1831); Middleman, New Caledonia (1831 - 1833); Middleman, Fort Nez Perces (1833 - 1834).

François Henri worked for the HBC west of the Rockies for four years.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-5b; YFASA 11-13

Henry, Alexander ‘the younger’ (? - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - 1814

Fur trade officer

NWC Partner, Fort George [Astoria] (winter 1813 - 1814).

Alexander Henry the Younger was nephew of Alexander Henry the Elder and cousin to William Henry. In 1791 he entered the fur trade and worked for the NWC for twenty-three years before drowning at the mouth of the Columbia River. Henry wrote invaluable journals covering fifteen years of fur trading. Unfortunately there are gaps for there is no record written by him leaving Fort William on July 3, 1813, to his arrival at Fort Astoria on November 15, 1813. The records commence at that point, which was shortly after Fort Astoria had been taken over by the NWC, and continue until his death on May 21, 1814. While at Fort George he served as clerk. In January 1814, he was part of a punitive expedition to retrieve stolen goods at the Cascades on the Columbia River. In the spring of 1814, he found himself caring for barmaid, Janes Barnes, the travelling companion of proprietor, Donald McTavish who was preparing to abandon her and leave on an overland trip back to Canada. However, on May 22, 1814, before McTavish was able to leave, Henry, McTavish and four others drowned while crossing the Columbia River in a boat.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVII; ChSoc XLV, p. 131, 140-42, 145; Coues
See Also: Henry, William (Relative)

Henry, Andrew (c. 1775 - 1832) (American)

Birth: Fayette County, Pennsylvania, United States - between 1773 and 1778

Death: Harmony Township, Washington County, Missouri, United States - January 10, 1832

Fur trade officer

MFC Leader, Fort Andrew Henry (winter 1810 - 1811).

According to Chittenden, Andrew Henry drifted west probably before the purchase of Louisiana in 1803 and in 1809 joined the Missouri Fur Company as one of the original incorporators. The following year, in 1810, while in the Three Forks area of Missouri, conflicts with the Blackfeet Indians forced him to leave and cross the Continental Divide and eventually to the Upper Snake River where, with his group of men, he built a fort of several buildings (on the south bank of the river, upstream from Egin, Idaho, noted by a roadside marker). As food gathering in the winter of 1810-1811 was a problem, Henry abandoned his fort and returned in the spring with his men to the settlements east of the Rockies. During the subsequent war of 1812, Andrew Henry served in the Missouri Territorial Militia under lieutenant colonel William H. Ashley. For the next ten years, it is assumed that Henry went into the mining business. In 1822, Henry joined his old friend Ashley in the Rocky Mountain Fur Company and led an expedition up the Missouri. In 1824 he was at the first Rendezvous and appears to have left the fur trade shortly after. He likely had considerable money at one time but, instead of putting his assets in his wife's name, went broke when creditors pursued the many debtors who had used Henry for surety. In 1832, he died at his residence in Missouri.

Henry married late, and had one child. His wife, a woman of French birth, was considerably younger than Henry. Their son was Patrick (?-1898).

Henry's Lake and Henry's (Upper Snake River) Fork, both in Idaho, were named after Andrew Henry.

SS: Chittenden, p. 251-52, 263-272; Clements, p. 29-24; Brooks, p. 7-10
See Also: Ashley, William Henry

Henry, Joseph (fl. 1833 - 1835) (possibly British: English)

Birth: possibly England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Fort Simpson naval service (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834).

Joseph Henry worked for the HBC on coastal shipping. On November 10, 1834, he was transferred to the brig Eagle which arrived back in England the following June.

PS: HBCA YFDS 5b-5c

Henry, Norman [variation: Henre] (c. 1819 - 1845) (probably Mixed descent)

Birth: Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - c. 1819 (born to William Henre' and Agathe Baptiche)

Death: probably Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - November 1845

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1835 - 1836); Middleman, Snake Party (1836 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1839 - 1840); Middleman, South Party (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Columbia Department (1841 - 1842); Middleman, South Party (1843 - 1844); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1845).

Norman Henry joined the HBC in 1835 from the Rupert's Land area and for ten years worked mainly in the southern reaches of the Columbia Department as a middleman. He died on November 30, 1845 or on December 4, 1845 and was buried as Henry Le Normand on December 8.

He married native Nancy Walla Walla on January 29, 1844 and had no recorded children.

PS: HBCA YFASA 14-15, 19-20, 24-25; FtVanASA 3-8; YFDS 7 PPS: CCR 1b

Henry, William (1784 - 1864) (Canadian: English)

Birth: Montreal, Lower Canada - March 4, 1784 (born to Alexander (the Elder) Henry and Julia [Calcutt] Kittson)

Death: Newmarket, Canada West - 1864

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1813); Clerk, Willamette Post or Wallace House (1813 - 1816).

William Henry was the son of Alexander Henry, the Elder (1739-1824) and Julia (Calcutt) Kittson (c.1756-1834), as well as cousin to Alexander Henry, the Younger. A young seventeen year old William joined the Montreal-based NWC as a clerk in 1801 and from that point until 1811 served east of the Rockies. Around 1812 he was transferred to the Columbia, arriving at Astoria October 7, 1813 in the company of J. G. McTavish and Angus Bethune to take over that PFC fort. He took charge of the Willamette post over the winter of 1813-1814. On May 18, 1814, according to Alexander Henry's journal, he had a quarrel with Donald McTavish, who drowned four days later in the Columbia along with William's cousin, Alexander. William likely remained in charge of the Willamette post until 1816, returning east of the Rockies in 1817 and continuing with the HBC past 1821 until 1823 when he retired. At that point he returned to Canada becoming a surveyor and civil engineer. About 1840, he settled in Newmarket, Upper Canada, and here he died about 1864.

William Henry had one known wife, the sister of John Felton, who had been the signal midshipman on Nelson's flagship Victory at the battle of Trafalgar. The Henrys had several children, one of whom was Charles (?-1897).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 143-44, 159; ChSoc LVII, p. 611, 615, 628, 643, 659, 660, 675, 699, 704, 725, 726, 742; HBRS vol. I, p. 442 SS: Kittson, p. 10
See Also: Henry, Alexander 'the younger' (Relative)

Heramb, Toller [variation: Thawler] (c. 1812 - ?) (Norwegian)

Birth: probably in or near Nas/Nais, Norway - c. 1812

Death: possibly Norway

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Colinda (barque) (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria general charges (1854 - 1855); Labourer, North Dairy farm (1855 - 1856); Carpenter, Fort Shepherd (1856); Labourer, Fort Colville (1856 - 1859); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1859).

Toller Heramb joined the HBC in 1853 and, in London, boarded the chartered vessel Colinda for its voyage to Vancouver Island in August of that year. The voyage was tumultuous and many deserted but Heramb stayed with the ship and arrived at Fort Victoria on April 17, 1854. There he spent the first two years working on the dairy farm and was hired to help with the construction of Fort Shepherd, the replacement for Fort Colville. He returned to the coast in 1859 and sailed for the British Isles on March 27, 1859 and thence, likely returned to Norway.

PS: HBCA log of Colinda 1; FtVicASA 1-7; FtVanASA 12-15; log of Princess Royal 5

Herbert, John (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

John Herbert made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Herbert, P. J. (fl. 1849 - 1851) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1849 - 1850).

A mystery entry. P. J. Herbert appears on the 1849-1850 abstracts with a credit owing him as of June 1, 1849, and no other information. His name appeared on the 1850-1851 abstracts with no further information.

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-30

Hereea [variation: Hareea, Haarea, Hiria] (c. 1798 - 1837) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - c. 1798

Death: probably Fort Langley or possibly Fort Vancouver - September 1837

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1825); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827); Middleman, Fort Colville (1827 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1830 - 1831); Middleman, Fort Colville (1831 - 1832); Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Middleman or labourer, Fort Langley (1833 - 1837).

Hereea joined the fur trade around 1817, age about nineteen, likely working in the Columbia for the NWC until the merger with the HBC compelled him to join the latter. He worked largely in the Fort Vancouver area and is recorded as dying at Fort Vancouver in September of 1837. He may have returned to Oahu earlier that same year for at that time a man named Haario engaged with the Company there in July 1837 and sailed to Fort Vancouver. No family has been traced.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-12; YFASA 2-9, 11-15, 19; YFDS 2a, 3a-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-4; SandIsAB 1 PPS: W. F. Tolmie, p. 191

Heriot, P. (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

P. Heriot made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Heron, Francis (1794 - 1840) (Irish)

Birth: Donegal, Ireland - 1794

Death: possibly Europe - April 1840

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Colville (1829 - 1833); Chief Trader, Fort Langley (1833 - 1834); Chief Trader, Fort Colville (1834 - 1835).

Francis Heron, brother to James Heron, an HBC employee who worked east of the Rockies and uncle to George Heron, joined the HBC at the age of eighteen in 1812. For the next seventeen years he worked his way up through the ranks east of the Rockies, becoming Chief Trader in 1828. In 1829 he conducted the brigade to Fort Colville where he took charge; however, soon after his arrival, he ran afoul of Dr. John McLoughlin who appeared to have few kind words for him including that he was generally "very unpopular" (UBCSC Ermatinger). As well, George Simpson who as early as 1822 heaped praise on him, had changed his mind by the 1830s claiming Heron was idle and "indolent" (HBRS XXX 195, 195n), remarks perhaps brought on by Heron's drinking. Perhaps because of his drinking, from 1835 the Chief Trader took a four-year furlough in Europe and retired in 1839 because of illness, dying the following year.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11-14; FtVanASA 2; YFDS 5b-5c; SimpsonCB; Correspondence Simpson's July 30, 1830 private letter to J. G. McTavish, B.135/c/2, fo. 43; UBC-SC Ermatinger, February 1, 1824 PPS: HBRS I, p. 442; HBRS XXX, p. 194-95n; HBRS XXII, p. 457 SS: Oliver, p. 737

See Also: Heron, George (Relative)

Heron, George (c. 1824 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: Rupert's Land, British North America - c. 1824 (born to HBC employee James Heron)

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Apprentice, Fort Stikine (1840 - 1842); Apprentice, Columbia Department (1842 - 1843); Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844).

George Heron, who was brought up in the area of Lachine, joined the HBC in 1839. When he came to Fort Stikine in the spring of 1840, William Glen Rae had a low opinion of him and Dr. John McLoughlin thought even less of him, possibly motivated by McLoughlin's previous dislike of George's uncle Francis. As well, Rae and McLoughlin's assessments belie the journal entries in which Heron appeared to carry on normally doing such jobs as filling in window stops, making bed sheets, cutting wood and cleaning furs without getting into trouble. On April 21, 1842 he was present at, and implicated in the murder of John McLoughlin Jr. and hence gave a deposition to the events of the evening. However, as his evidence of McLoughlin Jr. being excessively drunk in December 1840 could not be corroborated by Rae, the veracity of Heron's deposition is open to question. Heron, along with fourteen others implicated in the crime, were sent to York Factory in 1844.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19, 23; FtVanASA 6-8; FtStikPJ 1; HBCA James Heron search file; FtVanCB 29 PPS: ChSoc VI, p. 43n, 47, 86, 87, 138, 149, 344, 349, 356, 357, 359, 364, 365, 367; ChSoc VII, p. 19, 27

See Also: Heron, Francis (Relative)

Heroux, Jean (c. 1814 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near St. Anne de Yamachiche, Lower Canada - c. 1814

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842).

Jean Heroux joined the HBC from St. Anne De Yamachiche in 1839. At the end of his contract in 1842, he returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-21; FtVanASA 6-7

Heroux, Urbain (c. 1812 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: possibly Trois Rivières, Lower Canada - c. 1812

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Taku [Fort Durham] (1840); Middleman, Fort Stikine (1841 - 1842); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1844?).

Urbain Heroux, a rogue in the fur trade and chronic alcoholic, is best known as the executioner of Dr. John McLoughlin's son, John McLoughlin, Jr. in the very early morning of August 21st, 1842. Even though he came from an honest Trois Rivières family, around 1832 an impetuous twenty year old Heroux got himself involved with the wrong crowd and turned to alcohol, burglary and robbery. In 1833 he was convicted of breaking into a store on a wharf in Trois Rivières and sentenced to one year in jail; however, he was pardoned provided that he leave the area for three years

(FtVanCB 29, fo. 6; ibid 30, fo. 90; ibid 31, fo. 163d-164). As a result, on March 15, 1833, Heroux joined the HBC and he worked at posts east of the Rockies and was sent to Fort Vancouver in 1837. It was during this time that he took a Chinook wife. In 1840 he was in on the building of Fort Taku and that same June was already in the newly acquired Fort Stikine [Wrangel, Alaska]. At first labelled "A good man" by the new post manager, William Glen Rae, (FtStikPJ 1, p. 2) Urbain appeared frequently in the records carrying out mainly carpentry duties, and was put in the store to assist the trader but when he was found by Rae to be stealing rum from the store and getting drunk, he was put out. John McLoughlin Jr. had been at the fort for almost a year and his drinking and violent streaks were becoming more pronounced. In drunken stupors, he would pummel his servants with his fists and whip them until the blood ran, according to deposition. Around Christmas 1841, all the servants but one signed a pact that if McLoughlin were not sent out, he would have to be killed. In the early morning hours of April 21, 1842 after being threatened by William Lassart and Heroux, a drunken John Jr., armed with his own rifle, tried to find the hidden pair to either punish or kill them. Failing to find them, he rushed into the centre area yelling "Fire! Fire!" but four shots rang out, the fatal one entering his shoulder blades and exiting his throat. It appears that Urbain Heroux was responsible for the fatal shot. Also implicated was Pierre Kanaguasse. By coincidence, George Simpson arrived five days later and after a brief investigation found the murder to be "justifiable homicide", a verdict for which Dr. John McLoughlin never forgave the governor.

Simpson took Heroux to Sitka where he was held by the Russians but by late 1843 the Baron Wrangel indicated that he had no intention of prosecuting him. Orders were then given to Governor Etholin at Sitka to send Heroux and the men back. Heroux was noted on March 17, 1844 as being on the way from Fort McLoughlin to Fort Langley as a prisoner (along with Pierre Kanaguasse) on the schooner Cadboro and being transferred to the steamer Beaver which was proceeding to Fort Victoria. They were brought back to Fort Vancouver and then sent, along with all the witnesses, to Norway House, an expense which, eventually, McLoughlin personally had to bear. To add insult to injury, the men were given their wages and finally, by 1846, it was determined that, as the men would have to be sent to England for trial at a cost of £10,000, all charges and proceedings were dropped. Urbain Heroux was once again a free man. The London Committee, once presented with all the evidence, accepted that the murder had been a preconceived plot; nevertheless, Heroux remained free.

Urbain Heroux had one or two wives and two recorded children. While in Fort Vancouver, before 1840, Urbain took an unnamed Chinook wife. Their son was Julien (1840-?). If he took this wife with him to Fort Stikine, then they had a second child, a daughter born on February 24, 1842.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 4-8; YFASA 18-21, 23; FtStikPJ 1; ; log of Cadboro, 5; PPS: Simpson, Narrative of a Journey, p. 1FtVanCB 29, McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, June 24, 1842, B.223/b/29, fo. 6; FtVanCB 30, McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, Nov. 18, 1843, B.223/b/30, fo. 90; FtVanCB 31, McLoughlin to Simpson Feb. 1, 1844, B.223/b/31, fo. 163d-16482; ChSoc VI, p. 310-311; CCR 1a

Hersey, Joseph [variation: Hussey] (fl. 1832 - 1835) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Lama (brig) (1830 - 1834); Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1834).

Joseph Hersey joined the Lama [William Henry McNeill] in Boston before October 6th 1830 and sailed to the Northwest Coast. On July 18, 1831 in Kigany harbour and in a fit of intoxicated bravado, Hersey, Samuel Ferguson and William Robinson tried to take over the brig, but, failing that, jumped into the harbour. They were brought back and given the lash. When the Lama was sold to the HBC in August 1832, Hersey continued on under the employ of the London company from September 4, 1832 and returned to the coast on it. He worked in Columbia coastal shipping but obviously violated some rules and, on October 11, 1834 was placed on board the Eagle as a prisoner at large. On November 10, he was transferred to the brig Eagle and sailed to Oahu on it and appears to have left the ship there.

PS: BCA log of Lama 1; HBCA log of Eagle 2; ShMisPap 14; YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c

Heseltine, Samuel [variation: Haseltine] (c. 1817 - 1859) (British: English)

Birth: Enfield, Middlesex, England - c. 1817

Death: Victoria, Colony of Vancouver Island - September 6, 1859

Maritime employee

HBC Engineer, Labouchere (steamer) (1858).

Samuel Heseltine, "the son of a member of a highly respectable firm in the City of London," (Gazette, p. 2) had a short career with the HBC. He joined the HBC on August 13, 1858 as engineer on the steamer Labouchere for five years and the following year was carrying the title of Inspector of Steamboat boilers. In February 1859 he purchased over one hundred acres [40.5 ha] in the Lake District near Victoria. On August 25th 1859, he fell and broke his leg in two places and managed to crawl back to his place where he was found, insensible. He never recovered from his accident and died in Victoria.

Hetherington, Alexander (fl. 1830 - 1831) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Stockwell, York, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1830 - 1831).

Alexander Hetherington joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 as a seaman for three years. He did not get very far with the Company for while on the brig Eagle, he was discharged at California in outfit 1830-1831.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 10; YFDS 4a

Hetherway, Felix [variation: Nathaniel] (fl. 1829 - 1830) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1830).

Felix Hetherway, also called Nathaniel in the HBC records, may have come out on the Isabella and went on to work on the Vancouver. On November 10, 1830, he was discharged at Fort Vancouver.

PS: HBCA ShMisPap 14; YFASA 9-10; YFDS 3b; FtVanASA 2

Hetling, Henry E. (c. 1831 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Clifton, Gloucester, England - c. 1831

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice clerk, Columbia Department general charges (1850 - 1851); Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver depot (1851 - 1852); Apprentice clerk, Columbia Department general charges (1852 - 1853); Apprentice clerk, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854); Apprentice clerk, Fort Vancouver (1854 - 1855); Clerk, Fort Vancouver (1855); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1856).

Henry E. Hetling joined the HBC in England in 1850 on a contract that ended in 1855. In outfit 1851-1852 shortly after his arrival, as apprentice clerk he was in charge of the Express to and from York Factory and received a gratuity for washing during that time. At the end of his contract in 1855, he returned to England with a letter of recommendation from James Douglas.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9-12; YFDS 22-23; FtVanCB 40; FtVicASA 1-4; FtVicCB 12, 13; HBCA Henry E. Hetling search file; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark County

Hill, Robert (c. 1791 - 1811) (American)

Birth: probably Albany, New York - c. 1791

Death: Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island - June 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Boy, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

Robert Hill joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as a ship's boy some time before September 3, 1810, for its voyage to the Northwest Coast. Hill departed September 8 on the New York vessel for its tempestuous journey around the Horn but managed to avoid the harsh punitive temper and measures of the captain. After a brief stopover in February, 1811 in the Sandwich Islands, the Tonquin arrived at the mouth of the Columbia on March 22. Hill stayed on the vessel as it proceeded north to Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island. There, in June, the vessel was attacked and all crew members, except the interpreter, died when the ship was attacked and blown up.

PS: USNA Tonquin PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 49

Hillier, Captain (fl. 1813 - 1815) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

NWC Captain, Isaac Todd (ship) (1813 - 1815).

Captain Hillier had the distinction of carrying the first NWC furs to China. Hillier commanded the Isaac Todd as a letter of marque during the height of the War of 1812. He sailed from Portsmouth March 25, 1813 with such passengers as Donald McTavish and the English barmaid Jane Barnes on a very slow sail and had to put into San Francisco for the winter. Hillier and the Isaac Todd finally arrived at Astoria April 23, 1814, loaded furs, and finally departed September 26, 1814 for China, where it dropped the furs for sale and loaded tea for England.

SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Hines, Rev. Gustavus (fl. 1840 - 1873) (American)

Birth: New York State, United States - 1809Death: Oregon State, United States - 1873Other*U.A. Missionary, Willamette Mission (1840 - ?).

Rev. Gustavus Hines came with his wife and child to Oregon in the Lausaune [Captain Spaulding] in 1840 in the fifty person so-called Great Reinforcement. Originally sent to set up a Umpqua River post, he realized the impracticality of it and returned north, working out of the Willamette Mission with Jason Lee. He barely made a mention of the fur trade in his writing, was in on the founding of the Oregon Institute [Willamette University], and presided over the first meeting of the Oregon Provisional Government. He helped close the Willamette mission in the 1843, published his observations in 1851, and returned to New York in 1845. He returned to Oregon in 1853 and lived there until his death.

Publications: Hines, Rev. G. Oregon: its History, Condition and Prospects, Buffalo, 1851; Oregon and Its Institutions, 1868
PS: HBCA FtVanCB 30 PPS: Hines, Oregon, Its History; Boyd, People of the Dalles, p. 315

Hobough, John [variation: Hobaugh, Hubbough, Hoback, Hauberk] (? - 1814) (American)

Birth: Kentucky, United StatesDeath: Snake Country, Pacific Northwest - January 1814Freeman*PFC Freeman hunter, Snake Country (1811 - 1814).

John Hobough suffered from two misfortunes: one was being accused of cannibalism and the other was being in the wrong place at the wrong time. Hobough worked for the Missouri Fur Company before 1811 but at the Aricara village on May 26, 1811, joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition bound for Astoria. He crossed the Continental Divide with the new company in late summer, 1811, and on October 9, 1811, in order to trap the area for beaver, separated from the expedition at the abandoned Fort Andrew Henry. Hobough, along with fellow trappers Jacob Resner and Edward Robinson, was subsequently robbed twice by the natives. Another companion, Martin H. Cass disappeared from the group sometime during this period. His fate is unknown for it was said that he either deserted, was killed by the natives, or was killed and eaten by the trio. On August 20, 1812, the party of three, now minus Cass, was encountered by Robert Stuart's returning party. They asked Stuart to join his party for the journey to St. Louis but eight days later, changed their minds deciding instead to stay to make their fortunes. Some time in early September, 1813, after about a year of trapping in the Snake area, the trio was robbed again by the Indians of everything they had. Two weeks later, they stumbled on John Reed's group, where Reed supplied them with clothing and traps and accepted them as new members of his trapping party. John Hobough met his end on January, 1814, when, in an apparent retaliation for Clarke having handed a native for stealing a metal cup, some Bannock Indians killed all members of Reed's party. The trapper had been in the wrong place at the wrong time.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 107-08; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 228-29, 277-282; ChSoc XLV, p. 153

Hodgens, Francis William [variation: Hodgins] (fl. 1813 - 1822) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

PFC Blacksmith, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); NWC Blacksmith, Fort George [Astoria] (October 13, 1813); PFC Milieu, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Milieu, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1813 - 1814); NWC Trapper, McKenzie's Snake Party (1819 - 1820); Blacksmith, Columbia Department (1821); Freeman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823).

Blacksmith Francis William Hodgins joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC overland expedition likely at St. Louis by March 4, 1811. He crossed the continental divide late summer, 1811, went down the Snake and Columbia, reaching Astoria on February 19, 1812. He joined the NWC on October 13, 1813 and likely summered in Montreal in 1814. While on a Snake party in the winter of 1819-20, he was separated from Donald McKenzie's Party and almost froze to death but was brought back to health by the War-are-ree-ka (Shoshone) Chief Ama-ketsa, eventually rejoining the party. In 1821, at the time of the coalition, he transferred to the HBC and it appears that he was one of fourteen who deserted in the Snake Country in the fall of 1822. By 1825, Ogden noted that of the fourteen who deserted, six were dead and the remaining eight were working with the Spanish at St. Louis or in Missouri.

PS: HBCA NWCab 10; HBCA NWCAB 9, 10; NWCAB 9; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; FtSpokRD 1 PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 174-75; K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 108

Hodgson, John (fl. 1852 - 1853) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1852 - 1853).

John Hodgson made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Hodgson, Thomas [variation: Hodgins, Hodgens] (c. 1789 - 1865) (Mixed descent)

Birth: probably in or near Henley House or Fort Albany - c. 1789 (born to John Hodgson and an unnamed Native wife)

Death: Saskatchewan District [Saskatchewan] - August 1865

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1820 - 1821); In charge, Chala-oo-chik [Fort George] (1821); HBC Servant, New Caledonia (1821 - 1822); Carpenter, Fort St. James (1822 - 1824); Boatbuilder, Fort St. James (1822 - 1824).

In 1800, Thomas Hodgson began as an apprentice to a shipwright at Albany on James Bay and in 1807 became a boat builder. In 1807-1808 he accompanied his father to England and in 1808 returned to Moose Factory. In 1814 the young carpenter, and his brother James, left Albany for Canada where he served in two districts until 1820. At that point, he went to the Columbia. Between October-November 1821, he was in charge of Chala-oo-chik, an early site of Fort George in New Caledonia but was replaced by James Murray Yale who thought that Hodgson drank too much. On April 26, 1822, for signing his contract at Fort St. James, Stuart's Lake, he was promised a wage of sixteen hundred livres and received, as "presents", one three-point blanket, one plain two and a half point blanket, two common cotton shirts, one fathom of common cloth, one silk and one cotton handkerchief, four carrots of tobacco, three large and three small knives, one quarter pound [0.1 kg] of vermillion, one cloth capot, one hat, one fine cotton shirt, one fine vest, one pair cotton trousers, one large black silk handkerchief, one pair of worsted hose, one pair shoes, four pounds [1.8 kg] of ____?, and twenty-five pounds [11.3 kg] of sugar. After leaving New Caledonia in 1824, he went east of the Rockies where he served in two more posts, becoming a freeman in outfit 1853-1854. He died in 1865.

Thomas Hodgson had one traced wife, Ann Thomas, daughter of John Thomas.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7; HBCA HBCACont, A.32/33, fos. 15-22; FtStJohnCB 1; YFASA 1-2; HBCABio SS: J. S. H. Brown, Strangers in Blood

Hodson, Joseph (fl. 1831) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Limehouse, Middlesex, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1831 - 1832).

Joseph Hodson joined the HBC in London, first on September 24, 1831 and sailed twice to the Columbia on the brig Eagle returning to England on the same ship.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 5a; ShMiscPap 14

Hogarth, William (c. 1820 - ?) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Aberdeen, Scotland - c. 1820

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1847); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1847 - 1849); Boatswain, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1849 - 1850).

William Hogarth joined the HBC in London on September 29, 1845 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. After joining the Mary Dare on October 29, 1847, he worked servicing coastal and Sandwich Islands posts to 1850 when he disappeared from record. However, as movement appeared on his account for the next five years, he may have still been in the area.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 9; YFASA 26-32; FtVicASA 1-2; YFDS 18

Hogg, William (c. 1813 - ?) (probably Canadian: English)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1813

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1833 - 1834).

William Hogg, from Montreal, joined the HBC on February 28, 1833 but apparently didn't like it. Apparently after coming to the Columbia, he deserted at Athabasca River in the Saskatchewan and returned to Canada in 1834. By doing this, and by the order of Governor George Simpson, he forfeited his wages.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 13; YFDS 5b

Hogue, Amable [variation: Hoog] (c. 1796 - 1858) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably in or near Ecores vis-a-vis La Riviere des Prairies, Lower Canada - c. 1796

Death: probably Red River Settlement [Manitoba] - February 26, 1858

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1828 - 1829).

Amable Hogue joined the HBC on January 12, 1821 and between 1821-1823 served at two posts east of the Rockies. He spent one outfit in the Columbia before the following year transporting Governor George Simpson back to Montreal. He stayed in Montreal for three years (1825-1828) before returning to the Columbia possibly transporting Simpson on his second visit. From 1830 he was at Red River where he functioned as a mason helping to build Lower Fort Garry.

On 24 March 1831 Hogue married Margaret Taylor, who had been abandoned by Governor Simpson. This connection with Simpson may have begun in 1824.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFASA 3-5, 8-9; FtVanAB 1, 2a, 26; FtGeo[Ast]AB 12; HBCABio

See Also: Simpson, Sir George (Relative)

Holland, Abraham (fl. 1848 - 1849) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1849).

Abraham Holland shipped on with HBC in London on the Columbia on September 6, 1848. On May 6, 1849 after his arrival at Fort Vancouver, Holland, along with eight others, deserted his ship, for the more promising gold fields in California. The gold fever must have been running high, for just a couple of days before Holland deserted, the whole crew had asked for a discharge.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 10; Ogden's May 16, 1849 Fort Vancouver letter to Archibald Barclay, Correspondence, A.11/70, fos. 368-69; HBCA YFASA 30-32

Holland, George (fl. 1836 - 1851) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near St. Pancras, London, Middlesex, England

Death: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1835 - 1837); Seaman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1838 - 1839); Schoolmaster, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Seaman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Schoolmaster, Fort Vancouver general charges (1840 - 1841); Schoolmaster, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1843); Post master, Fort Langley (1843 - 1846); Post master, Fort Victoria (1846 - 1847); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1847 - 1848); 1st mate, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

George Holland, an "honest worthy soul," (HBRs XXXII, 13n) had a varied career with the HBC after joining it on August 29, 1835. A few days after his appointment he sailed from Gravesend on the "steamer" Beaver, temporarily rigged as a brig, and arrived at Fort Vancouver seven and a half months later. After working on coastal shipping, he became a schoolmaster, replacing the Rev. Herbert Beaver. He moved quickly through the ranks as he became a post master at Fort Langley. In November 1847, after serving "the Company for 12 years with an unblemished character" (FtVanCB 36, fo. 89) and because the climate did not agree with him, he worked until November 10, 1847 returning to England on the barque Columbia. In 1848, in England, he qualified as a master mariner and unsuccessfully reapplied to the HBC. However, in the following year, 1849, he took the job as first mate of the Norman Morison (D. D. Wishart), arriving in Victoria on March 24, 1850. One passenger, John S. Helmcken, thought Holland when compared to Captain Wishart, was "not much of a sailor or anything else" (Helmcken, p. 80). After sailing to Fort Simpson and Sitka, the Norman Morison left the coast on September 23, 1850, arriving at Gravesend, February 20, 1851. On April 2, 1851, because he had an ongoing disagreement with Wishart and wished to resign, he applied to London for land service in Victoria but was refused.

Holland Point, off Dallas Road, Victoria, was named after him.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 3-8; YFDS 7, 10, 18; YFASA 19-20, 24-27; FtVanCB 36, Douglas to Gov. & Committee, Nov. 6, 1847, B.223/b/36, fo. 89; FtVanCB 38; George Holland's April 2, 1851 London letter to Governor and Committee, A.10/30; PortB 1 PPS: HBRs XXXII, p. 12, 13n, 15; Helmcken, p. 76, 80 SS: Wolfenden, "The Naming of Holland", p.

Holland, James (c. 1825 - 1868) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - October 1868

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1851 - 1854); Untraced vocation, Fort Rupert (1854 - 1855); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1855 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1858).

James Holland came to Vancouver Island as a servant settler of the HBC aboard the Tory. He arrived on May 9, 1851 and sailed to Fort Rupert where he worked until 1857, with the exception of 1854-1855. The latter might have had something to do with the death of Thomas Holland, a possible relative. He then appeared to move to Fort Victoria around 1858 where he worked as a private messenger for Governor James Douglas. In 1862, he lived on Fisgard St., Victoria and went on to become a messenger in the Treasury Department in the colony. He appeared not to marry and on October 10, 1868 the forty-three year old was found dead in bed, apparently from natural causes.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-7; BCA 1862 Victoria Directory, p. 66; Van-PL Colonist, October 12, 1868, p. 3
See Also: Holland, Thomas (possible Relative)

Holland, John (fl. 1824 - 1825) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: possibly Honolulu, Oahu, Hawaiian Islands - September 1859

Maritime employee

MW Ordinary seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

John Holland shipped aboard the Convoy [William Henry McNeill] in Boston before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. After arriving at Honolulu on March 16, 1825 and discharging cargo, it took on supplies for the Northwest Coast, departing April 1. Holland and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2. It is not known whether he continued to sail with the Convoy back to the Northwest Coast for the 1826-1827 trading seasons. (He may be the same long-term resident American J. W. Holland who died in Honolulu on September 13, 1859.)

PS: BCA log of Convoy; HHS Friend, p. 79 SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Holland, Thomas (fl. 1839 - 1840) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1840).

Thomas Holland joined the HBC in London on November 18, 1837 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. He serviced various coastal posts on the vessel until October 23, 1838 when he joined the Nereide. He returned to the British Isles on the Nereide and expressed his frustration on Christmas day, 1839 by refusing an extra ration of port. For that outburst, his allowance of spirits was stopped, probably until he was discharged in London April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 14; log of Columbia 3; YFDS 9-10; YFASA 18-19; log of Nereide 2
See Also: Holland, James (possible Relative)

Hollyman, Edward (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Edward Hollyman made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Holman, Thomas (fl. 1849 - 1852) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Harbledown, Canterbury, England

Death: possibly England

Maritime officer

HBC 1st mate, Una (brigantine) (1849 - 1851); Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1852).

After service between 1847-1849 on the Wanderer, Earl Durham, and Earl Stanhope, Thomas Holman joined the HBC on December 31, 1849. On January 2, 1850, he was appointed first officer on the HBC brig Una on which he sailed to Vancouver Island. However, by June 25, 1851 he was in bed with an undetermined illness at Fort Victoria, quite unable to perform his duty as first mate. As some of his relatives had tuberculosis, he may have had the same. Anxious relatives knew of his illness and requested from the London officer that Holman be allowed to come home on the Norman Morison. Consequently, around six months later on January 16, 1852, he left for Europe as a passenger on the Norman Morison as a retired servant. He appears to have returned to Harbledown or Canterbury.

Five undelivered 1850-1852 family letters now resting in the HBCA give detailed account of the events in the lives of his friends and relatives and the death of his father and the very caring concern of a worried sister.

PS: HBCA A.1/66, p. 139; ShMiscPap 9a, 10; YFASA 30-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 2 PPS: HBRS XXXII, p. 194; Beattie & Buss, p. 264-280

Holmes, George (? - 1833) (American)

Birth: possibly New York, New York

Death: in the mountains en route to St. Louis - 1833

Free trader

U.A. Trapper, Rendezvous (1833).

George Holmes, a well educated New Yorker, was a trapper in Lucien Fontenelle's party at the 1833 Green River Rendezvous. There, Holmes, who had befriended George Larpeur, was badly bitten in the face and ear by a rabid wolf. Holmes foresaw his own end when the animals that had been bitten by the same wolf died. He started back to St. Louis with Fontenelle and began to have fits. Soon he was terrified of crossing streams and showing signs of encroaching madness. Finally while at a camp, he stripped off his clothes and ran into the woods never to be seen again.

PPS: Larpeur, p. 30, 33-34

Holmes, John (fl. 1820 - 1821) (possibly British: English)

Birth: probably England

Death: probably West of the Rockies

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1820 - 1821).

John Holmes who joined the NWC on September 9, 1812 for three years, may have been the Holmes (a tailor) who was eaten by his comrades in 1817 but the records did not catch up to him for three years. If Ross Cox is to be believed, Holmes and six others were to leave the Pacific slopes via the Athabasca Pass in 1817 as part of a much larger group, but were unable to face the arduous of the climb and were ordered back by Duncan McDougall and Angus Bethune and to make their way back to Spokane House. On the way back the group lost their canoe with provisions at the Dalles des Mortes. With no food, Holmes was the second to die and subsequently was eaten by his comrades. Four others also died (Cox, p. 244-46).

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 7 PPS: Cox, p. 244-46; HBRS II, p. 220-21

Home, David (? - 1838) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Columbia River, Pacific Northwest - January 1838

Maritime officer

HBC Captain, Columbia Department sundries account (1835 - 1836); Master, Beaver (steamer) (1836 - 1837); Master, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1838).

David Home, who joined the HBC in 1836, arrived that same year in the Columbia without his papers of engagement and right away asked for a Chief Tradership position or he would quit. McLoughlin found him a "steady good Officer fit for any command in our Navy" (FtVanCB12, fo. 2d). In May and June of 1837 dissatisfaction and mutiny of the crew alleging severity & excessive duty caused a flurry of twenty-three notes between Home and John McLoughlin while the ship was anchored on the Columbia. In one, McLoughlin found no fault with Captain Home and in fact ordered that nine crew members be put on prisoner's rations of bread and water, and later, that some be flogged for insubordination. Captain David Home's career did not last long for he drowned on January 26, 1838 while crossing the Columbia from Point Ellice to Fort George, at the same location where George Simpson almost came to grief in 1824. A sudden gust of wind upset the boat throwing the men into the cold Columbia. The vacancy caused by this accident was filled by William Brothie of the Cadboro.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15; YFDS 7; FtVanASA 3-5; YFASA 17; FtVanCB 12, McLoughlin to Gov. & Committee, Nov. 15, 1836, B.223/b/12, 2d; FtVanCB 18, 20

Homock, Charles Aug. (fl. 1823 - 1824) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

Charles A. Homock was an apprentice aboard the Lively [Robert Ritchie], chartered by the HBC. After arriving at Fort George, the Lively took on HBC furs bound for London. However, three days before the ship was to sail, Homock and the boy, James Purvis, absconded with the Jolly boat. Purvis was captured by the natives and sent back to the boat and Homock returned after twenty-six hours absence. He profusely apologized and had to forfeit his wages and payment of clothes for breaking the articles. The ship sailed from Fort George on August 6 and arrived in England on March 25, 1824.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1; HBCA ship extract

Hong (fl. 1840) (probably Chinese)

Birth: probably China, Asia

Death: possibly Pacific Ocean - September 1840

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Vancouver (barque) (1840).

Hong joined the HBC in Oahu as a steward on the barque Vancouver. He appears to have joined the ship on February 16, 1840 and drowned on September 16, 1840 while serving as a steward.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20; YFDS 11; FtVanASA 6

Honno (fl. 1844 - 1848) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Fort Langley [British Columbia] - 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1844 - 1848).

Honno probably joined the HBC from Oahu in 1844. He spent almost four years as a labourer at Fort Vancouver and died in 1848, apparently at Fort Langley. In 1846, one barrel of salmon was purchased in his name, possibly as a gift to his family back home in the Hawaiian Islands.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24-27, 29; SandIsAB 5

Honnu (fl. 1837 - 1840) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

PSAC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Middleman, Fort Nisqually (1839 - 1841); HBC Untraced vocation, Oahu (1840).

Honnu joined the HBC in July 1837 from Oahu and began work at Fort Vancouver as a middleman on August 10th of that year. He appears to have served one contract, as he was discharged in Oahu.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 4-6; YFDS 8; YFASA 19-21

Honolulu [variation: Henry] (fl. 1845 - 1851) (Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian Islands - 1825

Fur trade employee

PSAC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1848); Labourer, Cowlitz Farm (1848 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851).

Honolulu joined the HBC in 1845 from Oahu. He stopped working for the Company in 1851 but showed transactions on his account until 1852, whereupon he disappeared from record. He may be the same person who appears in the 1850 US Census of Clark County as Henry Honolulu.

Honolulu had a wife and one son. He and an unnamed native woman had Pierre Honololo (1851-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-32; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Clark County PPS: CCR 1b

Hoolapa [variation: Hoolapu] (fl. 1837 - 1850) (Hawaiian)

Birth: Hawaiian IslandsDeath: Fort Vancouver, Oregon Territory - April 1850Fur trade employee*HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1841); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1843 - 1848); Labourer, Cowlitz Farm (1848 - 1850).

Hoolapa entered the service of the HBC from Oahu in 1837 and began his work on July 31 of that year in the Snake Country. Nothing was recorded of his personality or work habits when he acted as a goer and comer, transporting trappers in and out from Fort Vancouver, until November 20, 1841. At that point, he returned to Oahu but reentered the service. Back in the Columbia he spent the next five years at Fort Vancouver and his last two years as a labourer on the Cowlitz farm. On April 6, 1850, while in the vicinity of Fort Vancouver, Hoolapa became involved in a scuffle between a well-known claim jumper, Amos Short, and a Mr. Gardiner. Both Gardiner and Hoolapa were shot and killed by Short and Short's son-in-law. The following day an inquest was held and Hoolapa was likely buried that day or the next in the Fort Vancouver cemetery.

Nothing is known of Hoolapa's family in the Columbia but he may have been married, as there was movement on his account after his death.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; YFDS 8, 12; YFASA 19-21, 23-32; BCA Lowe 1

Hoole, Antoine [a] [variation: Hool] (c. 1808 - ?) (Mixed descent)

Birth: c. 1808Fur trade employee*HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver (1828 - 1829); Member, Ogden's Snake Party (1829 - 1830); Hunter, Work's Snake Party (1830 - 1831); Work's Trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1831); Untraced vocation, Fort Nez Perces (1831 - 1832); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1832 - 1834).

Antoine Hoole [a] joined the HBC in 1824, likely from the Rupert's Land area, and spent six years in the Columbia Department. The records on Hoole are slim but he was mentioned in Work's expeditions on November 9, 1830, when he was fired upon by the Blackfoot. On April 21, 1831, while Hoole and Augustine Finlay were hunting buffalo, they sighted fourteen Blackfeet with eight or ten horses and foolishly pursued them before returning to camp. On August, 18, 1831, while he was leaving Fort Vancouver with Work's second Snake party, he came down with malaria and had to be left at Fort Nez Perces on September 8 as he was too sick to continue. He recovered and was back working two months later.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9, 11, 13; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b—5b; FtVanASA 2; SnkCoPJ 9-11

Hoole, Jacques (c. 1722 - 1814) (French)

Birth: France - c. 1722Death: Flathead or Snake area, Pacific Northwest - 1814Freeman*U.A. Freeman trapper, Flathead District (1814); Freeman trapper, Snake Country (1814).

If Ross Cox is to be believed, Jacques Hoole had one of the most extraordinary careers and was a marvel of longevity. Born in France, Hoole became a soldier and began his military career in 1745 in Scotland where he was slightly wounded and made a prisoner at Culloden [Scotland]. He was exchanged and sent to Canada where he became actively engaged in the French-English war in North America and fought on the Plains of Abraham in September 1759. After the British Conquest, he married and became a farmer. However, during the American Revolutionary war, when the American rebelling colonies laid siege to Quebec in 1775, he, then a sergeant in the militia, was wounded in the knee. This made him somewhat lame for the rest of his life. As the American republicans had destroyed his farm, he was not getting along with his wife, and his children were disobedient - he abandoned everything and went into the interior to work as a freeman trader amongst the natives. His trading career is difficult to follow but, in 1814 at the incredible age of ninety-two, the heavy smoking "Père Hoole" was shot in the temple by the Blackfeet, stripped, and scalped. His horses, traps and arms were taken and his body was found close to a beaver dam. The irony of this last act is not lost in that the Blackfeet had laid claim to all the Beaver trade within their territory.

SS: Cox, p. 171-72

Hoole, James (fl. 1829 - 1830) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employeeHBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830).

James Hoole may have been a member of the cross-country brigade or express.

Hoole, Louis Capois (fl. 1813 - 1814) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Flathead Post [Fort Connah, Saleesh House] (1813 - 1814).

Louis Capois Hoole wintered at Flatheads post in 1813-1814.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 10

Hooton, Quinton [variation: Hootur] (1812 - 1838) (British: English)

Birth: Wapping Wall, Shadwell, Middlesex, England - August 11, 1812 (born to William Hooten and Sarah Hooten)

Death: Todd's Bay, Pacific Northwest - January 26, 1838

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1838).

Quinton Hooton joined the HBC as a seaman on February 13, 1836 for a very brief but eventful career. He began his work in coastal shipping in September of that year. In June of 1837, because of what he perceived to be harsh working conditions on the Nereide, Hooton, along with eight others, mutinied against Captain David Home while the boat was at Fort Vancouver. He was put on prisoner rations of bread and water but avoided the lash and the punishment of only one cup of grog a day by returning to duty. In a twist of fate, he, along with Home, were drowned at Tod's Bay the following year on January 26, 1838.

An undelivered letter to Quinton from his mother sending greetings from the many members of his family, indicates that Quinton wrote home only once in three years. The letter, written unknowingly in London six months after his death in the Columbia, rest at the HBCA.

PS: HBCA A.10/8, fo. 286; HBCCont; ShMiscPap 9, 14; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7; YFASA 17; FtVanCB 18, 20; MiscI 5

Hopkins, David (fl. 1851 - 1852) (British)

Birth: probably British IslesMaritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851 - 1852).

David Hopkins made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC immigrant supply ship, Norman Morison.

PS: HBCA PortB

Hopkins, Edward Martin (1820 - 1893) (British: English)

Birth: All Saints, West Ham, Essex, England - July 18, 1820 (born to Martin Edward Hopkins and Ann Manley)

Death: Orchard Dene, Henley-on-Thames, Oxfordshire, England - April 20, 1893

Fur trade employee

HBC Personal secretary and assistant to George Simpson, Columbia Department (1841 - 1842).

Edward Martin Hopkins spent only a couple of months in the Columbia as personal secretary and assistant to George Simpson. Uncle to the future poet, Gerald Manley Hopkins, Edward was at first a parliamentary reporter. Soon after joining the HBC and becoming secretary to George Simpson, he embarked on a round the world voyage. In early 1841, Hopkins and Simpson departed Liverpool and, from Boston, made their way from Montreal across land and arrived at Fort Vancouver on August 25, 1841. After a short stop at Fort Vancouver, the group headed north but, on September 8, 1841, Hopkins took charge of Fort Nisqually while Simpson went north to Sitka. When Simpson returned, Hopkins joined him for the trip to California and eventually the Sandwich Islands, where Hopkins rested for one month. As Simpson felt that Hopkins could not hold up under the rigours of the voyage, he sent Hopkins back to Fort Vancouver with dispatches for London on March 14, 1842. From there he made his way up the Columbia to York Factory where he boarded the Prince Rupert for London. He arrived in London in October, 1842 a few months before Simpson arrived from the other direction, and both headed back to Lachine where he was to act as Simpson's personal secretary and assistant until Simpson's death. He rose up through the ranks to Chief Factor, but it was his second wife's reputation as a painter that far outshone Edward Hopkin's achievements.

Frances Anne [Beechey] Hopkins was, and still is, celebrated as a distinguished painter of Canadian scenes. Daughter of Admiral Beechey (1796-1856) and granddaughter of renowned portrait painter Sir William Beechey (1753-1839), Anne Hopkins travelled with husband Edward, sketching and painting scenes along the way. She exhibited many times at the Royal Academy of London almost to her death on March 5, 1919.

Edward Martin Hopkins had six children by his two successive wives. In 1847, he married Anne Ogden (?-1854) niece of Peter Skene Ogden. Together they had Edward Gouvernor Ogden (1850-?), Peter Ogden (1852-?) and Manley Ogden (1853-1918). In 1854, Anne died of cholera. After marrying Frances Anne Beechey (c. 1836-1919) in August, 1858 the three additional Hopkins children were Raymond Beechey (?-?), Wilfred (1861-c.1910) and Olive Beechey (c.1863-1917).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6; log of Cowlitz 1; HBCABio PPS: HBRS XXIX, p. 175-83, 184-87, 188, 192, 195 PPS: G. Simpson, Narrative SS: A. M. Johnson, p. 4-17

See Also: Ogden, Peter Skene (Relative); Simpson, Sir George

Hopkirk, Daniel (fl. 1842 - 1844) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Liverpool, England (born to James and Mrs. Hopkirk)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1842 - 1844).

Daniel Hopkirk joined the HBC from London on October 1, 1840 on a five year contract and on August 30, 1841, left on the Vancouver for its return voyage to the coast. He protested his workload a few times and arrived back in the British Isles on June 11, 1844.

Daniel's concerned father wrote Daniel a letter from Liverpool in 1843 asking him to come home to "Sea your Power Mother Be For it is tow Late[.]" (Beattie & Buss, p. 190). The letter, which remained undelivered, as Daniel was on his way home, now rests in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 5; FtVanASA 7-8; YFASA 23; PortB HBCA C.2/14, fo. 113; MiscI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 190-91

Horapapa, John (fl. 1834 - 1835) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: Cape Flattery, Columbia Department - September 1835

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Simpson (1834); Untraced vocation, Fort McLoughlin (high wage) (1834 - 1835); Passenger, Lama (brig) (1835).

John Horapapa, who signed on with the HBC in 1834 in Oahu, should not have joined the fur trade as he was in an advanced state of venereal disease. By 1835 he was working at Fort McLoughlin where Dr. Tolmie tried to cure sores on his leg but with only partial success. By September 12 of that year the sores returned, and he was replaced at the fort and taken aboard the brig Lama. As the ship steamed down the east coast of Vancouver Island, Horapapa's condition grew worse and he began to cough up blood. Medicines had no effect, and on September 22 he died somewhere in the vicinity of Cape Flattery. As they couldn't bury him on shore, he was given a sailor's burial at sea and what little clothes he had were nailed up in his chest to go on to the Columbia River.

PS: HBCA FtSimp[N]PJ 3; YFASA 14-15; YFDS 5c-6; FtVanASA 3 PPS: Work, The Journal of John Work, January, p. 81-82

Horatoshan, Francois Xavier [standard: François] (fl. 1818) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: possibly Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Employee, Pacific slopes (1818).

François Xavier Horatoshan joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] on January 1, 1817 for three years as a wintering middleman. He crossed the Rockies onto the Pacific slopes in 1818 in a group led by Angus Bethune and James McMillan. As he did not appear on record again, he likely returned as a member of the cross-country brigade.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 2

Horie, John (fl. 1851 - 1858) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably St. Ola, Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Sponsored settler, Fort Victoria general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1852 - 1854); Assistant blacksmith, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1856); Blacksmith, Fort Victoria (1856 - 1858).

John Horie came to the Pacific Coast as an HBC sponsored settler in the capacity of agricultural labourer and, later, blacksmith. He arrived at Fort Victoria on October 30, 1851 aboard the Norman Morison and worked through his seven year contract as a blacksmith at Fort Victoria. Some time after the end of his contract, he became a farmer in the Lake District. He appears to have left the area before 1881.

PS: HBCA log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-5

Horie, Simon [variation: Hourie] (c. 1819 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Kirkwall, Orkney - c. 1819

Death: probably Orkney, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1843); Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1844 - 1845); Labourer, Willamette (1845 - 1847); Labourer, Willamette Falls (1847 - 1848); Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1848).

Simon Horie joined the HBC from Sandwick, Orkney, in 1843 on a five-year contract likely so he could secure capital. He sailed from Stromness to York Factory and made his way to the Pacific Northwest where he worked south of Fort Vancouver in the Willamette Falls area. After working for about three years, he left at the end of his contract, returning to the British Isles on the Prince Rupert. After Horie returned to Orkney he married; on February 8, 1849 in Sandwick, he married Elizabeth Peace (c.1818-?), from Eday. In 1851 they were living in "Westfield", Sandwick where he was working as a farm servant.

PS: IGI File, Orkney; HBCA log of Prince Rupert V 3, 9; YFASA 24-28; Ork A OPR; 1851 U.K. Census, Orkney-Sandwick

Horn, William [variation: Horne] (fl. 1846 - 1848) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1848).

William Horne shipped on with the HBC vessel Columbia in London on September 29, 1845 and made one return voyage to the Pacific Coast. He arrived back in England in the spring of 1848.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 26-27

Hornby, A. (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

A. Hornby made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Horne, Adam Grant [variation: Horn] (1831 - 1901) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Edinburgh, Scotland - 1829 (born to Henry Horne and Janet Grant)

Death: Nanaimo, British Columbia - August 1901

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1853); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1851 - 1853); Labourer, Nanaimo (1853 - 1855); Storekeeper, Nanaimo (1856 - 1863); IND. Storekeeper, Nanaimo (1863 - 1865); HBC Clerk, Fort Simpson (1865); In charge, Comox (1872 - 1877); IND. Storekeeper, Nanaimo (1878 - 1893).

Adam Grant Horne, an impressive looking six foot three inch [1.9 m] two hundred pound [90.7 kg] Scot, was recruited by Edward Clouston in Orkney to sign up with the HBC in 1851 as a labourer. He arrived in Victoria on May 14, 1851 aboard the Tory (sharing a steerage cabin with William Isbister, Thomas Smith, James Stove, John Malcolm and Robert Firth). In March 1853, he and five others were sent to Nanaimo on the Recovery to begin work at the Nanaimo coal mines although Grant may have begun to work at the HBC store at this time. In 1855-1856 he volunteered for expeditions from Nanaimo. For example, he went to Qualicum, where he witnessed the massacre of some local natives by marauding Haida, and to the head of Alberni Inlet, initiating HBC trade with the local Nuu-chah-nulth there. For the next six years, he ran the HBC store in Nanaimo until the HBC sold out to the Vancouver Coal Mining and Land Company and then, for two years, his own store which he built on the Nanaimo waterfront. In 1865 he rejoined the HBC and ran the Port Simpson trading post for a number of years and, subsequently, ran the Comox post until it closed. He was discharged from the HBC on November 30, 1877 and between 1879-1893 ran his own store on Victoria Crescent in Nanaimo until it failed. In 1886 he was an alderman and was active in community affairs. He died in Nanaimo at the age of seventy-two.

Adam Grant Horne had one wife and eleven children. On February 20, 1859, he married Elizabeth Bate (c.1841-1905) of England, the sister of Mark Bate, the mayor of Nanaimo. Eight of their children were Adam Henry (c.1860-?), Ann Elizabeth (c.1862-?), Sarah M.S. (c.1867-?), Herbert Lewis (c.1869-?), Thomas Charles (c.1871-?), Emily M (c.1874-?), David William (c.1878-1884) and George (1881-?). Elizabeth [Bate] Horne died July 6, 1905.

Horne Lake, which Adam Grant Horne encountered in 1856, is named after him. A lane in Nanaimo was named after him on March 24, 1995.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1, 12-15; FtVicCB 7; HBCABio; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver District, Nanaimo and Nanoose Bay sub district; Van-PL Colonist, March 27, 1966, p. 4, November 25, 1973, p. 4-5; BCA Nanaimo Free, July 30, 1879 p. 3, Aug. 16, 1884 p. 3; Nanaimo baptisms (complete citation??); PJ NanJ; PJ NanCorr SS: Walbran, p. 249-250; Akrigg & Helen, p. 81-83; B.C. Historical News, vol XXVIII, No. 3, Summer 1995, p. 35; Paterson, "British Columbia Answer", p. 4-5; Norcross, Nanaimo Retrospective, p. 18-21; IGI file

Horne, Joseph (c. 1822 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England - c. 1822

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1840); Apprentice, Cowlitz (barque) (1840 - 1842); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1842 - 1844); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1844 - 1846); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1846 - 1847); Seaman, Mary Dare (brigantine) (1847 - 1849).

Joseph Horne joined the HBC before 1837 as an apprentice and worked through his apprenticeship on coastal and supply vessels. On May 10, 1844, while the Cadboro was at Fort Vancouver, seaman Horne and fellow crew member George Robertson were ordered to fill the hold with a consignment of liquor. Instead, the two broke into the cargo and, by three p.m., both were thoroughly intoxicated. The two were put in irons until May 15 when they, along with William Campbell, were assigned to the barque Columbia which sailed to the British Isles. Horne, however, returned to the coast and, on February 20, 1847, he and four fellow crew members refused to work under the mate William Mouat, who in turn was forced to leave the ship by Captain James Scarborough and sent to Fort Vancouver. On October 29, 1847, when Horne's boss was assigned to the brig Mary Dare, Horne moved with him (on November 1, 1847) to the new assignment. Horne's contract was to have ended in 1850 but on August 20, 1849, he deserted, probably for the gold fields of California. A Joseph Horne reappeared and worked sporadically for the HBC between 1859-1863.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-8; log of Nereide 2; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 19, 24, 26-29; YFDS 10, 17-18, 20; log of Cowlitz 1; log of Cadboro 5, 6; log of Columbia 7; PortB 1

Hotesse, Etienne (fl. 1816) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada

Fur trade employee

NWC Steersman, Pacific slopes (1816).

Etienne Hotesse joined the NWC [McTavish, McGillivray & Co.] to work at Fort William as a steersman. The following year he was likely part of the brigade to the Pacific slopes and may have returned more than once.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA NWCAB 1

Houle, Barthelemie (c. 1814 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1814

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1832 - 1835).

Barthelemie Houle joined the HBC from Montreal in 1832 and likely returned to Canada in 1835.

PS: HBCA YFASA 12-14; YFDS 5a-5c

Houston, John [variation: Hourston] (fl. 1853 - 1854) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (brigantine) (1852 - 1853).

John Houston joined the HBC in London on June 24, 1852 and sailed to the coast on the Vancouver. He probably stayed with the vessel until it came to grief on Rose Spit in August 1853 and made his way back to London on an untraced vessel.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1-2

Howard, Thomas (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman or labourer, Otter (steamer) (1853 - 1854).

It is uncertain how Thomas Howard reached Vancouver Island but he worked briefly on the HBC steamer Otter after it had reached the Coast. (By 1860, a John Thomas Howard owned some lots in Esquimalt. This is possibly the same person.)

Howard, William (fl. 1844 - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Steward, Columbia (barque) (1844 - 1845).

William Howard appeared in the Columbia on the barque Columbia in outfit 1844-1845 as a steward with a contract that ended in 1847 and returned to the British Isles on the same vessel.

PS: HBCA YFASA 24

Howse, James (fl. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

James Howse worked as a seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

Howse, Joseph (1773 - 1852) (British: English)

Birth: Cirencester, Gloucestershire, England - 1773

Death: Cirencester, Gloucestershire, England - 1852

Fur trade officer

HBC Chief Trader, Fort Howse [Howse House] (1810 - 1811).

Joseph Howse's claim to fame was that he was the first officer of the HBC to establish a Company presence, albeit short-lived, on the Pacific slopes. In 1795, at the age of twenty-one, Howse signed on with the HBC as a writer coming to Hudson Bay that year. For the next fifteen years he rose through the ranks and was stationed at a variety of posts east of the Rockies. In the summer of 1809, Howse and two men made a preliminary journey into the Rocky Mountains and upon their return, met David Thompson on his way to the Columbia. After spending 1809-1810 at Edmonton House, Howse set out on June 20, 1810 with seventeen servants and four natives for the Columbia. The group cut through a pass which had been previously used by Thompson in 1807 but now bears Howse's name. He ascended the Columbia and went down the Kootenay River, crossed to Flathead River and built a wintering post probably near the present town of Kalispell, Montana but the exact location cannot be determined as he did not have astronomical instruments. During the winter, he struck out back over the Continental Divide with a couple of men for the headwaters of the Missouri, returned to their Kalispel post and finally made their way back to the Saskatchewan that summer. By December 12, 1811, he was in Kingston, Upper Canada, for there he wrote a will leaving all his money to his nieces and nephews. From that point on, he sailed back and forth to England, rose up through the ranks, became embroiled in the HBC/NWC conflict, and retired to England in 1815. He became a Fellow of the Royal Geographic Society.

Publication: In 1844, Howse published A Grammar of the Cree Language with which is Combined an Analysis of the Chippeway Dialect.

PS: HBCA Wills; HBCA Joseph Howse search file PPS: HBRS II, [bio] p. 221-23

Hoy, Cornelius (fl. 1817) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

NWC Untraced vocation, Pacific slopes (1817).

Cornelius Hoy came west over the Rockies with Joseph LaRocque in 1817.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 2

Hubbard, Thomas Jefferson [variation: Hubbert] (1806 - 1877) (American)

Birth: New York State, United States - 1806

Death: Umatilla County, Oregon State, United States - April 24, 1877

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Member, Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company (1834); Gunsmith, Fort William [Sauve Island, OR] (1834 - 1835); HBC Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1835 - 1836).

Thomas Jefferson Hubbard is more famous for his case of justifiable homicide and the jury that brought the verdict than anything else. After Hubbard came to the Oregon Territory with Wyeth's second expedition in 1834, he was employed as a gunsmith as Fort William [Sauvie Island]. It was there on July 4th, 1835 (as part of a love triangle) that he shot a Mr. Thornburg, the Wyeth expedition's alcoholic tailor - much to everyone's relief. Thornburg's troublesome behaviour and alcoholism were so bad that he drank the alcohol from the naturalist John Townsend's reptile specimen bottle; also, he had once been intimate with Hubbard's native girlfriend. When he entered Hubbard's room with a loaded gun and knife, Hubbard shot him. Hubbard was exonerated by a coroner's jury. In 1837 he was operating a farm and blacksmith shop in the Willamette Valley with James A. O'Neil, another Wyeth man. In April 1840 he shared his house with Calvin Tibbets before the latter followed his friend Solomon H. Smith to Clatsop Plains. In 1842 he appeared to be running a productive farm on sixty enclosed acres [24.3 ha] and in August 1845 he went to the Hawaiian Islands on the brig Chenamus. When he returned he eventually settled down in the Yamhill area where he built a sawmill. In 1857 he moved to eastern Oregon where he died in 1877 (Hussey, p.83-85).

In 1837 Thomas Jefferson Hubbard was married by Jason Lee to Mary Sommata in Pierre Bellique's family house in Champoege.

PS: HBCA YFASA 15; YFDS 6, 10; OHS 1842 Census PPS: Townsend, "Narrative of a Journey across the Rocky Mountains", p. 323-25 SS: Brosnan, "The Signers", p. 183; Hussey: Champoege: Place of, [biography] p. 83-85; Holman, p. 114

Hubert, Francois Xavier [standard: François] (c. 1806 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1806

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Colville (1842 - 1848); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1849 - 1850); Middleman, Fort Colville (1850 - 1852).

François Hubert joined the HBC from Canada in 1837, and first appeared in the Columbia in 1843 on a contract that ended in 1845. In outfit 1848-1849 he received his wages in England. In the next outfit, he was at Fort Colville and retired in 1852.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 7-9; YFASA 24-32

Hubert, Joachim (c. 1795 - 1873) (Canadian: French or Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1795 (born to Ignace Hubert and Marguerite Charlot Charles)

Death: French Prairie [Willamette], Oregon - 1873

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1821 - 1822); Middleman, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Middleman, Snake Party (1824 - 1825); Middleman, Columbia Department (1825 - 1826); Middleman, Fort Colville (1826 - 1831); Servant to F. Heron, Fort Colville (1831 - 1832); Cook, Fort Colville (1832 - 1833); Servant to A. McDonald, Fort Colville (1833 - 1835); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1835 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Colville (1837 - 1842); Settler, Willamette (1842 - 1843+).

Joachim Hubert first joined the NWC [Roderick McKenzie] on October 1, 1814 to work at Michillimacinac as a middleman. Just when he came to the Pacific slopes has not been traced but it may have been around the time he transferred to the HBC, 1821, the time of coalition. He worked as a middleman at Fort Colville for seventeen years, part of which was acting as a personal servant. In 1842, he retired to French Prairie in the Willamette Valley and in the 1850 Census he was listed as Beadle, or church usher, in Marion Co.

While in Fort Colville Joachim Hubert married Josephthe Kanhopitsa (des Chaudieres) (1797-1848), who had born one child, Josephthe (c.1813-?) to John Clark and one child, Jean Baptiste (c.1819-?) to Jean Boucher. The Hubert marriage was formalized on August 2, 1842 and together they had nine more children. Recorded Hubert children were Lisette (c.1826-?), André (c.1828-?), Joseph (c.1831-?), Isabelle Elizabeth II (c.1833-?), Marie Archange (c.1835-?), Rosalie (c.1839-?), Adele (c.1841-?), Joseph (1842-?) and Louis (1844-?). Josephthe was buried at St. Louis, Oregon under the name Adelaide Hubert on January 8, 1848.

PS: SHdeSB Liste; HBCA FtGeo[Ast]AB 4; YFASA 1-9, 11-15, 19-20, 24; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-7; SnkCoP] 2; HBCABio; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion County PPS: CCR 1a, 2a, 3a
See Also: Felix , Antoine (Son-in-Law); Boucher, Jean Baptiste (Relative)

Hudson, William (fl. 1851 - 1854) (British: English)

Birth: probably England

Maritime employee

HBC Visitor, Fort Nisqually (1851 - 1852); Seaman, Recovery (brig) (1852); Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1853).

William Hudson worked for the HBC for a short time on the coast. He was in the area in 1851-1852 when he visited Fort Nisqually. He became a seaman on the Company's vessel Recovery, when, on November 1, 1852, along with fellow crew members Zachariah Cathrick, Edward James and Thomas Morrow, he deserted. He returned north and worked as a labourer on the Otter the following year. Hudson stayed in the area and settled on the north end of Saltspring Island, as a neighbour to former HBC employees, Henry Sampson and James McFadden. There Hudson raised a family and grew very fragrant white roses. He was not in the area in 1881 and the time and place of his death have not been established.

William Hudson appears to have had an unnamed Kwantlen wife and two recorded children, Marianne (?-bap.1856-?), who was baptised at Fort Langley, and James Albert (1864-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; FtVicDS 1; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-2; BCA BCCR-StAndC SS: Walter, p. 25

Huggins, Edward (1832 - 1907) (British: English)

Birth: London, England - June 1832 (born to Edward Huggins and Ellen [Chipp] Huggins)

Death: Tacoma, Washington - January 1907

Fur trade employee

PSAC Apprentice clerk, Fort Nisqually (1850 - 1852); Apprentice clerk, Fort Nisqually (1852 - 1853); Apprentice clerk, Cowlitz (1852 - 1853); Post master, Fort Nisqually (1853 - 1855); Apprentice clerk, Fort Nisqually (1853 - 1855); Clerk in charge, Fort Nisqually (1855 - 1859); Clerk, Fort Nisqually (1859 - 1869).

Edward Huggins was the last clerk at Fort Nisqually and a chronicler of the history of the area. Huggins worked in a ship broker's office before, as a seventeen-year-old, he was taken on by the HBC in 1849 as a Vancouver Island settler, purchasing an Island lot before he sailed in October. After his arrival on the Norman Morrison on March 25, 1850, and because a large number of personnel had deserted from Columbia forts, Huggins was engaged as a clerk at Fort Nisqually, arriving April 13, 1850. He spent the rest of his career there working for PSAC becoming part of the management of nine thousand sheep and over 6700 cattle, many of which had become wild and destructive and had to be hunted down. During much of the 1855-1856 Indian War and for some years after, he worked at Muck Station, a PSAC farm near the present day site of Roy, Washington. He worked until 1869, gaining an intimate knowledge of the local trading language as well as the operations of the Company and people of the area. He wanted to continue employment with the HBC but, on April 16, 1870, rather than be transferred to the more primitive Kamloops, retired from the service on May 14 of that year and became a citizen of the U.S. in October. He then became the principal buyer of PSAC property at Nisqually, which was auctioned off by the Company. In 1886 (1884?) he was elected Commissioner and Auditor of Pierce Co. and was an officer of the National Bank of Commerce of Tacoma, Washington. Around 1900 he founded the Washington Historical Society. In his later years he wrote extensively about his experiences. He died in 1907 at the home of his son Thomas.

At the time of this writing, his farm orchard can be seen at the Fort Nisqually site #2. As an additional legacy he left hundreds of letters around the State of Washington, some of which are still being catalogued.

Edward Huggins had one wife and nine children. On October 21, 1857, he married Letitia Work (1831-1910), daughter of John Work. Their children were William (1858-1918), Edward Jr. (1860-1886), John Work (1862-1929) Thomas, (1863-1933), Helen/Ellen Suzette (1865-1868), David Work (1868-1931), Henry Ellsworth (1871-?), Joseph (?-?) and Katherine (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVanASA 9-17; FtVicASA 9-17; HBCABio; HBCA Edward Huggins search file; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis County; OHS SB# 81, p. 160; James Douglas' April 16, 1851 Fort Victoria letter to Archibald Barclay, London, A.11/73, fos. 104-107d; Citizenship, October 25, 1870, Pierce Co. District Court; WSA Tacoma, Jan. 25, 1907; Tacoma Cemetery Records PPS: Huggins, "Reminiscences of Puget"
See Also: Work, John (Father-in-Law)

Hugham, David [variation: Hughan] (fl. 1851 - 1855) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria general charges (1851 - 1852); Boatswain, Recovery (brig) (1852 - 1853); Boatswain, Beaver (steamer) (1853 - 1855).

David Hugham came out to the coast as seaman on the HBC barque Norman Morison, leaving England on May 28, 1851 and arriving at Fort Victoria on October 30 of that year. After his arrival he transferred to coastal shipping where he worked until 1855.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-3

Hughes, Edward (fl. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

Edward Hughes worked as a seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast.

Hughes, Frederick (fl. 1828) (British: Welsh)

Birth: probably Abersnith, Cardigan, Wales

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia Department (1828).

Frederick Hughes joined the HBC on September 6, 1828 as a seaman for three years. He was assigned to service the Columbia River but did not appear on the Columbia Department abstracts.

PS: HBCA HBCCont

Hughes, John (fl. 1831) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near Liverpool, Lancaster, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Eagle (brig) (1831 - 1832).

John Hughes joined the HBC on September 24, 1831 as a seaman for three years. He sailed to the Columbia on the brig Eagle, returning to England on the same ship.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; YFDS 5a

Hughson, Andrew (1830 - ?) (British: Shetlander)

Birth: Shetland Islands, United Kingdom - September 1830 (born to Andrew Henry and Sarah Henry)

Death: possibly Colville Valley, Pacific Northwest

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1852 - 1853).

Andrew Hughson received a good education in Shetland and worked for his father until he was nineteen years of age at which point, around 1849, he joined the HBC on a contract that was to end in 1854. He came overland to Fort Vancouver. He retired in 1853 from Fort Vancouver and went to California for four years. Hughson returned to Colville, which he had earlier passed through, and homesteaded two miles south of Colville, becoming a staunch Democrat and County Commissioner in 1873.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-10 SS: Hnes, The History of North Washington, p. 291

Hughway, George [variation: Highway] (1852 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1858).

George Hughway first made HBC runs to Hudson Bay before he came to Vancouver Island on the HBC steamer Otter. He was more than conscious of his role as a seaman, for even though the stokers were ill and the ship ran on coal, Hughway, along with Robert Weinbourne refused to shovel coal as it was not their duty. Nonetheless, after its arrival in August 1853, Hughway stayed with the vessel for another five years as it travelled the coast from Fort Simpson to San Francisco. As George Hughway has not been traced beyond 1858, he may have shipped out on another vessel at that date.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Otter 1; FtVicASA 1-5

Hume, Thomas (fl. 1832 - 1834) (British: English)

Birth: probably in or near St. George, Middlesex, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1831 - 1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

Thomas Hume signed on with the HBC in London on November 20, 1830 for three years. He reached the Columbia on the barque Ganymede and began work on the Vancouver November 1, 1831. After two years, he re-boarded the barque Ganymede for his return voyage to England.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 7, 14; YFDS 4b-5b; log of Ganymede 1; YFASA 12-13

Humphreys, Charles [variation: Humphrey] (c. 1811 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: possibly Stromness, Orkney (born to George Humphrey and Margaret Allen)

Death: possibly British IslesMaritime officer

HBC Ship's master, Columbia (barque) (1837 - 1844); Ship's master, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1845); Passenger, Cowlitz (barque) (1845 - 1846).

Charles Humphreys appeared to meet his nemesis in the form of the fur trade, although a career at sea seemed natural for one raised in a large family of ten children in Stromness in a large waterfront house purchased or rented by his teacher father. Initially, Humphreys joined the HBC in the spring of 1833 as a seaman on the Prince of Wales which became icebound that winter at Charlton Island, Hudson Bay, resulting in the death of the captain and first mate. (By coincidence, in the 1830s the family's waterfront Stromness home became a hospital, containing twenty-six patients, all part of the surviving whalers whose twenty ships had become crushed in the Arctic ice.) He went on more runs to Hudson Bay but his appointment as master of the Columbia on November 17, 1837 brought him to the Northwest Coast. Nonetheless, by 1842 complaints of drunkenness and fits of meanness came before the London Committee which accepted Humphreys' apologies and excuses. Matters worsened in 1844, however, when Humphreys found that his first mate was Alexander Lattey, whom he had dismissed two years previously in Honolulu but who had been reinstated by George Simpson. As a result, Humphreys dismissed Lattey on the Beaver's arrival at Port Simpson in January 1845 and took on all the responsibilities of trading with the natives. Consequently, Humphreys' health broke down and he began making irrational decisions. Fearing that Humphreys had become deranged, John Work, Chief Trader in charge of Fort Simpson, replaced him with Charles Dodd, who took command of the Beaver. A broken Humphreys was put on the Cowlitz in the fall of 1845 for its voyage to England. On March 11, 1846 between Oahu and London after several fits of drunkenness, he tried to commit suicide by taking laudanum [opium]. He convulsed and showed the usual signs of poisoning but did not die; first mate James Cooper then took charge of the vessel. He reached England and on November 4, 1846, his mother tried unsuccessfully to solicit his reinstatement. Humphreys attempted to get a job with the Oriental Navigation Company but he was unsuccessful. He married around 1842.

Charles' younger brother Thomas fared much better than he did. Thomas made a fortune in Nova Scotia and left a bequest "for the benefit of the poor or destitute children of...Stromness for educational or other benevolent purposes" (OrkA Humphrey). A nephew, James Humphrey of Boston, disputed the will claiming the money should have gone to him.

Five family letters, written from Stromness and Halifax to Charles, rest in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 10, 11; log of Eagle 3; FtVanASA 5-8; log of Columbia 4, 6, 7; YFASA 20-21, 24-25; YFDS 11, 16; FtVanCB 28, 30, 33; log of Cowlitz 5; ShMiscPap 4a; MiscI 5; OrkA Humphrey PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 103-15; ChSoc VI, p. 391-92 SS: Pethick, S.S. Beaver, p. 54

Humphreys, John (c. 1810/21 - 1905) (British: English)

Birth: Kent, England - c. June 1810 or 1821

Death: probably Cowichan, Vancouver Island - 1905

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

After signing on with the HBC, John Humphreys sailed with 120 passengers, many of them coal miners, to Vancouver Island on the Tory, arriving June, 1851. He worked for the Company for about two years until about 1853 and carried on transactions with the Company, or did casual labour for them, for three more years. Around 1856 he settled in the Cowichan area on Quamichan Lake (his native wife's birthplace) and pre-empted land there on June 24, 1863. Some time, during this period, he seems to have played the role of hangman, making use of a large oak tree in the village. He himself died in 1905.

John Humphreys appears to have had one wife, Amelia (c.1833-1876), Cowichan, daughter of the Quamichan's chief, and seven recorded children. Their children were Anne (c.1852-?), Elizabeth (c.1856-?), Caroline (c.1864-1870), John Jr. (c.1866-?), Lucy (c.1868-1870), Thomas William (c.1871-?) and Esther (1874-?). Amelia Humphreys died January 31, 1876, aged forty-one.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-31; log of Beaver 1; FtVicASA 1-2; BCA BCCR StAndC; BCCR StPetCow; BCGR-Pre-Emption; Van-PL 1881, 1891, 1901 Canada Census, Vancouver/Cowichan sub district; BCR AndersonJR SS: Norcross, The Warm Land, p. 98

Hunt, Edward (fl. 1842 - 1846) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Vancouver (barque) (1842 - 1843); Apprentice, Columbia (barque) (1843 - 1844); Apprentice, Cowlitz (barque) (1844 - 1845); Apprentice, Columbia Department (1845 - 1846).

Edward Hunt signed on with the HBC in Oahu (probably in 1842) and was discharged there four years later. As his origin is unknown, he may have been European, Polynesian or of mixed descent.

Hunt, Robert (1827 - 1893) (British: English)

Birth: Dorset, England - 1827

Death: Fort Rupert, British Columbia – spring of 1893

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1850 - 1867); Labourer, Fort Rupert (1867 - 1868); Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1867 - 1868); Post master, Otter (steamer) and Nass River (1868 - 1871); Post master, Fort Rupert (1871 - 1882).

Robert Hunt joined the HBC in 1849 and sailed from London on October 18, 1849 to Vancouver Island on the Norman Morrison [David Wishart], arriving at Victoria on March 25, 1850. Hunt, who probably had been married and widowed in England, then sailed on the Cowlitz to Fort Rupert where he spent the majority of his career. In 1882 Fort Rupert closed, but the land was bought by Hunt and, in 1885, Fort Rupert land was transferred to him. He then ran the store and, in 1889, part of the fort burnt to the ground. Two years later, Hunt had a seven-room house constructed with fence and veranda. Robert Hunt died in the spring of 1893 at Fort Rupert and was buried there. Hunt's wife, the daughter of a Tlingit chief, made Chilcat blankets for her children, including them as dowry for her daughters who married natives.

Robert Hunt had one wife at Fort Rupert and eleven children. His wife, Mary Ebbets/Ansnaq/Anislaga (c.1823-?), a Tlingit native, bore him eleven children. They were Emily (?-?), George (c.1854-?), Annie (c.1856-?), Mary (?-?), Mary (?-?), Eli/Elias (1867-?), William (c.1858-?), Elizabeth (c.1870-?), Sarah (1871-?), Jane (c.1873-?) and Robert (1876-1896).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-16; HBCABio PPS: Barbeau, p. 651, 654 SS: Mouat, p. 213; P. M. Johnson, "Fort Rupert," p. 13-15; Robert Hunt descendant

Hunt, Wilson Price (1783 - 1842) (American)

Birth: Asbury, New Jersey, United States - March 20, 1783 (born to John Hunt and Margaret Hunt)

Death: St. Louis, Missouri – April 13, 1842

Fur trade employee

PFC Leader, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1810 - 1812).

Wilson Price Hunt is best known for the harrowing, though somewhat mismanaged, Astorian expedition he led from Michilimackinac to the mouth of the Columbia. In 1804 at the age of twenty-one, Hunt went to St. Louis and opened up a store. In 1809, after being invited by John Jacob Astor to join the fur trade, he went to New York and then Montreal to recruit fur traders for his overland expedition. In June 1810 the PFC was formed and in the summer the land expedition under Hunt set out from Michilimackinac. That September the Tonquin set out around the Horn. The overlanders went to St. Louis, and up the Missouri to the mouth of the Nodaway River where they wintered. There they were joined by Robert McClellan and John Day. Hunt returned to St. Louis to replace those who had deserted. Back to full strength, he headed out again on April 21, 1811. Suffering more desertions, he picked up wandering hunters to replace them. A fateful decision was made when they reached a deserted Henry's Fort and found cottonwood trees large enough to make canoes; they released their horses and took to the unstable canoes to paddle down the Snake River. When they soon realized their error, the company split up into five groups headed by Hunt (twenty-one men), partner Ramsey Crooks (twenty men), partner Donald McKenzie (five men), partner Robert McClellan (four men) and clerk John Reed (four men). They all encountered varying degrees of hardships and eventually struggled into Astoria. Hunt arrived February 15, 1812. He went north to Sitka to secure Russian furs which were sold in Canton. In Oahu, he chartered the Albatross for Astoria but arrived in April only to find the partners ready to abandon the enterprise. Hunt left on the Albatross to find another ship that would take the furs. When he was gone, Duncan McDougall, fearing the seizure by a British man-of-war, sold the Fort and contents to the NWC. When Hunt returned at the end of February, 1814 on the Pedler which he had bought in Hawaii, he found that the sale had already been made. Hunt eventually sailed home, being arrested by both the Spanish and Russians, taking two years of trading and sailing to reach New York in October 1816. He returned to St. Louis in 1817, was appointed postmaster in 1822, received a land grant in July 1825, and in 1836 married the widow of his cousin.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; MHS Chouteau PPS: ChSoc XLV, p. 16-18, 21, 24-27, 43, 44, 108-09, 115, 121-23, 128, 144-45; ChSoc LVII, 1992, p. 688, 688n, 689, 691-95, 698, 702; A. Ross, Adventures, p. 171; Hunt PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 108 SS: Brandon, p. 57-78; DAB Ghent; Irving, Astoria, p. 103-294; Lang, p. 157-64

Hunter, Andrew [b] (fl. 1850 - 1854) (probably British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Shetland Islands, United Kingdom

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851); Labourer, New Caledonia general charges (1851 - 1852); Untraced vocation, Thompson River (1852 - 1853); Middleman, Thompson River (1853 - 1854).

Andrew Hunter [b], worked for the HBC for about four years.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-3

Hunter, James (? - 1852) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Shetland Islands, United Kingdom

Death: New Caledonia area [British Columbia] - January 1852

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia general charges (1851 - 1852).

James Hunter appears to have had a short career with the HBC. He first appeared in the Columbia Department in outfit 1851-1852. In January, 1852 he was killed by a falling tree.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1

Hunter, John [b] (? - 1866) (Mixed descent)

Birth: possibly Muskingo, Red River [Manitoba]

Death: probably New Caledonia - October 22, 1866

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1852 - 1853); Labourer, New Caledonia (1853 - 1854); Middleman, New Caledonia (1854 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, New Caledonia (1861 - 1866).

John Hunter, with the alias of "Bully", began work for the HBC in the Columbia on August 1, 1852. Reasons for his nickname have not been traced. He died October 22, 1866, presumably in the New Caledonia area, and his family appeared to carry on transactions with the company for three more years.

John Hunter had one recorded wife, an unnamed woman from Bear Lake. Their children were Charles (c.1863-?), Margaret (c.1865-?) and Anne (c.1867-?).

PS: HBCA FtVicDS 1; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-16; BCA BCCR StPetStLk

Huntow, Peter [variation: Hontow, Hunter] (fl. 1845 - 1849) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Stromness, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1844); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1846 - 1849); Carpenter, Fort Vancouver depot (1849).

Peter Huntow joined the HBC from Stromness in 1844 on a five-year contract. Upon his retirement, on September 1, 1849, he likely went to the gold fields of California.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-29; YFDS 20; FtVanASA 9

Hus, Louis Paul (c. 1799 - 1831) (probably Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1799

Death: probably New Caledonia [British Columbia] - May 1831

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, New Caledonia (1824 - 1831).

Louis Paul Hus worked for seven years as a steersman for the HBC in New Caledonia. He drowned May 6, 1831 at an unknown location. According to family correspondence with the HBCA, he married a Pend D'Orielle woman and had a daughter Catherine (c.1837-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 4-9, 11; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1-2; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b; HBCA family correspondence

Hus, Paul Emanuel (? - 1839) (Undetermined origin)

Death: possibly on the steamer Beaver - July 1839

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Columbia Department general charges (1837 - 1838); Woodcutter, Beaver (steamer) (1839).

Paul Emanuel Hus joined the HBC in 1837 and had a very short career as he died July 27, 1839. His contract would have ended in 1840.

PS: HBCA YFASA 17, 19

Hutchins, Samuel (fl. 1825 - 1826) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

MW Armorer, Convoy (brig) (1824 - 1825).

Samuel Hutchins shipped aboard the Convoy [William Henry McNeill] in Boston as an armourer before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. Hutchins and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu November 2nd. It is not known whether he continued to sail with the Convoy back to the Northwest Coast for the 1826-1827 trading seasons.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Hutson, William Abraham [variation: Houston] (c. 1825 - 1905) (British: English)

Birth: England - c. 1825

Death: Tacoma, Washington - March 1905

Fur trade employee

HBC Immigrant passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852).

William Hutson, who in later life went by the name of Houston, came to Vancouver Island as a HBC servant settler on the Tory. After his arrival at Fort Victoria on May 9, 1851, he worked for an outfit for the Company, paying off his passage. He carried on transactions with the Company until 1857 and, according to his later reports, was a valet to James Douglas. By 1873, he was living on Salt Spring Island. By 1881 he was still farming but was single once again, and when he retired from farming, moved to Tacoma where he died in 1905.

On October 29, 1873 in Victoria, William Abraham Hutson, of Salt Spring Island married Catherine Costello (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-2, 4; BCA BCCR CCCath; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Cowichan-Salt Spring Island; The Victoria Times, p. 5

Hynds, John (fl. 1834 - 1835) (probably American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Employee, Fort Hall (1834 - 1835).

John Hynds joined the Nathaniel J. Wyeth expedition of 1834 as part of a group to establish the Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company on the Pacific slopes to function in opposition to the HBC. Hynds, who may have joined the expedition en route, left the expedition on the upper Snake River, near the mouth of the Portneuf River, to build a CRFTC trading post which they called Fort Hall, after one of the directors of the company. A stockade was built in the summer of 1834 and a total of twelve men stayed to winter over. Hynds may have gone out on hunting parties that fall and winter and may have departed for an unknown location in the summer of 1835. He has not been further traced.

PS: OHS FtHallAB SS: O. Russell, p. 157

Iasitayerie, Alexis (fl. 1850 - 1852) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1852).

Alexis Iasitayerie worked for the HBC at Fort Victoria. He may also have worked at Fort Langley.

PS: HBCA YFDS 21-22

Iaukeo [variation: Ioukeo, W. Iaukeo] (fl. 1845 - 1855) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845 - 1846); Labourer, Snake Party (1846 - 1847); Labourer, Snake Country (1847 - 1851); Labourer, Snake Country (1853 - 1855).

Iaukeo joined the HBC from Oahu on May 7, 1845 for three years. He retired on July 20, 1851, remaining in the area of Fort Vancouver, and re-enlisted, retiring once again in 1855. By 1850-1851, he had acquired an initial "W" and so may have used an additional name.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 3; YFASA 25-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-12

Ignace, Jean (fl. 1853 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1853 - 1854).

Jean Ignace may have worked briefly for the HBC in the Western Department.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 9

Ignace, Little (? - 1827) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Death: on the Coos ["Cahouse"] River, Oregon Territory - February 1827

Freeman

HBC Freeman, McLeod's Umpqua Expedition (1826 - 1827).

Little Ignace was a member of McLeod's two southern expeditions in 1826-1827 to the Umpqua and may have been in the area for some time as he had a family in tow. In February 1827 he was in the wrong place at the wrong time. When a local Coos River native accidentally shot himself as he was dragging his canoe, blame was placed on nearby Little Ignace who was executed by the man's relatives. McLeod found that execution was a normal event as the natives had deemed it a wilful act.

PS: FtVanPJ 4 PPS: HBRS v. XXIII:142, 174, 201, 213-214

Inkster, Andrew (fl. 1839 - 1840) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably in or near Hiell (?), Caithness, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1840).

Andrew Inkster joined the HBC on September 17, 1839 and sailed to the Northwest Coast on the Columbia. He had a short career for, after arriving on the coast and while on a short supply run to San Francisco, he deserted at San Leandro on September 11, 1840 on a short run for some tallow.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Columbia 4; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20; FtVanASA 6

Inkster, John [e] (fl. 1848 - 1853) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Rousay, Orkney

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert V (barque) (1847); Labourer, Columbia Department general charges (1848 - 1849); Labourer, Fort Colville (1849 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Colville (1851 - 1852); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1852 - 1853).

John Insker joined the HBC from Orkney on a contract which ended in 1854 and sailed to York Factory. He retired in the Columbia in 1853.

PS: HBCA YFASA 28-32; FtVanASA 9-10; log of Prince Rupert V 8

Innes, Thomas Newman (c. 1813 - 1888) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1813

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - March 1888

Maritime employee

HBC Boatswain, Vancouver (brigantine) (1852 - 1853).

Thomas ("Tommy") Innes joined the HBC in London on June 28, 1852 and sailed to the coast on the Vancouver. He was likely on the vessel when it was wrecked in August 1853 on Rose Spit. This event may have changed his life for he worked off and on for the HBC until around 1855 and settled in Victoria, probably becoming a tailor. He died in the French Hospital after a brief illness at the age of seventy-five.

No family has been traced.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; FtVicASA 1-3; Van-PL Colonist, Mar. 27, 1888

Irvin, Joseph [variation: Irevin, Irwin] (fl. 1837 - 1838) (probably British: English)

Birth: possibly London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Sumatra (barque) (1837); Steward, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1838).

Joseph Irvine joined the HBC in London around February 1837 and came to the coast on the chartered ship, Sumatra. He unsuccessfully attempted to desert at Oahu and, at his own request, was discharged to the Nereide at Fort Vancouver in October. On this latter vessel, he managed to serve along the coast of California before he was discharged in Oahu in 1838.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-5; YFASA 18; ShMiscPap 14; log of Sumatra 1

Irvine, John [1] (fl. 1823 - 1824) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Boy, Lively (brig) (1823 - 1824).

John Irvine [1] had an adventurous character. Described as a little boy, he worked aboard the Lively, a brig chartered by the HBC. On January 3, 1823, he sailed from Table Bay, Cape of Good Hope and rounded the Horn in March. In July he may have witnessed an altercation between the ship's owner and captain, Robert Ritchie and fellow youth William Forbes. He arrived at Fort George on July 15, 1823 and no doubt helped to load the HBC furs onto the ship. However, on August 1, he became restless and absconded with the boat from the ship, returning the following day. He sailed from Fort George on August 6, and on December 30, absconded with the skiff again to shore and likely returned on January 1, before the ship sailed (although he is not recorded as having returned). He probably arrived back in England on March 25, 1824.

PS: HBCA log of Lively 1

Irvine, John [2] (c. 1828 - 1906) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Sandy, Eday, Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1828

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - 1906

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852); Indian trader, Fort Victoria (1852 - 1853); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1853 - 1854); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1854 - 1856); Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1858).

Like so many other Orcadians, John Irvine probably had relatives in the service of the HBC and he saw an opportunity to move with his wife from their Eday village and improve future prospects by going to the new world as a settler and HBC employee. Irvine signed the standard contract for five years, and landed at Vancouver Island on the Tory on May 10, 1851. Little is known of his work for the HBC but his contract ended in 1855 and, in 1857, he purchased 130 acres [52.6 ha] in the Victoria District. In 1862, he was living at Rose Bank, A. C. Anderson's farm in North Saanich. He had purchased 160 acres [64.8 ha] there in 1858. Later they moved to Cedar Hill, where, according to The Colonist, they lived for forty-seven years. During this time, John Irvine spent "over forty years" in the service of the HBC.

John Irvine had one wife, Jesse (c.1821-1907), also from Sandy, Eday, and five children. Four of their children were William (c.1852-?), Christina (c.1857-?), John (c.1863-?) and Maggie (c.1865-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; FtVicASA 1-4; log of Otter 1; BCA AbstLnd; 1862 Victoria Directory p. 2; Van-PL Colonist, March 12, 1907; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Vancouver District, Victoria subdistrict

Irvine, Peter [a] (fl. 1851 - 1857) (British: Shetlander)

Birth: possibly South Yell, Shetland Islands, United Kingdom (born to John Irvine and Christina Mouat)

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Labourer, Fort Colville (1851 - 1855).

Peter Irvine [a] joined the HBC from Shetland on March 7, 1850 on a five-year contract and sailed to York Factory on the Prince of Wales II. After making his way overland, he served out his contract at Fort Colville and left in 1855. He may have returned overland on the brigade and sailed from York Factory to Orkney and then Shetland. If so, he may have re-emigrated to Vancouver Island in 1857, but this cannot be corroborated.

Undelivered Lerwick correspondence to Peter rests in the HBCA. The letter from his parents filled him in on goings on in Shetland. Another, from a desperate Mary Phillips attests her undying love and devotion to Peter.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9-12; FtVicASA 4-8; MiscI 5 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 337-40

Isaac (fl. 1834 - 1839) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

CRFTC Passenger, May Dacre (brig) (1834); Member, Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company (1834 - 1835);

HBC Middleman, Snake Party (1837 - 1839); Passenger and labourer, Nereide (barque) (1838 - 1839).

Isaac was one of twenty Hawaiians who joined Nathaniel J. Wyeth's Columbia River Fishing and Trading Company in Hawaii in 1834 and remained with the company through 1835. Isaac subsequently joined the HBC, probably around 1835, and was working in the Snake Party by October 20, 1837. He probably worked at Fort Hall for two more outfits and left for Oahu on the Nereide on January 1, 1839.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 4-5; YFDS 8; YFASA 18; ShMiscPap 14; OHS FtHallAB PPS: Beidleman, p. 238

Isbister, John Jr. (fl. 1851 - 1852) (Mixed descent)

Fur trade employee

HBC Apprentice tradesman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1851 - 1852); Apprentice tradesman, Fort Vancouver depot (1852).

John Isbister joined the HBC around 1849 on a contract that ended in 1854. He worked out of the Fort Vancouver Depot, but deserted in 1852.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVanASA 9

Itati (fl. 1840 - 1845) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Nez Percés (1840 - 1842); Labourer, Fort Nez Percés (1842 - 1843); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1843 - 1844); Stoker, Beaver (steamer) (1844 - 1845); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1845).

Itati joined the HBC from Oahu in 1840. As his contract ended in 1845, he worked until December 31, 1845, at which point he returned to Hawaii where he was paid off.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20-21, 24, 25; FtVanASA 6-8; SandIsAB 5

Iwakichi [variation: You Akeeche] (c. 1806 - c. 1851) (Japanese)

Birth: probably Onoura, Owari, Japan, Asia - c. 1804

Death: probably Hong Kong, China - c. 1851

Other

HBC Pupil of George Ball, Fort Vancouver (1834).

Iwakichi, a Japanese coastal vessel crewman, came in contact with the fur trade in 1834 as a Fort Vancouver school pupil, but this is only part of his life story. Little did twenty-six year old Iwakichi realize that in December 1832, when in Toba (Shima Province), he boarded the ill-fated coastal vessel Hyojun Maru northward bound for Edo (Tokyo), he would never be allowed back into Japan again. After Iwakichi and thirteen others had boarded the rice and porcelain laden vessel and sailed from Toba and out of sight of its castle into the Totomi-Nada or Enshunada Sea, they encountered a typhoon which caused the ship to lose its rudder. For the next thirteen months, they drifted across the ocean, keeping themselves alive by eating the cargo of rice and whatever fish they could catch. Back in Onoura's Ryosanji Temple, as it was presumed that all had perished, a memorial stone was eventually erected to all fourteen, but three (Iwakichi, Kyukichi, Otokichi) managed to survive the sickness on board before being washed up on the shores fifteen miles [52.6 ha] south of Cape Flattery. There the Makah natives, seeing the vessel in their traditional territory, took full possession of the cargo and enslaved the three surviving crew members. The rescue of the three was delayed for news of the wreck first reached Fort Nisqually on January 29, 1834, but by February 7, 1834, the story was deemed to be a hoax. After the news reached Fort Vancouver, Thomas McKay was sent out on a rescue mission via the Chehalis area but he and his party turned back at Point Grenville. In late May, a paper on which the survivors had scrawled a message in Japanese arrived at Fort Vancouver whereupon McLoughlin instructed his captains to effect a rescue. Finally, by June 9, Wm. H. McNeill on the Lama, on a voyage to Fort Langley, had managed to rescue two by exchanging them for local hostages (who had climbed on board) and the local Makah natives promised to bring the third to the coast to be picked up by the Lama. After they arrived at Fort Vancouver, the three studious and quick learners were put in the fort's school to learn English. (A nine year old Ranald McDonald had become excited by the story but had left the school at Fort Vancouver prior to the arrival of the three Asians to pursue his studies in Red River.) As the fur trade could not accommodate the three Asians at Fort Vancouver, McLoughlin, rather than turning them loose in the Sandwich Islands so that they could work their way back on their own, decided to send them to England so that they could be used by the British government to pry open the trading doors of Japan. However, as the British government was busy trying to stabilize trade with China when the three arrived in England in June, 1835, and wasn't interested in Japan or the plight of the three, the trio were compelled to stay on board for ten days before being given permission to land. Finally, they were given one day ashore, thus becoming very early Japanese tourists to site-see in London, before setting sail for Macao. When they returned to Macao, the three expressed a desire to return to Japan but instead were taken under the wing of German-born missionary and British government official, Karl [Charles] Gützlaff who wished to take Christianity back to Japan - in Japanese. The three got their wish in 1837, when Gützlaff took the three plus four other Japanese castaways on the disarmed U.S. ship Morrison back to Japan. Their hopes were dashed however, for on July 30, 1837 in Edo Bay, the Morrison was fired upon by Japanese shore batteries. As they were also fired upon the following day, they withdrew and sailed for Owari, the home district of the three. However, because of strong winds, they had to withdraw and so sailed to Kyushu where they were at first received kindly and then fired upon. The Morrison then withdrew and Iwakichi and his friends, upon being rejected by their homeland, shaved their heads and renounced Japan as their home. On August 27, 1837, they returned to Macao in permanent exile with the avowed intention of helping other castaway sailors return to Japan. During the 1840s, Iwakichi and Kyukichi worked with Gützlaff and acted as interpreters in Macao and later, Hong Kong. After 1842, Otokichi went on to pursue his career as a trader in Shanghai and Singapore. By 1851, Iwakichi had died and Kyukichi had retired from government service; neither had been able to return to their homeland. (With permission of Stephen W. Kohl.)

PS: FtVanCB 10; ShMiscPap 14 PPS: Dickey; R. MacDonald SS: Kohl, p. 20-28 (Kohl's main sources: Otokichi's story from Akira Haruna's Nippon Otokichi Hyoryuki [An Account of the Castaway Otokichi of Japan], Tokyo, 1979; the first attempted return to Japan found in E. W. King's "Notes on the Voyage of the Morrison from Canton to Japan," The Claims of Japan and Malasia Upon Christendom, Exhibited in Notes of Voyages Made in 1837, New York, 1839; S. Wells Williams, "Narrative of a Voyage of the Ship Morrison," Chinese Repository, vol. 6, 1837, 209-29, 353-80; Gutzlaff's report of the voyage the voyage is found in Foreign Office, China Correspondence, vol. 21, Elliot to Foreign Office, No. 58, Enc. 3, Sept. 4, 1837, Public Records Office [PRO], London; Gilman and Angel, Diary of Cyrus Shepard, p. 67

See Also: Kyukichi

Jack (fl. 1833) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1833).

Jack, a sawmill worker, could possibly be John Jack or Long Jack.

PS: HBCA FtVanCB 9

Jack, John (fl. 1836 - 1837) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Beaver (steamer) (1836); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Middleman, Lama (brig) (1837).

John Jack had a very short career with the HBC, signing on in Oahu in 1836 and taking the Beaver on its maiden outward voyage to the Columbia River. He worked only for a year before being discharged in Oahu again on July 16, 1837.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 1; FtVanASA 3-4; YFDS 7-8; YFASA 17

Jack, Long (fl. 1837 - 1843) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman working at religious missions, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1843).

Long Jack signed on with the HBC in Oahu in July 1837, beginning his work at Fort Vancouver on August 10 of that year. In outfit 1838-1839 he worked with the newly arrived Catholic missionaries Fr. Blanchet and Demers. From April 1839 to early 1841, Jack worked for the Asa Smith Presbyterian mission at Kamiah. During this time, in June 1840, he ran away from the mission to the HBC at Fort Vancouver because he didn't have anyone to talk to in Hawaiian. However, the HBC convinced him to return and, in October 1840, he defended the Smiths against the Nez Percés who ordered them to leave immediately for being on their land. The Smiths could not stand the pressure and soon left. Consequently, in 1841-1842 Jack was transferred to Jason Lee's Methodist mission in the Willamette Valley. He continued to work until 1843 when he likely returned to the Sandwich Islands.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 4-7; YFDS 8-9, 12 PPS: Drury, Diaries and Letters, p. 97-98, 132, 151-52, 192, 196-97

Jack, Robert (fl. 1848 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1850).

Robert Jack joined the Columbia in London on September 6, 1848 and made one return voyage to the coast. After servicing coastal posts and Honolulu, he arrived back in England in spring 1850.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; YFASA 30-31

Jackson, David E. (fl. 1826 - 1830) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade officer

SJ & S Fur trader, Rendezvous (1826 - 1830); Trapper, Rendezvous (1826 - 1830).

It is not certain when David E. Jackson began trapping on the Pacific slopes but he was trapping on the Weiser River in the spring of 1826. At the Rendezvous on July 18th of that year, he, Jedediah Smith and William Sublette formed a partnership that bought out William Ashley. The first year of their operation was successful but then trapping for them went downhill, according to George Simpson. By 1828, as the HBC was more successful at exploiting the Flatheads, Jackson trapped in other areas along with Thomas Fitzpatrick, William Sublette and Joseph Meek. In 1829, Jackson was trapping in the area of Wyoming which now bears his name (and apparently more successfully), and later that year, wintered with Robert Campbell at the American depot on Bear River. At the 1830 Rendezvous, Smith, Jackson and Sublette sold their mountain trapping interests to the partners of Fitzpatrick, James Bridger, Milton Sublette, Henry Fraeb and Jean B. Gervais who joined under the name Rocky Mountain Fur Company. Jackson and his partners made $100,000 from the sale and quit the country.

PS: MHS Campbell PPS: HBRS X, p. 55-56 SS: Chittenden, p. 275, 279-280

Jackson, William [1] (c. 1806 - ?) (probably British)

Birth: Liverpool, Lancashire, England - c. 1806

Maritime employee

U.A. Seaman, Loriot (brig) (1835 - 1836); HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1836 - 1837).

William Jackson sailed on the American brig Loriot before he joined the HBC in Honolulu as a seaman on February 24, 1836 when the Columbia was on its way to the Northwest Coast. After arriving on the coast, he stayed on the boat, making a side-trip to Honolulu. He departed Fort Vancouver in November 1836 but had to leave the vessel in Honolulu on January 3, 1837 as he was too ill to continue the voyage.

PS: HBCA ShMiscPap 4a, 14; log of Columbia 1; FtVanASA 3; YFASA 16

Jackson, William [2] (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

William Jackson made one return voyage to the Coast on the HBC vessel Norman Morison. He would have stopped at Fort Simpson and Sitka before returning to England.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Jackson, William [3] (fl. 1850 - 1851) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Beaver (steamer) (1850 - 1851).

William Jackson worked for the HBC mainly on the steamer Beaver before he deserted at Olympia, Washington Territory, December 17, 1851 while the vessel had temporarily been seized by the US Collector of Customs. His large credit with the HBC of £50 remained untouched for more than four more years.

PS: HBCA log of Beaver 1; YFASA 30-31; FtVicASA 1-2

Jackson, William [4] (fl. 1824 - 1825) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Maritime employee

MW Clerk, Convoy (brig) (1824 - 1825).

William Jackson shipped aboard the Convoy [Captain William Henry McNeill] in Boston as ship's clerk before it sailed for the Northwest Coast on October 25, 1824. He traded one season on the coast and it is not known whether he continued to sail with the Convoy back to the Northwest Coast for the 1826-1827 trading seasons.

PS: BCA log of the Convoy, April 1, 1825-Oct. 18, 1825 [crew list] SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Jacob, the blacksmith (fl. 1816) (Russian)

Birth: probably Russia

Fur trade employee

NWC Blacksmith, unidentified American trading vessel (1816); Blacksmith, Fort George [Astoria] (1816).

Renegade Russian blacksmith, Jacob, made a name for himself during the short time he was on record on the Pacific slopes. He was picked up in Russian America [Alaska] probably by the Sultan [Caleb Reynolds]. While on the vessel, Jacob had tried to get others to mutiny, kill the captain and take the ship to a foreign port. Consequently, in June 1816 he was handed over in irons by Reynolds to James Keith, the NWC partner, when the ship was at Fort George [Astoria]. His apparent contrition impressed Keith, who released him and put him on the night watch. However, in a short time, restless Jacob had convinced eighteen fur traders, mainly Sandwich Islanders, to desert for the supposedly greener pastures of California. The next morning, the interpreter and five natives set out after the group and on the third day, virtually all the deserters abandoned Jacob and returned to Fort George. However, the wily Russian stayed with the natives and, working from that base, returned to the fort at night, scaled the twenty foot [6.1 m] palisades, broke into the store and carried off his booty. As well, while planning an attack on the fort, he even entered the post during broad daylight disguised as a woman. As Jacob had clearly become a threat to the safety of those in the fort, a party of forty men, led by Alexander Ross, surprised Jacob in a tent and bound him, but not before the blacksmith was able to draw a knife and cut Joseph St. Martin severely in the arm. Jacob was taken back to the fort, and imprisoned until the fall when he was put on board a vessel sailing for the Sandwich Islands. When he was embarking on the vessel, according to Ross, Jacob, true to style, had to have the last word:

he took off his old Russian cape, and waving it in the air round his head, gave three loud cheers, uttering in a bold voice, "Huzzal Huzzal for my friends, confusion to my enemies" (Ross, p. 64).

He was never heard from again.

PPS: A. Ross, The Fur Hunters, p. 61-64

Jacques, Joseph (c. 1826 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Sorel, Lower Canada - c. 1826

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, New Caledonia (1843 - 1846); Boute, New Caledonia (1846 - 1847); Middleman, New Caledonia (1847 - 1849); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department general charges (1849 - 1850).

Joseph Jacques joined the HBC from Sorel before 1843. After spending his entire career west of the Rockies in New Caledonia, he retired in 1850. That year he may have been living or visiting Marion Co., Oregon for that is where the Census indicated he was.

By 1850, Joseph Jacques had one wife, Betsy (c.1833-?).

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 8-9; YFASA 23-32; YFDS 17; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Marion County

Jacquette, Charles (fl. 1813 - c. 1816) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

PFC Member, W. P. Hunt Overland Expedition (1811 - 1812); Milieu, Fort George [Astoria] or Okanogan (October 13, 1813); NWC Milieu, Spokane House [Fort Spokane, Spokane Falls] (winter 1813 - 1814); Milieu, Pacific slopes (1816).

Charles Jacquette joined Wilson Price Hunt's PFC Overland Expedition by February 22, 1811, possibly around St. Louis. He crossed the Continental Divide in late summer 1811, arriving at Fort Astoria in February 1811. On October 22, 1813 the time of the takeover of the PFC, while he was in the Columbia on a one-year contract that was to end in Montreal, Jacquette joined the NWC. He likely returned to Montreal in 1814 and continued on the cross-country brigade until at least 1816.

PS: HBCA NW CAB 10; HBCA NWCAB 10; FtGeo[Ast]AB 7 PPS: K. W. Porter, Roll of Overland, p. 108

Jameison, James (fl. 1815) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

Jameison signed on with the NWC schooner Columbia on July 21, 1815, when it was working the Northwest Coast. When the ship was in the proximity of southern China on February 10, 1816 he was paid off and impressed into service on HMS Horatio.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

James, Edward (c. 1833 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Chiselhurst, Kent, England - c. 1833

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Norman Morison (barque) (1851); Apprentice, Recovery (brig) (1852).

Edward James indentured himself for five years to the HBC as an apprentice seaman on October 3, 1849 and came twice to the coast on the barque Norman Morison. On November 1, 1852, a year after his second arrival on the coast, James, along with fellow crew members, Zachariah Cathrick, William Hudson and Thomas Morrow, deserted from the Recovery and thus went off record.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; PortB 1; log of Norman Morison 2; YFASA 32; FtVicDS 1; FtVicASA 1-2

James, John (fl. 1850 - 1851) (Undetermined ethnicity)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1851).

John James joined the HBC and began work at Fort Vancouver on August 1, 1850. He deserted on June 23, 1851.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-31; YFDS 21-22; FtVanASA 9

James, Tobias (c. 1825 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: probably Cornwall, England - c. 1825

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1850?).

Tobias James joined the HBC in 1846 as a seaman and made a return trip to the coast on the Cowlitz. He is probably the same as "Thomas" James who signed up for the next voyage from London on the Cowlitz on August 1, 1849, but deserted when the vessel reached Honolulu in January 1850. His motivation most certainly was gold fever.

PS: HBCA YFASA 27-28; PortB 1; log of Cowlitz 8

James, Warfield (fl. 1841 - 1843) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: probably Pacific Northwest - 1843

Free trader

HBC Function unknown, possibly a trapper, South Party (1841 - 1842).

James Warfield, an American freeman, worked for the HBC in 1841-1842. During that time he was a member of the Southern Party, but travelled to California with Lt. Emmons and was to have joined up with the party at California. He died of unstated causes around 1843.

PS: OHS FtHallAB; HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 11-12

Jamieson, Gabriel (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

Gabriel Jamieson made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Jarvis, John (c. 1811 - ?) (British: English)

Birth: Bristol, Somerset, England - c. 1811

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1835 - 1836); Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1836 - 1840).

John Jarvis served on the merchant vessel Berkley before he joined the HBC on August 29, 1835 on a five-year contract. He arrived on the coast aboard the Columbia, and, in November 1836 began work on the Nereide. However, in 1837, he was part of a general mutiny aboard the barque and was flogged for not returning to his duties. It sobered him, for he completed his contract and returned home on the Nereide and was discharged in London on April 22, 1840.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 4a, 14; log of Columbia 1; FtVanASA 3-5; YFDS 7, 10; YFASA 19; FtVanCB 18; log of Nereide 2

Jary (Blumier), Toussaint [variation: Jarry] (fl. 1841 - 1844) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1844).

Jary Toussaint joined the HBC from Canada in 1841. His contract ended in 1844 at which point he returned east of the Rockies to Canada.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 6-8; YFASA 23

Jeal, Herbert (c. 1821 - ?) (British)

Birth: England - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1850 - 1851); Untraced vocation, Fort Victoria (1851 - 1852).

Herbert Jeal came to Vancouver Island in 1850 on the Norman Morison. He appeared to work at Fort Victoria until 1852 at which point he went south. On August 23, 1852, he settled on a claim of 164 acres [66.4 ha] in Thurston Co. From that point on Jeal's family life did not go well for his wife divorced him and moved to Olympia taking their two children with her. She later moved to Vancouver Island. Jeal has not been traced after that.

Herbert Jeal had one wife and two recorded children. In October, 1844, in Kent, England he married Mary Elizabeth. Their children were Leticia Laura (?-?) and Elizabeth L. (?-?).

PS: HBCA YFASA 29-32; FtVicASA 1-2 PPS: Washington Territory Donation Land Claims, p. 69 SS: Mouat, p. 213

Jean, Joseph Baptiste (c. 1792 - c. 1841) (Native: Abenaki)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec] - c. 1792

Death: probably Thompson River [British Columbia] - c. 1841

Fur trade employee

HBC Steersman, York Factory Express (HBC) (1822 - 1823); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Steersman, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Freeman steersman, Snake Party (1826 - 1827); Bowsmen, Fort Vancouver (1827 - 1828); Bowsmen, South Party (1828 - 1830); Trapper, Snake Party (1830 - 1832); Bowsmen and middleman, Fort Vancouver (1832 - 1833); Bowsmen, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1833 - 1834); Bowsmen, New Caledonia (1834 - 1836); Boute, Thompson River (1836 - 1841).

Joseph Baptiste Jean joined the HBC in 1817, and worked as a trapper and bote. He died around 1841.

PS: HBCA FtGeo[As]AB 10; YFASA 2-4, 6-9, 11-15, 19-21; FtVanAB 10; YFDS 3a-3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-6

Jean, Martin (fl. 1856 - 1857) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1856 - 1857).

Martin Jean made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Jeaudoins, Charles [variation: Jeaudoin, Joidoin, Jodriane] (c. 1799 - 1848) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Verennes, Lower Canada - c. 1799 (born to Louis Jeaudoin and Marie Anne Laverdure)

Death: St. Paul, Oregon - April 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Untraced vocation, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Middleman, Columbia Department (1823 - 1825); Middleman, Snake Party (1825 - 1826); Trapper, South Party (1826 - 1827); Hunter, South Party (1826 - 1827); Middleman, South Party (1826 - 1827); Untraced vocation, South Party (1826); Middleman, Snake Party (1827 - 1828); Middleman, South Party (1828 - 1830); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1830 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1836); Trapper, South Party (1836 - 1838); Settler/Farmer, Willamette (1841 - 1848).

Charles Jeaudoins joined the HBC in 1818 and came west of the Rockies in 1821. He spent the next seventeen years on southern expeditions [southern Oregon] and at Fort Vancouver. Little is known of his character but he seems to have been a model trapper. He went to the lower Red River in the summer of 1831 but returned in a few months to work as a freeman. He was discharged around 1838 and around 1841 he settled in the Willamette and by 1842 he was growing wheat (mainly) on forty enclosed acres [16.2 ha]. He continued to farm until his death on April 30, 1848. He was buried in the local parish graveyard.

Charles Jeaudoin appears to have had two wives and two children. At an unknown date, he chose as his wife Wallalikas, Chinook (?-?) who died before 1840. Together they had Jean Baptiste (c.1820-c.1879) and Celeste (c.1827-1899). On July 10, 1843, he married Madeleine Servant (daughter of Jacques Servant and Josephthe, Okanagan) (?-?) but they had no further children.

PS: HBCA YFASA 1-9, 11-16; FtVanPJ 2, 4; FtGeo[Asst]AB 10; FtVanASA 1-6; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 5a-7, 10-11; OHS 1842
Census PPS: HBRS XXIII, p. 119n, 147n, 173; SS: CCR 2a, 2b
See Also: Servant, Jacques (Father-in-Law)

Jendon, William [variation: Jindon, Jenden] (fl. 1852 - 1853) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Labourer, Otter (steamer) (1852 - 1853).

William Jendon came to the Northwest Coast from London as a labourer aboard the HBC steamer Otter. After a rough departure at the end of December 1852, the ship finally got under way on February 4, 1853, arriving in Victoria on August 4. Jendon worked without incident on the Otter until November 21, 1853 when, during the night at Fort Nisqually, he packed his clothes and left the ship.

PS: HBCA log of Otter 1; YFASA 32; FtVicASA 1-2

Jennings, George [variation: Gennings] (fl. 1846 - 1850) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1845 - 1847); Seaman, Cowlitz (barque) (1847 - 1848); Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1847); Boatswain, Columbia (barque) (1848 - 1850).

George Jennings shipped on with the HBC vessel Columbia in London on September 29, 1845 and sailed to the coast on the Columbia. He returned to England on the Cowlitz and made one further return journey on the Columbia but has not been traced further.

PS: HBCA PortB 1; log of Columbia 8; YFASA 26-27, 30-31

Jennings, John (fl. 1815 - 1816) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime officer

NWC Captain, Columbia (schooner) (1815 - 1816).

John Jennings, a physically small, but robust sea captain, first appeared in early 1813 when he left England in command of the ship Forester, a captured French privateer which had been purchased from the British by John Jacob Astor for the Columbia trade. Failing to make his way around South America's Cape Horn, Jennings had to turn around and sail via the African Cape of Good Hope. For unstated reasons, the chief mate and four of the crew took a small rowboat and deserted in the night in the Timor Sea. When the Forester was nearing Oahu, and because of the difficulty of the voyage, the crew was mutinous. After intercepting a letter from the crew, Jennings sailed to the Island of Hawaii where, at Kailua, he landed and sought protection of the King. While there in late October or early November 1813, a young crew member, who deserted, was brought back having lost his clothes on shore. After demanding that he be allowed to retrieve his clothes, a fight ensued involving the clerk Ebbets, who intervened on behalf of Jennings, and the boatswain. When the boatswain threatened Jennings with a knife, Jennings shot him in the shoulder. Subsequently, the angry crew then threatened to hang Jennings who jumped into a canoe and fled to the King for protection. When the boatswain died of his wounds, after being taken ashore, and the crew threatened revenge, supercargo Mr. Piggot took control, leaving Jennings ashore and sailed the Forester to California. From the Sandwich Islands, John Jennings took passage on the Isaac Todd to Canton where he signed on as master of the schooner Columbia on March 22 or 28, 1815. In May 1815, he sailed to Hawaii and crossed the bar of the Columbia in July. Jennings then sailed the Columbia to Sitka and, on October 1815, he entered the Columbia again. He sailed back to China and, on March 22, 1816, he was paid off by the NWC, his position temporarily being taken over by first mate Peter Corney. When he was sighted by Captain Barnard on April 3, 1816 at Canton, he was still with the Columbia and was still in command of the vessel in 1819.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1, 4 PPS: Corney, Voyages in the Northern, p. 38-41, 69, 73, 76, 84A; Bartlett, p. 94, 96 SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

Jeremie, Paul Denis [variation: Jeremy] (fl. 1810 - 1814) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Lower Canada [Quebec]

Fur trade employee

PFC Passenger, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811); Labourer, Fort George [Astoria] (1811 - 1813); Clerk, Raccoon (sloop) (1813 - 1814).

Paul Denis Jeremie must have had an endearing personality for his many indiscretions were often overlooked by his bosses. In 1810, after signing on with Astor's PFC, Jeremie met Gabriel Franchere at Whitehall in New York and travelled to the mouth of the Columbia on the Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn], arriving March 22, 1811. On July 26, 1811, after stealing company and personal belongings, he was put in irons but repented in a letter. On November 10, 1811, along with Antoine and Jean Baptiste Belleau, Jeremie deserted. He was found by a search party eight days later somewhere near Deer Island by Franchere and others and was glad to relinquish his freedom as opposed to becoming a slave by the local natives. In January, 1812 and also suffering from venereal disease, "Doctor Jeremy" took it upon himself to help fellow fur trader, Tuana, recover and may have suggested that the Sandwich Islander be placed inside the belly of a freshly killed animal. In November the experiment was tried unsuccessfully. He spent the winter of 1813 in the Columbia and on December 31, 1813, sailed on the corvette Raccoon [William Black, RN] for the Sandwich Islands. That is the last time he appears on record in the Columbia.

PS: RosL-Ph Astoria; HBCA NWCAB 10 PPS: ChSoc LVX, p. 45, 48, 93-95, 135

Jeremie (Dinant), Jean (c. 1808 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably La Prairie, Lower Canada - c. 1808

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842).

Jean Jeremie (Dinant) joined the HBC from La Prairie in 1839, worked three years at Fort Vancouver and returned to Canada.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19-21; FtVanASA 6-7

Jervin, Joseph [variation: Jarman] (fl. 1837 - 1845) (Undetermined origin)

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Nereide (barque) (1837 - 1838); Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1845).

Joseph Jervin was drafted from the HBC ship Sumatra on October 26, 1837 to serve as a seaman on the coast. He returned to England but returned to the coast on the Columbia (as Joseph Jarman).

PS: HBCA YFDS 8; log of Columbia 6

Jervis, Herbert (fl. 1857 - 1858) (Undetermined origin)

Birth: possibly British Isles

Maritime officer

HBC Mate, unidentified HBC trading vessel (1857 - 1858).

Herbert Jervis worked for the HBC from 1857 to 1858.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 5

Jim [1] (fl. 1837 - 1838) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Death: possibly Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838).

Jim joined the HBC in Oahu in July 1837 and began to work at Fort Vancouver on August 10. He appears to have worked only one year for he returned to Oahu on November 1, 1838 as a passenger on the Columbia along with Swiss-American frontiersman Captain John Augustus Sutter and his servant, heading for Honolulu, and with the Anglican minister from Fort Vancouver and his wife, Herbert and Jane Beaver, heading for London. He did not appear to return to work on the coast.

PS: HBCA SandIsAB 1; FtVanASA 4-5; YFDS 18; YFASA 18; ShMiscPap 13

Jim [2] (fl. 1853) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Pekin (ship) (1853); Seaman, Mary Catherine (ship) (1853).

Jim [2] shipped aboard the HBC chartered vessel Pekin in Honolulu, probably in the summer of 1853, during the height of the smallpox epidemic, sailed to the Northwest Coast and arrived back in Honolulu September 27th, 1853 on the Mary Catherine. He was given the final balances of his wages when he arrived back in Hawaii.

PS: HBCA SandIsLonIC 3

Jimo (c. 1798 - 1827) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands - c. 1798

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - April 1827

Fur trade employee

NWC Middleman, Pacific slopes (1814 - 1821); HBC Employee, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Employee, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1823); Employee, Columbia Department (1823 - 1824); Cook, Columbia Department (1824 - 1826); Cook, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1827).

Jimo appears to have joined the fur trade in 1814 at the age of sixteen and worked in the Columbia District. At the time of coalition, he transferred to the HBC and was soon being employed as a cook. He died suddenly on April 11, 1827 at Fort Vancouver.

Ten years later, his family was still receiving an annuity at an unknown location.

HBCA PS: NWCAAB 9; YFASA 1-8, 17; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10; YFDS 2a; FtVanAB 10; FtVanASA 1

Jironeway, Louis [variation: Jironguay] (c. 1791 - 1845) (Native: Iroquois)

Birth: probably Sault St. Louis, Lower Canada - c. 1791

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - October 1845

Fur trade employee

HBC Boute, Fort Vancouver (1829 - 1830); Boute, New Caledonia (1830 - 1831); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1831 - 1834); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1834 - 1835); Steersman, New Caledonia (1835 - 1836); Boute, New Caledonia (1836 - 1837); Boute, Thompson River (1837 - 1838); Boute, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1839); Boute, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1844).

Louis Jironeway joined the HBC from Sault St. Louis in 1829 or 1830 as a boute. His contract ended in 1844; and, he appears not to have worked in outfit 1844-1845 and had money owing him from the previous outfit. He died at Fort Vancouver on October 19, 1845 and was buried there two days later. His burial was not recorded by the Catholic priests.

PS: HBCA YFASA 9, 11-15, 19, 24-26; YFDS 3b, 4b-7; FtVanASA 2-8; BCA Lowe 1

Joakin, Anthony (fl. 1816) (probably Portuguese)

Birth: probably Portugal

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

Anthony Joakin worked as a seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

See Also: Joakin, Frank (Relative)

Joakin, Frank (fl. 1818) (probably Portuguese)

Birth: probably Portugal

Maritime employee

NWC Seaman, Columbia (schooner) (1816).

Frank Joakin worked as a seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia for two months in 1816, the same year it was in both Macao and the Northwest coast. He is likely related to Anthony Joakin and may be Portuguese, with the name Joaquin.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 1

See Also: Joakin, Anthony (Relative)

Jobin, Jeffroy [variation: Geoffry] (c. 1821 - ?) (Canadian: French)

Birth: probably Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1821

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Fort Vancouver general charges (1839 - 1840); Middleman, South Party (1840 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842).

Montrealer Jeffroy Jobin joined the HBC in 1839 on a three-year contract. He left the Columbia crossing east over the Rockies in 1842 at the end of his contract.

PS: HBCA YFASA 19, 21; FtVanASA 6-7

Johansen, Johan P. (fl. 1858 - 1862) (Undetermined origin)

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, New Caledonia (1858 - 1860); Untraced vocation, Western Department (1860 - 1861); Labourer, Thompson River (1861 - 1862).

Johan P. Johansen worked for the HBC beginning in 1858 through to 1862.

PS: HBCA FtVicASA 6-11

John [1] (fl. 1815) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

NWC Apprentice, Columbia (schooner) (1815).

John was an apprentice seaman on the NWC schooner Columbia in 1815 when it was on the Northwest Coast.

PS: HBCA NWCAB 5

John [2] (fl. 1840 - 1843) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman and labourer, Fort Vancouver (1840 - 1843).

John [2] joined the HBC from Oahu in 1840 and spent the next three years working as a middleman at Fort Vancouver. He laboured there until December 9, 1843, near the end of his contract at which point he returned to Oahu.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20, 23; FtVanASA 6-7; YFDS 14

John [3] (fl. 1825) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Maritime employee

MW Seaman, Convoy (brig) (1825).

John shipped aboard the Convoy [William. H. McNeill] at Oahu after it arrived at that Island on March 16, 1825 to unload cargo and take on supplies for the Northwest Coast. After sailing April 1 for the Northwest Coast as a labourer, John and the vessel traded for a season, returning to Honolulu on November 2.

PS: BCA log of Convoy SS: Howay, A List of Trading Vessels

John, Thomas (fl. 1833 - 1837) (probably British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1833 - 1834); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1835); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1836 - 1837).

Thomas John joined the HBC vessel Ganymede in Oahu on April 7, 1833 on its outward bound voyage to the coast. After working three years on ships servicing coastal posts, John joined the Ganymede for its return voyage. During this last voyage, he was not well, for on August 2, 1836, he and four others were placed in the hospital at Valparaiso, Chile, and on January 23, 1837, in the Atlantic, a surgeon from the passing ship, Mt. Stewart Elphinstone, was sent of board to examine John and William Poucher. He appears, however, to have arrived safely back in England on March 25, 1837.

PS: HBCA log of Ganymede 1, 4; YFDS 5b, 7; FtVanASA 3; ShMiscPap 14

Johnny, Owhyhee (fl. 1829 - 1831) (probably Hawaiian)

Birth: probably Hawaiian Islands

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Fort Vancouver general charges (1829 - 1831); Passenger, Ganymede (barque) (1831).

Owhyhee Johnny joined the HBC probably in 1829. He worked in the Columbia District but was discharged to Oahu on November 1, 1831, sailing on the Ganymede.

PS: HBCA FtVanASA 2; YFDS 4a-4b; YFASA 11 PPS: McLoughlin, p. 230

Johns, William [variation: Jones] (fl. 1830 - 1832) (British: Scottish)

Birth: Leith, Edinburgh, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1830 - 1831); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1831 - 1832).

William Johns joined the HBC on October 31, 1829 on a three-year contract as a seaman. He worked on coastal shipping and embarked for England on the Ganymede November 1, 1831.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella 1; FtVanASA 2; ShMiscPap 7, 14; YFASA 11; YFDS 4b

Johnson, Alexis (c. 1823 - ?) (Canadian: French and Canadian: English)

Birth: possibly Montreal, Lower Canada - c. 1823

Fur trade employee

HBC Middleman, Thompson River (1845 - 1847); Middleman, Cowlitz Farm (1847 - 1851); Labourer, Fort Nisqually (1852).

Alexis Johnson joined the HBC probably in Montreal in 1845. His work at the Cowlitz farm appears to have been sporadic and he deserted on June 10, 1851. A year later, on May 10, he signed up at Nisqually, pressing wool and ploughing the swamp. This did not suit him for he left a month later on June 14, 1852.

PS: HBCA YFASA 25-31; YFDS 21-22; FtVanASA 9; PSACAB 37 PPS: Dickey; S. A. Anderson, The Physical Structure, p. 175

Johnson, Andrew [1] (fl. 1830 - 1834) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1832); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1832 - 1833); Seaman, Lama (brig) (1833); Seaman, Ganymede (barque) (1833 - 1834).

Andrew Johnson, who spent three years on the coast, joined the HBC in London on January 9, 1830 on a three-year contract. He worked on coastal shipping supplying various coastal posts from August 18, 1830 until September 11, 1833 when he left on the Ganymede arriving in London on February 24, 1834.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 2; YFASA 9, 11-13; YFDS 4a-5b; log of Dryad 1; log of Ganymede 1; ShMiscPap 14

Johnson, Andrew [2] (fl. 1845 - 1847) (British: English)

Birth: probably London, England

Maritime employee

HBC Cook, Vancouver (barque) (1845 - 1847).

Andrew Johnson joined the HBC in London on August 26, 1844 on a five-year contract and sailed to the coast as cook on the barque Vancouver. Little is known of him other than he scalded his hand just before the vessel reached Fort Victoria on the outward voyage. He recuperated in two weeks. In December 1846, after ten months of servicing coastal posts, he left Fort Victoria for the British Isles on the same vessel. He arrived back in London on July 13, 1847.

PS: HBCA log of Vancouver [3], 2; ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 25-26; YFDS 17

Johnson, David (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

David Johnson made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

Johnson, Dr. George [h] [variation: Johnston, Johnstone] (fl. 1850 - 1855) (British: English)

Birth: possibly Birmingham, England

Death: possibly Birmingham, England

Fur trade officer

HBC Passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Surgeon, Fort Rupert (1851 - 1853); Surgeon, Nanaimo (1853 - 1855); Passenger, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1859).

Dr. George Johnson, who spent four years on the Northwest Coast as a surgeon, joined the HBC in August 1850 and came to Vancouver Island on the Tory. Upon his arrival, Johnson submitted a report to James Douglas and immediately took up his position as surgeon to the miners at Fort Rupert where he succeeded John Sebastian Helmcken. When the mines closed shortly after, he made arrangements with the surgeons of HMS Virago, to act in his place at Fort Rupert and was noted as passing through Nanaimo on his way to Victoria on July 24, 1853. His surgery was on board ship but a leaky ship's cabin roof enabled him to be lodged on shore at Nanaimo. During his stay he purchased property in Victoria; however, ill health forced him to return to the British Isles in May 1855. In February 1858 he arrived back in Victoria with his wife, but in March 1859, departed again likely to Birmingham where he died.

PS: HBCA YFASA 30-32; George Johnson's May 19, 1851 report to James Douglas, A.11/73, fos. 122-122d; FtVicASA 1-4; FtVicCB 11; PJ NanCorr; log of Princess Royal 4, 5; HBCABio SS: Helmcken, p. 162n

Johnson, James (fl. 1857 - 1858) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1857 - 1858).

James Johnson made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA log of Princess Royal 4; PortB 1

Johnson, John [1] (? - 1828) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Death: Great Salt Lake, Utah - 1828

Fur trade employee

SJ & S Trapper, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1827); HBC Trapper, Snake Country (September, 1827 – February, 1828); SJ & S Trapper, Smith, Jackson and Sublette (1828).

John Johnson first appeared as a Smith, Jackson & Sublette trapper leaving Bear River on July 9, 1827. He had been travelling with the American SJ&S party of forty-six men that had dispersed into several groups, Johnson's group of seven encountering Peter Skene Ogden's expedition on September 25 on the Weizer River. Because he was in debt to SJ&S for $293.50 and with the stated intention of going to the Columbia, Johnson along with Bache Goodriche, deserted the American party at the Weizer River for Ogden's Snake Country brigade. With no encouragement from Ogden, Johnson and Goodriche stayed with Ogden until February 20, 1828. At that time, they once again encountered the SJ&S party headed by Robert Campbell who talked both Johnson and Goodriche into rejoining the party. Johnson paid his debts to Ogden and left. John Johnson was killed at Great Salt Lake later in 1828.

PS: HBCA SnkCoPJ 8 PPS: HBRS v. XXVIII, p. 65n

John, John [2] (fl. 1854 - 1855) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Princess Royal (barque) (1854 - 1855).

John Johnson made one return voyage to the coast on the HBC supply vessel, Princess Royal.

PS: HBCA PortB 1

Johnson, John Henry [variation: Johnstone] (fl. 1850 - 1859) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: possibly Victoria, British Columbia

Maritime employee

HBC Immigrant passenger, Tory (barque) (1850 - 1851); Engineer, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1859).

John Henry Johnson came to Vancouver Island as a fully qualified engineer and servant settler aboard the HBC chartered barque, Tory bringing with him his wife and son. After arriving at Fort Victoria on May 9, 1851, he worked on the steamer Beaver replacing James Thorne who had returned to England. In 1853 he purchased a town lot in Victoria and retired from the service of the HBC in about 1858-1859, around the time of the death of his first wife.

John Henry Johnson appears to have had two successive wives and at least one son. He brought with him his wife and son, but his wife (c.1818-1858), whose first name has not been traced, died on December 22, 1858 and was buried in the old Quadra Street Cemetery in Victoria. On May 11, 1859, he married Narcissa D. Kelly of San Francisco at Port Townsend, Washington Territory.

Johnson Street in Victoria was named after John Henry Johnson.

PS: HBCA YFASA 20-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-7; HBCA John H. Johnson search file; BCA BCGR-CrtR-Land; OHS Statesman, June 7, 1859, p. 2; Quadra Street Cemetery, Victoria PPS: HBRS XXXII, p. 182n

Johnson, Thomas (fl. 1851 - 1854) (Undetermined origin)Maritime employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Beaver (steamer) (1851 - 1854).

Thomas Johnson worked for the HBC for three years.

PS: HBCA YFASA 31-32; FtVicASA 1-2

Johnson, William [variation: Joseph] (c. 1785 - 1811) (possibly American)

Birth: possibly New Jersey, United States or England - c. 1781

Death: Clayoquot Sound, Vancouver Island - June 1811

Maritime employee

PFC Seaman, Tonquin (ship) (1810 - 1811).

Twenty-five year old, five foot six inch [1.7 m] William Johnson joined John Jacob Astor's Tonquin [Jonathan Thorn] as a seaman some time before September 3, 1810, for its voyage to the Northwest Coast. During the voyage he managed to avoid the harsh punitive temper of the captain but was killed when the vessel was attacked and all crew members, except the interpreter, died.

PS: USNA Tonquin PPS: ChSoc LVX, p. 49

Johnson, William [b] (c. 1789 - 1848) (British: English)

Birth: probably Suffolk, England - c. 1789

Death: probably Portland, Oregon - November 1848

Fur trade employee

HBC Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1821 - 1822); Cowherd, Fort George [Astoria] (1822 - 1826); Cowherd, Fort Vancouver (1826 - 1831); Cowherd, Columbia Department (1831 - 1834); Trapper, Fort Vancouver Indian Trade (1834 - 1836); Settler, Willamette (1836 - 1842+).

William Johnson joined the NWC in 1817, crossing the Rockies in 1819. At the time of coalition, he was retained by the HBC and from that point on, worked mainly in the Columbia District as a cowherd. He may have returned briefly to England in 1825 and later became a settler in the Willamette valley, near Champoe Creek where he began to raise a family. Over the years, Johnson's loyalties shifted, as on May 2, 1843, he voted for the establishment of a Provisional Government that would supersede the authority of the HBC. That year he sold his Champoe property and moved to a site near present day Portland where he tilled and tended flocks. He died about November 12, 1848.

William Johnson had possibly two wives, Polly (?-?), Clackamas/Chelsamn and Mary, a native. Two recorded sons of William and Polly were, James (?-bap.1836-?) and Herbert (?-bap.1838-?) both baptised by Reverend Herbert Beaver. William Johnson and Mary had one child, Amelie (1845-?).

PS: HBCA NWCAB 3, 9; HBCA YFASA 1-9, 11-15; FtGeo[Ast]AB 10-12; log of Prince of Wales I 4; YFDS 2a, 3a-3b, 5c, 6, 11; FtVanASA 1-6; BCA BCCR CCCath PPS: CCR 4a SS: Holman, p. 114; Reed, p. 31-33

Johnston, John [b] [variation: Johnstone] (? - 1853) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Sandwick, Orkney - 1813

Death: Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory - November 1853

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1833); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1833); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1837); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1838); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver (1838 - 1841); Middleman, Fort Vancouver (1841 - 1842); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1847); Farmer, Fort Vancouver (1842 - 1847); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1848); Seedsman, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1848); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1848 - 1849); Middleman and labourer, Fort Colville (1849 - 1850); Labourer, Fort Vancouver depot (1850 - 1853).

John Johnston joined the HBC from Sandwick, Orkney on May 3, 1833 and sailed the following month for York Factory, making his way overland to the coast. He worked for many years and towards the end of his life, his constitution weakened and when he got an inflammation of the knee, it was more than he could take and he died on November 11, 1853 at Fort Vancouver. He left a child in the country to be taken care of by Mr. & Mrs. James Logie.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 10; log of Prince Rupert IV 7; YFASA 14-15, 18-20, 24-32; YFDS 5c-7, 9-11; FtVanASA 3-10; FtVanCB 41

Johnston, Robert [a] [variation: Johnstone] (c. 1811 - ?) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Sandwick, Orkney - c. 1811

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1833); Passenger, Prince Rupert (ship) (1833); Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1836); Cooper, Fort Vancouver general charges (1834 - 1836); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1836 - 1837); Labourer, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1837 - 1839); Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1839 - 1841); Passenger, Columbia (barque) (1842 - 1843); Cooper, Fort Vancouver (1843 - 1849).

Robert Johnston [a] joined the HBC from Sandwick, Orkney on May 6, 1833 and sailed the following month for York Factory, making his way overland to the coast. The majority of his career was spent working as a cooper at Fort Vancouver where he would have made barrels in the shed outside the southeast wall of the fort or at the shop near the river. He went east over the mountains in the spring of 1841 and to the British Isles via the Prince Rupert but returned to the coast as a passenger on the Columbia. On September 1, 1849, he went to California, presumably for the gold there.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince Rupert IV 7; YFASA 14, 18-20, 24-25, 27-29; YFDS 5c-8, 20; FtVanASA 3-6, 8; log of Columbia 6

Johnston, Thomas [variation: Johnson, Johnstone] (fl. 1838 - 1844) (British: Scottish)

Birth: probably Aberdeen, Scotland

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1838 - 1841); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1841 - 1843); Seaman, Vancouver (barque) (1843 - 1844).

Thomas Johnston joined the HBC in London on October 29, 1838 for five years as a seaman. He sailed to the coast and began his work in coastal shipping on October 2, 1839. He returned to the British Isles on the Vancouver in outfit 1843-1844.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; ShMiscPap 11; YFASA 19-20, 23; YFDS 10-11; FtVanASA 6-8

Johnston, William [2] (fl. 1827 - 1830) (American)

Birth: probably United States of America

Fur trade employee

HBC Trapper, Snake Party (1827 - 1828); Trapper, South Party (1828 - 1830).

William Johnston was an American who was a member of a party of forty trappers who joined P. S. Ogden in 1827. He likely went to Fort Vancouver and, from 1828-1830, he was a trapper on the southern expedition. He was a member of McLeod's punitive expedition of 1828.

PS: HBCA YFASA 8-9

Johnston, William [c] (? - 1835) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Kirkwall, Orkney - 1814 (born to Hugh and Mrs. Johnston)

Death: Fort George, New Caledonia - July 1835

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger, Prince Rupert IV (ship) (1833); Passenger, Prince of Wales (ship) (1833); Labourer, New Caledonia (1834 - 1835).

A nineteen year old William Johnston [c] joined the HBC from Kirkwall on May 15, 1833 and sailed the following month for York Factory. From there, he made his way overland to New Caledonia, where he found the country dull. After working for two years of a five-year contract, he drowned at Fort George [New Caledonia].

Two undelivered 1834 letters to William Johnston from his father and sister (both in Kirkwall), rest in the HBCA. The family was not well off as father Hugh Johnston, who was getting feeble and not able to work, had to sell his watch to bury a friend, Jannet. Sister Betsy, herself not well off, dispensed religious advice to her brother. William's father did not find out about his son's death until 1840, possibly because two William Johnstons were employed at the time of the death (Beattie & Buss, 313-315).

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Prince of Wales I 10; log of Prince Rupert IV 7; YFASA 13, 15; YFDS 5b, 6; FtVanASA 3; MisI 5
PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 313-15

Johnston, William Coregal [d] (c. 1819 - 1876) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Orkney, United Kingdom - c. 1819

Death: Oregon State, United States - 1876

Fur trade employee

HBC Labourer, Fort Vancouver general charges (1836 - 1837); Middleman and labourer, Snake Party (1837 - 1839); Untraced vocation, Snake Party (1839 - 1848); Middleman, Snake Country [probably Fort Hall] (1848 - 1850); Labourer, Snake Country [probably Fort Hall] (1850 - 1851).

William Johnston [d] joined the HBC on April 14, 1835. His entire fifteen years spent with the Company were in the Snake River area, probably mostly at Fort Hall, retiring in 1851. While at Fort Hall, he married a woman from New York, and when he retired, settled in Oregon to raise a family and work as a stone mason. After his death, he was buried in the Cloverdale Cemetery, near Turner, Oregon.

William Johnson married Ann Potter (1831-?), daughter of Arnold Potter and Almyra Smith of Salisbury, New York, on June 22, 1849 at Fort Hall. They had at least eight or nine children, the first, Barbara (1846-?), may have had a different mother. Eight other children were William Coregal Jr. (1853-?), Rachel (1855-?), Jane (1857-?), Joseph (1860-?), Thomas (1862-?), Harriet (1865-?), John (1866-?) and James (1868-?). After William's death in 1876, Ann married Lewis Wentz in 1877.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; FtVanASA 4-5, 7-9; YFDS 7; YFASA 16, 19, 21-22, 24-32; William Johnston descendant.

Johnstone, James [d] (fl. 1829 - 1837) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: probably Stromness, Orkney

Maritime officer

HBC Seaman, Isabella (brig) (1829 - 1830); Seaman, Vancouver (schooner) (1830); Seaman, Cadboro (schooner) (1830 - 1833); Seaman, Dryad (brig) (1830 - 1833); Boatswain, Dryad (brig) (1832 - 1833); 2nd mate, Dryad (brig) (1834 - 1835); 2nd mate, Ganymede (barque) (1835 - 1837).

James Johnstone joined the HBC in London on November 1, 1829, coming to the Coast on the Isabella. The vessel, however, was wrecked on the Columbia bar as it tried to cross it on May 3, 1830 and Johnstone had to work on a variety of other coastal vessels for the next several years. During this time, he sent money home to his parents, who were most grateful. He left for England on the Ganymede in October 1836 and arrived in London in 1837.

An undelivered 1835 letter from his father, then in Stromness, rests in the HBCA.

PS: HBCA HBCCont; log of Isabella 1; ShMiscPap 14; FtVanASA 2-3; YFDS 4b-7; YFASA 11-14, 16; log of Ganymede 4; MiscI 5; Beattie & Buss, p. 69-70

Johnstone, James [1] (fl. 1839 - 1849) (British: Shetlander)

Birth: possibly Lerwick, Shetland Islands, United Kingdom

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Columbia (barque) (1839 - 1841); Seaman, Conlitz (barque) (1841 - 1842); Seaman, Fort Vancouver depot (1842 - 1845); In charge, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1845 - 1847); Seaman, Fort Vancouver (1847 - 1849).

James Johnstone joined the HBC in London on September 17, 1839. He worked on ships servicing the Columbia and from 1845-1847, he was in charge of the "barge" a.k.a. the Prince of Wales, the eighty-four ton Columbia schooner, built by James Scarth. He worked until March 1, 1849, at which point he went to California, presumably to the gold fields. He may have returned, for in 1850 a James Johnstone was noted as being in Lewis Co., probably around the Fort Nisqually area, as a pilot. In the later 1850s a James Johnstone was also found in Victoria but it is uncertain if he is the same James Johnstone.

If Johnstone returned from California to Nisqually, he would have had one wife and two children. By 1850, this James Johnston (c.1805-?) had one wife, Mrs. Johnston, (c.1820-?) an unnamed native and two children: George (c.1845-?) and James (c.1847-?). If Johnstone went to Victoria in the 1850s, he appears to have converted to Catholicism on January 31, 1858 in Victoria, for in the next month he married Dina Stockand, daughter of James Stockand and Isabelle Begg. They had one recorded child, William (1864-?) and possibly more. Whether these families belong to the above James Johnstone is speculative.

PS: HBCA log of Columbia 4; log of Cowlitz 1; YFDS 11; ShMiscPap 14; YFASA 20, 24-28; FtVanASA 6-8; YFDS 12, 16-17, 19; MiscI 5; OHS 1850 US Census, Oregon Territory, Lewis County; BCA BCCR StAndC

Johnstone, James [2] [variation: Johnson] (? - 1845) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Death: Fort Vancouver, Columbia Department - April 1845

Maritime employee

HBC Apprentice, Vancouver (barque) (1844 - 1845).

James Johnstone joined the HBC barque Vancouver on Aug 18, 1844 in London. He sailed to the coast but in April 1845, when the vessel was at Fort Vancouver, fell overboard and drowned.

An undelivered 1845 letter from Johnstone's mother, Mary, then residing in Ilford, rests in the HBCA. The letter, written two months before James' death, passed along family information.

PS: HBCA log of Vancouver [3] 2; ShMisPap 11 PPS: Beattie & Buss, p. 213-15

Johnstone, James [3] (c. 1829 - 1895) (British: Orcadian Scot)

Birth: Aith, Walls, Orkney, United Kingdom - c. February 22, 1829 (born to Joseph Johnston and Hannah Mowat)

Death: Victoria, British Columbia - November 4, 1895

Fur trade employee

HBC Passenger to York Factory, Prince of Wales II (barque) (1850); Untraced vocation, Columbia Department (1850 - 1851); Labourer, New Caledonia (1851 - 1857); Labourer, Fort Victoria (1857 - 1858).

When James Johnstone's mother Hannah died in 1836, his father remarried and took his new wife and two younger sons to farm on South Ronaldsay. James, then eight and the oldest, stayed in Walls in the village of Aith and moved into the adjacent home of his farmer uncle, John Johnston, working as a manservant there. In 1850, after thirteen years as a manservant and without prospects for improvement, life in the HBC proved more attractive for the twenty-one year old. He signed up, sailed to York Factory and served out his contract in New Caledonia and, according to family tradition, was a member of the brigade which travelled between Fort Langley and York Factory. He then moved to Victoria where he married and raised a family in the 1870s and 1880s while working as a night watchman for the HBC.

In February 1858, James Johnstone married Dinah Mary Stockand (1841-1927) who had come out on the Norman Morison. Six of their children were Isabella "Bella" (1859-1936), Ellen (c.1861-1946), James Mouat (c.1867-1913), Margaret Mary "Maggie" (1868-1956), William Joseph (1871-1917) and Walter Joseph (1881-1882). Dinah died January 5, 1927 in Victoria.

PS: HBCA log of Prince of Wales II 1; YFASA 31-32; YFDS 22; FtVicASA 1-5; BCA BCCR StAndC; Van-PL 1881 Canada Census, Victoria; James Bay Ward; family descendant
See Also: Stockand, James (Father-in-Law)

Johnstone, John [1] (fl. 1849 - 1851) (British)

Birth: probably British Isles

Maritime employee

HBC Seaman, Norman Morison (barque) (1849 - 1851).

